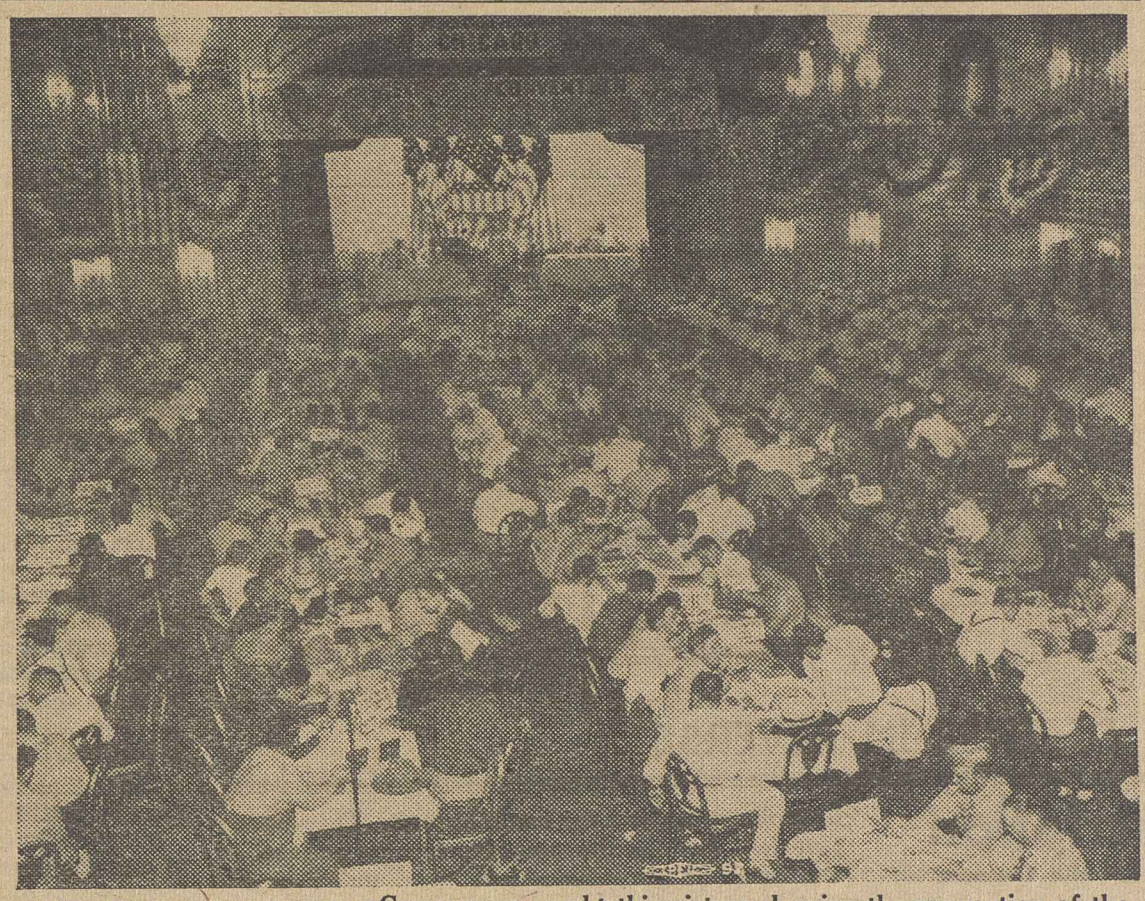
In relating his close association with the birth of the Auto Workers' Union, Lewis told of a number of previously unrecorded incidents of administration and political pressure brought to bear upon him to settle the General Motors strike on unsatisfactory terms.

UNSATISFACTORY PROPOSALS



"On February 1, 1937," he said, "in behalf of the CIO and the United Automobile Workers, I conferred with the President of the United States, and the proposals which were adduced for settlement at that time were so unsatisfactory that I declined to present them to the United Automobile Workers Union" and took the train for Detroit.

In the long negotiations that followed, there was constant pressure upon Lewis to get the men out of the plants before any satisfactory settlement was reached. On one occasion the Governor read him a formal letter demanding such action.

"My reply," Lewis said, "to the Governor of the state when he read that letter with the knowledge of the President of the United States—and the approval—was this:

" 'I do not doubt your ability to call out your soldiers and shoot the members of our union

Co-op To Use Union Label

READING, Pa., Aug. 3.—The Pagoda Knitting Mills, Inc., an employe-owned cooperative hosiery mill here, has signed the union label licensing agreement of the CIO American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and will use the label on its line of women's full-fashioned hosiery.

Pagoda is the 20th hosiery manufacturer to sign the licensing agreement for use of the union label.

WinTwoMore GE Elections

New York, Aug. 3.—Two election victories in small plants of the General Electric Co. today brought the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers' total to 18 in the GE set-up, and paved the way for an expected win at the big Erie, Pa., plant on August 8.

At York, Pa., the CIO union wiped out an earlier defeat by trouncing a "Loyal Workers Union" 79-21.

At San Francisco, Calif., a 13-1 victory in the electric refrigerator shop climaxed several weeks of organizational work. UERMW officials anticipated that the success in the small shop will greatly stimulate organizational work now being conducted at the main GE plant in the district, the big manufacturing unit at Oakland.

Bethlehem Steel Locals to Meet

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Aug. 3.—Recent demands made by President John L. Lewis of the CIO that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation be deprived of further government contracts unless it obeys the Wagner Labor Act and the Walsh-Healey Act are being followed up by a national conference of CIO unions whose members are employed in Bethlehem Mills and Shipyards.

The conference, which will be held August 11 at Bethlehem, Pa., is called by Philip Murray, vice-president of the CIO and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, who will preside. It will be composed of SWOC representatives from Bethlehem's numerous mills and of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America representing all the Bethlehem shipyards.

Besides Murray, among those attending will be Clinton S. Golden, SWOC director of the Northeastern Region, covering 65 per cent of America's annual steel tonnage output. Van A. Bittner, SWOC director, Western Region; John Green, president, and Philip Van Gelder, secretary, of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers.

300 DELEGATES

Unions Back Drive On Wagner Act Evaders

Many Groups Laud CIO Campaign

Washington, Aug. 3.—Wide support for CIO President John L. Lewis' demand that the U. S. government stop subsidizing anti-labor corporations through profitable Federal contracts came in from CIO unions this week. Lewis' demand was made a week ago in a letter to CIO affiliates urging them to seek a Presidential order stopping the practice.

The statement specifically urged that firms known to be flagrant violators of the Wagner Act—such as Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Douglas Aircraft, and the like be barred from bidding on government orders until they were willing to declare they would obey the law.

From headquarters at Denver, Colo., Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, wrote to President Roosevelt and to Sidney Hillman, defense labor coordinator, urging that the executive order be issued.

"Labor asks no favors in this defense program," Robinson said, "but since it has shown its readiness to cooperate with the needs of national defense, it feels it has the right to insist that the government shall not use these orders further to enrich these outlaw corporations."

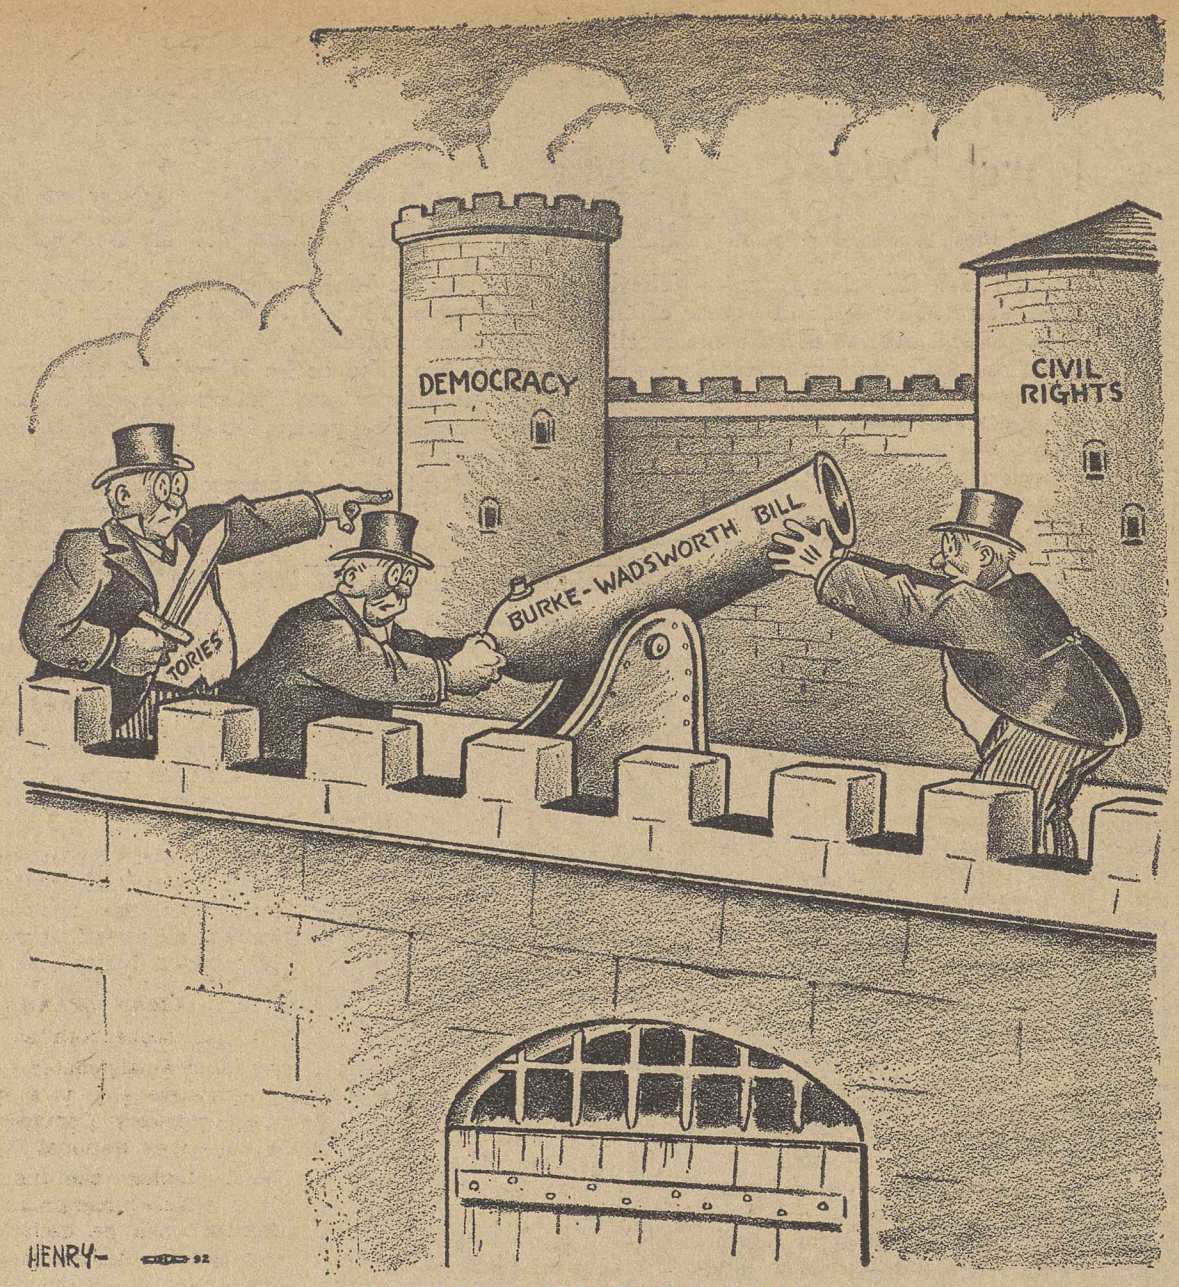
In New York the Executive Council of the Natl. Maritime Union wired President Roosevelt declaring: "We support without qualification the position of Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO that labor's rights be protected as part of defense program. We urge you issue executive order that no defense contracts be awarded to companies or firms that do not obey Wagner Act and who refuse to engage in collective bargaining with their employes."

PACKING WORKERS

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, through National Director Art Kempfert, sent a circular to all locals urging them to send resolutions on "this just request on the part of labor" to the President and to Commissioner Hillman.

The Cannery and Agricultural Workers sent a similar message to all locals over the signature of Pres. Don Henderson, who also wired support to Pres. Lewis, congratulating him on his "courageous leadership."

LOCALS ALSO



Support also was beginning to pour in from local unions and CIO Councils. Local 475 of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, largest local of skilled machinists in the U. S., sent a message of support to Lewis and a demand for an executive order to

Bethlehem's Profits Soar On U.S. Buying

President Roosevelt. From Washington, Local Industrial Union Director John Brophy wrote all LIU's urging them to take similar action. In New York, the recently formed CIO Council wired support to Lewis and sent a resolution to Roosevelt and Hillman.

DEFENSE IN REVERSE

Against Conscription

It is natural and logical that the Congress of Industrial Organizations should take a position against the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill, as it has recently done, following a canvass of its affiliates on the subject.

This conscription bill would mark a definite departure from American principles and ideals which labor has cherished most deeply. It would dislocate the lives of millions of individuals and seriously threaten basic American civil liberties.

Speaking to the Automobile Workers' convention, CIO Pres. Lewis deplored the attempt to estabish here the militarism which our forefathers left Europe to escape—with its excessive burden of taxation, its restrictions of personal freedom, and the power it places in the hands of a military caste.

"I wonder if in our zeal to protect our country from the shadow of a Hitler, we are not foolishly taking on some of Hitler's own methods," he said.

Lewis warned against the building of "a gigantic military instrumentality quartered upon the people." While it may be called a defensive mechanism, he said, "sooner or later will come a chief executive of the United States, a man on horseback, who will believe this instrumentality is not a defensive instrumentality at all, but an offensive instrumentality that will carry out his imperialistic dreams and conceptions."

Finally, the CIO has emphasized that conscription is not necessary to national defense. Voluntary enlistments could be increased as needed, it points out, if pay for enlisted men were increased over the present $21 a month and the minimum period of enlistment reduced.

On this, as on many other issues, it is labor which has to take the lead in defending our basic democratic institutions, which are now threatened from so many directions.

CIO Prodigy

It is hard to write in anything but superlatives about the CIO United Automobile Workers of America.

It is certainly the liveliest of unions, as attendance at its conventions or any of its other activities will prove to anyone. There is an optimistic spirit of youth, vigor and vitality, a good-natured assertiveness, a sense of humor and a lot of other qualities about this union and its members that are hard to match.

It is certainly one of the "fightingest" of unions. Its strike struggles have made history. They have revealed, besides the courage, loyalty and self-sacrifice that are common to most unionists in such situations, an exceptional degree of rank and file initiative and imagination and a hundred novel wrinkles in strike strategy, social activity and everything that goes to build up union morale.

It grew the fastest of any union perhaps in history. For awhile it had the doubtful distinction of the screwiest union president and some of the wildest internal factionalism. It rebounded from the reverses that these inside troubles caused in double quick time, reunited its ranks, disposed of AFL dual unionism in a few whirlwind campaigns —and now it is one of the most successful unions in existence.

Superlatives are needed too to describe the record reported by this prodigious CIO union to its St. Louis convention. A 93% increase in membership in the past year—a 100% increase in number of plants under contract—contracts covering 412,352 workers in 647 plants—union membership of 382,000, with 294,428 paid up in dues—election victories of landslide proportions —and out of it all improvements in wages and working conditions that make the union one of the major benefactors of the human race.

Now this motorized division of the CIO is all set to take on Henry Ford, the aircraft industry and to mop up in several other directions—and it's looking around for new records to break!

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IN a record-breaking 40-minute ovation that literally shook the plaster from the ceilings, the delegates to the United Automobile Workers convention demonstrated their enthusiasm for the leadership of John L. Lewis. They gave the CIO president what newsmen agreed was the greatest reception ever accorded to a labor leader.

It was a demonstration of loyalty and gratitude to a man who had done more than any other individual to establish their union in the critical days of its birth; and whose head had been the target for the brickbats of all their enemies.

It was an expression of affection and approval for the daring, the initiative and the fighting spirit of a leader who more than any other embodied the qualities of their own union and their own membership.

It was also an assertion of the Auto Workers' determination to continue, in the spirit of the CIO, to build an even greater, stronger and more independent labor movement.

Lewis's Speech

Lewis, on his part, gave them a speech which brought a continuous and electric response from the delegates. In close tune with the mood and the experience of the Auto Workers he developed the picture of a movement proud of its achievements, self-reliant, and standing today as the greatest bulwark of American liberties in a world at war.

He stressed the tasks ahead — the spreading of union organization; demands upon government and politicians for a square deal for labor; defense of civil rights in the current hysteria; and the necessity to end unemployment and to remove the cancer of poverty from American life.

Lewis voiced what was in the auto workers' own hearts, and it rang true and was readily understandable to them.

They cheered and constantly applauded, because they recognized in him a champion of their own demands who would not sell labor short but who bargained and fought against all comers for the very most that can be gotten for labor and the common people.

Sold Short

The auto workers have known what it is to be sold short by politicians and false leaders.

Bitter disillusionment followed their early attempts to organize in the AFL in NRA days. They flocked to the unions in many centers. But instead of giving them encouragement and aggressive leadership, the AFL offered only division and discouragement.

Not only craft division but internal dissension was promoted by the AFL leaders, who conceived it their duty to sit on the lid and denounce any local leadership that tried to do anything for the auto workers.

Finally, the government offered them the company union Wolman board, and when they had the strength to gain something for themselves, the AFL leaders induced them to submit to the virtual destruction of their unions.

The GM Strike

In the CIO the auto workers found a totally different kind of leadership — men like Lewis who encouraged them to realize their own strength and to be united, daring and determined in asserting their rights.

When the General Motors strike took place, Lewis used all his influence and all his powers of leadership to breathe courage into the auto workers and to persuade them to hold out for the most they could get.

At the same time, on their behalf, he steadfastly resisted all the pressures of government and politicians who sought to achieve early peace at the auto workers' expense.

The auto workers bore the brunt of that critical struggle that was to make or break their union, and with it possibly the whole CIO. They won, and all of labor was the gainer, because they found in Lewis and the CIO aid and leadership worthy of their own courage and determination.

Understanding

The sweeping gains that followed, then the period of intense factionalism, and the rebirth of the union after Martin's removal, are all matters of history now.

The auto workers' union stands at the peak of its strength today, with more and better contracts, and a larger and more united membership than ever before.

But in their present triumph, the auto workers have not forgotten that at every step in their union's stormy career, the CIO has stood by them, aiding and encouraging them to preserve unity; to exercise a wise militancy; not to underestimate their own strength; and not to be beguiled by politicians or anyone else into accepting less than they are reasonably entitled to and have the organized power to obtain.

When they demonstrated for Lewis and applauded his speech, the UAW delegates must have had many of these thoughts in mind. They responded as they did, to a kindred spirit, and to a leadership which they of all people should best understand — a leadership that does not sell labor short, nor rest content with sops, but constantly urges greater and more independent organization, industrially and politically, and more assertiveness until labor and the common people really win their place in the sun.

Text Of Lewis Letter On Conscription Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 — Following is the full text of the letter in regard to the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill sent by CIO President John L. Lewis to Rep. Andrew J. May, chairman, House Military Affairs Committee, and to Senator Morris Sheppard, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee:

"I am writing you in regard to H. R. 10132. I have carefully canvassed our organizations and find that the consensus of opinion is in fundamental opposition to this measure.

"The Congress of Industrial Organizations has pledged its full support to a program for meeting the needs of national defense of this country. However, we are firmly of the opinion that national defense does not and must not be based upon the destruction or curtailment of our basic democratic institutions.

DEPARTURE FROM OLD PRINCIPLES

"Compulsory conscription in time of peace, as provided for in the above legislation, involves a very definite departure from the basic principles of the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence. Compulsory conscription would necessarily result in tremendous dislocations among the lives of millions of individuals in industry and in communities throughout our country. Basic civil liberties, including freedom of speech and freedom of press, and freedom of individual initiative and enterprise, would be seriously threatened.

"Democracy, which we are seeking to defend and preserve, must offer its own way of life to combat the forces which imperil civilization today.

"Consideration of national defense cannot be restricted to the needs of our armed forces. The problems of unemployment, security for our elder citizens, the health needs of our lower income groups, and the preservation of civil liberties are of equal importance in our struggle to maintain our democracy.

SHOULD SPUR ENLISTMENTS

"To this end, the Congress of Industrial Organizations suggests that if there is a need for larger personnel in our armed forces, the method of voluntary enlistments be continued and relied upon to meet the needs of the present emergency. We believe that a sufficient number of voluntary enlistments could be secured if the pay for enlisted men were increased and the minimum period of enlistment reduced. Such an enlisted army, highly trained in the use of mechanized arms, would, we submit, meet our military defense problems.

"Furthermore, Congress should give immediate and urgent thought to legislative measures to meet the problems which are creating insecurity, ill-health and unemployment for millions of our citizens in this nation. Failure to do so, with concentration solely upon national defense through increased armed forces, would, under the guise of national defense, destroy the very institutions and principles which are so dear to the people of this nation."

would volunteer if pay were raised from the present army level of $21 per month and if the enlistment term were reduced from three years to one.

NEEDS OF PEOPLE

"Consideration of national defense cannot be restricted to the needs of our armed forces," he added. "The problems of unemployment, security for our elder citizens, the health needs of our lower income groups, and the preservation of civil liberties are of equal importance in our struggle to maintain our democracy."

Failure to do something effective about these national problems "would, under the guise of national defense, destroy the very institutions and principles which are so dear to the people of this nation," he said in concluding his letter.

Brophy Urges Locals Back Drive

Washington, Aug. 3 — CIO local industrial unions today were urged to throw their full support behind Pres. John L. Lewis' campaign for an Executive Order barring government contracts to violators of the Wagner Act.

In a letter sent out today, John Brophy, director of local industrial unions, called upon all local affiliates to communicate with Sidney Hillman of the Natl. Advisory Defense Commission, Federal Reserve Building, Washington, and with Pres. Roosevelt, "urging that Pres. Roosevelt issue an Executive Order of the kind referred to" by Lewis.

Girdler of Republic, as one of labor's most vicious enemies, announced that profits for the first half of 1940 were $21 million, compared to $6 million for the same period last year. Navy orders have brought the corporation's "blacklog" to $500 million, Grace said.

and Bethlehem, Pa.; Lackawanna, N. Y.; Sparrows Point, Md.; Fore River, Mass., and New York harbor. Pacific coast mills and yards will also be represented. Evidence covering low wages and constant wage cutting by the corporation, violations of the Wagner Labor and Walsh-Healey laws, and Bethlehem's refusal to practice bona-fide collective bargaining will be presented for action at the conference.

E. J. Lever, SWOC director for the Bethlehem Mills, predicts that the conference will protest against the recent demand for higher profits made by Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel. Lever referred to the announcement made by Grace on July 25 in which Grace reports a profit of $10,807,318 for three months ending June 30, 1940, for Bethlehem Steel.

out of those plants. But let me say that when you issue that order I shall leave this conference and I shall enter one of those plants with my own people. And the militia will have the pleasure of shooting me out of the plants with you.' The order was not executed."

Lewis related the efforts of the CIO for three years to get both the legislative and executive branches of the federal government to refrain from giving government business to concerns which violate the Wagner labor act.

LABOR'S RIGHTS

"Laws to protect labor's opportunity and labor's right to organize and express itself should be just as sacred in the eyes of a democratic administration in Washington as the laws that bring great profits and great privileges and prosperity to the makers of guns in America," he said, bringing a standing ovation and cries of "You'll get it," when called for the union's support on this proposition.

The Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill was attacked by both Lewis and CIO Vice President Philip Murray, who addressed the convention on a later day.

Denouncing the proposed military conscription as a departure from American ideals and principles, and a threat to democratic civil rights, Lewis warned that the building of a "gigantic military instrumentality" might bring a "man on horseback" to use it for aggressive purposes.

"Call it a defensive mechanism, if you please," he said, "but sooner or later will come a Chief Executive of the United States, a man on horseback who will believe this instrumentality is not a defensive instrumentality at all, but an offensive instrumentality that will carry out his imperialistic dreams and conceptions.

"I wonder if in our zeal to protect our country from the shadow of a Hitler, we are not foolishly taking on some of Hitler's own methods."

Murray declared he saw no need for a conscription law now, and that people should be given a chance to enlist voluntarily. He called attention to the "contrast between conscripting workers and giving special privileges to corporations under the defense program. There are obvious manifestations from day to day," he said, "indicating that so far as Congress is concerned widespread discrimination against working people are contemplated."

BETHLEHEM STEEL

The Bethlehem Steel Corp., Murray said, is enjoying more public contracts than perhaps any other concern, is reporting huge profits, but refuses to comply with a U. S. Supreme Court ruling requiring payment of Walsh-Healey act minimum wages.

"Yet Eugene Grace," he said, "has the effrontery to tell the people of the United States he is not going to cooperate with the government defense program unless the government puts the money down on the old barrel head. He is unwilling to risk one lousy speculative dollar on the defense program, while young men are being asked to risk their lives.

"Grace says 'go ahead with conscription. I'm all for it. But, by God, you won't interfere with one cent of my profits.' "

ORGANIZING PLANS

Murray dwelt at length on the organizing tasks ahead of the UAW, in regard to Ford, the aircraft and the farm equipment industries. Plans for these campaigns occupied much of the convention's attention, and it decided to increase per capita to the international office from 37½ to 40 cents a month to provide more money for organizing. A proposal for a $1 assessment for organizing was referred to a referendum vote of the membership.

Murray brought the convention to its feet and to singing "Solidarity Forever" when he denied newspaper rumors of division in the CIO.

"I want the people of the United States to know, through the medium of this convention," he said, "that there is no disunity in the CIO. We're working together to promote organization as we always have.

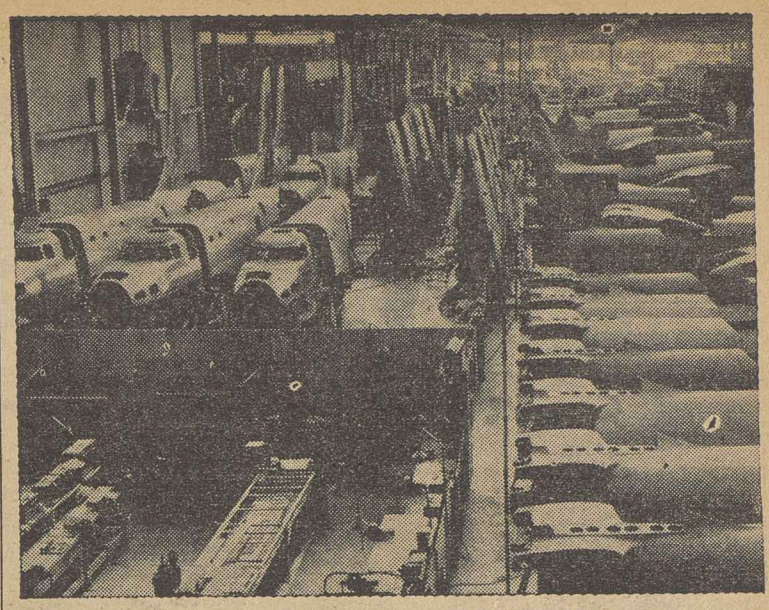
"Personally I am a man of strong convictions and expressed opinions. But no one is justified to say publicly or privately, in the press or anywhere else, that there is any disagreement between John Lewis and me."

UNION GAINS

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW, also stressed the unity of the CIO in his opening address, calling it "one of the closest knit organizations in the country," and expressing the auto workers' loyalty to CIO Pres. Lewis, "the greatest labor leader in the world today."

Reciting the union's achievements, with contracts in 647 plants covering 412,000 workers, Thomas said that in the past six years it has brought these workers more than $800,000,000 in increased wages.

Other outstanding CIO leaders who addressed the convention in the first few days included Vice Presidents Sidney Hillman and S. H. Dalrymple and Organization Director Allan S. Haywood. Gov. Lloyd Stark of Missouri and Congressman Frank Fries were also among the speakers.



HILLMAN SPEAKS

Hillman spoke both as a CIO leader and Amalgamated Clothing representative and as a member of the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense.

He explained the functioning of the defense program and drew applause when he declared that "real national defense means the enforcement of all our favorable labor and social legislation," and when he declared that he saw no necessity for lengthening working hours.

"If labor becomes convinced that national defense needs the lengthening of hours we will do it, and we will need no advice from the outside.

"But it is a common sense dictate that before you break down your hours you should find jobs for those who are unemployed."

Lewis Discusses Politics, Jobs, Defense

I was present at the birth of this organization in every major sense. From afar I watched the struggles of the men in the automobile industry to form an organization to find redress for their wrongs and their ills, to get better treatment from their employers during the years 1933, 1934 and 1935. I know something of the sense of injury and disappointment that came to the workers in the industry when, during those years their plans were frustrated and they were frequently sent back from their conferences in Washington or elsewhere with less than was their proper portion, with but little consideration of a nature that would encourage the formation and continuance of a mighty organization in the automobile industry, capable of dealing on even terms with those great aggregations of capital which had ruled the industry for decades without having any agency or power to oppose them.

The 1937 GM Strike

On February 1, 1937, in behalf of the CIO, in behalf of the UAW, in behalf of the men on strike in the General Motors plants, I conferred with the President of the United States, and the proposals which were adduced for settlement at that time were so unsatisfactory that I declined to present them to the union. On the following day, February 2nd, I took a train for Detroit with no further conference arranged, determined to contribute my strength to the cause of the workers in the General Motors plants and determined to rise or fall with these men and that organization.

I do not know what happened in the night, but on leaving the train in Detroit the following morning I was waited on by representatives of the Governor of Michigan and summoned forthwith into a conference which resulted later in the day in a joint meeting of three representatives of the General Motors Corporation and the Governor of the State. Those conferences lasted nine days and a large part of nine nights, and during that entire period the constant refrain of the manufacturers' representatives and the constant request of the Governor of the State was that I order an evacuation of the plants, and submit to the hazard of negotiations following that evacuation.

My reply was every day and every night to this effect: "Those men, out of a sense of their own grievous injustices, voluntarily elected to take that step, and I would be a fool and a traitor indeed if I asked those men to evacuate their position of strength, knowing that in Flint and elsewhere they would be shot down in the streets by the murderous agents of General Motors Corporation, and the chances of getting a satisfactory settlement would be entirely dissipated and thrown away."

Reply to 'Orders'

It is a matter of public knowledge now that the Governor of this State read me a formal letter in writing demanding that this action be taken by me, and my reply to the Governor of the State when he read that letter, with the knowledge of the President of the United States—and the approval—was this: "I do not doubt your ability to call out your soldiers and shoot the members of our union out of those plants, but let me say that when you issue that order I shall leave this conference and I shall enter one of those plants with my own people.

"And the militia will have the pleasure of shooting me out of the plants with you." The order was not executed.

And one morning about 3 o'clock, after nine days of constant, wearisome negotiations, a vice-president of General Motors Corporation who owned $13,000,000 worth of stock, came up himself to my bedroom in the hotel and told me that General Motors would sign on the dotted line. And they did, and I did, and you did, and the Union was born beyond peradventure. They had executed collective bargaining contracts with the mightiest corporation of them all.

It all goes to show that united we stand; collectively we are powerful, individually we are weak and have no strength, and we fall.

America's Problems

America has problems ahead. No man today can draw a blueprint of the effect of the European war upon our own country, and no man may accurately measure the economic impact upon our own affairs that will come when peace comes to Europe, as peace some day will come.

It may be that America stands to lose more out of the ending of this war in every economic and social sense than is even true of some of the beligerent countries, and it is necessary for labor to build up it strength so as to be articulate and so as to take its share of responsibility of leadership, to help and assist government in the power of decision, because there is a man's work ahead of each of us and the nation needs the sustaining strength of the millions of Americans who comprise the membership of its associated labor organizations.

For three years the CIO has been trying to get our government at Washington, both through the legislative and executive branches, to refrain from giving any government business to concerns that deny the rights of labor.

Law-Breakers' Profits

For three years the Congress and for three years the executive branch of government has withheld that action. Now we are in the midst of a great defense program that contemplates perhaps an internal expenditure within the nation approximating some fifteen billions of dollars and the government and the Congress is making it profitable for industry and finance to be patriotic. What corporation would not be patriotic when they are being paid to be patriotic in extra profits? They are making guns and war materials.

Well, someone may say, that is a necessary attribute, a necessary condition in the mad rush to build up defensive armament for the nation. Granted for the moment—then labor also says that if industry is to be permitted to wax opulent in consideration of its patriotism, then labor at least, not asking for profits but merely for the right to live, has a right to insist that the same government compel that same industry to observe the laws passed by the Congress of the United States.

And I submit that a great corporation or manufacturing enterprise like Bethlehem Steel and the Ford Motor Car Company, if they want government business, if they want the right to make profit by making defense materials, have just as much moral compulsion to accept the conditions of the Wagner National Labor Relations Act as they have from stealing chickens, because the state legislature enacted a law against it. . . .

I want the support of this organization in all of its great, far flung membership if I can get it on that principle and on that proposition.

Conscription

Again, in relation to the defense program, the Congress of the United States is considering and will soon be debating a universal conscription law for military service. The CIO has taken a position against it. If our Congress should undertake to enact such a law in peace time it will mark a turning point in the policies of this Republic and constitute a departure from our expressed and foresworn ideals and objectives as a nation such as were never contemplated in all the years of the life of this Republic.

I doubt that some of the proponents of universal peace time conscription really understand what they propose, or the implications or the potentialities of their own proposals. The Chief of Staff of the United States Army nonchalantly comes before a Committee of Congress and proposes a standing army of 2,000,000 armed men, quartered on the citizens of the United States. I wonder if he understands the social and the political implications of such a suggestion! I wonder if they understand the economic implications and potentialities of such a program!

Build up a defensive army of that magnitude and train our millions of young men in the arts of war at the public expense, and as sure as the sun will rise tomorrow, by that act our Congress is planting the seeds of destruction of democracy and is paving the way for the rise of a new imperialistic nation within the confines of the United States of America.

Imitating Hitler?

Build up, if you please, a gigantic military instrumentality of that character and quartered upon the people of this nation under a Roosevelt or under any other President, call it a defensive mechanism, if you please, but sooner or later will come a Chief Executive of the United States, a man on horseback who will believe this instrumentality is not a defensive instrumentality that will carry out his imperialistic dreams and conceptions. . . .

What is our Congress and our country coming to when men in Congress propose as an amendment to the conscription act that anyone who would express an opinion in opposition to conscription or the administration of the law be liable to a fine of $10,000 and five years in prison!

I wonder if, in our zeal to protect our country from the shadow of a Hitler, we are not foolishly taking on some of Hitler's own methods to build up that protective situation which, in the end, may circumscribe our individual liberties and eliminate our collective civil liberties, and put a burden of taxation on the people that will be oppressive and that will create social confusion and unrest to a point where we are in fact bringing about the condition from which we have been vainly seeking to escape.

It is proposed that the young men be drafted into the Army and that they be paid the Army wage of $21.00 per month. What young man who has a father or a mother or a sister or other kinsmen or relatives can idly contemplate entering the Army for one year or three years and abandoning his family and his obligation for the sum of $21.00 per month.

The Unemployed

We have 10,700,000 unemployed now, and long before those 5,000,000 men can secure employment making guns and munitions and defensive equipment, the European war will probably have been ended, and the Chino-Japanese war may be ended, and 100,000,000 men now in the military service of the various countries or serving them in the manufacturing facilities at home will return to peace time pursuits and be sending the products of their cheap labor to every consuming center on the surface of the globe.

When that time comes America will have lost so much of her foreign trade that the economic impact of that situation in our own country will cause a reduction in volume of business, excessive unemployment, and the layoff of millions of men, and our entire internal economy will be again thrown into reverse action.

Beware of Hysteria

I warn my fellow Americans not to be beguiled into a war hysteria nor the acceptance of a war state of mind merely because some politician or statesman was incapable of coping with the problems of Americans who see in war, or the association of our country with other countries in war, relief from the clamorings of its own people and relief from the dreadful obligations of not being able to submit constructive ideas for national economic reform or bring about national economic stability . . .

There is what is the matter with America — an insufficient national income that will permit its population to consume its own production. There are plenty of people in those 19,000,000 families who would buy new automobiles if they could afford it, but they can't buy many automobiles on $69.00 a month. About the best they can do is to borrow it from the finance company for a month or two.

Parties Silent

There is America's problem. What are we going to do about it? What are the major political parties going to do about it? The platforms of the major political parties are silent on that question. They break no new ground. They point with pride to what they have done, and they swear by all the Gods that ever sat on High Olympus that they are going to preserve what they have done, but they don't say anything about what they are going to do about those 10,700,000 men and women unemployed and they don't say anything about what they are going to do about those 19,000,000 American families who have to live on $69.00 a month. Those are the questions.

Some day in this country the people are going to lose confidence in the existing political parties to a degree they will form their own party . . .

Labor's Cause

As long as I can present on the public platform and in the councils of the nation what you believe to be the things and the ideals and the objectives that are in your heart and mind, I am glad to lend my strength, and I am glad to have your support. Without that support, my words are like the tinkling of cymbals and the sounding of brass! they mean nothing.

The only thing that gives strength to my arms and to my voice is the fact that you men say that I correctly represent you and interpret your dreams and your policies, and if the day should come, as it well may, that that support is withheld from me, I shall accept your judgment, and no longer annoy you with my counsels or advice.

I stand uncompromisingly now, as I have, pleading the cause of labor and the common people of this country, and I care not who it offends, whether it be those who sit in the seats of the mighty, in the counting houses of the nation, whether it be those who control a great political party, or whether it be those statesmen who currently occupy the positions of council at the seat of government.

I have no apologies to offer for my convictions or for the policies I have espoused, I feel that in supporting the logical objectives of labor, as they have declared for them in their councils and conventions, that I am making a contribution to the well-being of every American who is denied opportunity for the greater happiness of his children and the security of those institutions which have been erected under our flag and which we all desire to protect.

11-Month Strike Paves Way For Waterman Pact

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 3.—An 11-month strike and consumer campaign against the L. E. Waterman Co. today forced the big fountain pen firm to sign an agreement with Local 134, United Rubber Workers, CIO.

The company agreed to reinstate 190 locked-out workers and to fire all scabs and strike-breakers. Other terms included a closed shop, the union hiring hall, paid vacations, wage adjustments and seniority rights for the 350 workers. The existing weekly minimum is $18. As part of the settlement, the union dropped its charges with the Labor Board.

REFUSED TO BARGAIN

The walkout started last August after the firm refused to negotiate a new union contract, declined to appear before the NLRB, and fired 50 employes, many of them with as many as 20 years of service.

Although picketing was discontinued for a few months after the strike started, an effective campaign against the firm's products was effective in registering labor protests.

Shoe Union Reports Big Progress

Washington, Aug. 3.—Progress in its organizational campaign throughout the shoe industry was reported today by the CIO United Shoe Workers.

In Baltimore, Md., the union ran up an almost 2-1 majority over no union in a Labor Board election among the more than 200 employes of the Muskin Shoe Co. In Lynn, Mass., the union rung up a majority vote at the Vogue Shoe Co.

Meanwhile, national officers of the USWA announced the chartering of a new local at the North Shore Last Co. in Lynn, and said that union membership was practically 100 per cent at the Chicago plant of the Irving Shoe Co. An NLRB election will be held there in a few days.

TO CONVENE

Washington.—The first constitutional convention of the CIO United Federal Workers will be held here on Sept. 17.

Shoe Union PicketsJersey Sweat-Shopp

Jersey City, Aug. 3.—(FP)—The Harborside Building, open shop fortress located in Mayor Frank (I Was the Law) Hague's home town, is being picketed by employes of one of the sweatshops sheltered within the vast structure.

The sweatshop is the Inter-Allied Slipper Co., which employes accuse of paying less than the 30 cents hourly legal minimum and of running a longer work week than 42 hours without payment of overtime wages under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The strike was called by the United Shoe Workers, CIO, just 10 months after the union won its first contract with another Harborside sweatshop, the Oxford Slipper Co.

"The company pays as little as 11½ cents an hour and works the men as much as 70 hours a week without paying overtime," declared Anthony Scimeca, USW district business agent. "Often the men have to work all day Saturday and Sunday, too."

The 140 strikers want union recognition, a 15 per cent wage increase and a 40-hour week.

Paper Workers Get Pay-Boost

Cincinnati, Aug. 3.—United Paper Workers, CIO Local 19, has won a three-cent hourly wage increase in negotiations with the Oxford Miami Paper Co., Paul Fuller, regional director, announced today.

The plant signed a contract with the union last January which provided for improvements in working conditions and contained a pledge to negotiate on wages in July.

No Shortage In Shipyard Labor Supply

New York, Aug. 3.—There are plenty of skilled shipyard workers along the Atlantic coast to man adequately existing plants, the Joint Council of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers declared today in a statement criticizing the Navy Department's announced plan of bringing more men from inland cities.

"While employment in the repair yards is better this year than last, there is nothing remotely approaching full-time employment for the New York shipyard worker," the union said.

Ask Re-hiring Of 3,000

San Francisco, Aug. 3 — The National Labor Relations Board has asked the U. S. circuit court of appeals for an order enforcin a decision against the powerful Grower-Shipper Vegetable Assn. of Central California and its 27 affiliates.

The NLRB wants the organization to recognize the CIO United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, and rehire 3,000 workers.

North Or South -- CIO Wins Elections

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Aug. 3.—The farthest-north election in National Labor Relations Board history today followed the pattern set in the States: the CIO won.

Despite a barrage of hostile propaganda from radio, press and leaflets, the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers polled 345 votes among Fairbanks miners to 333 for no union. Intl. Rep. W. A. Rasmussen and other officials hailed the outcome as "unionism's greatest victory in the interior of Alaska."

Out of the almost 800 votes cast, the AFL picked up only 29 and a company-dominated Brotherhood 11. Their total, however, prevented the CIO from getting a majority, and a run-off will be held, probably with the two small groups eliminated from the ballot.

Union leaders say every possible slander and lie was directed against the CIO, together with a whispering campaign rumor that the mine would shut down if the CIO won. Use of local radio stations and newspapers was denied the CIO when it sought to reply.

Guild Fights Louisiana Injunction

Monroe, La., Aug. 3—Its strike against Monroe's two daily papers now four months old, the CIO American Newspaper Guild today launched a campaign against a sweeping anti-union injunction handed down by District Court Judge J. T. Shell.

The writ prohibits striking employes of the News-Star and the Morning World from picketing advertisers in the two publications. In addition, they may not distribute handbills in front of the unfair stores, use a sound truck to announce their names or even publish the firms' names in the Guild's own publications.

The injunction was obtained July 26 by 15 local merchants, most of them guests at a recent banquet given by Publisher Ewing, who is attempting to salvage his advertising revenue.

Shell granted the writ on the fourth day of unfair labor practice hearings before the Labor Board. The Guild charges the publisher with firing the local Guild secretary for union activity and with refusing to bargain.

ASK PAY RAISE

Richmond, Ind.—Demands for a 10 per cent wage increase are being pushed by Local 118 of the Farm Equipment Workers at the Intl. Harvester plant here.

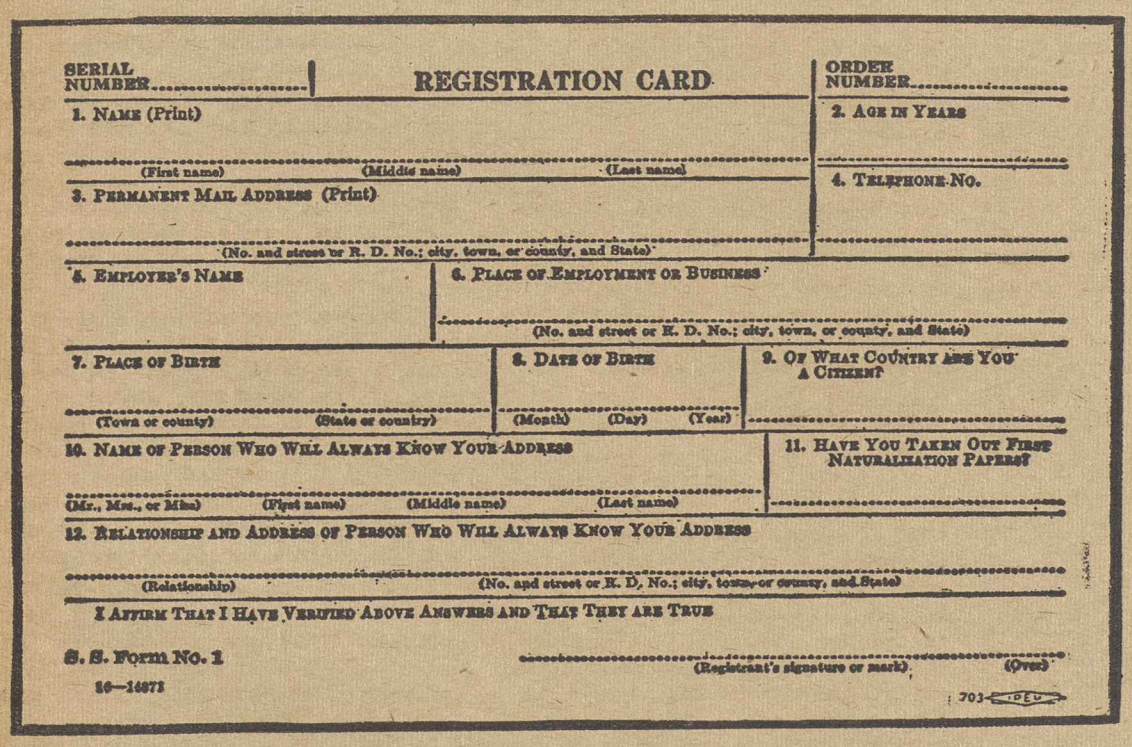
Newsmen Resist Law Exemptions

Washington, Aug. 3.—In the old days before newspaper workers were organized the publishers used to console them for low wages and long hours by telling them their job was a "profession" and therefore they shouldn't have any truck with unions and such.

Now they know better, of course and this week Secretary-Treasurer Vic Pasche of the American Newspaper Guild told a Wage-Hour hearing that newspaper workers regard their job as a skilled craft and therefore they are entitled to the same protection from the law that other workers get.

Pasche appeared in oposition to the American Newspaper Publishers Assn. which claims exemption from the Wage-Hour law on the ground that their employes are all "professionals" and not entitled to minimum standards.

TORTURE



Efforts of Elisha Hanson, counsel for the publishers, to define them as professionals amounted to "torture of the English language," Pasche said. Pasche also opposed a number of learned Deans of Journalism from the better universities who appeared to testify for the employers.

The hearings were the result of a reopening of the question of what makes a "professional" and an "executive" by the Wage-Hour Administration of the U. S. Labor Dept.

Correction

A story appearing in the July 3, 1940, issue of The CIO NEWS inadvertently left the impression that the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union and the Natl. Labor Relations Board had won a victory in U. S. Circuit Court decision involving the Humble Oil Co.

Actually, the decision struck out the most important sections of the NLRB ruling and made no change in the status of company unions' function at the firm's Baytown and Ingleside, Tex., plants.

Fight Ford Influence On College Campus

Anti-Union Firings At Michigan Hit By Organizers

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Aug. 3.—Issues of academic freedom and labor's rights to bargain became closely intertwined here when the University of Michigan dismissed a number of students for assistance to a CIO union organizing drive on the college campus.

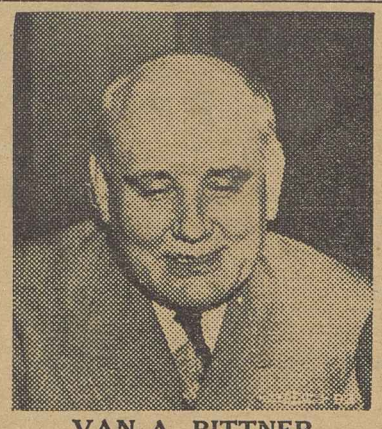
"A study of the composition of the Board of Regents will reveal the fact that the Ford Motor Co. of Dearborn, Mich., is the real director of the university. The last fortress of the open shop has been trying to apply its servicemen tactics to the University," the local said.

The University of Michigan Local of the State, County & Municipal Workers, in a statement released here, listed the facts in the case and called for labor protests to President Alexander Ruthven of the University.

REFUSE RECOGNITION

"When the state organizer of the SCMWA began work here, he was informed that 'the University of Michigan will not recognize any labor union or attempts at collective bargaining!' "

The University has complete control over distribution of leaflets and has forbidden the passing out of literature on University property.



Assistance given the union by a number of students living inside the dormitories led to their dismissal from the school. One University official was quoted as admitting a student had been barred because he "had stirred up the workers."

"The University of Michigan has a long record of anti-labor practices," the union charged.

EMIL RIEVE

As President of the Textile Workers Union, Rieve is asking the U. S. Wage-Hour Division to set new minimum pay rates for the textile industry.

VAN A. BITTNER

Chairman of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, which is rolling up new victories in its organizing drives at Cudahy Packing Co. plants throughout the country.

Textile Union Asks New 40c Pay Base

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Experience of textile workers in the past nine months justifies an increase in the minimum wage set by the Wage and Hour Division of the U. S. Labor Dept., Emil Rieve, Textile Workers Union president, declared in petitioning the Division for a new committee to establish a 40-cent per hour scale.

"The average hourly earnings in the cotton textile industry have risen to the degree forecast by the first committee," Rieve said. "Average hourly earnings are now 41 cents or seven per cent above the 38.3 cents prevailing prior to the adoption of the 32.5 cent minimum."

IMPROVE MORALE

Textile corporation profits are also up, Rieve pointed out, citing a 1939 profit of close to $10 million compared to a $7.5 million loss in 1938. Textile consumption and plant expansion are also increasing, he said, and U. S. government orders are expected to give a further boost.

Higher minimum wages would "improve the morale of the textile workers and assure greater service and usefulness in our defense program," he said. "Stronger, healthier and more satisfied workers who will enjoy the benefits of democracy in their mill and in their homes will add might to their devotion."

CIO Wins Poll At Cudahy Plant

Sioux City, Ia., Aug. 3. — Three victories in three Labor Board ballots at Cudahy Packing Co. plants is the record of the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, brought down to date by a 671 to 81 win at the Kansas City branch. The first two were at Los Angeles and Kansas City.

A loudspeaker system mounted on an auto told the workers at the plant gates why they should vote CIO. Daily leaflet distributions were made and repeated pre-election rallies held.

Cudahy Signs First Contract

Los Angeles, Aug. 3. — First contract with the Cudahy Packing Co. was won by Local 107 of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee here. The CIO agreement, which gives sole recognition to the PWOC, will put an AFL rump group out of business, local officials announced.

The agreement also includes overtime pay, strict seniority, grievance adjustment apparatus, and vacations with pay.

Win Election

Chicago, Aug. 3. — CIO Packinghouse Workers added another link in the huge Armour and Co. packing empire here when they took a Labor Board election at the Armour Wholesale Market by 34 to 6. The PWOC already has sole bargaining rights at the main plant in the Yards, the 31st St., plant, and the Armour Car Shops.

Push Drive for House Action on Poll Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Latest attempt to get Congress to act on the anti-poll tax bill is a resolution calling upon the House rules committee to grant a rule permitting the bill to go to the floor of the House, Congressman Lee E. Geyer, (Dem., Calif.) author of the bill said this week.

The proposed act would prohibit the requirement of payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite for voting at federal elections. Eight southern states—Alabama, Arkansas, Georgie, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia—have poll tax requirements for voting.

ACTION NECESSARY

"Congressional action is necessary if we are to get rid of this unfair, unjust and undemocratic tax," Congressman Geyer said.

"All states which were able to remove the poll tax requirement for voting through their own legislative enactments have done so: North Carolina in 1920, Pennsylvania in 1933, Louisiana in 1934 and Florida in 1938.

"In the remaining eight poll tax states, the provision has been 'frozen' into the state constitutions and can only be removed by an act of Congress outlawing such statutes."

If Geyer's resolution is favorably reported on by the rules committee, it will bring the anti-poll tax bill to the floor of the House.

Walk-Out At Cemetery?

DETROIT, Aug. 3. — If the management of the Woodmere Cemetery here wants its graves to be dug on schedule, it had better meet with the union—and quick.

For the United Cemetery Workers, CIO, has filed strike notification with the state mediation board, following the breakdown of two conferences and subsequent refusal of the firm to bargain further.

More than 90% of the cemetery's 85 employes belong to the union. They're asking a 10c hourly increase for men now receiving 50c an hour, and a 13c boost for women now getting 37c hourly.

Boatmen To Plan Drive In Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Aug. 3—A drive to wind up negotiations for the securing of a contract for boatmen on Jones and Laughlin (Vesta Coal) boats will be initiated next week concurrently with the holding of a National Conference of the Inland Boatmen's Division of the National Maritime Union on Aug. 5.

Pittsburgh has been selected as the place for the Conference because "the union has only the Pittsburgh Pool area left in order to get collective bargaining agreements for practically every boat on inland waterways throughout the United States."

This statement was made by Michael Luschinski, Field Representative of the National Maritime Union, who announced that "National Officers of the Union will be present for the Conference and will confer with leaders of the CIO steel and mine workers concerning the organization drive on both J.&L. and Carnegie-Illinois boats."

INVITE CIO LEADERS

Among the national officers to be present at the Conference will be Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, Felix Siren, national coordinator of the Inland Boatmen's Division, and Howard McKenzie of the National Council.

Allan S. Haywood, in charge of Organization for the CIO, is expected to address the Conference. In addition, various nationally prominent CIO leaders who make their headquarters in this city, such as Philip Murray and P. T. Fagan, have been invited to be present at the Conference.

New Construction Union Bulletin

Washington, Aug. 3.—The CIO United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee marked its first anniversary by starting publication of a four-page semi-monthly bulletin as the committee's official organ.

The United Construction Workers News will appear on the first and fifteenth of each month. It will contain news about the union and the building industry.

Furniture Union Wins New Pact

New York, Aug. 3. — Renewal of contracts signed jointly last year by Local 76-B of the CIO Furniture Union and the New York Woodcarvers & Modelers Association, AFL, with the machine carving contractors in the frame industry was announced this week.

The contracts provide for a minimum wage scale, the use of the union label and other union terms.

NEGOTIATE: A negotiating committee of 52 unionists, representing locals of the CIO American Communications Assn., meets in New York to draw up demands for a new union contract with the Postal Telegraph Co.

Lewis Renews Attack On Burke Bill

Addresses CIO Metal Miners

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 10.—Renewing his previously expressed criticism of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis warned delegates to the 37th annual convention of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers to keep close guard over their civil rights.

The CIO leader, delivering his second convention address in a week, was interrupted by frequent bursts of applause as he told his fear of the possibility that a military caste system might force the great mass of American citizens to live in the status of servants of the war machine.

Lewis also was critical of the bill introduced by Cong. Sabath of Illinois which would provide heavy jail sentences for those who express allegedly "dangerous thoughts"—a proposal which he interpreted as endangering American rights to freedom of speech.

Earlier CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood had advised the union to keep calm and not to "fall for the fifth column hysteria."

Sharp gains in union membership, contracts and dues payments were reported to the delegates by Pres. Reid Robinson, who opened the convention sessions.

To Name CIO Queen

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 10.— The title of "Miss Connecticut CIO" will be awarded to the winner of the bathing beauty contest to be held at the state Industrial Union Council field day at McLay Park, East Haven, on Aug. 25.

Pictures of the winner will appear in the Council's annual book, as well as in a subsequent issue of THE CIO NEWS.

In addition there will be a number of athletic events, boating and dancing. Prominent figures in the CIO and in the world of sport will address the thousands expected to attend.

THE GHOSTS WALK: Upholding the best labor traditions, the ghosts of dead unionists picket Detroit's Woodmere Cemetery to aid striking CIO grave diggers. No decent corpse can rest in peace in a scab-dug grave, future customers of the cemetery are being warned. The pickets are aiding CIO United Cemetery Workers, who seek wage increases, improved working conditions and overtime pay.

The strike, one of the first of its kind, has won widespread support from Michigan CIO leaders. State Sec. John Gibson has been active in conducting negotiations for the local, while other CIO affiliates have been active in providing assistance to the strikers.

Congress Gets Many Protests

Washington, Aug. 10. — A flood of letters and telegrams from unions and civic bodies in all parts of the country today was pouring into Congressional offices urging defeat of the Burke-Wadsworth military conscription bill.

National unions, state and city councils and local unions swelled the rush of communications, considered one of the largest in recent years. In addition, scores of letters reached CIO headquarters praising the stand of Pres. Lewis, who made public his own letter of protest a week ago.

Most of the letters expressed strong opposition to the principle of compulsory military service in times of peace, while others pointed to the more specifically anti-labor sections of the bill.

Sen. Burke of Nebraska, one of the sponsors of the measure, who was defeated for renomination a few months ago, has frequently worked in close harmony with the Tory Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers.

'Babs' Loses Her Cut On Million Dimes

For the National Labor Relations Board today had ordered the F. W. Woolworth Co. to reinstate 140 New York warehouse employes and to pay them one-fourth of the company's entire warehouse payroll total for an eight-month period. The amount is estimated at $100,000.

An end to discouraging membership in Local 65, CIO United Retail & Wholesale Employes, and to interfering in the workers' right to bargain collectively was also ordered.

When the local launched an organizing campaign at that time, the NLRB decision found, the company broke a precedent by giving a general wage increase of $1, presumably to stall off organization. Union leaders were segregated in one section of the plant.

UNION MASCOT: Frank Thomas, year-old son of Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, seems to be learning the art of convention gavel-wielding at an early age. He called the UAW convention to order a couple of times, was promptly adopted as union mascot. His father looks proud.

62,000 Electric Workers Lack Jobs, Union Survey Indicates

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—At least 62,000 skilled and semi-skilled workers in the nation's electrical manufacturing industry are now jobless and available for national defense work, the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers suggested today.

The estimate was based on "half-way" tabulations in the union's nation-wide survey of unemployment in the industry. The report, based on data from 258 plants with a payroll of 125,000 employes, showed that 31,167 workers are now unemployed in half of the industry.

SEE NO SHORTAGE

James Matles, UE director of organization, said the survey has so far shown no facts "to indicate any immediate prospect of a shortage of labor, or shortage of skilled labor. Our program of activity in this field indicates that the major problem for both industry and labor at this time is that of ascertaining what and how much the industry is expected to produce during the coming months.

"We find there is perhaps too much emphasis on the training of labor through plans involving expenditure of taxpayers' money. Our concept is to meet these needs through the facilities of the industry itself with the full co-operation of labor, and to call on public funds only when absolutely necessary."

WANT REAL PLANNING

Matles warned against a hit-or-miss program under which a thousand welders might be given training only to have the industry find out, after government orders are allocated, that workers in other categories are the ones needed.

Whatever the situation may be, Matles added, "we can predict confidently that industry and labor together will solve these problems with characteristically American speed and efficiency."

Honor Picket Murdered By Fink

St. Louis, Aug. 10.—The murder of a striking Century Electric Co. employe by a knife-wielding fink today had aroused all St. Louis labor.

The victim, Oscar Buckley, for seven years a worker at the plant and a loyal member of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, was stabbed to death by Norman Pirtle, a strikebreaker.

Buckley is survived by his wife, a seven-year-old son and a 4-months-old baby.

"We pause in his memory, saddened that a young man must die that Century can carry on its un-American fight against living wages and decent working conditions," a resolution passed by Buckley's fellow unionists declared.

"With increased determination, we carry on. We know that our fight is the fight for which he gave his life. We know that the best monument which we can erect in his memory is to achieve those conditions which he wished to bring about."

ASK STATE PROBE

Following Buckley's death, officers of the Local called upon Governor Lloyd Stark of Missouri to investigate the activities of the city police, whose behavior during the course of the seven-week strike has been the subject of considerable comment.

The St. Louis Industrial Union Council, acting in support of the UE Local, "condemned strike-breaking activities" of the police.

To Appeal Coast Anti-Union Case

New York, Aug. 10.—A campaign of persecution and terrorism against the union, culminated in the conviction of 12 West Coast members of the State, County & Municipal Workers who were charged with "contempt," is being waged against the union in California, according to a statement issued at the national SCMW office here this week.

Tried for "contempt of the legislature" for refusal to give up union records to the union-baiting Yorty (Litle Dies) Committee, the 12 members were convicted and sentenced to a year in prison plus $500 fine each.

TO APPEAL DECISIONS

The union announced their conviction would be appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court if necessary and has sent out an appeal to organized labor for financial assistance to fight the case.

"The issue is an attempted 'legal lynching' of our union and a direct threat to every labor union," the union defense committee declared in its appeal for aid.

WANTED BLACKLIST

"The issue involved is the unprecedented attempt by a California 'Little Dies' Committee of five assemblymen to seize our union's books and records for use as a blacklist."

Erie, Pa., Aug. 10 — A smashing 3-1 CIO election victory was marked up to the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at the huge General Electric Co. plant here today.

The vote gave the CIO union 2,744; an "independent" outfit, 873; and "no union", 476.

The election victory brings the last of the 19 major General Electric Co. plants into the UE fold and automatically extends the union's basic contract with the firm to cover the factory here.

Pres. James B. Carey pointed out that the UE now has more than 250,000 workers under contract, and that 85 per cent of the electrical products manufactured in the United States are now produced under CIO conditions.

Ask Better Break For Canada Labor

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 10.—More labor representatives on various federal war-time boards was demanded by Angus MacInnis, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation member of the House of Commons, and a leader of the United Mine Workers.

The labor parliamentarian charged that many, "if not all," of those appointed by the government to control war production in various industries were opposed to trade unions in industries they controlled.

He said "the place to begin fighting and for winning democracy is right here in Canada."

"I could name members associated with the department of munitions and supply in whose industries an employe cannot belong to a trade union.

"Is it any wonder that the people are suspicious, and doubt that after the war we are going to have real democracy in Canada?" he asked.

"If we are sincere in saying that we favor democracy then let us fight for it at home and free our people from the thraldom on monopolistic control under which they suffer at the present time."

News Guild Leaders Poke Holes in 'Satevepost' Charges

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—An attack on the CIO American Newspaper Guild by Joseph Dineen of the Boston Globe, whose several thousand words occupied a lead position in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, received quick reply from two national Guild leaders.

Pres. Donal Sullivan — who is employed by the same Boston newspaper — accused Dineen of using the "technique of accumulating minor misstatements of fact and half-truths to build a falsely imposing 'factual' edifice from which to proceed to profound conclusions."

'DOESN'T LIKE UNION'

Executive Vice-Pres. Milton Kaufman, after analyzing Dineen's various complaints, reached the conclusion that "Mr. Dineen is resigning because he does not like a union."

The writer of the magazine article seemed particularly grieved that the Guild is a union rather than a wishy-washy "professional association," that it is an industrial union rather than a group composed solely of high-paid editorial writers, and that Guild members objected when Dineen walked through a restaurant picket line to get himself a cup of coffee.

Pres. Sullivan particularly criticized Dineen's assertions that Guild membership has resulted in pro-labor coloration of news stories about unions.

'UTTERLY FALSE'

That assertion, he said, "is so utterly false that the managing editors of Boston papers should feel properly resentful.

"A long list of outstanding Boston newspapermen who are Guild members could be recited in refutation of the curious charge that the Boston Guild is made up of 'the incompetent, the mediocre and the misfits'."

The real comment on the article, Sullivan concluded, "should not be on Dineen, but on the editorial judgment of the Saturday Evening Post in presentation of the 'news'."

Auto Parley Ends; Thomas, Addes Re-Elected

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 10.—President R. J. Thomas and Secretary-Treasurer George F. Addes were unanimously re-elected to the leadership of the CIO United Automobile Workers at the concluding session of its international convention.

Other important actions taken in the convention's closing days included resolutions on the Ford and aircraft organizing campaigns; a vigorous stand against conscription and war involvement; and opposition to defense contracts going to violators of the National Labor Relations or Walsh-Healey Acts.

RAP CONSCRIPTION

The unanimously adopted resolution on conscription declared that "compulsory military conscription is entirely foreign to our mode of life," and is "a potential danger to organized labor." It warned that "the development of a huge standing army . . . may lead to imperialistic adventures and the development of a military caste in this country."

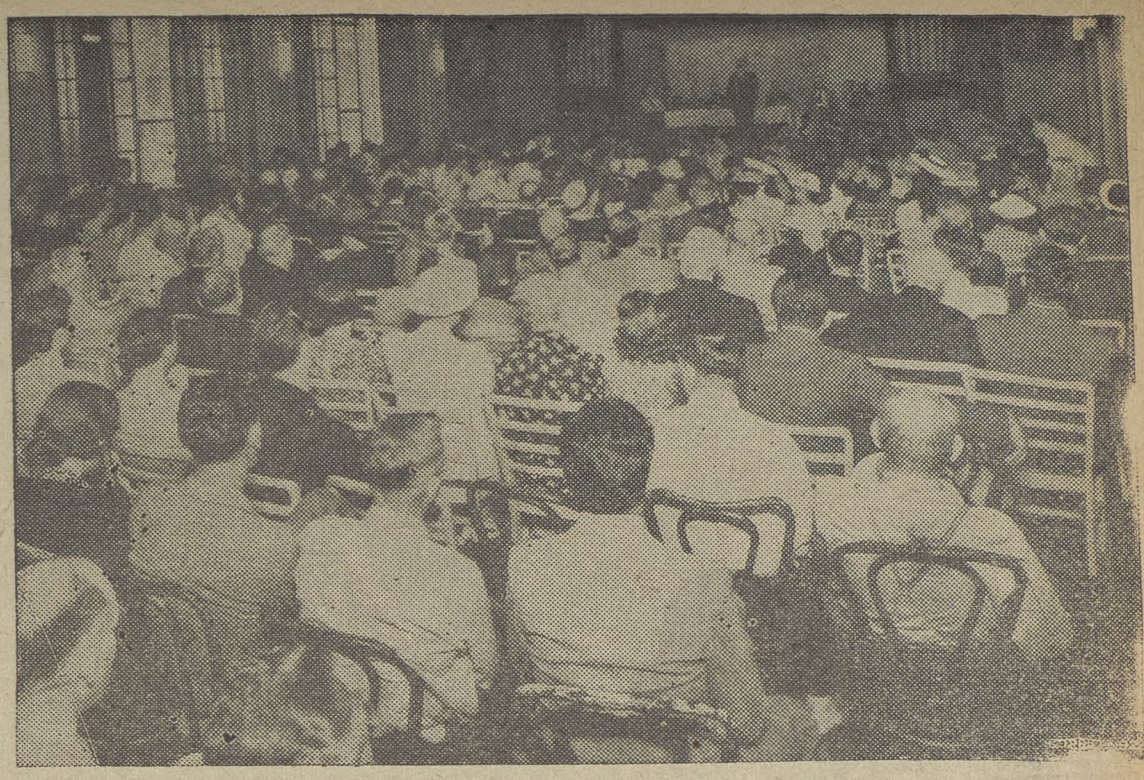
The convention registered itself as "unalterably opposed to any form of compulsory military service at this time."

The resolution on war opposed "any involvement of the United States in any war on foreign soil"; urged labor to oppose "any infringement on American democracy"; and called for an educational campaign on the dangers threatened by the war.

FORD CAMPAIGN

The Ford campaign was the subject of constant attention at the convention. It was resolved to appoint a full-time director in charge of the drive and to have a national council set-up, similar to those operating now in General Motors and Chrysler, to cover all Ford plants.

Besides backing up the CIO's demand for government action to prevent its contracts from going to corporations which violate the Wagner Act, the convention adopted a special resolution on the anti-labor attitude and the defiance of the labor act by the Ford Company, demanding that it be awarded no government contracts "unless it changes it attitude toward union labor."



AIRCRAFT

The resolution on the aircraft organizing campaign called attention to the fact that aircraft corporations "find their chief revenue coming from public funds" and are yet denying to the workers "a wage sufficient to maintain a decent American standard of life". The officers were instructed to proceed with a "concerted drive in the aircraft industry" and to "push such a drive to completion as rapidly as possible."

Special attention was also given to the organizing of farm implement workers, and the executive board was instructed to work out arrangements with other unions in this field in conjunction with the CIO.

The Chicago area is to be the scene of increased organizing activity. A resolution was adopted calling attention to the competitive situation created by unorganized plants in this area, and ordering the assignment of addi-

Michael Tighe, Steel Union Veteran, Dies

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 10.—Michael F. Tighe, veteran leader of the Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, CIO, died here this week from a stroke believed brought on by the heat. Tighe, a member and an official of the Association for 60 years, was 82 when he died.

Tighe went to work in the steel mills of Wheeling, W. Va., at the age of 10, for $2.00 a week. He joined the Association in 1877, as soon as he reached the minimum age of 18.

In 1936 Tighe signed the agreement between the Association and the CIO that set up the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

During his lifetime, Tighe saw the organization of steel workers grow from the early days of struggle and defeat to 1940, when the SWOC has over 600,000 workers under contract, and has improved conditions beyond anything thought possible before the advent of the CIO.

CIO Furriers Win Strike

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 10.—A nine-week strike at the S. M. Gusdorf Company here was settled last Monday when the company signed a contract with Local 63, International Fur & Leather Workers, granting pay increases and other gains.

Win 18c Wage Boost!

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 10.—You can talk all day, but you won't be able to convince Armour Co. employes here that unionism doesn't pay.

Through their organization, Local 33 of the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, 43 workers have received pay boosts.

Biggest increase was for welders, whose income jumped 18c an hour. They had formerly been paid the common labor rate.

Truck drivers won their point when the company agreed to pay hotel and food expenses for men on the road over 12 hours.

Mill Union Warned On War Hysteria

Denver, Aug. 10.—Pay increases of close to $6 million plus a 53 per cent increase in workers under contract achieved during the past year were highlights of the annual convention of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, together with speeches by CIO President John L. Lewis, National Director Allan S. Haywood, Natl. Labor Relations Board Member Edwin S. Smith and others.

National Director Haywood's address received with prolonged applause by the delegates, stressed a note of warning against war and "Fifth Column" hysteria, used principally by labor's enemies as a weapon against the labor movement.

"Don't fall for the Fifth Column hysteria," Haywood warned. "If you did what the corporations did recently, and sat down for more than eight per cent, you'd be accused of being traitors," he declared, pointing to the refusal of corporations to undertake defense orders until they were assured profit restrictions would be waived by the government.

Pres. Robinson's report, made at the opening convention summarized a year's gains of the union, warned of difficult tasks ahead in view of the sharpening political and economic situation, and called for increased support and activity from all members to bring in the thousands of workers still outside the union fold.

"In spite of the many difficulties encountered—the growing attacks on labor, the changing conditions in our industry and in the world, and the united employer opposition—our organization has steadily progressed and has brought material gains and increased security to the workers in and out of our ranks, and has again provided a solid basis for future advances."

DENVER, Aug. 10.—Pride in the progress of CIO organization, coupled with sharp warning of the drift toward militarism and war, marked the speech of CIO President John L. Lewis to the 37th annual convention of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers at the Albany Hotel here.

Lewis, who was greeted with a tremendous ovation as he appeared in the convention hall, opened his address on a "family" note, pointing to the close industrial connection between the metal miners and process workers and the United Mine Workers of America. The progress of the Mine, Mill and Smelter workers gave him great satisfaction, he said, but there were great gains still to be made, great numbers of workers still outside the union that must be organized.

Turning to the crisis in American affairs brought on by the international situation and by the failure of government to find an effective solution to problems of poverty and unemployment, Lewis lashed at advocates of conscription as men who seek a way out of problems they cannot face at home.

FUTURE AT STAKE

"As we sit here today," he said, "the Senate of the U. S. has before it the question of whether or not it will enact a law providing universal conscription for military service. The question is whether the institutions of the U. S. in the future are to be defended by free men or by armies of conscripts.

"I wonder who it was that told the Senate of the U. S. that Americans like to be conscripted," he asked. "It wasn't the organizations of labor; it wasn't the young men who will be conscripted; it wasn't the mothers and sisters of these young men; it wasn't the religious organizations of the U. S."

Labor will defend the free institutions of this nation, Lewis declared—and it will defend them as free men, as men who have the right to organize, the right to speak their minds without fear of government repression, the right to work together for the betterment of all America's people.

This cannot be done if conscription is put through, he said. It cannot be done if a military caste is put in control of the lives and welfare of millions of American workers and their families.

POLITICAL ACTION

A considerable portion of Lewis' speech was devoted to the need for political action by workers as a necessary part of their struggle for better living and working conditions.

"There is too little attention paid these days by the politicians in power and those who seek office to the demands and wishes of the men and women of the labor organizations," he said. "Labor has always been prone to sell its influence too cheaply and for too small a price. Labor can endorse a politician today and tomorrow he will come out and kick labor in the face by endorsing conscription."

This statement, interrupted by prolonged applause from the hundreds of delegates and visitors, was followed by a repetition of his declaration at the Auto Workers' convention of a week before in which he said that the people of America would some day lose confidence in the two old political parties and would build a political organization of their own.

"There is just one thing to do," he said, to meet the threats to peace and security contained in current U. S. domestic and international policy. "Expand your organization. Build it bigger. Make it more powerful, and express yourselves constantly on these questions."

Plaything Workers Ready If Draft Bill Passes

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Prepared for anything that Congress may do, a Buffalo local of the CIO Plaything & Novelty Workers Union today had signed a contract based on possible passage of the peacetime conscription bill.

The agreement guarantees seniority and restoration of jobs to any employes who may be called to service if the peacetime draft measure is passed.

The conscription security provision was contained in a "supplement to a war clause" negotiated by the local and a local wallpaper company.

Ralph Tillotson, CIO field representative here, said he believed the contract to be the first of its kind.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WHEN you're in a moving crowd and find you're getting shoved and hustled a little more than seems necessary, it's a good time to look out for pickpockets.

The war abroad has made the American people into a moving crowd. Everyone and everything is moving in the direction of "national defense."

Patriotic feelings are aroused at a time like this, and there is general agreement that everything possible should be done to defend this country and its institutions against any and all attackers.

But at the same time, truly patriotic and thinking Americans know the dangers that lurk in a moving crowd. They know that a cruel and senseless mob psychology or hysteria can be whipped up. They know that a moving crowd can sometimes be diverted to another direction from that in which it thinks it is going. They know that pickpockets and other hooligans take advantage of crowds for their own nefarious purposes.

So there has been an uneasy feeling among many Americans of late that there has been some rather suspicious jostling and hustling going on around them.

The conscription issue, the granting of government contracts to violators of labor laws, the demands of Wall Street interests for destruction of social legislation and lengthening of hours, while they insist on huge and guaranteed profits for themselves, and many vicious attacks on civil liberties—these are some of the incidents that have made patriotic Americans definitely uneasy.

They fear that real national defense may be jeopardized by selfish interests which seek to shackle labor, destroy democratic institutions and line their own pockets under cover of a deliberately promoted war hysteria.

CIO Gives Lead

In this situation, it is the CIO that has given the most definite and courageous lead to all who want to keep their heads clear and their eyes on the main goal—defense of the peace, welfare and liberties of the American people.

The recent statements and speeches of John L. Lewis denouncing attempts to rush the country into conscription; demanding an end to government coddling of lawbreaking, profiteering, anti-union corporations; and vigorously defending civil rights against the current hysteria, have brought an instantaneous response.

Hundreds of letters, wires and resolutions have been addressed to him on each occasion not only from the ranks of labor but from Americans in all walks of life.

Almost without exception they bless the CIO leader for having the courage to speak up in times like these; to voice what millions are thinking; to warn against dangerous anti-democratic trends; and to give a lead for the real defense of the rights and welfare of labor and the American people.

Conscription

The very brazenness of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill seemed to take people by surprise, and opposition was slow in mobilizing.

But since the CIO announced its stand, the opposition has assumed formidable proportions. Union after union, nationally and locally, has gone on record against this peacetime conscription. And now, not only the CIO, but the Railroad Brotherhoods and the AFL as well have declared themselves against it.

Farm and liberal organizations of all kinds have also taken a similar position.

The insistence of big anti-labor corporations like Bethlehem Steel on guaranteed profits, and their refusal to risk a single dollar on national defense work, have opened the eyes of many people.

There are proposals of all kinds to crack down on labor, to curtail its rights and to conscript its young men. But corporations like these get not even a slap on the wrist for trampling on labor's rights in defiance of the Wagner act and insisting on their right to profiteer at the nation's expense.

Here again the CIO has given a lead with its demand for equal justice for labor and employers on government contract work. The call of Pres. Lewis for an executive order denying government business to violators of the labor act is receiving the vigorous backing of union after union all over the country.

The essential reasonableness of this demand, and its importance for undisturbed defense production, are also finding recognition among progressive Americans.

Labor's Duty

Incidentally, the correspondence and resolutions in response to these and similar CIO demands indicate increasing realization of the truth of something else that Pres. Lewis has been saying repeatedly.

"There is too little attention paid these days by the politicians in power and those who seek office to the demands and wishes of the men and women of the labor organizations," he put it at the Mine, Mill & Smelter convention. "Labor has always been prone to sell its influence too cheaply and for too small a price."

In times like these, labor's demands are the most level-headed and the most important of any for the defense and welfare of this country and its institutions. It is therefore labor's patriotic duty to assert these demands vigorously and not to give away its support too readily to politicians who will not carry them out.

Substantial Progress

The progress reported by Pres. Reid Robinson to the 37th convention of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, meeting in Denver, gives grounds for rejoicing. It includes:

A 53 per cent increase in union contracts in effect, which has brought 70,000 workers under the benefits of sole collective bargaining agreements.

A 91 per cent victory record in NLRB polls.

Wage increases of about six million dollars, won under union contracts, on the basis of an incomplete survey.

This is a substantial record, which carries with it many other improvements in the lot of the workers in this great industry and their families.

It is also a record of increasing organizational strength which lends momentum to the plans being made for still further expansion and gives promise of greater betterments to come.

The whole CIO naturally rejoices in the progress of this industrial union which was one of the founding fathers of the CIO itself and has always been a most loyal supporter of the national movement for organization of the unorganized.

But it is also good news for the country generally. For strong and progressive unions like the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers are the bulwark of democratic liberties and the driving force behind all moves for greater security and more general prosperity.

Unanimous

The Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill "borders closely on the principle of dictatorship," according to the presidents of the railroad transportation Brotherhoods. "Compulsory military service in time of peace is the very antithesis of freedom," they say.

In an official letter to the Senate and House committees, jointly signed by them on behalf of their organizations, the railroad labor chiefs declare:

"While you are giving thought to the Burke-Wadsworth bill let not the hysteria of the moment sweep you into supporting such a drastic and ill-advised change in the American way of life . . .

"The program at present contemplated will cause hundreds of thousands of our youth to become 'war-minded' and will, if carried out, establish the fabric of a giant war machine, which experience teaches us cannot and will not be permitted to rust in peace. 'War games' inevitably lead to war."

This statement is typical of hundreds of other resolutions adopted by CIO, AFL, railroad labor and other workers' organizations of all kinds. Never perhaps has there been such unanimity in labor ranks on any other public issue as is now being shown in the storm of protest aroused by the present attempt to clamp down peacetime conscription on the American people.

The CIO has stated its opposition in no uncertain terms, and John L. Lewis and other CIO leaders have been emphasizing this opposition and explaining it to the whole country in a number of recent speeches.

The fact that the CIO has been joined in this position by all other labor bodies that have gone on record is a tribute to the clear-headedness of the great majority of American workers, and to their refusal to be swept by war hysteria into sacrificing the liberties and democratic institutions which they include in the real national defense to which they are committed.

Protest Plans For Conscription

CIO Stand Wins Strong Praise

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. — The drive to make conscripts out of American workers, started in the U. S. Senate with the thought that it would slide through in a matter of days, has met an obstacle—the American people, who are letting their Senators and Congressmen know, at the rate of thousands of wires, letters, resolutions daily, that they don't want to be drafted. . . . . .

The obstacle, some Washington observers predict, may prove fatal—provided it keeps itself in the way of the bill.

The wave of protest and popular anger, centering on the Burke-Wadsworth bill that would put millions in the army at $21 a month and register everyone from 18 to 64, was touched off when CIO Pres. John L. Lewis wrote 10 days ago to the House and Senate Military Affairs Committees to record the protest of the CIO, and again when he spoke out on the fascist nature of the bill, at the Auto Workers convention in St. Louis and to the Smeltermen in Denver.

ALL GROUPS JOIN

Since that time the whole of the labor movement, AFL,, Railroad Brotherhood, unaffiliated, has joined in with the CIO and with organized youth, women, church groups, farmers, Negro organizations, individuals have kept Congressional mailbags full to capacity and beyond with protests.

Senator Wheeler, leader of the anti-conscription and anti-war forces on Capitol hill, told recently of 2,000 letters praising his stand. Other Senators took to mimeographed replies to their constitutents because typed answers were out of the question.

EVEN GREEN

The Brotherhood statement was emphatic. "Compulsory military service in time of peace is the very antithesis of freedom," it said. "It involves an infringement on the very principles of democracy which it is invoked to defend . . . The program at present contemplated will cause hundreds of thousands of our youth to become 'war-minded' and will, if carried out, establish the fabric of a gigantic war machine which experience teaches us cannot and will not be permitted to rust in peace."

Hundreds of CIO local unions, state city Councils, and national and international affiliates have spoken out on the bill and similar attempts at a peacetime draft. All of them make the same points; the Burke-Wadsworth bill is undemocratic, un-American, a fascist measure. All of them point out that the CIO defends American institutions without question — and they add that one of the chief of these is freedom from regimentation.

LETTERS TO LEWIS

Among the most revealing examples of popular fear and indignation at the draft bill are the hundreds of letters received in the CIO office by Pres. Lewis following his statement and speeches attacking the measure. The letters come from people in all groups and of all ages, from young people who will have to go into the conscript army, from their mothers who will watch them go, from wives, from ministers, farmers, workers, professionals, businessmen, every kind that makes up America.

"Thank God for a man like you and all opponents of the Compulsory Military Training bill," a woman writes. "Mr. Lewis, defeat this bill. We cannot let this happen in America."

Another cites the U. S. Constitution in his protest: "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crime . . . shall exist in the United States."

Another simply writes in huge block letters on a postcard: "NO CONSCRIPTION." "The constitution say all men are borned free — not so if they can be shipped like cattle," is from still another.

KEEP UP THE FIGHT

The minister of a New York Presbyterian Church thanks Lewis for his stand. "Your recent pronouncement gives us strength," he writes. "At least it does me." A Pennsylvania businessman tells of a trip through six eastern states, talking to farmers.

All of them, he said, were against conscription and war. "You will have the wholehearted blessings of all the mothers in the U. S. if you will only continue your fight against the projected compulsory military training bill."

"Keep up the fight" is the burden of most of the letters. Unionists write their fear that conscription will destroy their organizations and their living standards. Young men write that they want jobs, not military training.

Women write of their fears for their homes if their men are pressed into the army. How can people live on $21 a month, they ask. What will happen to my job when I'm away, who will take care of my family? And why conscription for men only — what about profits?

The American people are in action against the Burke-Wadsworth bill and against all peacetime conscription. They're following the lead given them by John L. Lewis, spoken in the name of 4,000,000 American men and women who make up the CIO.

Lewis' Labor Day Talk On NBC Blue Network

WASHINGTOU, Aug. 10. — The annual Labor Day speech of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will be heard over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Co. from 4:00 to 4:30 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, on Monday, Sept. 2.

In announcing details of the broadcast, Len De Caux, CIO publicity director, recalled that last year a number of affiliates scheduled Lewis' broadcast at their Labor Day meetings and celebrations and suggested that similar arrangements be made for the coming address.

De Caux also advised unions to contact their local NBC Blue network stations to make sure that the speech is carried.

"Local stations that might not otherwise carry the broadcast can often be induced to do so if sufficient interest is shown by individuals and organizations which want to hear it," he pointed out. Groups which find difficulty in getting the program scheduled on their local stations were urged to communicate with the CIO publicity department as soon as possible.

'Buy CIO, Live CIO' Is Union Plea

Washington, Aug. 10.—"Buy CIO—Live in CIO Built Homes," is the message of a new leaflet put out by the Construction Workers Organizing Committee here.

The leaflet points out that now the CIO is organizing building workers, CIO members can have union-built houses for the first time—previously, it explains, the AFL building trades czars ignored private construction entirely.

The Smith amendments to the Wagner Act are stirring again, with hearings scheduled before the Senate Labor Committee this week. Order the CIO's newest Wagner Act leaflet, "It's Up To You" to learn what the Smith bill would do to destroy labor's rights. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Conn. Ave., Washington, D.C.

Registration Of Aliens Starts Aug. 27

Washington, Aug. 10.—Registration and fingerprinting of all non-citizens in the U. S. will begin August 27 and run through to December 26, it was announced by the Dept. of Justice here. The order to register follows an Act of Congress passed earlier this year and signed by President Roosevelt.

The Act provides severe penalties for failure to fill out the forms or for making false answers to the 15 questions. Of the questions, one asks for a list of "clubs, organizations or societies" to which the person filling out the form belongs.

Director Harrison of the Alien Registration Division pointed out that "there is no stigma attached to this registration" and that the Government has no intention of harassing law-abiding aliens.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Food Industry

• Purity and quality dictate the selection of equipment used in the preparation of foods. For this reason, many manufacturers of food processing equipment are using stainless steel.

Stainless steel is not attacked by chemical sterilizers, cleansers, and brines. It is immune to practically all types of food acids, and will not affect the taste, color, or keeping qualities of the foodstuffs with which it comes in contact. Equipment used in preparing various foods have shown greatly improved performance when stainless steel has been used for parts subject to rusting or corrosion.

The food industry is rapidly becoming aware of the inherent possibilities of this rustless metal to solve some of its major problems.

Senate Group to Open Study Of Smith Bill; Green Under Fire

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—A flurry of developments today brought the Wagner Act amendment battle back to life and indicated hot legislative activity in the next few weeks.

Most important of the recent moves was the announcement by Sen. Elbert Thomas of Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, that his group would start formal consideration on Tuesday, Aug. 13 of the Smith "ripper" amendment bill, which was passed by the House a few months ago.

The Smith Committee, meanwhile, held short hearings in a last-gasp effort to do another smear job on the National Labor Relations Board. AFL Pres. Green, whose support of the Smith proposals shocked workers throughout the country, followed up his earlier treachery with a letter to all AFL affiliates calling for support of those Congressmen who voted for the Smith amendments.

Response to Green's communication was quick and heated. The St. Louis AFL Central Labor Council, asked by Green to endorse Rep. C. Arthur Anderson, expressed itself as "amazed that the AFL would lend its endorsement to a candidate whose record during his service in Congress has been so anti-labor."

CLOSED SESSIONS

In announcing plans for consideration of the Smith bill, Sen. Thomas said his committee would hold a number of closed hearings at which it would seek the views of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, Green and a representative of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers.

Lewis has expressed his opposition to the bill at frequent intervals, while the AFL leader, Republican Sen. Taft, of Ohio—who is a committee member—and H. W. Prentis, head of the NAM, are in substantial agreement that the amendments should be rushed through the Senate.

A majority of the Senate committee members are believed to be hostile to the Smith amendments, and the scheduled hearings may cause considerable time to elapse before recommendations reach the Senate floor.

That the Virginia bank president who sponsors the Smith amendments is plainly irritated with the Labor Board's continued service to organized labor, was amply demonstrated at the House Committee hearings last week. Rep. Howard Smith and his committee counsel, Edmund Toland, sharply questioned Board Chairman J. Warren Madden about the continued existence of the NLRB's economic research division, now called the Technical Service Division.

Largely through Smith's efforts, funds for the division—which is headed by David Saposs — were eliminated by Congress last June. The Congressman tried desperately to build up a case that the NLRB had been in contempt of Congress when it continued the research division with funds from the Board's general appropriation.

Madden argued convincingly that Smith was talking through his large-sized hat, and pointed out that the division was a necessity in the handling of such cases as the repayment of $5,000,000 in back wages to Republic Steel employes.

If Smith is relying on the AFL-NAM alliance to push his crippling amendments through the Senate, he's due for a sad disappointments, the early reaction to Green's letter would indicate.

The St. Louis AFL leader, Joseph P. Clark, pointed out that Green's endorsement of Rep. Anderson ignored the fact that the Congressman's two opponents in the primary race are both members of AFL unions.

"You should recall," Clark continued, "his (Anderson's) many charges against the Wagner labor act made both in Congress and in public speeches and particularly his ill-famed bill, which he introduced in the 1939 session of Congress, which would have emasculated the Wagner labor act.

"While I hold no brief for some of the actions of the personnel of the Natl. Labor Relations Board, Mr. Anderson's attacks were made on the principle of the law . . ."

UNANIMOUS SUPPORT

Clark's letter had the unanimous endorsement of the St. Louis AFL body, which had heard charges from a mechanics union business agent that Anderson had repeatedly and defiantly walked through picket lines.

Another target of Green's wrath is liberal Rep. Abe Murdock, of Utah, member of the Smith committee's minority opposition and now a candidate for nomination to the Senate.

A consistent supporter of labor legislation and friendly with both CIO and AFL groups in his home state, Murdock predicted that Green's letter would not change the attitude of the Utah Federation of Labor.

Auto Union Ends Annual Convention

tional organizers and the launching an intensive drive there.

RESOLUTIONS

Lengthy debate was provoked by a resolution calling for the re election of President Roosevelt which was finally adopted with some forty delegates rising in opposition. After this action the convention unanimously went on record "re-affirming its allegiance and confidence in the leadership of John L. Lewis in the CIO."

A resolution was also adopted against foreign dictatorships and wars of aggression, after lengthy debate on the issue of including Russia along with Germany, Italy and Japan in the resolution.

The union's constitution was amended to deny office to members of organizations "declared illegal by the government of the United States of America through constitutional procedure."

A strong stand was adopted in defense of civil liberties in a resolution attacking attempts to deport Harry Bridges, west coast CIO leader, as "an anti-labor conspiracy" and "an attack against labor as a whole."

A move to change the date of the annual convention from July to October was defeated.

Honorary UAW Members

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 10.—As an expression of the workers' appreciation for the leadership and services rendered by the leaders of the CIO, the convention of the United Automobile Workers of America went on record unanimously granting honorary life membership to President John L. Lewis, Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, and CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, after they had addressed the convention.

Fought Smith, Renominated

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 10.—Estes Kefauver, the only Tennessee Congressman who opposed the Smith amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act, has been overwhelmingly renominated in the third district Democratic primary.

Kefauver polled 9,553 votes to only 723 for his opponent, John S. Wrinkle, a Chattanooga lawyer and politician. Nomination is equivalent to election.

CIO Leads By Over 3-1 In Elections

Washington, Aug. 10. — CIO unions have again swamped the AFL more than three to one in the number of votes won in recent elections held by the National Labor Relations Board. According to figures released by the Board, the CIO ran up a total of 6,207 votes in 19 elections won by various CIO unions.

The AFL carried 1,930 votes in 20 elections won by AFL unions. Most of the polls reported in the Board's latest summary were held during the first two weeks in July and the latter part of June.

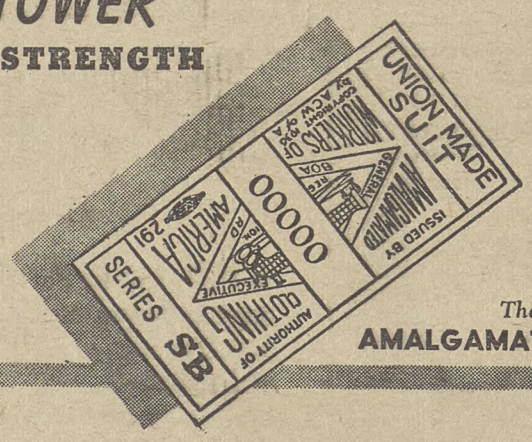
Independent unions and employe representation plans carried only five elections with a total of 494 votes.

The CIO took part in 28 elections during this period, winning 19 of them or 67.8 per cent, while the AFL participated in 31, winning 20 or 64.5 per cent. CIO and AFL unions competed in seven of the elections, the CIO carrying 704 votes to 375 for the AFL.

Amalgamated Re-Elects Pres. Hillman

New York, Aug. 10. — The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, announced this week that Sidney Hillman had been re-elected president in a referendum vote in which 93,501 ballots were cast. President Hillman was the only candidate nominated for the post which he has held since the Amalgamated was formed in 1914.

Jacob S. Potofsky, former assistant general president, also unopposed, was elected general secretary-treasurer, succeeding Joseph Schlossberg, who becomes secretary-treasurer emeritus.



EXECUTIVE BOARD

Members re-elected to the general executive board were: Dorothy J. Bellanca, Hyman Blumberg, Joseph Catalonotti, Abraham Chatman, Louis Hollander, Jack Kroll, Leo Krzycki, Samuel Levin, A. D. Marimpietri, Abraham Miller, William Heznicek, Frank Rosenblum, Stephen Skala, Charles Weinstein and Murray Weinstein.

Amendments to the constitution were adopted by a vote of 83,624 to 3,541 in the referendum and Chicago was designated as the city in which the next convention will be held in May, 1942.

A TOWER OF STRENGTH

The AMALGAMATED LABEL

1 -- High standards of work
2 -- American standard of living

Your demand for the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America will lend added strength to the cause of organized labor.

WORK UNION AND BUY UNION

The Amalgamated label appears on all men's wearing apparel--men's and boys' clothing, shirts, work clothes and overalls, gloves, neckwear, sport clothing, pajamas and underwear.

The union label is a tower of strength for workers.

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA

BEATEN: Eyes swollen, nose and forehead bleeding profusely, H. H. McCabe, Port Arthur, Tex., union seaman, was "taken for a ride" and assaulted by city policemen.

Seaman Tells Of Assault By Police

Port Arthur, Texas., Aug. 10.—A story of arrest without charges and a subsequent midnight ride which ended in a brutal beating by Port Arthur police, was related in an affidavit signed here by H. H. McCabe, member of the National Maritime Union.

McCabe was picked up while walking on a local street, held in a jail cell until three a. m. the next day and then taken to the outskirts of the city by a group of police officers.

CHIEF A WITNESS

There, in the presence of the city police chief and the head of the detecitve squad, he was beaten with a blackjack until unconscious. During the attack, the police warned him never to return to Port Arthur.

McCabe's affidavit said the police accused him of being a "fifth columnist," apparently because of his union membership and one of their group in the car even suggested that he be killed.

Call Strike At Big Store

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 10.—Employes of the Lazarus Department Store here went on strike after the management refused to engage in collective bargaining with representatives of the United Retail & Wholesale Union.

Other CIO unions in the area, including the United Mine Workers, the Wilkes-Barre CIO Council, and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, are aiding the strikers.

The Lazarus strike is the first large department store strike strike called by a CIO union in the anthracite region.

Farmers Hear Growing Need For Cooperation With Labor

BLACKSBURG, Va., Aug. 10.—The close relation of the workers' wages and the farmers' income was emphasized by Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director in a talk at the Institute of Rural Affairs held here this week.

Hetzel spoke following an invitation from the Virginia Political Institute, which arranged the meeting.

"Labor thinks that the farm people of this country ought to be the strongest supporters of the labor movement," Hetzel told his 2,500 listeners, drawn from farms throughout the state. "The establishment of a stable economy in our country depends upon the realization of the kind of program labor stands for. The better off is the working man, the better off the farmer."

This statement, Hetzel said, was proved by figures assembled over many years that show industrial wages and farm income moving side by side. "There are charts published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture which show how closely the movement of cash farm income follows the income of industrial workers," he said.

"Practically from month to month the two figures move side by side. It is very significant that cash farm income follows much more closely the trend of industrial workers' income than it does of national incomes as a whole."

LABOR'S PROGRAM

The program of the CIO, while primarily designed to lift the living conditions of industrial workers, has been of great benefit to the entire working population of the country, including the working farmers, Hetzel pointed out. Basic to this program is the right to organize and bargain collectively; without this right labor cannot carry out its plans for economic and social security for all.

The CIO's campaigns for jobs for the unemployed, for adequate relief, for higher wages and shorter hours, all stem from the fundamental American right to organize.

Farmers are facing a particularly difficult period at this time, Hetzel said, in pointing to the loss of European markets due to war—markets that used to take a high percentage of what American farms produce. For this reason it is doubly necessary for industrial workers and farmers to pull together.

"It seems to me in this situation that the farmers will find themselves more and more joining hands with labor in the proposition that our salvation lies in the establishment of a domestic market for our output that is sufficient to maintain full production," he said.

"The market is there if the people of this country only had the capacity to buy what they produce. I say again to you that the labor movement is one of the great instrumentalities for bringing about such a state of affairs."

Boatmen Hear Murray Assail Profit-Hogs

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 10.—Conscription "or any other form of involuntary servitude, whether military or industrial," was condemned as "outright slavery" in a sharp protest resolution featuring the third annual conference of the Inland Boatmen's Division of the Natl. Maritime Union, CIO, meeting here.

CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray, an invited speaker at the meeting, assailed the profit-grabbing attitude of huge anti-labor corporations which are now fattening on government war orders.

After pointing to Bethlehem Steel as a prime example of this attitude, Murray continued:

"If any of the union men were to oppose the government in this way, he would be castigated for 'dollar patriotism' and might even be thrown in jail. But these industrialists are hailed as upstanding patriots."

Those groups out for conscription, the resolution said, are the same ones exposed as the worst enemies of the labor movement—the users of spies, blacklists, vigilante gangs and cold-blooded murder against union members.

"And now," the resolution says, "these same forces are asking us to drop our tools, put on uniforms, pick up rifles and face death to protect their profits. The notion is preposterous and untenable." Real defense, the delegates declared, means decent wages and standards and protection of workers' rights for all.

GAINS WON

Recent progress of the Division, as reported by Felix Siren, national organizer, has brought membership to 15,000, 6,000 under contract, wage boosts from $50 a month earned before organization to an average of $90 and general improvements throughout the eastern inland waterways. Chief task ahead of the union, he reported, was to alter the anti-labor attitude of the U. S. War Dept. that employs 46,000 river workers throughout the country.

Send Checks For $25,000 To 46 CIO Miners

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 10.—Checks totaling $25,033 were in the hands of 46 members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers today as a result of Labor Board action against the St. Louis Smelting & Refining Co., subsidiary of National Lead.

The men, former employes of the company in the neighboring Tri-State lead mining area, received the money for back wages in a stipulation accepted by the NLRB. Largest of the individual checks was that given to Sam P. Davis. He received $2,002,

In addition, the firm must rehire some 20 of the men.

Gotham CIO Backs Sugar Import Bill

New York, Aug. 10.—A bill now pending in Congress to regulate the importation of refined sugar has been endorsed by the New York State CIO Council on the basis that it would save several thousand jobs for American workers. It has passed the House and is awaiting action by the Senate.

The bill has already been endorsed by all the CIO local industrial unions in the sugar refining industry.

Restaurants Go CIO In Durham, N.C.

Durham, N. C., Aug. 10.—Two restaurants here have signed CIO contracts agreeing to employ only union workers, E. L. Sandefur, CIO regional director for the Carolinas, announced today.

Three other cafes which have refused to sign agreements so far are being picketed and several others which have also turned down contracts will soon find pickets in front of their establishments, Sandefur said.

The two cafes which signed and now display union cards are the R. & W. and Bowden's, both of which are doing a boom business, while the picketed restaurants are practically empty.

Under the terms of the contract signed by the two cafes, the employer agrees to hire and train for jobs only members of the union, and the union agrees to endeavor to supply competent help who will cooperate with the employer to maintain a high degree of efficiency.

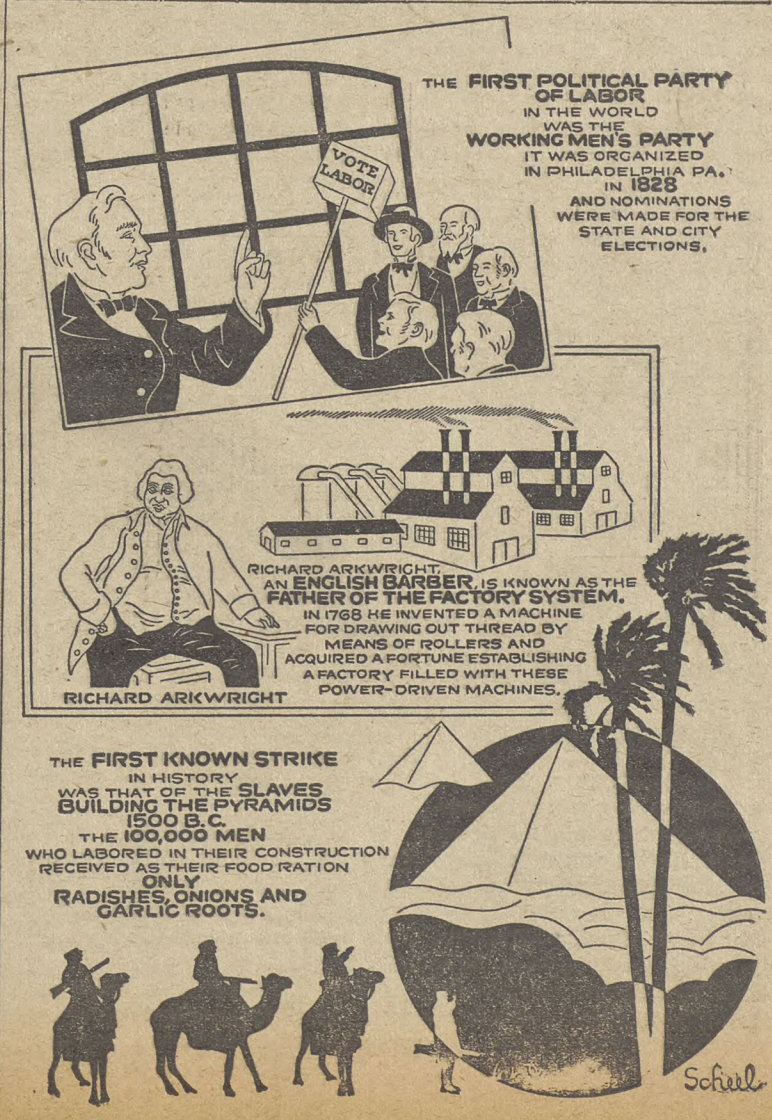
Renew 50 Furniture Agreements

New York, Aug. 10.—Renewal of 50 contracts with employers whose agreements expired August 1 and September 1 have been announced here by Local 76-B, United Furniture Workers. In most cases these agreements provide pay increases, Max Perlow, manager of the local, reported.

There are still 75 shops where agreements have not yet been renewed. Most of them expire on Sept. 1, Perlow said. Negotiations are being carried on with these employers and amicable settlements are expected.

More Urge U. S. Stop Aiding Law Evaders

Washington, Aug. 10.—Responses to Pres. Lewis' letter of July 21, in which he urged CIO Executive Board members to demand a White House order requiring holders of government contracts to comply with the Wagner Act are continuing to come into the CIO office here.



The Lewis letter, which detailed the three-year campaign of the CIO to get legislation through Congress stopping the practice of rewarding law-violators, asked CIO affiliates to communicate with their membership on the subject and to urge their members to raise the demand in meetings and through letters and messages to President Roosevelt.

All the responses received praise Lewis' stand and pledge union support of the campaign, made necessary by blocking of legislation in Administration circles in Congress. Many of them detail examples of corporations that fight CIO unions receiving profitable orders from the government pledged to uphold its own laws.

LOCAL RESPONSES

A number of local responses have been received, coming from CIO locals, councils, state and district bodies, and the like. They report that their members, ranging from beauty culturists in New York and fishermen on the Pacific coast to cotton workers in Arkansas and construction workers in the midwest, are aware of the premium the U. S. government puts on industrial lawbreakers and that they are determined it must stop.

Labor's Non-Partisan League branches throughout the country have also been active, writing to President Roosevelt urging him to sign the proposed executive order, to Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman urging him to use his influence in the Commission in favor of the CIO policy.

90-Hour Week on Gotham Subways!

Transit Union Hits Conditions Under City Ownership

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The IRT subway system, now owned and operated by the City of New York, has instituted a working week of as high as 90 hours and other sweatshop conditions eliminated by CIO unionism when the line was privately-owned.

That was the charge made at a mass meeting here by John Allen, chairman of Section 2 of the Transport Workers Union, in a statement that bristled with denunciation of the policies of the city's Board of Transportation.

"Since it took over ownership and management of the private transit companies, the Board of Transportation has deliberately and continuously refused to adjust employes' grievances," Allen asserted.

SWEATSHOP STANDARDS

He added that only with "the greatest premeditation", that the Board and its chairman, John H. Delaney, could "refuse to alleviate some of the sweatshop conditions which have sprung up on the road" since its acquisition a few weeks ago by the city government.

"There are station agents today being ordered to work 90 hours a week, while hundreds of experienced transit employes who were on the extra lists of the IRT Co. and by right should have been transferred into employment in the unified system are still idle," he declared. "This was in violation of the union contract which the Board assumed and pledged to observe."

UNION CUT HOURS

TWU contracts with the IRT, gained in 1936 after years of difficult organizing work, chopped hours of station agents from as much as 84 hours to 48.

"If Delaney's game is to sow dissension and seek to destroy the Transport Workers Union through his deliberate failures to act on grievances submitted by the union, he is on the wrong track," Allen concluded.

The dispute over hours and other working conditions is the first major flare-up on the transit lines since the protracted negotiations last spring, when the union, aided by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis and other CIO officials, forced city officials to abandon plans for virtual destruction of the union as soon as the municipality gained control of the transit properties.

Arbitrator Asked to Help End Dispute

San Francisco, Aug. 10.—Dean Wayne Morse, west coast labor arbitrator, has been appealed to by the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union to aid in settling the contract impasse brought on by shipowners' refusal to guarantee that former contract gains will not be ignored in the pending renewal.

To date, after many months of negotiating, the shipowners have refused to say that they will not try to destroy previous union gains. Robert Bruere of the Maritime Labor Board has been sent from Washington to offer U. S. Government mediation.

Conference to Speed Drive at Harvester

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—A national conference of locals of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers in International Harvester plants in connection with launching a Harvester drive was announced this week by Grant Oakes, chairman of the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee.

Union officials also announced that members of Local 101 at International Harvester's Tractor Works would meet shortly to vote on an improved contract tentatively agreed to last week by the local's negotiating committee. Ratification was predicted on the basis of approval already voted by several divisions of the local.

The contract grants sole bargaining rights to Local 101 for the more than 6,000 employes in the plant; improves seniority and 'exceptional employe' clauses; and provides that the union may have bulletin boards throughout the plant.

Elimination of the compulsory arbitration provisions of the old contract is another major point in the proposed pact, which does not restrict the union's right to strike by the red tape of an 'impartial' arbitration board.

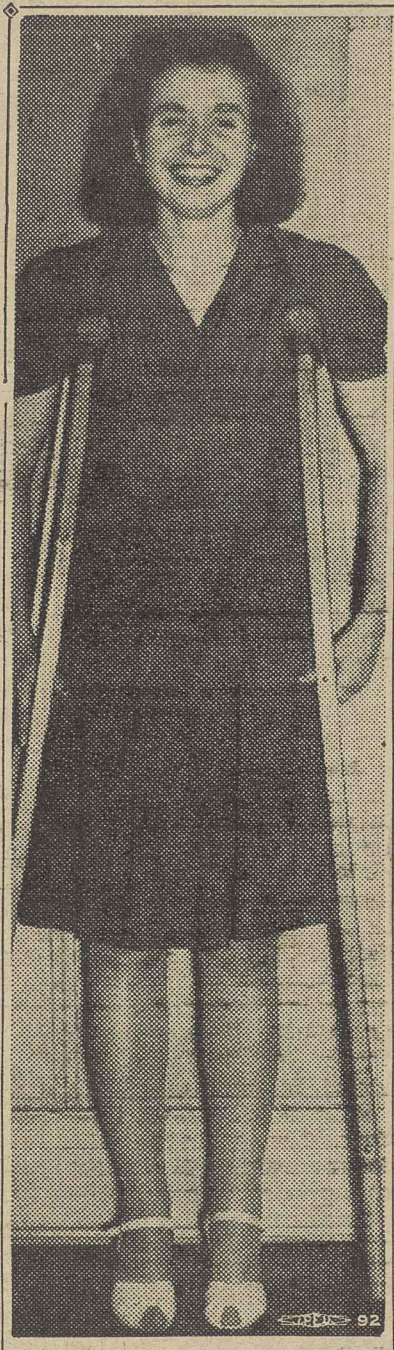
In announcing the Harvester conference, which will be held prior to oral arguments in the Harvester Labor Board case set for September 5, Chairman Oakes said:

"We intend to carry on a fight for wages in every plant. Moreover we are going to demand an adequate bonus and a share for the workers under the profit-sharing plan."



Oakes will speak at a series of mass meetings arranged by Harvester locals throughout the country before the national conference is held.

Win One-Day Walk-Out At Rubber Firm

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 10 — The United Rubber Workers scored another victory here when 500 employes in the weaving department of the Thermoid Corp. won a one-day strike.

After the brief walkout the company, which manufactures automobile brake linings, granted the union's demands for general increases in piece-work rates.

The walkout was conducted by Local 83 of the URW.

BOOSTER: Lucille Collins, CIO shoe union member in Baltimore, braved heat and a pair of crutches to vote in a Labor Board election. The union won by 2-1. Miss Collins broke her leg in a recent accident.

'Ho-Hum' Is Firms' Reply To Cooperation Offer

TORRINGTON, Conn., Aug. 10.—Torrington employers, like employers everywhere, love to talk about "cooperation"—when it's supposed to come from the union. It's a different story, however, when the company gets the invitation.

Some time ago, when business conditions here were bad, Labor's Non-Partisan League, made up largely of local CIO unions, suggested to the mayor and city council that the unions, the manufacturers and labor get together to see what could be done about employing more local workers in the plants.

The mayor thought it was a good idea and sent out invitations to the employers. That was some months ago. One reply has come in to date. He's still waiting for more.

Win Contract

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 10.—The Southern Grill, located in this city, has just signed a contract with CIO Local Industrial Union 1017.

Sole bargaining rights, check-off and vacations with pay were won for the employes by the union, it was announced by James Robb, CIO regional director.

Texas Oil Co. Pals With Nazis, Fights Workers, Is Charge

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The National Maritime Union today prepared Wagner Act unfair labor act charges against the powerful Texas Oil Co., whose chairman has been revealed as a close friend of Dr. Gerhardt Westrick, mysterious Nazi agent in this country.

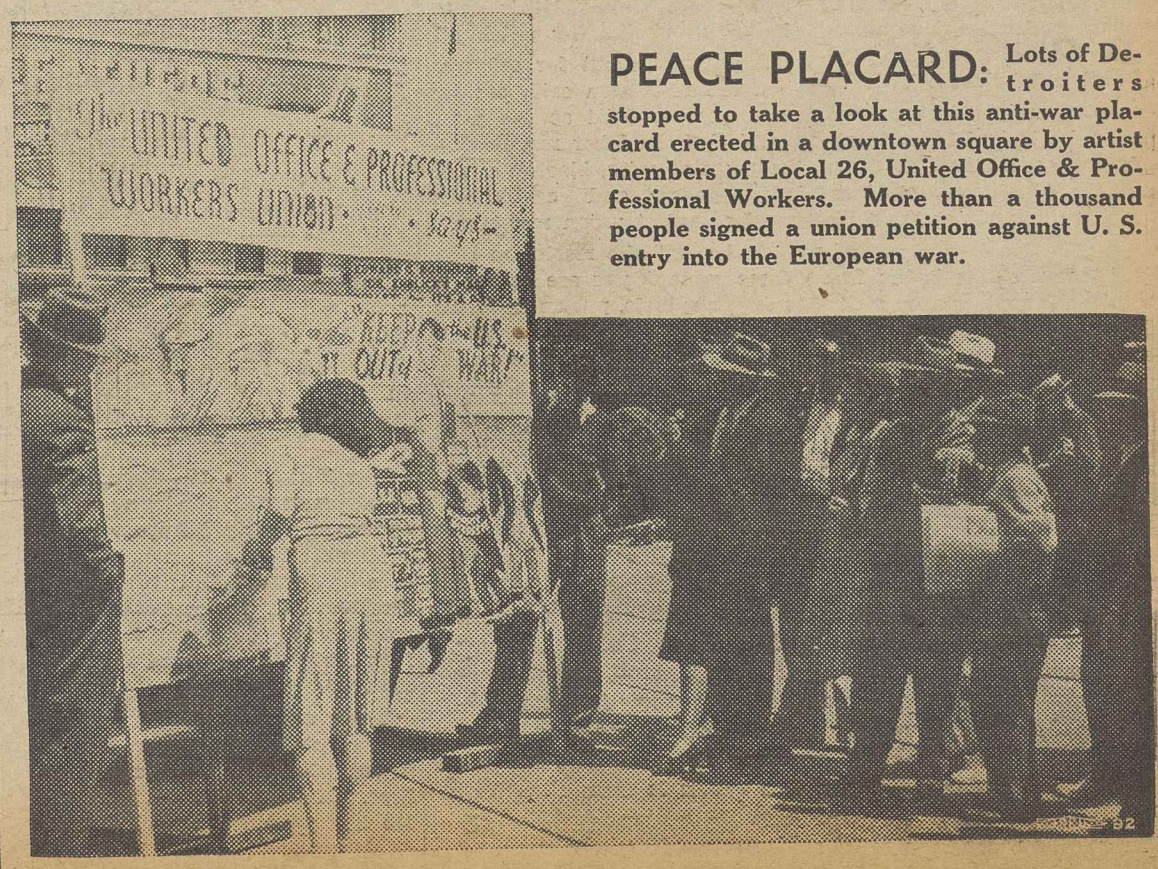
The Texas Co.'s relations with Hitler's emissary are apparently far more cordial than with its thousands of employes who man the corporation's tanker fleet, the NMU indicated.

REFUSE TO BARGAIN

The union will ask the Labor Board to force an end to discrimination against union seamen, compel the company to obey a recent NLRB order that NMU representatives be given passes to visit union members on Texaco tankers, and rehire two seamen fired for union activities.

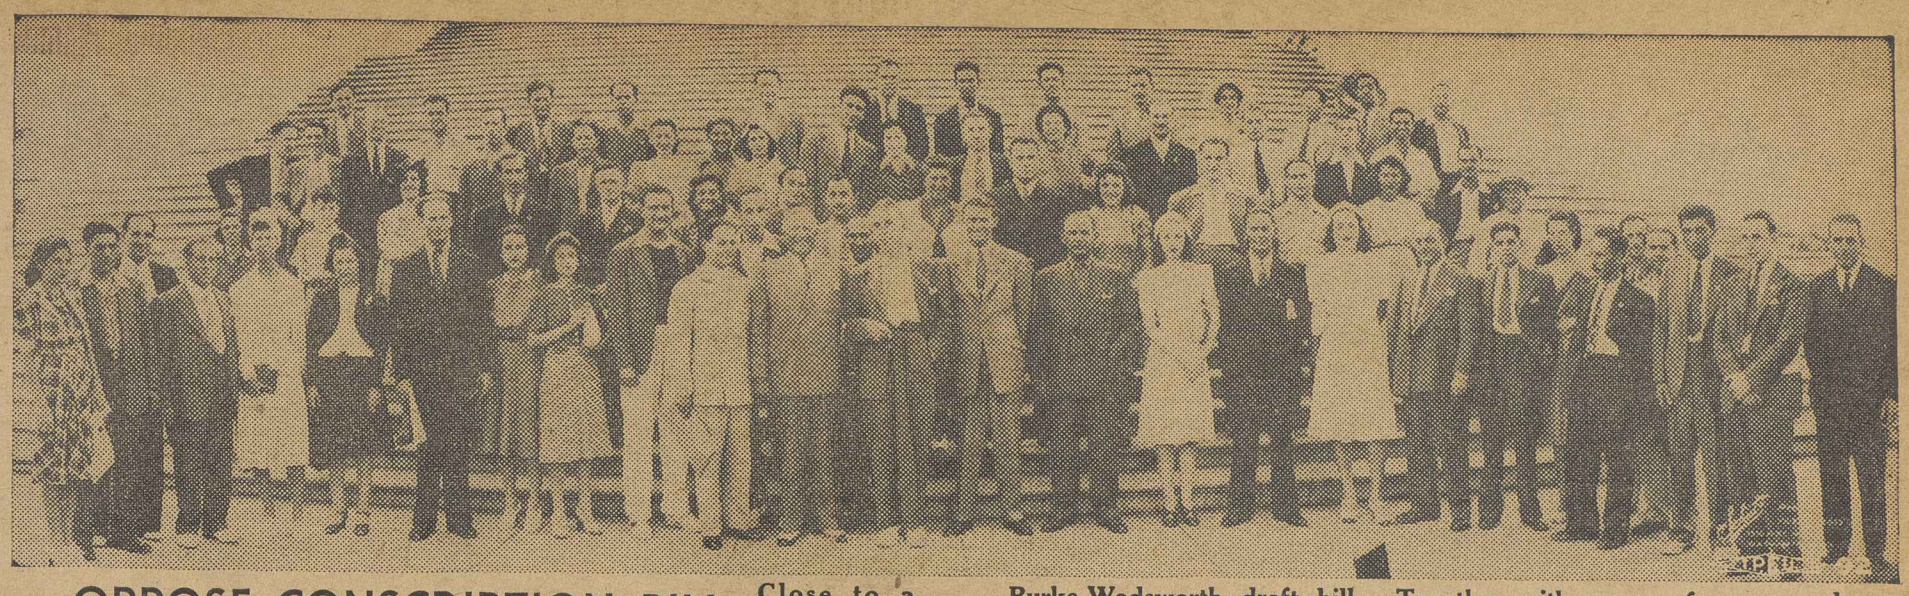
With the possible exception of the Standard Oil Co., the Texaco Co. has the most vicious record of any oil firm in its treatment of seamen, the union declared. The NMU won a 3-1 NLRB election among the firm's employes back in 1938, but the management has consistently refused to sign a contract.

RIVER MEN REINSTATED



Meanwhile the union announced that Sec. of War Henry Stimson had ordered the reinstatement of five men employed on army dredges located in the Mississippi river. The men were fired after they had written letters to Congressmen describing their bad working condtions.

The NMU said it had received word that Stimson has ordered officials of the U. S. Engineering Dept. to stop interfering with trade union meetings on government river craft and to grant certain seniority rights.



In a joint statement Pres. Joseph Curran and Felix Siren, organizer for the Inland Boatmen's division of the NMU, hailed the war department order and expressed belief it would aid the organizing campaign on river craft.

"Almost all river men work 12 hours a day," they declared. "By some magic, the employers were able to exclude these men from the benefits of the wage-hour law and from the merchant marine act of 1936, which provides an 8-hour day for seamen in the deck and engine departments.

"When we started organizing, wages were around $50 a month. In less than two years we have raised them to around $90."

PEACE PLACARD: Lots of Detroiters stopped to take a look at this anti-war placard erected in a downtown square by artist members of Local 26, United Office & Professional Workers. More than a thousand people signed a union petition against U. S. entry into the European war.

OPPOSE CONSCRIPTION BILL: Close to a hundred representatives of New York CIO and AFL unions journeyed to Washington last week under the auspices of Labor's Non-Partisan League to express to Representatives and Senators their opposition to the Burke-Wadsworth draft bill. Together with groups from several other eastern and mid-west states, they interviewed scores of Congressmen. Shown in the front row near the center is Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, flanked by spokesman for the group.

Lewis Blasts Draft Bill, Asks Limit On War Profits

Says Corporation Lawyers Launched Conscription Plan

The CIO official renewed his attack on plans for conscription with charges that the Burke-Wadsworth selective draft bill "was launched by a group of New York corporation lawyers and other wealthy persons.

At the same time he decried the "bold sabotage" of national defense by the refusal of big business to supply the country with armaments except under conditions guaranteeing immunity from taxation on soaring profits.

Limitations on war profits is being scrapped, Lewis said, at the very time when proposals are being made that the federal government pay the cost of erecting new industrial plants, to be turned over to private interests for their own profit.

BRAVE SUMMER HEAT: Despite temperature that ran into the high nineties, members of the CIO United Furniture Workers picket the Al-Lon Furniture Co. in Baltimore.

Bethlehem Accused of Flouting U.S.

(See Story Page 6)

Pittsburgh, Aug. 17.—The CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee, in a letter to the National Advisory Defense Commission, declared today that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation "is flouting the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States in the same brazen manner it has long flouted the Federal Congress and the Federal Government."

SWOC Chairman Philip Murray, writing to each member of the commission, said the corporation "is not yet obeying" the April Supreme Court ruling which in effect upheld a 62½-cent minimum wage rate on Government steel contracts.

"The Bethlehem Steel Workers and the American people, who will be called upon to pay the taxes out of which Bethlehem Steel has and will continue to derive tremendous profits for its services to the United States armed forces, are anxious to know whether this law-violating company can be made to obey our laws, or whether Bethlehem Steel constitutes in itself a dictatorial power and authority that far transcends that of our government," Murray wrote in his letter.

He also asserted Bethlehem is violating a 1939 National Labor Relations Board order directing the company to dissolve an independent union.

CIO Sweeps Frigidaire Run-off

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 17 — A National Labor Relations Board election at the Frigidaire Division of General Motors was won by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, 4,062 to 3,059 for the Independent Union.

James Matles, director of organization for the UERMW said that winning of the election meant that the CIO Electrical Workers had practically completed organization of the GM Electrical Division.

Believe It Or Not!

In Cincinnati, according to CIO Regional Director Paul Fuller, a local of the CIO United Construction Workers Organizing Committee did the painting job on the headquarters of the city's AFL building trades department.

It so happened that a UCWOC contractor was the low bidder on this job. He did the entire work with UCWOC members unknown to the sleeping officials of the AFL.

Not until the work was completed did the AFL wake up to the fact that the UCWOC had stolen a march on them right in their own offices.

Senate Group Offers New Plan To 'Get' Bridges

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17. — The proposal of the Senate Immigration Committee to order still another investigation of Harry Bridges, CIO California leader, was denounced as an "attempt to use other means to carry out the original plan of exiling a man whose only crime is organizing the unorganized," by Bjorne Halling, secretary of the CIO Maritime Committee here.

The committee proposal was made as a substitute to the Allen bill to deport Bridges that rode through the lower House some weeks ago on a wave of anti-labor hysteria.

PROBE NOT NEEDED

"The so-called Bridges case needs no further investigation," Halling said. "Bridges was cleared of all charges after 11 weeks of exhaustive hearings conducted by Dean Landis of Harvard for the U. S. Labor Dept.

"Those hearings deal with charges raked up by the lowest types of stoolpigeons and professional union haters that the enemies of the labor movement could find—as they were described by Dean Landis himself.

"The labor movement of this country will demand that this substitute bill be rejected as an underhanded attempt to achieve the objectives of the House bill. The labor movement will also ask when this persecution of Bridges, the elected leader of thousands of American unionists, is going to stop."

Strike Brings Quick Win To Bathrobe Workers

NEW YORK, Aug. 17. — An agreement covering 1,000 employes in the New York men's bathrobe industry was announced this week by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers following a one-day work stoppage.

Wage increases for workers in the lower paid brackets are provided in the agreement made with the New York Clothing Manufacturers' Exchange, the Robe and Sportswear Contractors Association, with a weekly minimum ranging from $18 to $23. Other terms call for a 37½ hour week, impartial machinery for settlement of disputes.

DRAFT PROVISION

A feature of the contract provides that bathrobe workers called into military service in case of conscription will be given their jobs back when they return.

Under the terms of the agreement manufacturers are obligated to pay 3.35 per cent of their weekly payrolls into the industry's unemployment insurance fund for complying with the federal and state unemployment insurance laws. Independent employers will be required to post $500 each to insure observance of the contract.

The agreement was negotiated with the New York Clothing Manufacturers' Exchange, the Robe and Sportswear Contractors' Association and various independent bathrobe manufacturers.

Bay State Furniture Local Strikes

Shortly after it was organized a year or so ago, it was forced to call a strike at the Springfield Upholstery Works to win wage increases and other benefits.

Six months later, its members again had to resort to a strike to win a living wage from the Adaskin Furniture Company of Springfield and Holyoke.

Now the local is engaged in its third and biggest strike, this time against the Berkshire Upholstery Company. Nearly 200 are out, fighting for higher wages. The wage question is the only point at issue, and the strikers are determined to get a fair share of the substantial profits which the company has reaped of late.

Hail Support Of Clothing Union Label

New York, Aug. 17 — Action of the recent convention of the United Automobile Workers in placing on the unfair list two firms which have fought the Amalgamated Clothing Workers for many years, was hailed today by the ACW.

The two manufacturers—Curlee Clothing Co. of St. Louis and the Merit Clothing Co. of Mayfield, Ky.—are "enemies of the organized labor movement . . . and by their un-American methods of semi-feudal conditions of employment and treatment of the working and men and women in their plants, are undermining the sound and truly American basis of the entire clothing industry," the UAW declared.

The resolution called for support of the Amalgamated's struggle against the two open shoppers and urged all auto workers to buy only those men's clothes which carry the ACW label.

Smelter Union Convention Adds Voice to Draft Fight

DENVER, Aug. 17.—Vigorous opposition to the conscription bill now in the Senate, which was described as "vicious, unAmerican and undemocratic," marked the closing session of the 37th annual convention of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers meeting here.

Opposition to the bill was voiced in a wire sent to the Senate Military Affairs Committee which read in part:

"If you and your fellow legislators really want to defend our democracy, stop threatening our democratic rights and traditions. Legislate to meet our human needs and we will fight voluntarily, without conscription, to defend ourselves and our nation."

Earlier in the week the convention heard Harry Bridges, California CIO regional director, declare that his organization—the Intl. Longshoremens and Warehousemen's Union—"is second to none in its respect for the institutions of the U. S.

"The only difference is," he continued, "that we know what they mean and whom they are intended to protect. We know they are intended to protect the majority of the people, and not just a privileged few."

CALLS FOR SPEED

Bridges, who followed CIO Pres. John L. Lewis as a featured convention speaker, urged speed in building strong industrial union defenses against anti-democratic forces now growing in the nation. He paid tribute to Lewis, declaring: "He stands between us, the working people of the country, and many dire things that can happen to us."

Referring to employers' attempts to have him exiled from the country where he has been a legal resident for 20 years, Bridges said: "I came here by choice and I like it here. I have a better knowledge and appreciation of the institutions of this country than most of the people who are trying to deport me.

POLITICAL ACTION

Action on endorsement of candidates in the November presidential elections was referred by the convention to the Executive Board of the international "for future consideration and action."

In addition, the convention voted to condemn the Smith amendments to the Wagner Act, to criticize use of spy and "fifth column" hysteria against bona fide unions, to demand compliance with the Wagner Act from all government contractors, and to urge repeal of the poll tax.

Turning to intra-union affairs, the delegates voted to increase the per capita tax paid to the international, and to urge ratification of the proposal in a referendum by October.

REID ROBINSON

Geyer Seeks Action on Poll Tax Bill

Washington, Aug. 17 — In a move designed to force the anti-poll tax bill (H. R. 7534) on to the floor of the House of Representatives Rep. Lee Geyer of California has filed a petition with the Speaker of the House.

When signed by 218 members, the bill will come before the Congressmen for consideration and will by-pass the Tory House Rules Committee which has been sitting on the measure for the past few months.

The bill, which would prohibit the payment of poll taxes as a pre-requisite for voting in federal elections, was introduced a year ago. Eight southern states — Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia — which still retain the tax would be directly affected by passage of the Geyer bill.

75% DENIED VOTE

"Largely because of the poll tax," Rep. Geyer pointed out, "75% of the adult citizens in those states are denied access to the ballot.

"In many sections of the eight poll tax states, hundreds of thousands of sharecroppers, tenant farmers and city workers have been disfranchised because their low incomes do not permit them to buy the right to vote."

Cudahy Told To Dissolve Fake Union

Washington, Aug. 17—Dissolution of a company union and reinstatement of three CIO men fired for genuine union activity were recommended by a Natl. Labor Relations Board Trial Examiner, reporting on anti-CIO tactics of the Cudahy Packing Co. at Omaha, Neb.

The Board investigation was made on charges filed by the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, and covered general anti-CIO policies of the huge corporation.

NO OVERTIME PAY

The Cudahy Company was generous on small things to its dummy outfit, the Trial Examiner found, but more niggardly when it came to real concessions — even though it lived in fear of the CIO union coming in. For example, the company paid a bill of $191.95 for meals of delegates to a national gathering of company union delegates, donated $175 for a company union office.

But when it came to offering overtime pay to the workers, it was a different story. The demand for overtime pay was strong, but so was the company's dislike to laying out company money. To meet the demand and yet save profits was the problem—solved by granting overtime for 90 days during the slack season, when nobody worked beyond the regular hours.

IN THE DUMPS

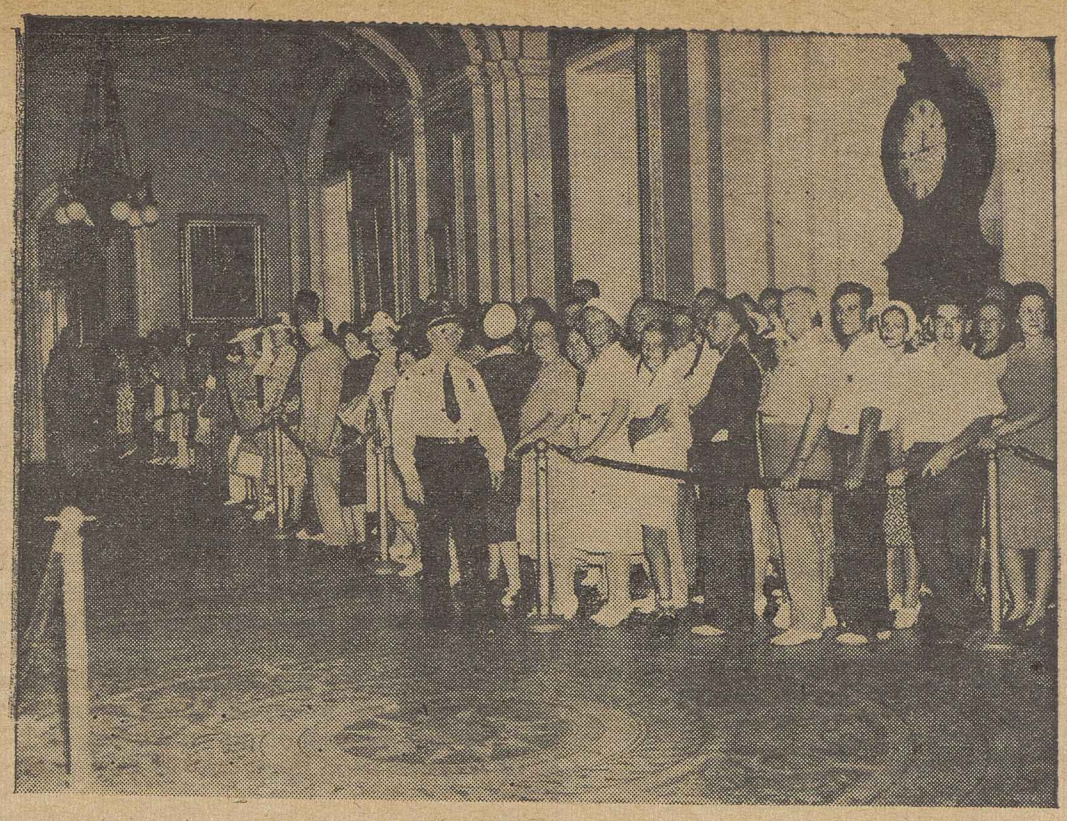
But company unions have their troubles too, as one delegate reported to the national convention. "These men who have painted such a glowing picture, I am afraid I'm going to have to put you in the dumps," he said. "When we started out there were 1,047 eligible for our union. We had 837 signed up on our books. At the present time there are 504 men paid up.

"Some of these men are wearing two buttons. What their object is I don't know. Every day for the past week we have been losing out."

Charter 9 Locals In Twelve Days

Washington, Aug. 17—Nine locals chartered in 12 days is the new record of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

UCWOC groups now number 166 in all. Four of the new locals are in Pennsylvania, two in Ohio, and one each in California, Maryland and Illinois.



$6,500 Pay Rise In Birmingham

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 17 — CIO Packinghouse Workers at the Alabama Packing Co. plant here will be $6,500 a year richer as the result of a wage increase won for them by the union.

The raise, four cents an hour for unskilled workers with corresponding increases in other ratings, brings wages into line with other plants under agreement here.

OFF TO CAMP: These seventy Chicago kids are getting vacations at a summer camp through cooperation of the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee and the city's Catholic Youth Organization. The boys all look pleased.

Lewis Renews Attack On Draft Bill

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17. — The Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill "was launched by a group of New York corporation lawyers and other wealthy persons" hardly notable for their interest in the welfare of the common people, John L. Lewis declared in a memorandum sent to all members of Congress this week analyzing the genesis of the bill and detailing CIO reasons for opposing it.

Conscription "would establish the principle in this nation that the lives of our young men are less privileged than the profit rights of dollars," he said, in sharply condemning the forces that push for the draft as the same interests that "strangle our national defense" through greedy demands for tax concessions as a pre-condition to supplying the nation with arms.

Lewis' newest attack on the draft bill came in the midst of a strenuous Senate fight led by Senator Burton K. Wheeler and other Congressional opponents of the peacetime draft. It was accompanied by a deluge of letters and wires from all over the country—from unions and churches, fraternal groups, the WCTU and ministers' associations, all protesting the bill—and by mass delegations of workers' representatives speaking for millions of organized working men and women.

FIVE POINT ANALYSIS

Lewis' memo to Congress began with a warning that adequate defense as supported by the CIO requires defeat of "unsound and unjust proposals" put forward in the excitement of a crisis by forces "that would not dare propose them at any other time," and was based on five main points of objection to the proposed draft.

Amplifying his statement that conscription would put profits of greedy corporations above the lives of American youth, Lewis wrote: "The same interests that thus strangle our national defense call loudly for the forcible conscription of our young men.

"They claim in one breath that no dollar will be turned to the defense of our nation without a fat and untaxed profit being assured, while almost at the same moment they call on our young men, most of them workers, to cast aside their liberty and sacrifice their ambitions, or suffer punishment as felons. It would be a terrible day in American history should our young men be forced to the draft while industry is free to lay down its ultimatums to the government."

'Of Special Interest'

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 17.—Pres. Roosevelt, in New England last week for a survey of national defense activities, received an invitation from the Connecticut CIO Council to "pay particular attention to the labor policy" of the Electric Boat Co. at Groton. The plant, which manufactures submarines, was visited by the President on Aug. 12.

"The fact that this company has been proved a violator of federal law, the National Labor Relations Act, and is still receiving War Dept. orders, should be of special interest to the President," the council board declared.

Green Blows Hot, Cold On Smith Bill

Washington, Aug. 17 — It was neither the heat nor the humidity that left members of the Senate Labor Committee limp this week. It was William Green.

The AFL president, testifying before the Committee on Wagner Act amendment proposals, told the slightly bewildered legislators that he really didn't support the Smith Amendments after all—he just wanted them passed by the House of Representatives.

As a matter of fact, Green confided to the Senate group, he feels mighty concerned about some of the Virginia Congressman's plans to make hash out of Labor's magna charta.

Asked why he supported the Smith bill when it was in the House, the AFL leader explained he wanted the House to pass the bill so that it could be changed to suit his fancy in the Senate.

SENATORS GROGGY

Green's explanation of his strategy, made at a closed hearing, apparently had the Senators hanging on the ropes. Just a week previous Green had ordered AFL affiliates to vote opposing all Congressmen who voted for the bill which he himself doesn't want!

Many AFL affiliates, baffled by Green's strategy and resentful of his efforts to smash the Wagner Act, have already announced they will take no such orders

Congress Urged to OK Taxes On Big Defense Profits

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Labor is alarmed at the "bold sabotage" of national defense by industry's refusal to supply arms without guarantees of immunity from taxation, John L. Lewis said here in letters sent to the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means group calling for a proper sharing of the defense burden and for cooperation from industry as well as from the other people of the nation.

Analyzing present tax proposals, Lewis declared that under them the government "will pay the cost of new plants amounting to billions of dollars" and then present them to industry for its own profit. This is being done through the amortization plans proposed in the House Ways and Means Committe, he said, which would allow corporations to deduct 20 per cent a year of new plant costs from taxable profits for the next five years.

"This would greatly reduce profits subject to taxation," he wrote. "Furthermore, the rates proposed in the excess profits tax are light. At the end of the five year period the corporation will own a practically brand new plant, paid for by the taxpayers and on the profits of which it will have paid little."

PROFIT LIMITS OUT

Proposed scrapping of the Vinson-Trammell Act, which limits profits to eight and seven per cent, would be "a shameful imposition" on the American people, Lewis added.

"Such proposals are in direct contravention of the promise of the President of the United States that excessive profits will not be made on our national defense," he said. "When the American people understand these proposals, I believe they will not tolerate them."

Lewis reiterated the full support of the CIO for defense of democratic American institutions, pointing out that "labor stands second to none in its desire for the establishment of the most effective possible defense for our nation."

NEED FOR EXPANSION

Labor fully appreciates that this defense calls for rapid expansion of industrial plant, "but we are convinced that this expansion should not be exacted from the American people on the exorbitant terms of selfish interests," he said.

"There is no reason why American industry should be bribed to cooperate in national defense by what amounts to a free gift of plants. I would urge that the Congress enact an excess profits tax designed effectively to recover excessive profit arising from national defense orders."

URGES COOPERATION

Lewis concluded his letters by calling for cooperation in defense not only from labor, which has already shown its willingness to safeguard American democracy, but from industry as well.

"We cannot stand idly by, however, while selfish interests with a callous disregard of the welfare of the nation seek to present the nation with ultimatums," he said. "Let American industry join with the other people of the nation in common cooperation."

Eleven Conventions In September

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Eleven CIO national unions and State Councils will hold conventions during September. Two of them open the last day or two in August and continue into September. They are:

Aug. 30-Sept. 1—Minnesota CIO Council, Austin, Minn.
Aug. 31-Sept. 6—United Office & Professional Workers, Chicago.
Sept. 9—United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Cleveland, O.
Sept. 9—Oil Workers International Union, Fort Worth, Tex.
Sept. 13—Plaything & Novelty Workers, New York City.
Sept. 15—Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, Baltimore, Md.
Sept. 16—United Rubber Workers, Detroit, Mich.
Sept. 16—Missouri State Council, Jefferson City, Mo.
Sept. 17—United Federal Workers, Washington, D. C.
Sept. 20—Washington State Council, Olympia, Wash.

Fishermen Sign Pact

San Francisco, Aug. 17—(FP)—The CIO Intl. Union of Fishermen & Allied Workers has signed an agreement for a 5c-a-pound rate for the fall salmon run.

In consequence, 350 fishermen are at work in the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers, five canneries have opened and 150 fish butchers will be employed to care for the haul.

The sardine fishermen in Monterey, however, are still out on strike, with negotiations proceeding slowly.

Wage Award Upheld

New York, Aug. 17. — An attempt by local laundry owners to vacate through court action a recent $300,000 wage increase arbitration award has ended in failure.

The increase, won for members of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, followed months of hearings, as directed by the city-wide contract gained by the ACW some time ago.

Supreme Court Justice Isaac R. Sweezey put the kibosh on the owners' attempt to get around the increase when he denied a motion to junk the arbitrator's ruling.

Ask Congress Pass Mine Safety Bill

Fort Smith, Ark., Aug. 17.—Pointing out that some 226 lives have been lost in coal mine disasters since January of this year, the Ladies Label League has called for passage of the Neely-Keller mine safety bill.

The League, in a resolution passed fecently, is joining the United Mine Workers "in the name of humanity in urging Congress to enact the bill without further delay." Copies of the statement were sent to members of Congress.

Plan CIO Council In Canada

Washington, Aug. 17. — Representatives of CIO international and local unions in Canada will hold a conference in Niagara Falls, Ontario, tomorrow to make plans for calling a convention to set up a CIO Canadian Council, CIO National Director Allan Haywood anounced today. The meeting will open at 10 a. m. at the Prock Hotel.

Canadian unionists who will attend include Silby Barrett, CIO regional director in Nova Scotia and member of the United Mine Workers international executive board; Charles Millard, United Automobile Workers, and CIO field representative, and delegates from the mine, steel, auto, rubber and other CIO Canadian unions.

The national CIO office will be represented by Director Haywood and Michael Widman, assistant director.

REFUSING TO WALK

TEXT OF LEWIS' DRAFT MESSAGE

August 14, 1940

The Congress of Industrial Organization stands second to no one in its desire for effective national defense. It has, therefore, pledged itself to the fullest cooperation with proper defense measures.

In the establishment of adequate national defense, however, it is just as essential that unsound and unwise proposals be defeated, as it is that proper measures be taken. In the excitement of a period of crisis, measures are sometimes advanced so fundamentally in opposition to our national democratic traditions that their proponents would not dare propose them at any other time. It is our belief that peacetime military conscription is just such a measure.

The very genesis of the measure for peacetime conscription is open to serious question.

1. The proposed bill was drawn up under unofficial auspices by private citizens, although no measure could be more affected with the public interested.

2. The bill was launched by a group of prominent New York corporation lawyers and other wealthy persons. Neither these persons nor the Congressional sponsors of the bill have been notable in their support of legislation for the welfare of the common people of this country.

3. The measure has not been formally requested of Congress by the President of the United States, the responsible head of preparation for national defense.

4. At their recent national conventions, both of the major political parties gave the proposal for conscription consideration, but neither saw fit to give endorsement to the proposal.

Reason for Opposition

Briefly these are the reasons which have impelled the CIO to oppose the pending measures:

1. There is a better way to recruit a proper army for defense than conscription.

Voluntary enlistment under terms which have a real concern for the needs of the individual would quickly provide a suitable army. The period of enlistment should be shortened to one year. The pay should be raised at least to compare with that of the self-respecting workman. The right to return to private employment should be protected. Provision should be made for the continuation of social security protection during the period of such enlistment. Private debts should be either assumed or suspended. Officers' commissions should be more freely open to enlisted men so that an army career is open to men from the ranks. Under such circumstances the most effective and loyal kind of an army could be raised with much less cost to the nation than the enormous expenditures necessary for conscription.

Men Vs. Money

2. Military conscription now would establish the principle in this nation that the lives of our young men are less privileged than the profit rights of dollars.

Today the nation is watching the shameful spectacle of our government yielding to the imperious demands of corporate industry for vast tax concessions and enormous loans as a pre-condition to manufacturing arms. The same interests who thus strangle our national defense call loudly for the forcible conscription of our young men. They claim in one breath that no dollar will be turned to the defense of our nation without a fat and untaxed profit being assured, while almost at the same moment they call upon our young men, most of them workers, to cast aside their liberty and sacrifice their ambitions, or suffer punishment as a felon. It would be a terrible day in American history should our young men be forced to the draft while industry is free to lay down its ultimatums to the government.

3. Forced military service in peacetime would be an alarming departure from the basic principles of our democracy. It is the first step toward the breakdown of those free institutions which we seek to protect.

Citizens who become subject to conscription lose a substantial part of those civil rights and liberties which distinguish a free democracy from a totalitarian state.

Such conscription would further establish in the minds of the young people of the nation the idea that voluntary loyalty to the nation is no longer a necessary virtue. It would introduce them to the principle of compulsion, a principle native to the fascist state and alien to our own.

No Materials

4. The production of equipment for an army has lagged far behind the enlistments into the military service.

Already there are more men available to the Army and the National Guard than can be equipped for some time to come. The present speed of enlistments is far more rapid than the provision of equipment. From the point of effective defense, an efficient, loyal and highly trained army, highly mechanized, is many times more efficient than a sullen, ill-equipped, poorly trained, conscript army of three times the size. Conscription now would be an enormous waste of money and manpower.

5. The entire fabric of the nation, both industrial and social, would be torn by conscription. The dislocations in industrial production and in community life caused by conscription would take years to heal.

Therefore, the CIO is opposed to provision for peacetime conscription as a measure inimical to the most effective kind of national defense and alien to the democratic way of life.

ANALYSIS OF TAX BILLS

Following is the text of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' letter analyzing national defense taxation bills now before Congress.

Labor is alarmed at the bold sabotage of national defense by representatives of American corporate industry. There is increasing appearance on the part of industry of a willingness to sacrifice the welfare of the nation for profit. The present proposals for the revision of taxation now before the Committee are being forced upon the Executive and upon Congress by the high-handed refusal of American industry to expand its resources for defense until it receives immunity from proper taxation. Many of the leaders in this attack on the nation's welfare are the corporations which have most flagrantly violated the National Labor Relations Act.

Under the existing provisions for financing the national defense program, the government will pay the cost of new plants amounting to billions of dollars and hand them over to private corporations.

The so-called amortization plan proposed by the subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee would permit the corporations during each of the next five years to deduct 20% of the cost of this new plant from their profits for the purposes of all federal taxation. This would greatly reduce profits subject to taxation. Furthermore, the rates proposed in the excess profits tax are light. At the end of the five-year period the corporation will own a practically brand new plant, paid for by the tax payers and on the profits of which it will have paid little.

No Profit Limits

At the same time the limitations upon existing profits on armament contracts provided for by the Vinson-Trammell Act are to be removed. This series of proposals would substantially remove any restriction upon war profits. It would in substance lay upon the American people a shameful imposition.

Such proposals are in direct contravention to the promise of the President of the United States that excessive profits would not be made upon our national defense. When the American people understand these proposals, I believe they will not tolerate them.

We fully appreciate the necessity for immediate expansion of our defense industries, but we are convinced that this expansion should not be exacted from the American people upon the exorbitant terms of selfish interests. I would urge that provision be made which would guarantee the necessary expansion upon proper terms. There is no reason why American industry should be bribed to cooperate in national defense by what amounts to a free gift of plants. I would urge further that the Congress enact an excess profits tax designed effectively to recover excessive profit arising from national defense orders.

Labor stands second to none in its desire for the establishment of the most effective possible national defense for our nation. We believe that every group within the country must cooperate to guarantee that our shores shall not be invaded. We cannot stand silently by, however, while selfish interests with a callous disregard of the welfare of the nation seek to present the nation with ultimatums.

Let American industry join with the other people of the nation in common cooperation.

Lewis Renews Attack On Conscription

pay were raised, job security guaranteed for demobilized men, social security continued during enlistment, private debts suspended or wiped out, and the army democratized to permit enlisted men to rise from the ranks, Lewis wrote.

At the same time, he added, the present Army and National Guard have far more men than can be supplied with arms and equipment, and the addition of millions of conscripts would result in "an enormous waste of money and manpower."

WOULD LOSE RIGHTS

Turning to the meaning of conscription to the nation as a whole, Lewis told the Congressmen that it would be "an alarming departure from the basic principles of our democracy. It is the first step toward the breakdown of those free institutions which we seek to protect.

"Citizens who become subject to conscription lose a substantial part of those civil rights and liberties which distinguish a free democracy from a totalitarian state." Such a measure, he said, would tear "the entire fabric of the nation, both industrial and social" and the resulting dislocations "would take years to heal."

Finally, Lewis wrote, real defense in a democracy demands more than a huge arms program. It demands "full utilization of our industrial capacity and our available manpower," provision for social security, "a place in the sun for young people and the aggressive maintenance of civil liberties."

CIO Delegations See Congress on Draft

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Mass delegations of workers from more than a dozen states came in to Washington this week to tell their Senators and Congressmen that the people back home don't want conscription in any form—and to remind them that millions of voting workers are watching their attitude on the Burke-Wadsworth bill and other draft proposals with an alert and penetrating eye.

First delegation to come in was a group of more than 90 from New York, followed immediately by spokesmen from other eastern states, from the midwest, the south, the far west. Altogether, more than 200 union people, the majority from CIO unions, but with representatives from the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods, have come to town in the last five days to register their protest against the threat of a militarized America.

Most of the delegates came under auspices of Labor's Non-Partisan League, though League officials here were quick to point out that popular anger at conscription plans made the delegations "virtually a spontaneous affair. The move on Washington began when Ohio sent word it was planning a delegation," the League explained. "As the word spread other groups came in from Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, the Carolinas, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama."

DENVER CONTINGENT

A group on its way back east from the 37th annual convention of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers at Denver, Colo., stopped off to tell Connecticut's Senators that the union's 75,000 members were unanimously opposed to the draft. Headed by union representative John J. Driscoll, the group added 300 miles to a 2,000 mile auto journey to make their organization's attitude plain.

"Labor in America is united against this type of legislation," Saul Mills, CIO Council secretary said for the New York delegation, "because it definitely involves departure from the principles of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence."

"SLIGHT INDICATION"

The delegation was only a "slight indication" of the way New York's 500,000 CIO members and other unionists feel about the draft, Mills added. "It is not enough to defend the borders of the U. S.," said Peter K. Hawley, of the Office and Professional Workers, speaking for the group to Senator Robert F. Wagner. "We must defend democracy, too. The Burke-Wadsworth bill has features which would destroy the very basis of democracy."

Senators on Capitol Hill here are hearing from their constituents—and their constituents are making their indignation against a peacetime draft plain and loud to hear. There is talk around Washington that the drive to conscription is slowing up.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—"Conscription means just one thing to future debutantes—scanty stag lines. The poor dears will be restricted pretty much to straight doses of undergraduates and 'interesting old men'."

That's the way New York's so-called upper classes are regarding the Burke-Wadsworth draft bill, according to Nancy Randolph, society editor of the New York Daily News—and she ought to know.

Scanty stag lines, it seems, constitute a pretty serious problem for the society gals, for "one of the main requisites of a successful debutante party, besides good music, food and champagne, is a nice, long stag line. In fact, the real reason for the good music, food and champagne is to insure a crowd of stags who flock where the entertainment is most lavish."

Adds Miss Randolph: "It won't be so bad on week-ends when the undergraduates can get away from Harvard, Princeton and Yale to come to parties. But getting a date in between times is going to be tough going when so many of the usual standbys, men of 21 to 31, are off in training camps learning to be soldiers."

REPORT ON DRIVE: Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, (right), shown as he addressed New York unionists who came to the nation's capital to make known to Congressmen their opposition to the conscription bill. With Haywood is Saul Mills, New York City CIO secretary, who led the delegation.

Rap Postal's Attempt To Alibi Lay-offs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Attempts of the Postal Telegraph Co. to use a $5,000,000 RFC loan as a smokescreen for layoffs of more than 1,300 workers were sharply condemned by Joe Selly, vice-president of the American Communications Assn., CIO, in an interview here with Emil Schramm, RFC chairman.

Postal is currently negotiating with the ACA for a renewal of its contract, Selly explained, and the company has been refusing to give needed wage increases on the excuse that the pending RFC loan makes it impossible. In addition, Selly pointed out, the company has declared that the RFC loan makes the layoffs mandatory.

"We canot accept the idea that taxpayers want to see their money used to add 1300 workers to the ranks of the unemployed and to the relief rolls," Selly said. "Our demands for increases for Postal workers are entirely legitimate. These workers in the skilled and semi-skilled categories now make less than the average of $21 a week earned on white collar projects."

Labor United AgainstDraft, HaywoodSays

Washington, Aug. 17.—Organized labor is completely in support of John L. Lewis' stand against conscription, Allan S. Haywood, CIO organization director, told a group of New York unionists here to protest to their Senators and Congressmen against the compulsory military training plan.

"We can see no necessity for conscription," Haywood said. "We believe that American labor will respond to any danger this country is confronted with at any time."

Furthermore, labor intends to keep up the fight against conscription until it is defeated, he told the delegates, because labor knows how conscription is used against labor's interests in the nations where it has been enforced in time of peace.

"Labor must keep on its toes," he warned. "There are those among us who would destroy our liberties overnight. We believe the best way to save the world today is by setting an example in America, by showing that democracy can and does work. In that effort the CIO is going to take its part."

First Bill Green endorsed the Smith amendments to the Wagner Act, now he thinks they're bad and says he doesn't want them to pass. It's a confusing world, but you can keep yourself straight by reading CIO pamphlets and leaflets on the Act. Write Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C., for the straight stuff.

Keep Up Labor's Defense, Is Plea

New York, Aug. 17—It is imperative that labor keep up its defense "against any act which threatens our basic democratic institutions" John L. Lewis wired to Local 65 of the Wholesale and Retail Employes in greeting a mass meeting called to discuss action on the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

"The drastic social and economic effect of universal conscription alone, if enacted into law, would be so far-reaching in the lives of every American, that the imminent results could not even be visualized at this time," he said.

The mass meeting, attended by more than 4,000 Local 65 members, passed a resolution which said that "America's greatest defense will come from a free people, not from an army of conscripts."

Steel Workers Pledge Speed in Organizing Bethlehem Plants

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 17.—A pledge to push CIO organizing in Bethlehem Steel, together with sharp condemnation of the refusal of the corporation to obey the Wagner Act and of the "unpatriotic and contemptible" attitude of Bethlehem's Pres. Eugene Grace in refusing to cooperate with defense programs unless exorbitant profits are guaranteed, marked the joint conference of Steel Workers Organizing Committee and Marine and Shipbuilding union members just concluded here.

The conference pointed to huge backlogs and full capacity operations in Bethlehem as added justification for the reasonable demands of Bethlehem workers.

"Although Bethlehem Steel Corp. has been operating recently at full capacity, has accumulated a great backlog of unfilled orders amounting to $500,000,000, has increased its profits five-fold . . . the working conditions of Bethlehem employes, always unsatisfactory, have not been improved . . . and the abundant new wealth of the Corporation has not been shared in the most meager degree with the workers," the conference declared.

CIO OBJECTIVES

At the same time, the conference added: "we condemn the holdup game being played against the U. S. Government by Bethlehem for the sake of big dividends and fat salaries and executives' bonuses," describing statements of Eugene Grace on his refusal to invest corporation money in expansion for arms orders as "unpatriotic and contemptible."

Objectives of the organizing campaign as outlined by the conference include recognition of the right to organize, a $5.00 daily minimum wage, guarantee of basic hourly rates and bonus system reform, elimination of the staggered work week and so-called "learners' rates," and the "acknowledgment of such achievements in written, signed contracts."

The conference, attended by over 300 steel and shipbuilding workers, was addressed by Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, John Green, Shipbuilding Workers president, by Clinton S. Golden and Van A. Bittner, SWOC regional directors, and others.

Court Kills Wire Firm's Fake Union

New York, Aug. 17 — One of industry's oldest and biggest specimens of the company union breed passed out for keeps this week. An order issued by the National Association of Western Union Employes has been upheld by the U. S. District Circuit Court of Appeals.

Nothing now remains for the Western Union Telegraph Company to do but bury the critter. During its 22 years existence it served as a guard to keep away any real union, but during its later years it became feeble and helpless, and organizers for the CIO's American Communications Association slipped in right under its nose and organized many employes.

ACA FILED CHARGES

The ACA filed the original charge with the Labor Board which accused the company of maintaining the Association.

The Labor Board upheld the union's charges and ordered the company to stop recognizing the Association as the representative of its employes and to cease interfering with the right of the employes to join a real union.

It also ordered the company to pay back all money collected from the employes as dues for the stooge union, but this part of the decision was not upheld by the court.

Board Again Hits Ford

Washington, Aug. 17 — The National Labor Relations Board today had renewed its attack on the unfair labor practices of the Ford Motor Co.

An order based on some of the most gruesome testimony ever read into an NLRB record, instructed the company, which maintains headquarters at Dearborn, Mich., to post notices in all its plants that it will henceforth refrain from discouraging unionism — especially by "physical violence" or "espionage."

The order pertained directly to a complaint involving the company's big assembly plant at Dallas, Texas, where a thug squad used Hitler methods to "put the fear of God" in any union sympathizer or organizer.

Referring to the use of thugs as "organized gangsterism," the NLRB noted that the strong arm men used blackjacks, whips and lengths of hose to spread their reign of terror, not only in the Ford plant but throughout the entire city of Dallas.

The "war" on the workers was no local affair, the Board concluded, but was "formulated, directed, approved and ratified" by Ford's "policy makers" in Dearborn.

Shipbuilders Urge Bethlehem End Stalling Tactics

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 17.—Officials of the CIO's Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers said this week they were hopeful that the deadlock in negotiations for a contract with the Bethlehem Shipyard at Sparrows Point would soon be broken.

The management several weeks ago turned down the union's request for a pay increase and other improved conditions.

Local 33 gave the negotiating committee, headed by Philip Van Gelder, national secretary-treasurer and William Smith, organizer, authority to "take any action deemed necessary" to enforce the union's demands. The committee appealed to Sidney Hillman of the National Defense Advisory Commission to aid in settling the dispute.

MEET WITH OFFICIALS

Union representatives met with Hillman, Dr. John Steelman, chief of the U. S. Conciliation Service, and Dr. Isadore Lubin, director of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and suggested that the union's demands could be substantiated if wage data from Sparrows Point were compared with rates paid by competitive yards.

Dr. Lubin obtained the data from Bethlehem and Van Gelder then wrote to Hillman urging him to call a conference of representatives of the union, the company and the Defense Commission to examine this wage data and compare it with wage figures from other shipyards.

In his letter Van Gelder told Hillman that "the situation at Sparrows Point is highly inflammable, and we cannot waste any time in getting down to work."

Hillman sent a representative to confer with the management, a statement issued by the union declared. Dr. Lubin informed John Green, national union president, that this representative had recommended that the management and the union negotiating committee meet together as quickly as possible, and that Hillman concurred.

First Bill Green endorsed the Smith amendments to the Wagner Act, now he thinks they're bad and says he doesn't want them to pass. It's a confusing world, but you can keep yourself straight by reading CIO pamphlets and leaflets on the Act. Write Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C., for the straight stuff.

'Irregularities' Seen In Trial Of Mill Bosses

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 17.—Startling charges of irregularities in the conduct of the trial of 15 officials and employes of the Fitzgerald Cotton Mills held in Waycross, Georgia several weeks ago are made in the current issue of the Industrial Leader, CIO labor weekly published here.

Accused of conspiracy to deprive workers who belonged to the CIO Textile Workers Union of rights guaranteed by the Constitution and the National Labor Relations Act, James W. Cox, president of the Fitzgerald Mills, the vice-president, the general manager, a foreman and 11 employes were declared not guilty by a jury after a nine-day trial, which started July 22.

Gross irregularities connected with the trial, according to the Industrial Leader, were:

1. The jury was chosen five weeks before the trial, before the attorneys from the Department of Justice who prosecuted the case even arrived. The prosecution never saw them until they assembled for the trial.

2. The judge refused to grant a 30-day postponement at the request of the U. S. attorneys, to allow an investigation of charges that members of the jury had been fixed.

3. At night during the trial the jurors were permitted to return to their homes where they were able to read prejudiced accounts of the trial in the paper. In addition they had been free for five weeks after they were chosen and could have been approachd by anti-union interests unhindered.

4. The district attorney who was said to have previously taken part in running a unionist out of the state and to be the attorney for a number of southern textile mills, "ranted against labor unions, the CIO, and other democratic organizations," and reviled the three principal witnesses for the government.

Alton Lawrence, a TWUA organizer, was reportedly called "a lying labor agitator"; Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, also a TWUA representative, who had been seized by thugs and beaten, was "a man who has forsaken the tabernacle of the living God to stick his snout in the CIO trough"; and John Moyer, a former superintendent at the Fitzgerald Mill "had been disloyal to his employers and has testified against them. He is a psychological monstrosity."

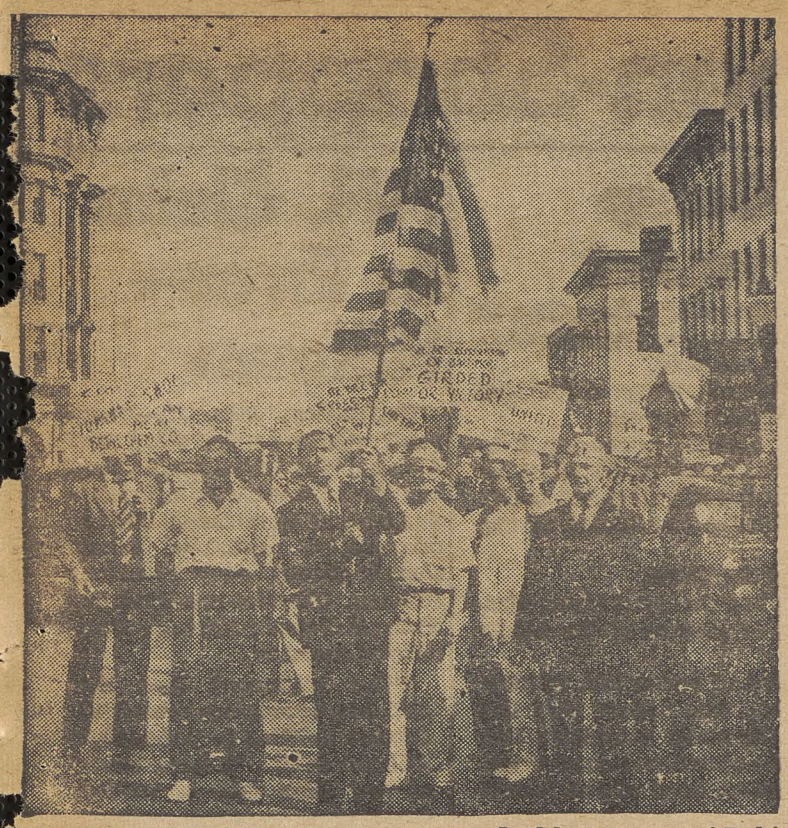
5. The judge in the case, according to the Industrial Leader, is a man 72 years old, a former corporation lawyer, known for his reactionary attitudes toward unions, whose prejudices were revealed in his conduct of the trial.

The attorneys for the Dept. of Justice were reported to have said on leaving after the trial that the matter was not ended.

"It is said that the trial may result in a house cleaning of much legal and political corruption in Georgia and possibly in removing and replacing a judge," the Industrial Leader declared.

Union Upheld In Bank Labor Case

Washington, Aug. 17.—Charges of unfair labor practices made by the United Office & Professional Workers against the Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association of San Francisco were upheld last week by a decision of the National Labor Relations Board.



The company's banking business is the ninth largest in the world and fourth largest in the United States. It has some 495 branches in California and a foreign branch in England, with total resources of more than a billion and a half.

The Board ordered the Bank of America to stop discouraging membership of its employes in the CIO Office Workers Union, or any other labor union, and to reinstate with back pay 10 messengers discharged by the company so that it could "rid itself of a nucleus of union members and sympathizers."

Officials of the bank, the Board found, "viewed with uneasiness and hostility the attempt to organize its employes" which went on openly. A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board of directors, told the union president that "he had done so much for the employes of the bank that he didn't think it quite right for them to organize."

UNION ATHLETES: A snappy ball team is this aggregation from Lodge 1336 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee at Branford, Conn. Standing: W. Packer, F. Lipkvick, L. Czaplicki, C. Bannis, A. Olson, D. Raiola, Capt. P. Naimo, W. Sanieski, and G. Reichitelli. Center: Manager J. O. Lageux. Sitting: A. Piscitelli, J. Openski, S. Horoszkiewicz, W. Lipkvick, E. Sanieski.

ON TO CONTRACT: Led by a group of Baltimore shipyard workers, delegates to the joint meeting of Bethlehem Steel unionists sponsored by CIO steel and shipyard workers paraded to Hungarian Hall. Delegates heard CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray and John Green, head of the two unions, denounce Bethlehem's law evasions, demand a contract with the big open shop corporation.

Pity The Consumer

All too frequently American workers have underestimated their collective strength as the largest single consumers' group in the nation. The reason is obvious. In the struggle for improved incomes, for union recognition and for other minimum working standards, their attention has been so closely drawn to questions involving the acquisition of income that problems relating to its expenditure have been neglected.

In his new book, Consumers All, Joseph Gaer offers a simple, clearly-written volume which should find its place on workers' bookshelves as a much-needed introduction of the consumers' problems and and as a handy guide to governmental, cooperative and private efforts looking toward their solution.

MUCH CONFUSION

"The average American family today, in the course of one year, avails itself directly or indirectly of more than 90,000 different goods and services," Mr. Gaer points out. How can that family get the most for its money, he asks, when a high state of confusion envelops the whole process of grading and labeling of commodities.

A survey in Milwaukee, for instance, showed that the consumer must make his buying choice from "177 different grades of butter, 109 different brands of peanut butter, 89 different brands of canned peaches, 142 different brands of coffee, 73 different brands of toilet soap, 78 different brands of soap flakes and soap beads, and 278 different brands of dentifrice."

To make matters worse, almost no two brands are packaged in the same-sized container. Price comparison thus becomes doubly difficult. Similarly, quality grading is just as confused. In leather, to cite one example, top quality is "A"; in silverware, top quality is "XXXX", while sixth grade is "A-1"!

Some progress towards standardization and education of the public has been made by certain of the government bureaus, notably the Food and Drug Administration, the Bureau of Home Economics, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the Consumers Counsel of the Dept. of Agriculture and the Consumers Counsel of the Dept. of Interior. Consumers organizations and the cooperative movement have also made extensive contributions to the education of the public. But there's a long way yet to go.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

Mr. Gaer suggests, among other steps that should be taken to assist the consumer, the establishment of a U. S. bureau of standards for consumers; the setting of uniform quality standards, publication of the specified standards and encouragement of proper labeling.

"Possibly one of the most pressing needs," he concludes, "is for the coordination of all government consumer agencies already in existence . . . For some time various groups outside the goverment have asked for the creation of a Department of the Consumer on an equal basis with Commerce, Agriculture and Labor, not only in the federal government but in the states as well . . . Not until the consumer has been accorded full recognition in the government structure, they maintain, will his problem be solved satisfactorily."

'Junior Unionists' Frolic At Labor Summer Camp

OLD FORT, N. C., Aug. 17.—Thirty-seven junior unionists, sons and daughters of CIO members in five Southern states, started the second four weeks' session at Pioneer Youth of America's Camp Larry near Old Fort, North Carolina, August 3. The same number wound up the first four weeks' session on August 2.

Joel B. Leighton, former teacher who came to North Carolina last year as Southern Director of Pioneer Youth and set up junior union locals in seven North Carolina towns, is in charge of the camp, where come not only members of the junior unions, but also other union children from 10 to 16 years of age. These returning campers will serve as nuclei for more junior unions this winter.

TEN YEARS OLD

Camp Larry, at the foot of Big Hickory Mt. in the Blue Ridge chain, this year celebrates its tenth anniversary. In 1930, Lawrence Hogan, leader in the 1929 textile strike in Marion, N. C., started the camp with strike children. The camp was named in his honor and Pioneer Youth leased a five-acre tract of land from his family for the campsite. Hogan was, until his death in 1935, an organizer for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

Unions repesented at the sessions are the Textile Workers Union of America, the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. The children are from High Point, Greensboro, Durham, and Marion, North Carolina; Columbia, West Columbia, Gaffney and Spartanburg, S. C.; Atlanta, Georgia; Knoxville, Tennessee; and Anniston, Alabama.

PLAY—AND WORK

The future unionists aren't at Camp Larry entirely for fun. There's plenty of fun—swimming every day in the pool the campers built themselves—a pool furnished with water by a 2,000 foot flume from a mountain waterfall, mountain climbing and hiking—one trip took the entire camp to Carolina Hemlock in the Pisgah National Forest and the older campers to the top of Mt. Mitchell, highest peak east of the Rockies; singing of labor songs and sports and games of all kinds.

But there's also plenty of work. Each year the camp cabins and grounds are improved by the staff and the campers, and the daily duties of cooking, cleaning up, woodcutting, dishwashing, laundry, roadbuilding, etc., keep all busy during the forenoon.

STAFF OF TEN

The children are also at camp to learn and to develop into strong union members when they grow up. Assisting director Leighton is a staff of ten and a consulting doctor. Some of the counsellors have graduated up from campers through many years at Camp Larry; others are young people chosen for their experience in the labor movement and in working with children; others for special knowledge of camping and the outdoors.

Among the counsellors are George Baker, furniture worker from Marion; Carl Ros, student from Wesleyan University; Rosanne Walker, formerly with Labor's Non-Partisan League in S. C., and Jim Anderson, on the staff of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Ask Release Of Fur Union Leaders

Washington, Aug. 17 — Officials of the U. S. Dept. of Justice, including Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson and Solicitor-General Francis Biddle, were asked to take steps to have four leaders of the Fur and Leather Workers, CIO, released on bail pending appeal on charges of violation of the anti-trust laws.

The request was made by a delegation of 11 prominent people in labor and progressive circles, including Joseph Curren, chairman of the New York CIO Council and president of th Natl. Maritim Union, Michael Widman, asst. national director of organization, CIO, Elmer Brown of the N. Y. Typographical Union, Earl Bassett of the Railway Trainmen, Magistrate Anna Kross of N. Y., and others.

The delegation also urged an end to the use of anti-trust suits against labor unions, making both requests at the White House as well as at the Justice Dept.

Tories Fail To Halt Drive In Northwest

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 17.—Efforts by anti-union lumber barons and their political stooges to brand CIO organizing efforts in the "Inland Empire" district of eastern Washington, Idaho and western Montana, are proving to be a flop.

Adolph Germer, CIO official who is directing organizational efforts for the Intl. Woodworkers of America, said today that the employers and their front-men, while attempting to brand the union as "un-American" are themselves casting democratic practices to the winds in their efforts to halt the campaign.

REFUSE USE OF HALL

At Sandpoint, Idaho, use of the GAR Hall for a union meeting was suddenly refused just a few hours before the announced time, with speakers and audience being forced to move to a public school in Sagle, a few miles away.

Efforts of a lumber company attorney, who is active in Republican politics, are alleged to have been responsible for the refusal to rent the hall to the IWA.

Sandpoint merchants who support the anti-union action may soon regret it. Many local workers are already transferring their purchases to stores in Coeur d'Alene—described by Germer as one of the few spots in the area "where the spirit of true Americanism still prevails"—and other unionists are threatening to follow suit.

CIO Union Certified

Washington, Aug. 17. — The Natl. Labor Relations Board announced certification of Local 347 of the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee as sole collective bargaining agency at the Armour Wholesale Market in Chicago.

Certification followed a 34 to 6 victory for the CIO union in a secret ballot election July 30.

Parley Maps LaborSchool Future Plans

Ashevilsle, N. C., Aug. 17.—Definite plans for continuing the efforts of the Southern Summer School for Workers to become more closely related to the needs of the Southern labor movement were drawn up at the two-day session of the executive board which met here last week-end.

In mapping out the school's program for the coming year, the Board voted to have several workers' education institutes of about two weeks each in southern labor centers during the winter months to meet the desire for such activities expressed by the present student body of workers representing eight states and seven national unions.

NAME OFFICERS

The board re-elected Miss Mary Barker of Atlanta, Ga., former president of the America Federation of Teachers, as chairman, and Mrs. Louise McLaren as director for the 15th consecutive term. Bernard Borah, southern director, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Mrs. Pearl Willen of New York were elected vice-chairmen.

New members representing CIO unions who were elected to the executive board were George Titler, United Mine Workers; Arthur Attaway, United Automobile Workers; Lloyd Vaughan, Dyers Federation; and J. O. Glenn, United Rubber Workers. Other new members elected were H. C. Nixon, author and faculty member; Elizabeth Bowles, former student; Carl Thompson, SSS field assistant, and Betty Barnes. New York.

BOARD MEMBERS

Board members re-elected were Paul R. Christopher, director for the Textile Workers Union in South Carolina; Hilda Cobb, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; J. R. Butler, Southern Tenant Farmers Union; Grace Call, Office Workers Union; Helen Gregory, Federation of Hosiery Workers; Willie Helms, TWUA; Hollace Ransdell, American Newspaper Guild; and Mike Ross, Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Push Wage Claim On Bankrupt Firm

Washington, Aug. 17 — Can a firm which has gone bankrupt and is liquidating its assets, be freed from the responsibility of paying back wages to its employes as directed by the National Labor Relations Board?

A St. Louis bankruptcy referee says "yes."

The CIO United Shoe Workers and the Board say "no."

Accordingly, the NLRB has filed an appeal against the referee's decision, which involved a $145,000 back wage claim against the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. in the Missouri city.

USWA officials point out that the workers should have at least equal status with business creditors in the liquidation of the firm's assets.

U.S. Shoe Orders to Open-Shoppers

Union Employers Protest Navy Dept. Practices

This accusation was made today by the United Shoe Workers, CIO, as it revealed statistics showing that since March 1 the U. S. Army and Navy have let 14 contracts for shoe purchases of more than $10,000. These buying orders involved a government expenditure of $3,684,676. Not one cent went to a union manufacturer.

Pres. Frank McGrath of the USWA, in a long statement discussing the military buying policy, declared the situation is precisely of the type referred to by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis in his recent demand for a White House Executive Order that would bar government contracts to violators of federal labor laws.

A peculiar twist to the Navy's shoe-buying policy, USWA officials pointed out, is the Department's apparent reluctance to take any steps that might lead to large-scale orders going to union manufacturers.

GET SUBSIDIES

The Navy has insisted that it can purchase shoes only under the open bidding system. This has enabled low-wage, anti-union manufacturers like Brown Shoe, International, Endicott - Johnson and Herman to underbid union employers. In addition, a number of the non-union firms have opened large plants in southern and midwestern communities where large subsidies offered by the local governments have served to place the union manufacturers in an even worse competitive situation.

When USWA officials asked the Navy for adoption of the negotiated bid system, under which orders could be placed directly with organized firms, they were told that such procedure could be adopted only in "emergency situations" not now existing.

21 TO ONE FIRM

Almost simultaneously the Navy was quietly placing just such an order with the Herman Shoe Co. of Millis, Mass., for 50,000 pairs of shoes at $3.19 a pair. The Herman outfit, bitterly anti-union, has received 21 contracts from the government in recent years, amounting to well over $4,000,000.

Award of the contract to Herman roused Brockton, Mass., shoe manufacturers, most of whom are working under union conditions. In a sharp wire to the Navy paymaster - general, Pres. Charles Corcoran of the local chamber of commerce pointed out that "many factories in Brockton and the Brockton district would gladly accept such orders with a guarantee of finest shoe making."

He added in a statement to local papers that "if the Navy Dept. now intends to place orders over the telephone, we want to know it here in the Brockton area. These navy shoes can be made in any one of several local factories, and in justice to our unemployed shoe workers, Brockton should have some of this business if it is going to be passed around in this way."

No CCC Shoes To Be Made In Prisons

Washington, Aug. 17.—Sharp protests against rumored plans of the government to manufacture 300,000 pairs of shoes for CCC boys at Leavenworth, Kans., federal prison, brought a quick and favorable reply to Pres. Frank McGrath of the CIO United Shoe Workers.

J. J. McEntee, CCC director, wrote McGrath that "I am entirely in accord with the points raised in your letter, and while I sympathize with the need of finding employment for prisoners, I am also sympathetic with the people who have never committed any crime and who cannot secure employment.

TAKING STEPS

"The shoes for the CCC are purchased through the Quartermaster General for the Army. We are today writing the War Department calling attention to the facts in connection with the case and directing that unless the law makes it mandatory for this order to be placed at Leavenworth, that no order be placed with the Federal Prison Industries for the CCC."

In his letter to the CCC, McGrath had referred to federal statutes which limit government buying from the prisons to a minimum of competition with private industry. With thousands of shoe workers unemployed or on part time, he warned it would be unfair and illegal for the government order to go to Leavenworth.

Professors Form Group To Defend Wagner Act

AMHERST, Mass.—Aug. 17. — Formation of a Committee to Defend the National Labor Relations Act was announced here today by a group of prominent college professors.

Spokesman for the group, Prof. Colston E. Warne of Amherst College, said the committee was established because:

"We contend that at this time of national emergency, it is important that industrial relations should not be disturbed by conflicts incident to the drastic weakening of a measure which has extended in an important direction the functioning of our democracy.

ATTEMPT OF LABOR'S ENEMIES

"The Smith amendments represent but the latest phase of a concerted and long-continued attempt of enemies of the Act to emasculate its provisions."

The committee is inviting the support of economists, political scientists, sociologists and psychologists who believe that the Smith Amendments would eliminate the major safeguards laid down by the Wagner Act. Results of the committee's inquiry will be made available to Sen. Elbert Thomas, head of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

CIO Office Union To Meet in Chicago

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Important issues to come before the third convention of the United Office & Professional Workers opening at the Morrison hotel in Chicago, August 31, will include action showing the viewpoint of the union on vital questions facing the American people.

Conscription, unemployment, pending legislation harmful or helpful to organized workers, the five-day week and other outstanding problems will be taken up. Delegates will also hear the radio speech to be broadcast by CIO President John L. Lewis on Labor Day.

A. F. Whitney, president of Railroad Trainmen and one of the foremost spokesmen for the more than 1,000,000 organized railroad workers throughout the country, will deliever a Labor Day address to the delegates. His speech is expected to be broadcast from the convention hall by one of the major radio networks.

HAYWOOD TO SPEAK

Other speakers who have accepted invitations to speak are Allan Haywood, CIO national director, and Len DeCaux, CIO publicity director and editor of The CIO NEWS. The convention will last seven days.

President Lewis Merrill's report to the third convention in Chicago will put on the record a number of achievements including a list of new contracts and renewals signed in the general clerical, insurance, publishing and social work fields.

40c Base Pay For Leather Industry

Washington, Aug. 17 — A wage order calling for payment of a 40c hourly minimum wage in the manufacture of leather, effective Sept. 16, was issued this week by Colonel Philip B. Fleming, Wage-Hour Administrator.

Application of this minimum will increase the hourly wage rates of more than 2,700 workers, the administrator said. About 49,000 are employed in the industry, some 43,000 in northern areas and 6,000 in southern.

Some 47,600 workers are employed in the tanning, curring and finishing division; 1,000 in belting and about 250 in welting.

Plan 'Blitzkrieg' Drive To Enforce Wage Act

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Special inspection-enforcement campaigns to insure payment of government-ordered minimum pay rates in five important industries were announced today by Wage-Hour Administrator Philip Fleming.

Starting October 1, some 250 of the agency's inspectors will begin personal checkups on all employers in the boot and shoe, furniture, leather goods and luggage, hosiery and woolen industries.

The investigation will be launched early in September and should be completed by October 1, Fleming indicated. During that period thousands of concerns will be visited.

All five of the industries are functioning under special minimum wage rates, varying from 32½c hourly to 40c hourly, as the result of activities and recommendations by industry committees representing employers, workers and the public.

The inspection drive will be based on techniques worked out during a similar check-up in the lumber industry which started in June.

Fleming said the Wage-Hour Administration is convinced that "industry-wide compliance, brought about through a co-ordinated program of inspection and education carried on simultaneously throughout the country, is the best technique for cleaning up the rotten spots which threaten fair employers with cut-throat competition."

Cab Drivers Switch to CIO

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 17.—Striking taxicab drivers who operated Black and White, and Checker taxis for the Huntington Cab Company here, voted last week to leave the AFL union to which they belonged and join the CIO Transport Workers Union.

William Gandall, CIO representative, in announcing the men's decision said that "we will immediately begin to carry on an aggressive strike to present fairly to the public the reasonable demands of these men. He reported that the company had refused to bargain with the drivers.

Job Guarantee In Office Union Pact

New York, Aug. 17.—A two-year agreement guaranteeing reemployment in case of conscription has been signed with the Lane Bryant Company here, Local 16, United Office & Professional Workers, announced today. The contract covering 70 employes provides holidays, vacations and sick leave with pay, a general $1.50 weekly wage increase and a closed shop.

An inflation clause effective after the first year was included to permit negotiations for wage increases in case of a sharp rise in the cost of living.

PIE IN THE SURPLUS

AFL Claim In Error— Hillman

Washington, Aug. 17.—Newspaper stories to the effect that AFL building trades craft unions had been awarded sole jurisdiction over all government defense construction contracts were sharply denied today by Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and National Defense Advisory Commission member.

"The statement that the AFL has been given control of defense building is just silly," Hillman said. "I have never at any time said or written anything upon which such an assumption could be based.

"Nor could an AFL official worthy of his office have come to such a conclusion from any remark of mine. . . .

"Any intimation that I am trying to handle jurisdictional matters is without basis."

The newspaper story to which Hillman referred appeared in a New York publication, and was based on an item in an AFL official publication. Some time earlier the AFL had claimed that its craft unions had received sole jurisdiction from the U. S. Housing Authority for all its projects. This story, too, was vehemently denied.

Swanky Club Picketed In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Aug. 17. — Some 85 employes of the swanky Pennsylvania Athletic Club, who only a few months ago didn't think they wanted any CIO union, are now mighty glad to have it around.

Back in June the CIO Hotel & Restaurant Workers Local Industrial Union won a poll at the club by a 183-85 majority, thereby smashing management claims that the union represented only a small minority of the employes.

When contract negotiations started in July, the Club—which after bankruptcy proceedings early in the year passed into the control of the powerful Girard Trust Co.—demanded a 10 per cent cut for all steady employes except those earning less than $12 a week. Contingent workers fared even worse.

It was all part of the announced plan of the banking firm to cut the club's payroll to a "point below the 1933 level." The union, charging that 1933 conditions have no place in the 1940 scheme of things, went out on strike, with 290 employes answering the call.

Picket lines are spread over one side of aristocratic Rittenhouse Square, which faces the club.

Expect Big Crowd At Labor Day Picnic

Warren, Ohio, Aug. 17.—Another tremendous crowd is expected at Perkins Park here when the Trumbull County Industrial Union Council holds its annual Labor Day picnic.

Plans call for a band concert in the early afternoon, to be followed by a program of speeches. Leo Krzycki, veteran vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will be chief speaker.

Social Note

Mr. Green Presents His Compliments

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 — William Green of the AFL knows a good job of Wagner Act baiting when he sees it, even though the job hasn't succeeded in wrecking the Act according to plan. As evidence, here's a letter he wrote to Edmund M. Toland, former chief counsel for the Smith smear committee that wasted thousands of dollars of public money "investigating" the Labor Board and finally came out with the Smith ripper amendments.

Wrote Pres. Green to ex-Counsel Toland, in part:

"Now that the work of the Smith committee is nearing completion, I feel justified in writing you commending you most highly upon the skillful, judicious and successful way in which you presented facts and data relating to the administration of the Natl. Labor Relations Act to the committee for information and consideration.

"You measured up to the standards set by your friends and to the highest requirements of all your duties as chief counsel for the Committee. . ."

Note: Two weeks ago Green told Senators he didn't want the Smith amendments, after his endorsement had eased their way through the lower House.

Anti-Labor Firms Awarded Large Federal Contracts

Washington, Aug. 24.—Violating the Wagner Act, even when carried on over a period of years, does not bar anti-labor corporations from large scale U. S. government contracts, though the practice amounts to putting a premium on lawbreaking.

Here are figures of recent U. S. defense contracts awarded to two of the most consistent and flagrant violators of the Act among U. S. corporations to show that they aren't being penalized for their anti-labor, anti-Federal law policy. The figures were released by the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission, whose Production Division clears all U. S. contracts over $500,000. They cover the period June 6—August 2.

Under these awards, Bethlehem Steel Corp., one of the most notorious enemies of the Wagner Act and one that has been repeatedly cited by the Labor Board for its anti-union policies got the tidy sums of $196,194,296.00 for heavy cruisers, light cruisers, destroyers and one overhaul job.

Electric Boat, another consistent lawbreaker, also repeatedly cited by the Labor Board, got $94,472,000.00 in contracts for submarines.

Hail Steel Pay Raise As Due To CIO Drive

(See Stories Page 3, 8)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 24 — Substantial wage increases by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, announced to bring a 62.5 cent per hour minimum to workers employed by corporation plants throughout the nation, were credited by Philip Murray, Steel Workers Organizing Committee chairman, to the four years' effort by SWOC to bring Bethlehem wages into line with those paid in other steel firms.

Renewing the fight to force Bethlehem to pay standard wages and to concede other labor demands, Murray pointed to the SWOC's campagin under the Walsh-Healey Act that requires government bidders to pay prevailing scales. This fight, he declared, had been carried by SWOC to the U. S. Supreme Court and won by the union.

Murray also cited the recent conference of some 300 CIO union delegates from Bethlehem plants all over the U. S., where the demand for the 62.5 cent rate was taken to the National Defense Advisory Council.

The victory will affect some 7,000 workers who have been receiving less than the minimum, Murray said. Another 15,000 in the semi-skilled categories will also receive raises.

Canadian Board Urges Pay Rise

Trenton, Nova Scotia, Aug. 24.—Appointed to review Eastern Car plant employes' demand for a wage boost, a federal conciliation board this week unanimously recommended that the workers, members of SWOC lodge 1231 be given a general pay raise of 12.5 per cent.

The board found that annual wages earned by the company's employes "were entirely inadequate to maintain themselves and in many cases the workers are dependent on relief to keep them alive."

RECOMMEND BONUS

According to the findings the plant was only in operation 86 days during the past year, the company's sole output being manufacture of box-cars for the Canadian National Railways which it shares with two other large car plants.

Payment of a bonus of two cents per hour if the cost of living should jump by five per cent over a six-month period was recommended by the board.

The board also recommended a minimum daily rate

CIO Action Wins $4,000 Back Pay, Job Return for 32

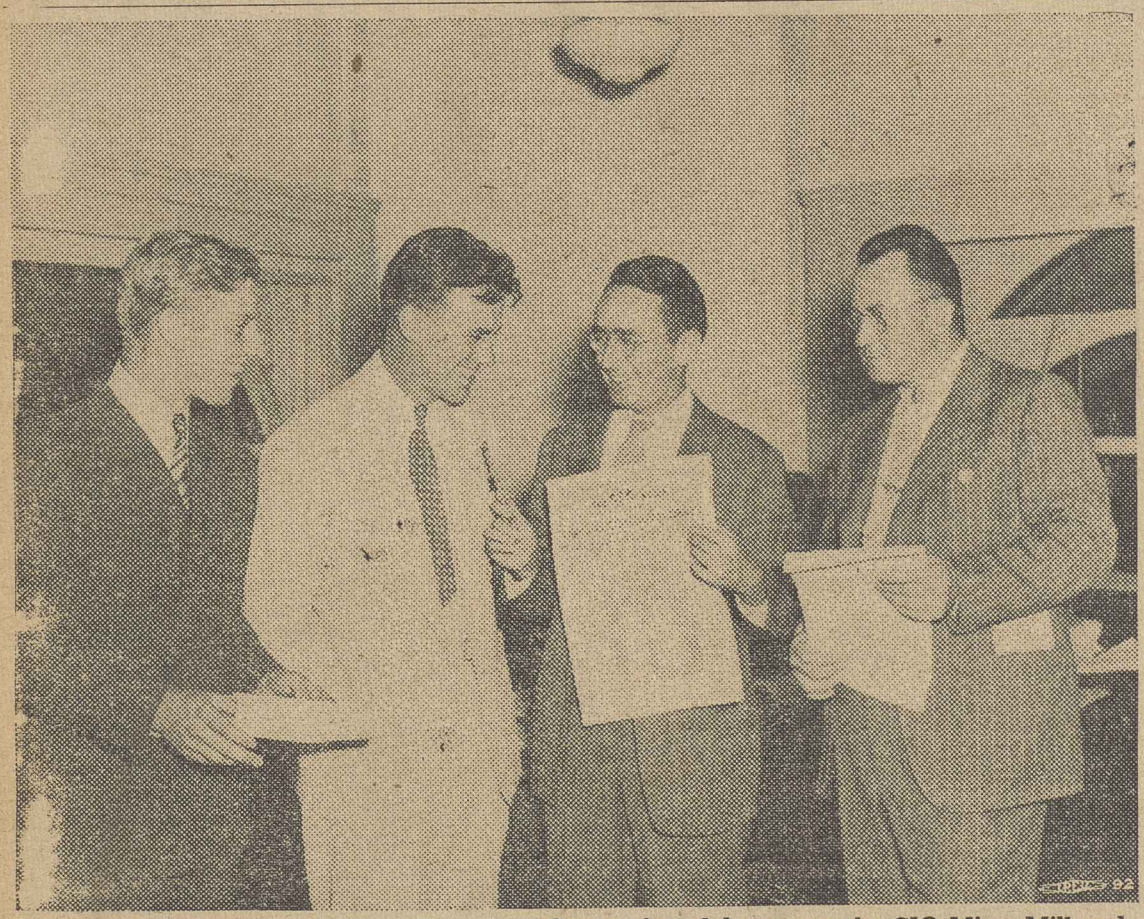
MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 24.—Workers at the Dixie Pickery here are $4,000 richer and have their jobs back as the result of activity of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers Union in pressing charges against the company for violation of the Wage-Hour Act. Thirty-two employes, all Negro members of the union, were involved.

According to Harry Koger, Cannery Workers district president, the workers were first threatened and then fired for refusing to sign a statement releasing the company from its back pay obligation. Charges were immediately filed with the Wage Hour Division of the U. S. Labor Dept. and the reinstatement and back pay order followed.

LOCALS ORGANIZED

Koger reported that the CIO union has organized two new locals in the past few weeks in the area, and that as a result of the victory, hundreds of workers are joining up in the sharecropper country surrounding Memphis. Wm. R. Henderson of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union (Boatmen's Div.) and Will Watts of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee aided greatly in securing the reinstatement, Koger said.

SIGN 4th PACT



Lockport, Ill.—New gains have been written into the fourth consecutive annual contract signed by Cereal Workers Local Industrial Union No. 11 with the Northern Illinois Cereal Company and the Illinois Macaroni Company here. This year's agreements brought pay raises to the cereal workers and one week's vacation with pay to the macaroni workers.

Brophy Sees Canada CIO, Cooperatives

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 24. — Praise "for the remarkable development of adult education in relation to the cooperative movement among farmers, fishermen and other workers in Nova Scotia" was voiced by John Brophy, CIO director of local unions, after a tour of the Canadian maritime provinces this week.

Brophy passed through Toronto on his way back to the United States. He also met with Ontario CIO leaders and discussed industrial union activity in Canada's largest province.

The CIO official met heads of the maritimes cooperative movement and officials of the United Mine Workers and also studied cooperative housing measures at Reserve Mines and other mining camps in Nova Scotia.

Canadian Steel Workers Seek Living Wage

Trenton, Nova Scotia, Aug. 24.—Insisting that workers and their families should enjoy a proper standard of living Local 1231 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee has asked a conciliation board here for wage increases to reach that objective.

The union asked for a 20 per cent increase for steel workers, a minimum of 50 cents an hour for car workers and a 20 per cent increase on all piece work and contract rates paid by the Trenton Steel Plant and Eastern Car Co.

Representing the union at hearings of the conciliation which inquired into a wage and working conditions dispute between the men and their employers were Philip Clowes, Pittsburg international representative; Foreman Waye, assistant regional director of the CIO; and President Miller Dick and Chad McMillan of the Trenton steel workers local union.

BELOW STANDARD

Union men stressed the fact that Trenton workers suffered because the basic rate of 35 cents was considerably below that of Canadian steel plants. The Sydney, N. S., plant paid 43.5 cents, plus two cents if a conciliation board's finding is accepted, Algoma pays 41.5 and Canada Steel 46.5 cents for an eight hour day.

Company proposals that the men work nine hours a day, this would automatically increase gross daily earnings, were rejected. Such proposals could be carried logically to working 14 hours but that would be going back a century, it was pointed out.

Cleveland's Newest Union Seeks Pact

Standard Tool is finding for the first time in its history that it will have to deal with a union, UAW officials say. Organization of the local at the Cleveland plant which employs nearly 500 workers, was started in April.

The company attempted to halt organization by granting scattered pay increases to union men, vacations with pay and finally attempted to fool the workers into a phony election.

The union, however, is working toward a contract guaranteeing job security and decent wages and working conditions.

AFL Loses Two Polls To CIO

San Francisco, Aug. 24.—Two elections held among employes of the Paraffine Companies, Inc., by the National Labor Relations Board were both won by CIO unions, CIO officials announced here this week.

Local 1-6, International Longshoremen & Warehousemen, defeated Local 335 of the AFL International Brotherhood of Papermakers, 169 to 38 at the Paraffine Company's plant in Oakland. At the same time another NLRB election conducted among employes in the box shop at Paraffine was won 7 to 0 by the United Furniture Workers.

The box shop employes were formerly members of the Bay area District Council of the AFL Carpenters. They voted to change their affiliation to the CIO even though the AFL had the seven removed from the job under the terms of a closed shop contract they held with the company.

At present there are some 18 different unions representing the various crafts among Paraffine employes.

COOPS MEET

Chicago, Ill.—The 12th Biennial congress of the Cooperative League has been called to meet in the Hotel Morrison here October 16, 17 and 18. The Congress will provide for a series of special group meetings to consider the relations of the consumer cooperative movement to the church, organized labor and organized agriculture.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 24.—Many successes and achievements won in spite of the combined attacks of anti-labor forces bent on destroying the CIO will be reported at the fourth constitutional convention of the International Woodworkers of America opening in Aberdeen, Washington, October 7, the union's official call to the convention declared this week.

"Our record as an affiliate of the CIO representing every phase of the woodworking industry is unquestionably that of a powerful, stable, every-growing and dependable labor force," the call said.

"The policy and program of our international union has been the main instrument in rallying our membership and attracting the unorganized around a program for jobs for the unemployed economic security for the employed, maintenance and extension of civil liberties for labor and the people, and above all, to keep the United States at peace."

PLACE CHANGED

The IWA convention originally scheduled to be held in Spokane was changed to Aberdeen, the second choice of the 1939 convention delegates, after it was found that no suitable halls were available in Spokane at the time of the scheduled meeting, and city officials were "very uncooperative." Sessions will be held in the Elks Temple at Aberdeen.

In the official call, the IWA officers declare that the fourth convention will be an historic one. "The program adopted in this convention to guide the destinies of our union for another year must of necessity be the broadest and most far-reaching program ever advanced by organized labor in the wood-working industry."

The call was signed by Harold J. Pritchett, international president; O. M. Orton and Worth Lowery, vice presidents; and B. J. McCarty, secretary-treasurer.

President Pritchett is now in Canada, having been forced to return to Vancouver after the last of his temporary permits expired last month. It is not yet known whether or not he will be allowed to return in time for the convention.

Born in Canada, Pritchett several years ago attempted to apply for U. S. citizenship, but anti-labor forces took underhanded means to prejudice the State Department and U. S. Immigration officials against him, and he was refused a visa.

Pritchett is demanding that a public hearing be held on the charges against him, which he says have never been openly made known.

Century Strikers Wire Governor

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 24.—Police are still suppressing the right of striking workers of the Century Electric Company to picket peacefully and distribute literature, Otto Maschoff, president of Local 1108, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, told Governor Lloyd C. Stark in a telegram protesting the treatment received by the strikers.

"Every promise made to protect civil rights of Century strikers has ben broken by the St. Louis police," the wire declared. The union also charged that strikebreakers are being brought in from outside the state in violation of the law.

ON UNFAIR LIST

At a special meeting of Century strikers held earlier this month, it was voted to put all products of the company on the unfair list and to ask the delegates to the union's national convention which opens in Cleveland Sept. 2, to put the company on a nation-wide unfair list.

A strong picket line has been functioning since the strike began more than two months ago, with other CIO unions aiding. During the convention of the United Automobile Workers held here the first part of August, delegates helped the union picket.

"The number of scabs in the plant has been held at a standstill," a union statement declared, "and little or no production is leaving the plant. All labor and civic organizations as well are solid in support of the Century strikers."

Farm Labor Must Unite, Says Negro Educator

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 24.—Organization into a strong union is the only salvation of the southern farm workers, Prof. J. E. Clayton, Negro educator of Houston, Texas, told the members of the Southern Cotton States Workers Training School in session here.

Clayton's lecture was given as part of the two weeks' training course for leaders sponsored by the southern cotton section of the CIO's United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers of America. The student body is made up of sharecropper and farm union leaders brought to Memphis by the union's Southern Cotton States Council organized last December.

"The big bosses don't need a whip or gun these days to keep you in subjection," Clayton said. "All they need to do is to keep you separated. That's the reason they do everything they can to keep you from organizing into unions.

"Even in slavery days a mere handful of slave owners had no difficulty in keeping hundreds of slaves under their power by the single device of fomenting dissension among the slaves so that they dared not express their hopes of freedom to each other.

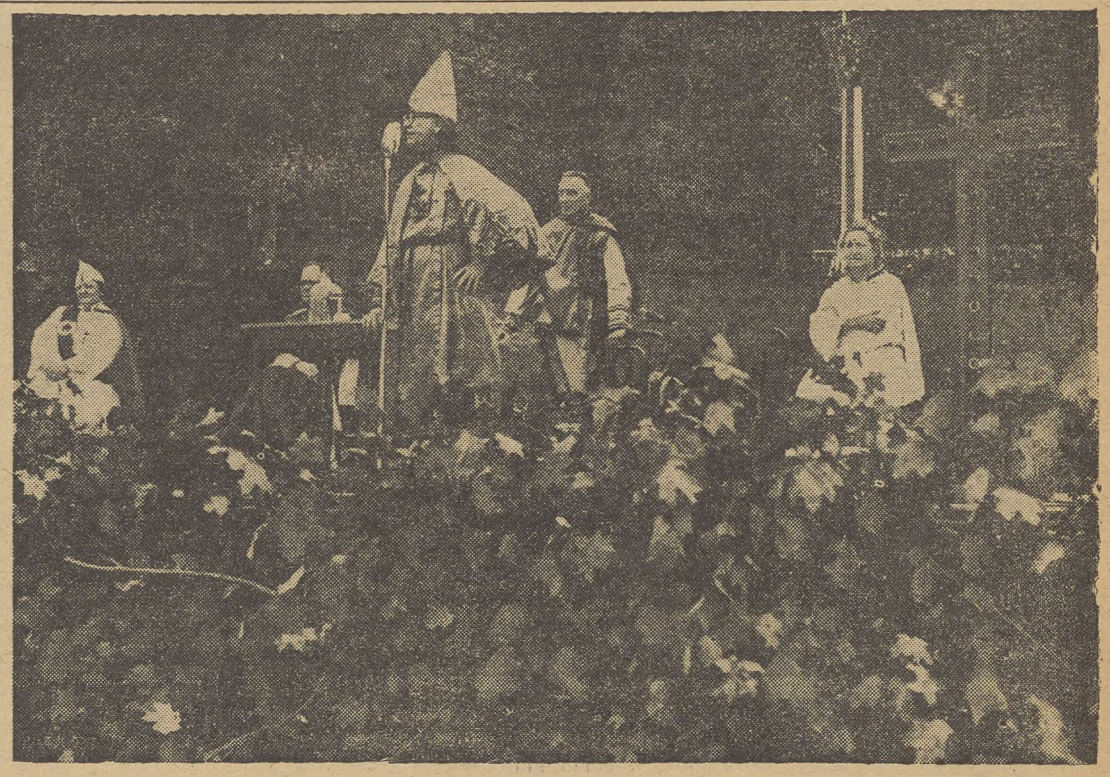
"Today's economic slaves must learn to trust each other. They must learn to unite for their common good. The farm workers and sharecroppers division of the UCAPAWA under the banner of the great CIO undoubtedly offers the best facilities because of its great strength of numbers and its record of militant service for the working people."

Shell Oil Chemists Vote 4 to 1 for CIO

Martinez, Calif., Aug. 24.—CIO chemists scored a four to one victory in a Labor Board election at the Shell Oil Company plant here, won by the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians. The chemists voted 51 to 13 for the FAECT.

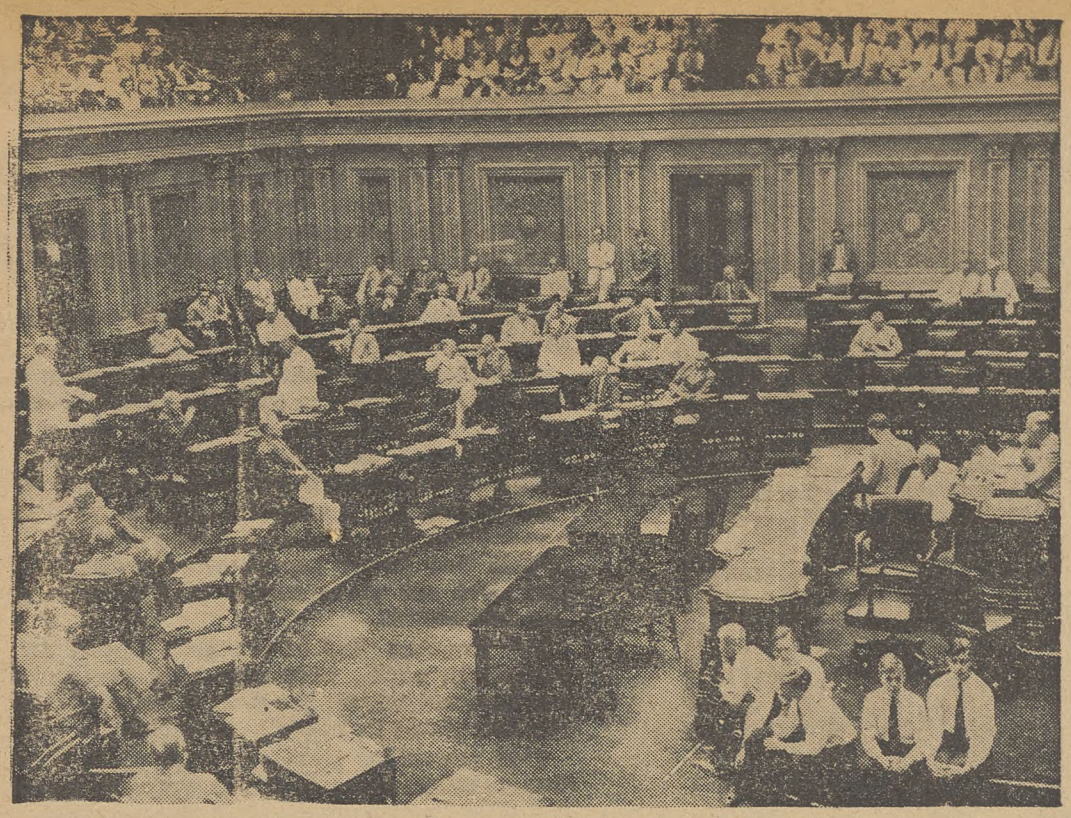
Negotiations for a contract with the company will be started next week, the union announced.

The FAECT through its Contra Costa chapter previously petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for certification as sole bargaining agent for all classifications of inspectors, analysts, and chemists employed in the Martinez refinery laboratories of Shell Oil.



This action was taken following the company's failure to abide by its agreement to meet with union representatives to discuss problems of employe members.

End 2 Month Strike With Union Gains



Danville, Ill., Aug. 24. — CIO workers at the Hegeler Zinc Co. here returned to work after a two month strike with substantial pay increases, a new and improved vacation system and other union gains.

The wage raises bring base levels to $4.60 a day, and will bring further increases as the price of zinc goes up. One week's vacation goes to all workers with three years or more of service.

The union involved was Local 209 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

Steel Wage Boost Due Solely To Union Strength, Murray Says

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 24.—Bethlehem Steel Corporation's announcement of a 62.5 cent minimum hourly rate was described by Philip Murray, chairman of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee, as due solely to the four years of organizing work on the part of the SWOC—a campaign, he explained, that had been carried to the U. S. Supreme Court and won, with the backing of Bethlehem's thousands of workers and the full strength of the CIO.

Repeated demands were made on Bethlehem officials for the increase, he declared, and successful use made of the Walsh-Healey act that requires payment of prevailing wages on U. S. Government contracts. This was the fight that was taken to the Supreme Court, Murray said.

WORKERS CONFER

Most recent step in the drive to bring Bethlehem into line was taken in a conference of some 300 Steel Workers held here, when the delegates wrote to the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission pointing to the corporation's refusal to abide by U. S. law as reason to deny them the profits that come from Federal arms contracts.

Text of SWOC Chairman Murray's statement follows:

"The wage increase announced by Bethlehem Steel Corporation is due solely to the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. For four years we have been pressing for a wage increase in that Corporation's mills which would bring their rates up to those paid in mills under union contract.

"We made repeated demands on officials of Bethlehem Steel for a wage increase. Then we carried the fight to the Public Contracts Board, under the Walsh-Healey Act. This decision—that Bethlehem and other such steel companies would have to pay union wages on government contracts—was handed down in January, 1939. The Corporation appealed through the courts, and in April of this year the United States Supreme Court upheld the decision and the position of the SWOC.

"On August 11 at a conference of some 300 SWOC delegates from all Bethlehem mills, another demand for the 62½ cent minimum was made. Following this the SWOC laid its case against Bethlehem Steel before the National Defense Council, with a demand that that Corporation be denied government contracts until it obeyed the laws of the land. These are the factors which caused the wage increase.

"Immediately affected will be some 7,000 men who had been receiving a minimum of 54 to 59½ cents an hour. An additional 15,000 who had been paid around 62 to 65 cents for semi-skilled work in Bethlehem's mills will also stand to get wage increases. In fact, the SWOC will now push to see that both the semi-skilled and skilled workers in Bethlehem mills are granted proportionate wage increases—to bring them up to the levels of corresponding jobs in mills under union contract."

CIO Furniture Workers Win 6 Day Strike

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 24.—Having won a union shop, vacations with pay and other concessions, 200 striking members of the CIO United Furniture Workers, Local 137, went back to work at the Berkshire Upholstery plant today after being on the picket line for six days.

Other benefits won by the local include a five-day 40-hour week with time-and-one-half for overtime, equal division of work in slack periods and an airtight seniority clause.

The local's demand for wage increases was left to the Massachusetts State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration after the strikers were assured the company was willing to make certain concessions along that line.

It was the local's third victory in as many strikes.

Kansas City, Mo.—Intl. Woodworkers of America, Local 153, last week signed a contract with the Penrod, Jurden and Clark Co. of this city which grants them three cents an hour increase in wages, exclusive bargaining rights and vacation with pay.

Ohio Council To Meet

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 24.—Ohio CIO representatives will meet for their 1940 convention in the Mayflower Hotel, Akron, October 18, 19 and 20, according to the convention call sent out over signature of Ted F. Silvey, State CIO Council secretary-treasurer.

According to the call, the convention "shall hear reports of work accomplished . . .concern itself by resolutions with current problems of laboring men and women. . . adopt policies to protect and advance the welfare of CIO members in Ohio. . . and shall order to be carried out the economic, political and social objectives of the CIO."

Together with the call, the Ohio Council released a demand on Congress of quick passage of the Neely-Keller mine inspection bill, describing it as essential to prevent more mine disasters similar to those that have taken the lives of hundreds of mine workers in recent months.

Lewis' Labor Day Talk On NBC Blue Network

The CIO NEWS is reprinting the list of stations over which Pres. Lewis will speak next Monday, Labor Day, Sept. 2.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24. — The annual Labor Day speech of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will be heard over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Co. from 4:00 to 4:30 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, on Monday, Sept. 2.

In announcing details of the broadcast, Len De Caux, CIO publicity director, recalled that last year a number or affiliates scheduled Lewis' broadcast at their Labor Day meetings and celebrations and suggested that similar arrangements be made for the coming address.

De Caux also advised unions to contact their local NBC Blue network stations to make sure that the speech is carried.

"Local stations that might not otherwise carry the broadcast can often be induced to do so if sufficient interest is shown by individuals and organizations which want to hear it," he pointed out. Groups which find difficulty in getting the program scheduled on their local stations were urged to communicate with the CIO publicity department as soon as possible.

Farm Equipment Union Takes Strike Ballot

Charles City, Ia., Aug. 24.—Accusing the Oliver Plow Company here of pussyfooting for weeks on just and reasonable demands for improving working conditions, Local 115, United Farm Equipment Workers, has taken a strike vote, the returns of which are now being tabulated.

Counter proposals offered by the management last week in the form of a contract were rejected by the Local's executive board which declared that it had "been unable to find even the slightest hint of a real basic improvement for the workers."

Gerald Fielde, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Farm Equipment Union, declared that the time had come "to call the company's bluff."

"We're demanding decent American wages," he said, "but when the company submits a counter-proposal which does not even mention any of our demands, we can only understand that the management is unwilling to allow a peaceful settlement."

The Real Saboteur

Defense Sabotage

The charge of CIO President John L. Lewis that profit-greedy corporations are boldly sabotaging national defense production, has been confirmed recently by many competent authorities.

Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong and Major Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, for instance, testified before the Senate Appropriations Committee that contracts for shipbuilding materials and for 4,200 airplanes have been held up by present limitations upon profits and fear of excess profits taxation.

Senator Walsh, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, put it more bluntly when he said that the whole Army-Navy warplane program is being held up "because of a strike of subcontractors."

He declared that manufacturers of plane parts refuse profits of seven or eight per cent allowed on such American contracts, because they can get 18 per cent on British orders.

"Business men have folded their arms," Walsh stated, "and said 'we are out for profit and our profits are 18 per cent and we are getting them'."

Legislation at present before Congress proposes to eliminate the eight per cent limit on armaments profits. The excess profits bill has been whittled away until it is estimated it would produce little more than $107000,000 this year, and profit prospects are such as to tempt the greediest. At the same time, the proposed amortization plan would make the government pay the cost of new plants amounting to billions of dollars and hand them over to private corporations.

While labor shows its concern for national defense by the modesty of its demands and the sacrifices it makes to avoid any interruption of production, the Fifth Column of profiteering industrialists (including some of the worst violators of the Wagner Act) does not scruple to hold up armament production until virtually free rein for profiteering is assured.

As on so many other occasions when the public interest is threatened, it is the CIO that sounds the alarm about this "willingness to sacrifice the welfare of the nation for profit."

Lewis described the proposals to remove restrictions on war profits, to bribe the corporations now striking against the government, as "a shameful imposition on the American people."

"When the people understand these proposals, I believe they will not tolerate them," he said.

Now is a good time to let Congress know that labor people, at least, are wise to what is going on and demand an end to the coddling shown to law-violating and profiteering corporations.

Bill the Baffler

First, it will be remembered, Green announced it as "the opinion of the AFL that the amendments offered by the Smith Committee as a whole strike in a destructive way at vital, fundamental principles of the Labor Relations Act."

Then when the Smith amendments were offered to the House, Green endorsed them and, together with the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, was instrumental in securing their passage.

Now that the Smith bill is before the Senate labor committee, Green has executed another dizzy somersault and told the Senators that while he wanted the bill passed by the House he doesn't want it passed by the Senate.

All he seems to care about now are the proposals to pack the Labor Board and the amendment to destroy all industrial unions by cutting them up into infinitesimal craft fragments.

The shady dealings, double-crossing and other shenanigans in which Green has engaged in his conspiracy against the Wagner Act have become so involved and contradictory by now that he must have reached the point of out-subtling himself.

If he keeps it up, he's liable to meet himself some dark night going in the opposite direction—and if he does, as like as not, he'll stab himself in the back.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WHEN a man sticks you up with a gun and says, "Fork out!", you know just what he means. But when a bunch of corporations hold up a whole nation's defense program and say, "Amortization," most people think it's too technical and complicated to concern them.

But the idea behind that jaw-breaking word is just about as simple as the gunman's idea.

A number of manufacturers are holding up Uncle Sam right now. Before they will undertake defense production, they demand not only an assured profit but an absolute guarantee against any financial risk if they have to expand their plants for the purpose.

In the last war, American companies that wanted war business had to build their own plants to get it, just as they do for any peacetime business. And there was still gravy enough in it to make many war millionaires.

But nowadays that is not good enough for our patriots for profit. They expect the government to pay them not only for the goods it orders but also for any new plants they may have to build.

They are waiting passage of a bill which will allow them to deduct each year 20 per cent of the cost of the new plant for the purpose of all federal tavation, thus greatly reducing the profits subject to taxation.

They will also be able to charge a fifth of the cost of the plant each year to the government in the prices of the materials purchased.

Get Wise! Amortize!

Let's suppose labor should imitate capital on this amortization idea, and adopt some slogan like "Get Wise! Amortize!" It would work out something like this:

Before John Smith would go to work on any battleship, airplane or other defense production, he would demand not only the full union scale but also a government guarantee of extra compensation for all extra expenses and extra skills acquired for the purpose.

For instance, suppose he had to move to a new home for the job. He would list the expenses of moving and of building a new house for himself and his family. He would add all possible costs involved in learning a new trade or brushing up on an old one.

In this and similar ways he could figure out a pretty tidy total of $10,000, say. This he would expect the government to pay back to him at the rate of $2,000 a year for five years, in addition to his Wages.

The companies argue that their new plant may be useless to them when defense production is completed, and so should be paid for by the government.

But John Smith can also argue, with greater justification, that when his defense job is finished he may have to move to another city and not be able to occupy his new home any more; or, more than likely, he will not be able to find any more work at the trade in which he has become skilled for defense.

Army Amortization

Or how about amortization for the men whom all the profiteers are so anxious to conscript into the army?

Before joining up, they might figure out all the investment involved in raising them from childhood, educating them and generally producing the necessary physical and mental fitness for army service.

They might then demand a reasonable return on this investment at least equal to average earnings in civilian life; and, in addition, guaranteed repayment for the skills of gun-toting, bayoneting, etc., acquired solely for war purposes, which will be useless upon return to civilian life.

There would still be one big difference between the amortization demands of the soldier and those of the profit-making company. Even if he should be guaranteed against all financial risk, the conscript would still risk his life and leave his body to his country if he were killed. But the company, besides not risking a cent, would be sure of retaining a nice new plant, all paid for with government money, when defense production is completed.

Yet the conscript who made such demands would be charged with high treason; while everything is being done to wheedle and bribe the companies which are now making them.

Amortization, however, is not the only demand of the would-be war profiteers. Defense production is also being held up today until the present eight per cent limit on naval armaments profits is removed; and until there is definite assurance that excess profits taxation will be light enough to make little dent in high profits.

A tremendous hullaballoo is raised these days about the most modest wage demands of labor. Any talk even of strike is denounced as "interference with national defense," "fifth column activity," etc.

Yet some of the country's biggest and most anti-labor corporations have been on an actual strike against the government for months—refusing to engage in defense production until their most exorbitant demands of high profits without risk are granted.

Paper Industry Drive Launched

CIO Maps Plans To Bring 150,000 Into New Union

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—A drive to organize the country's paper workers has been launched by the CIO in cooperation with the International Union of Playthings and Novelty Workers, to which jurisdiction over this industry has been granted.

By direction of President John L. Lewis, all previously organized Local Industrial Unions in the paper converting industry, to the number of 30, have been transferred to the Playthings and Novelty Workers, for the purpose of uniting them in an international union of their own.

It is planned to change the name of the union at its forthcoming convention, September 13-15, in New York City, to include the paper workers. All paper workers locals will be represented by delegates at this convention.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, is requesting all regional offices to cooperate in the organizing campaign and to carry through the consolidation of the paper workers into one industrial union.

SOUND BASIS

While a sound basis of organization has been established in the locals transferred to the Playthings and Novelty Workers, according to Alexander Ravitch, secretary-treasurer of the International Union, there are still some 150,000 unorganized workers in the paper converting industry, chiefly in the Middle West, and organizers are now being placed in the field at once to bring them the message of CIO industrial unionism.

An effective strike is now in progress, Ravitch reports, at the American Coating Mills in Elkhart, Ind., where 380 workers have been out for two weeks, holding their ranks solid until a satisfactory agreement can be reached.

The plant is completely shut down, and the AFL truck drivers are cooperating fully, so that no deliveries can be made. The strike was called because of the company's refusal to engage in collective bargaining with the union.

The eagerness of the workers for union organization is shown by the fact that only 60 members belonged to the organization last July, but Organizer Leonard Shaw was able to sign up 90 per cent of them in the union in the last five weeks.

Civic, Church Groups Join CIO In Draft Fight

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The battle over conscription held the stage again this week in Washington, as it has since the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill was introduced in Congress early last month. On one side, pressing for the unprecedented peacetime draft, were War Dept. officials and their allies in Congress and among powerful industrial circles, on the other the entire organized labor movement, the churches, civic groups, leading liberal and progressive circles from all parts of the country.

Chief contention during the week was the Maloney amendment to the Burke-Wadsworth bill, which would put off conscription until January, 1941. Anti-conscription forces charged that this proposal was simply a political maneuver designed to put off the draft until after the November election.

Joseph Curran, president of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, and head of the New York CIO Council representing 400,000 CIO workers, described the amendment as a "stopgap of insidious nature, calculated to carry the conscription issue past the November national elections."

Leading religious spokesmen joined in the nationwide protest against the proposed militarization bill. In Chicago the leading Catholic diocesan paper, "New World," quoted 14 leading Catholic periodicals as condemning the draft, declaring in its own editorial:

"Militarism would immediately jeopardize democratic ideals; this militarism could easily breed untold evils. In the process we would crush out the very thing which we want to defend, the age-old liberties of the American people."

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 24.—Employers cannot refuse to hire workers because they are union members, the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals held this week in a decision of vital importance to organized labor.

The court's decision upheld the National Labor Relations Board in ordering the Waumbec Mills, Inc., to offer jobs to two men whom it had refused to hire because of union activity, and to pay them back wages.

"If employers are free to pursue a policy of blacklisting applicants with labor union records, then the other prohibitions of the Labor Act are of little worth," the court declared.

This does not mean, the court stated, that union members cannot be discharged or refused employment, but that the reason for discharge or refusal to hire must not be union membership or activity.

THE TEST

"The statutory test is whether the applicant was rejected or the employe discharged on account of union membership or activity, or on account of some permissible criterion," the decision declared.

The two men concerned in the case—Alphonse Chartier and Edward G. Geoffrien—both experienced textile workers, were promised jobs in June 1937 by the Waumbec mill superintendent, but were later informed that their labor record had been investigated and they would not be hired.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Food Industry

• Purity and quality dictate the selection of equipment used in the preparation of foods. For this reason, many manufacturers of food processing equipment are using stainless steel.

Stainless steel is not attacked by chemical sterilizers, cleansers, and brines. It is immune to practically all types of food acids, and will not affect the taste, color, or keeping qualities of the foodstuffs with which it comes in contact. Equipment used in preparing various foods have shown greatly improved performance when stainless steel has been used for parts subject to rusting or corrosion.

The food industry is rapidly becoming aware of the inherent possibilities of this rustless metal to solve some of its major problems.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The issue today in America is not England or Germany, Hitler or Churchill, it is "the preservation of our way of life here in America and I submit that the last war proved you cannot save democracy on the battlefields of Europe," Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, leader of the opposition to conscription in Congress, told a nationwide radio audience over the Columbia Broadcasting System this week.

Wheeler's speech was in reply to an address by a retired Admiral, who urged the American people in effect to give up their opposition to involvement in the present European war.

Wheeler cited the names and ages of some of the individuals who some time ago signed a public appeal for an immediate U. S. declaration of war on Germany.

WHO ARE THEY?

"Who were some of these 30 whom the press headlined as 'notables'?" he asked. ". . . a 43 year old author and newspaper editor who spent five years in London — he wouldn't be a conscript; . . . a 51 year old writer who had been a London correspondent and whose home even now is in England — he wouldn't have to serve in the American army; . . . a 41 year old college president who was educated in England as a Rhodes scholar — he too wouldn't be doing any fighting and dying in this war he urges upon America; . . . a 62 year old New York lawyer of great wealth and with important clients — do you think he will shed any blood when the war comes?"

The American people aren't sending in any petitions for entry into the war as the result of the appeal of these "notables," Wheeler said. On the contrary, he pointed out, the American people remember the cost in blood and shattered lives of the last world outbreak, and they are determined to stay out now.

"Do not let yourselves forget that war means militarism and the end of civil rights," he declared, "that war means the end of all liberty for all time in your generation and for generations to come. Forget, if you can, that your children — and your children's children, will curse you for your folly."

Strike Threatened

Buffalo, N. Y.— If management representatives at the Bethlehem Steel Corp's local plants insist on refusing to bargain, the workers may be forced to strike, Nathan E. Cowan, sub-regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, warned last week.

Cowan's statement came after 500 workers at the Bethlehem plant in Lackawanna, N. Y. struck for two hours while union representatives conferred with management.

PACTOLA, S. D., Aug. 24.—"I think that the proposal of the CIO that President Roosevelt call a conference of representatives of labor, agriculture, industry and government to settle this question of unemployment is a practical one," said John Vesecky, president of the Farmers' Union, important national farm organization. Vesecky was attending the All-State Camp of the Farmer's Union Juniors in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

"This problem can be solved," he continued, "if it is approached with sincerity and not in a spirit of excuse for not doing anything."

Farm and labor cooperation was an important theme throughout the discussion during the 10 day camp session. Leslie Orear, editor of the Packinghouse Workers Edition of THE CIO NEWS, presented the case for organized labor at the invitation of Gladys Talbott Edwards, Farmer's Union Director of Education.

SAME PROBLEMS

Commenting on the success of the camp in acquainting young farm people with labor problems, Mrs. Edwards observed, "We have been very much pleased with the progress made here at camp in clearing up the misunderstandings and the antagonisms which farm people often have toward organized labor. Through our discussions our boys and girls from the farms have learned that the problems of workers and of farmers are cut out of the same piece of cloth.

"We are learning that if we are to defend our democratic institutions and solve our mutual economic problems both groups must carry on their struggle together. When the organized farmers and the organized workers learn this lesson, and they must learn it in a hurry, the road will open wide toward our mutual goal, peace and prosperity."

TIME OUT: CIO pickets take a minute to relax before the Contra Costa plant of the giant American Smelting and Refining Co. They are members of Carquinez Local 51 of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. Strike has lasted more than two months.

Profit Demands Block Defense, Officials State

By C. W. Fowler

Washington, Aug. 24. — Leading War Dept. figures, including Generals, Rear Admirals, Colonels and assorted Army and Navy officials, went out of their way this week to prove John L. Lewis' charge that corporate industry's demand for virtually tax-free super-profits amounts to "bold sabotage" of national defense.

The Army and Navy officials undoubtedly did not intend to back up Lewis' charges, made in a letter sent to Congress last week on the subject of arms profits, but their testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee did just that.

Their testimony showed that business is deliberately avoiding bidding on U. S. defense orders, even though they are urgently needed to fill Army and Navy quotas for guns, planes, armor plate and the like—on the ground that they cannot supply the government while profit limitations are still in existence, or while "uncertainty" still exists on excess profits taxation.

ORDER REFUSED

This is what one of the gold-braided witnesses, Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong, told the Commmittee about an order for 144 anti-aircraft guns, designed to arm 28 new destroyers building for the U. S. Navy:

". . . just a week ago," the Admiral said, discussing the attitude of the contractors, "I received word from them that they cannot go ahead on it because they have received telegraphic information from five or six subcontractors that they cannot go ahead on it.

"The reason is that there is much more business in the country than they can take on without being subject to the Vinson-Trammell Act provisions."

(For the information of our readers, the Vinson-Trammell Act limited war order profits to eight and seven per cent. It was suspended in the lower House a short while ago.)

The Admiral was in favor of suspending the Vinson-Trammell Act, though he declared he was "very much in favor of and operated under it for a number of years"—some time ago. He was also much in favor of the House plan to allow corporations to put the cost of new plants into their prices at the rate of 20 per cent a year instead of the more usual four or five per cent.

Another company wired a brief message; "We protest terms permitted under Vinson Act," and that was the end of that contract, the Admiral said. Another was even more emphatic, wiring; "We prefer not to operate under Vinson Act."

GOVERNMENT AUTHORITY

The Government used to have the authority to take over and operate plants working on naval contracts, if the supplies could not be secured otherwise. The House bill on the five billion appropriation (HR 10263) took away this authority. Senator Russell of Georgia, who pointed out that conscripts would not be allowed to refuse to serve simply by saying, "I do not like the wages and I do not like the quarters," proposes to put this authority back.

Such a measure, it is believed, would not only assure a better production of arms but would also be a safeguard for workers', since their jobs as well as national defense are threatened by refusal of contractors to supply arms unless all their terms on profits and taxation are met by Congress.

Haywood To Speak At Field Day

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 24—Allan S. Haywood, CIO national director, will be the main speaker at the first annual CIO state field day to be held tomorrow at Park McLay, East Haven.

Haywood will review the organizational activities of the CIO during the past year and outline plans for intensive organization in Connecticut's metal, munitions and aircraft industries.

Other features of the Field Day will be a state softball tournament open to all CIO teams; a beauty contest at which "Miss Connecticut" will be chosen; swimming, contests and other recreational events.

CIO Strong In Refrigerator Industry

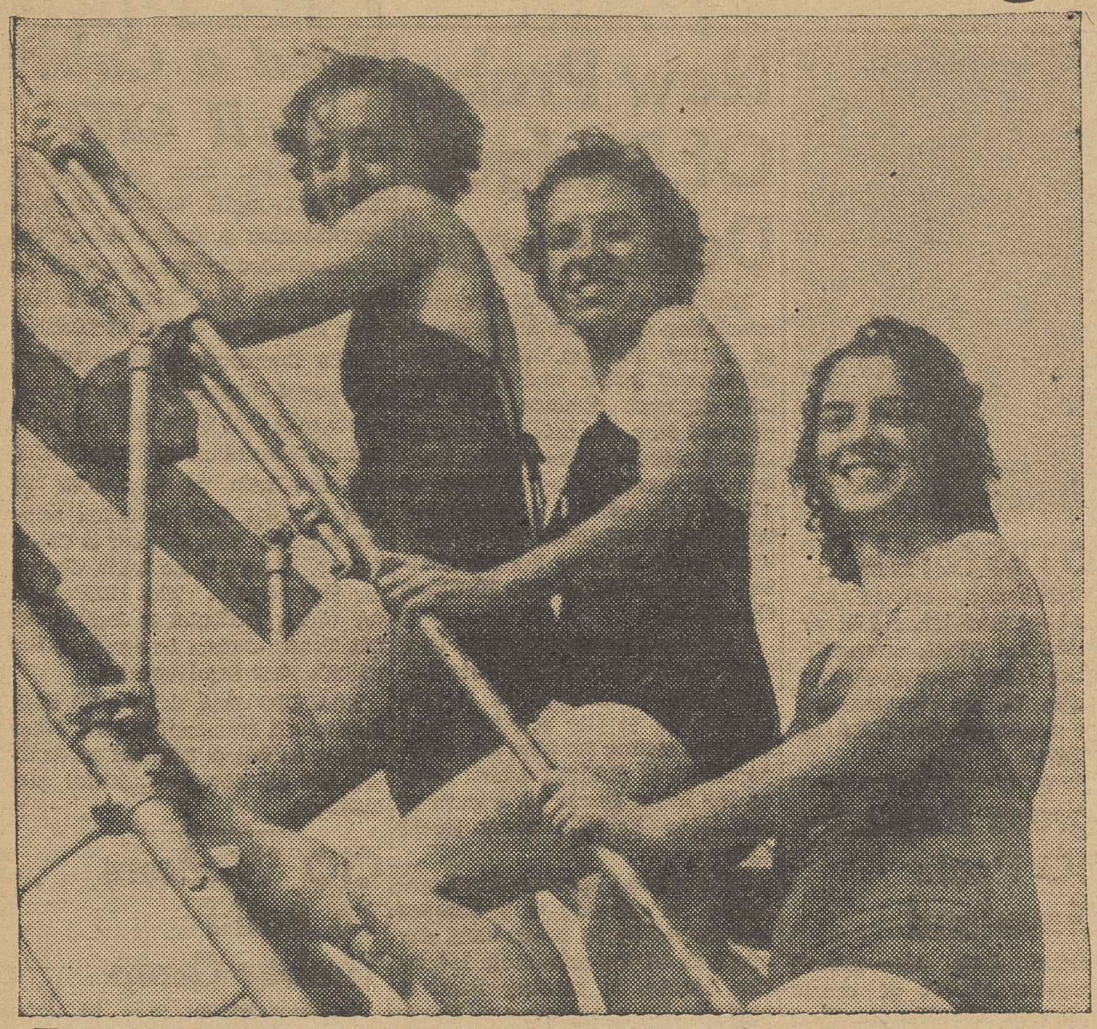
New York, Aug. 24.—The victory of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Worers of America (CIO) over an "independent" union in a run-off Labor Board election last week for employes in the two large Frigidaire plants at Dayton, Ohio, put the CIO union in a strong collective bargaining position in the refrigerator manufacturing industry, and added the third and fourth plants to the list of General Motors subsidiaries in which the U. E. is certified, union officials said here.

Delco Products, at Dayton, where a contract is now in negotiation, and Sunlight electrical division at Warren, Ohio, where the UE has a signed contract, are the two other General Motors plants on the union list. Frigidaire together with General Electric and Westinghouse, where the UE is exclusive bargaining agent, are said to constitute the "heart" of the refrigerator manufacturing industry.

In the first Board election last month, the UE got a clear plurality, but failed by fewer than half of one per cent of the votes, to get a majority, with the UE, the "independent" Dayton independent union, and "no union" on the ballot. In the run off between the UE and DIU, the CIO union received 4,062 votes against the DIU's 3,059. Negotiations for a contract at the Frigidaire plants, which employ about 9,000 workers at present, began immediately after the victory.

Shipbuilding Workers Win Gains

Camden, N. J., Aug. 24.—First major concessions from the shipbuilding branch of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., long an ardent foe of unionism, were announced at headquarters of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers union here.



The concessions, won by Local 33 of the union at the Sparrows Point, Md., Bethlehem yards, include recognition of a union shop stewards system set up by the local, setting of piecework pay schedules in writing, and simplification of the bonus system that has long been a major grievance with Bethlehem workers.

Union officials joined with Philip Murray, Steel Workers Organizing Committee chairman, in attributing the newly announced Bethlehem minimum of 62.5 cents an hour to the strength of CIO organization in the corporation.

Cleveland Brass Local Drafts Pact

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 24.—A local of workers at the Cleveland Brass Co. here, recently chartered by the Aluminum Workers of America, is planning to draft a contract to be presented to the management. The union accuses the company of violating the National Labor Relations Act and has a case pending before the Labor Board.

CIO Unionists Having Wonderful Time

On your mark, set, go! And just as this picture was snapped, the gun went off. It was all a part of the races, games and contests staged on Aug. 17 at Kennywood at the all-CIO picnic.

Michael F. Widman, CIO assistant director, is shown here as he addressed the huge crowd attending the CIO Picnic at Kennywood Park, near New Kensington, Pa. He brought greetings from the CIO and pleaded for every local member to work to double CIO membership in the next year.

Steve Smith, ace slugger of the UERMW Local 601 (Westinghouse) team had to slide home in this action shot during the All-Star game staged with AWA Local 2, mush-ball players on Aug. 17 at Kennywood. Local 2, AWA, was defeated 12 to 4, but everyone had lot's of fun.

W. Va. Transit Workers Switch to CIO

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 24.—Public transportation employes of Huntington, key city of West Virginia, are now 100 per cent organized under the banner of the CIO. The CIO Transport Workers Union today announced that a closed shop agreement providing wage increases of 20 per cent, a $2.50 weekly bonus, seniority protection and check-off had culminated a 12-day strike of employes of the Huntington Cab Company and had at the same time completed their organizing drive in this area.

SWITCHED TO CIO

The taxi strike, involving 90 drivers of the Black and White and Checker Cab lines, was called August 4th by the Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union, an AFL affiliate. Two days later initiative passed to the CIO when a majority of the strikers, calling for more vigorous strike measures, repudiated AFL leadership and affiliated with the CIO Transport Workers

Services of a U. S. Department of Labor conciliator and the National Labor Relations Board were enlisted by William Gandall, representative for the CIO union. When mediation failed to bring an accord general picket action was pressed resulting in complete stoppage of service on the two taxi lines.

Negotiations were resumed after an NLRB election on August 10th which netted only one vote for the AFL and gave sole collective bargaining rights to the CIO group. The contract signed by J. B. Rich, owner of the corporation, Mr. Gandall for the TWU, brought settlement of the dispute.

The pact is the third victory scored here by the Transport Workers Union. Agreements were signed earlier this year with Yellow Cab Company and the Ohio Valley Bus Company.

SCHOOL TERM SET

Monteagle, Tenn. — The Highlander Folk School here announced a six weeks fall term for southern workers starting September 16 to October 26, 1940. Industrial, professional and rural workers, both men and women, are accepted as students. A union recommendation is required.

Textile Mill Villages Are Breaking Up

Winston-Salem, N. C., Aug. 24.—Industrial forces at work in the South are breaking down the textile mill village as a stronghold of employer paternalism, according to the Industrial Leader, labor weekly published here.

"For generations, one of the most typical features of the Dixie cotton manufacturing plant has been its adjoining village with row on row of small, duplicate houses," the paper says.

Owned by the company and rented to employes under the paternalistic eye of the mill, the village system, old as the southern cotton textile industry itself, is now regarded by most owners as a "headache" or "necessary evil."

"Many persons now believe mill paternalism is on the way out. With labor turnover at its lowest point in decades, transportation a minor problem and wages stabilized by government regulation, there is a definite trend to end the 'headache,'," the Industrial Leader reports.

CIO's Millions Pack Labor Day Fetes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Millions of workers throughout the country will crowd into halls and parks to listen to CIO union leaders at giant Labor Day rallies, and march through the streets of many cities, in what is expected to be one of the mightiest demonstrations of organized labor the country has ever seen.

Many of the CIO rallies have arranged to listen to the Labor Day speech of CIO President John L. Lewis which will be delivered over the NBC Blue Network from 4 to 4:30 P. M. Eastern Standard time.

At Chickamaugauga Lake, a Tennessee Valley Authority development near Chattanooga, an estimated 100,000 southern workers will hear an address by Philip Murray, CIO vice-president and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

CIO Director Allan S. Haywood will speak before a record crowd of steel and other CIO unionists at Ambridge, Pa., and Michael Widman, assistant director, will address a Labor Day meeting in Detroit, Mich.

Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, is to speak at a meeting arranged by the Lake County Industrial Union Council in East Chicago, Ind., and Len DeCaux, CIO publicity director, will speak at the Minnesota CIO Convention's rally in Austin, Minn.

Some of the other CIO leaders who are scheduled to make addresses at CIO Labor Day meetings are:

Paul Christopher, regional director for the Textile Workers Union in the Carolinas will speak in New Orleans, La.

Phil Clowes, SWOC field representative—Pontiac, Mich.

Martin Wagner, president of District 50, United Mine Workers—Duluth, Minn.

John Brophy, CIO director of local industrial unions—Durham, N. C.

Powers Hapgood, United Shoe Workers—Portsmouth, Ohio.

Joseph Kovner, assistant CIO counsel—Arnold, Pa.

James Robb, regional director in Indiana—Christopher, Ill.

Murray Hits Bethlehem Record

Cites Years Of Anti-Labor Acts To Defense Group

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 24. — Declaring that Bethlehem steel workers and the American people want to know if the Bethlehem Corp. "can be made to obey our laws" or if the anti-labor corporation "constitutes in itself a dictatorial power and authority that far transcends that of our government," Philip Murray, Steel Workers Organizing Committee chairman, this week wrote to Sidney Hillman of the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission urging his group to take steps to bring Bethlehem into line with U. S. laws protecting labor's right to organize and bargain collectively.

The Bethlehem Steel Company, as you no doubt are aware, is one of the most important units upon which our government must depend during the fulfillment of the present national defense program. While this company has been receiving large government orders over many years, it has notoriously disregarded our laws and defied the mandates of law administering agencies of the Federal Government.

During the last war this company made excess profits from the munitions it supplied our government. At the same time Bethlehem Steel paid low wages and, through devious methods of intimidation and coercion, prevented its employes from becoming members of legitimate labor organizations.

DICTATORIAL POLICIES

In April and May of 1918 a series of strikes occurred at this company's properties in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. The United States Department of Labor was powerless to settle these strikes because of the high-handed and dictatorial policies and practices pursued by the management of this company, whereupon the matter was referred to the National War Labor Board, which issued its findings on July 31, 1918—just 22 years ago. The Board said, in part:

"The main cause of dissatisfaction is a bonus system so complicated and difficult to understand (italics ours) that almost one-half of the time of the hearings was consumed in efforts to secure a clear idea of the system. The absence of any method of collective bargaining between the management and the employes is another serious cause of unrest, as is also the lack of a basic guaranteed minimum wage rate (italics ours)."

In addition, the National War Labor Board made the following finds:

"The right of employes to bargain collectively is recognized by the War Labor Board; therefore the employes of the Bethlehem plant should be guaranteed this right . . ."

Twenty-two years ago—almost to a day—while our country was engaged in a great war the Bethlehem Steel Company not only was making excessive profits from its government munitions contracts, but it was flouting the mandate of a government agency. This company continued its high-handed dictatorial policy of defiance instead of obeying the mandate of our government to pay decent wages, to permit civil liberties in its company towns, and to allow its employes to join unions of their own choosing.

This disgraceful defiance of governmental authority continued until the Armistice was signed. In order to make good the award of the National War Labor Board which Bethlehem Steel refused to accept, Congress was obliged to authorize a special appropriation from the treasury of the United States amounting to over $1,500,000.00 which was distributed as retroactive pay to the underpaid employes of the company at Bethlehem.

SAME TODAY

Today—just 22 years later—Bethlehem Steel is still flouting our government and the law of the land. The same inequitable and unintelligible "bonus system so complicated and difficult to understand" that it was ordered abolished by the War Labor Board in 1918 is still in operation. As a consequence, in recent weeks, after fruitless efforts to secure its abolition, periodic strikes have again begun to occur. Industrial peace at the properties of this company cannot prevail until an understandable and equitable wage system is established and Bethlehem workers are free to join a union of their own choosing.

Back in 1918 Bethlehem Steel foisted a "company union" upon its employes instead of obeying the War Labor Board's decision to permit Bethlehem workers to organize a legitimate labor organization. On August 26, 1937—19 years afterwards—another agency of the United States Government instituted proceedings against this company for violation of the National Labor Relations Act and conducted hearings for more than a year thereafter. Two years later, on August 14, 1939, the National Labor Relations Board issued a decision against the company finding it guilty of flagrant violations of the law and ordering dissolution of its company union.

A year had gone by when on August 11 of this year over 300 representatives of the Bethlehem employes, meeting in conference in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, reported continuous violations of this and other laws by Bethlehem Steel. In full defiance of the American people and their government Eugene Grace continues to interfere with the free organization of his employes.

DEFIES SUPREME COURT

Nor is this the only government agency Bethlehem Steel is defying today. This notorious company widely known for its utter lack of social responsibility, is flouting the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States in the same brazen manner it has long flouted the Federal Congress and the Federal Government.

On July 25, 1938, the Public Contracts Board, under the Walsh Healey Act, started hearings that finally determined that the minimum prevailing common labor wage rate in most of the steel industry was 62.5 cents an hour. The United States Department of Labor ruled that all steel firms in the areas where the Bethlehem Steel operates in eastern United States should pay this minimum rate in supplying government agencies with steel. Regardless of this ruling Bethlehem Steel continued to pay a six cent an hour lower wage rate at most of its properties, while the ruling was being appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States.

On April 29, 1940, the Supreme Court in effect upheld the 62.5 cents minimum wage rate ruling for the steel industry. But in spite of this ruling of the highest tribunal in the land Bethlehem Steel is not yet obeying the minimum wage ruling for government steel contracts. This is just another illegal case in Bethlehem Steel's long record of law violation.

Again today our country is facing another great emergency, perhaps even more serious than that of 1917-18. Yet Bethlehem Steel is not only defying our laws as it did 22 years ago, but is attempting to dictate to our government. With shameless un-American brazenness the management of Bethlehem Steel is insisting upon the acceptance of its own dictated terms by the United States Government before it will undertake to supply armor plate and other munitions required for the defense of our nation against the forces of dictatorship and tyranny.

THREAT TO DEMOCRACY

In the case of the Bethlehem Steel Company all democracy-loving Americans find the seeds of destruction of their treasured institutions. A democratic governmenet cannot tolerate within its borders a powerful and autonomous economic unit that defies the wishes of the majority of the people, as expressed through their Congress, administered by their Government, and interpreted by their Supreme Court. If Bethlehem Steel is permitted much longer to defy our democratically determined laws, our democracy will die and the American people will be enslaved by the forces of dictatorship.

The Bethlehem Steel workers and the American people, who will be called upon to pay the taxes out of which Bethlehem Steel has and will continue to derive tremendous profits for its services to the United States armed forces, are anxious to know whether this law-violating company can be made to obey our laws, or whether Bethlehem Steel constitutes in itself a dictatorial power and authority that far transcends that of our government.

On behalf of the Bethlehem Steel workers and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee I bring this serious matter to the attention of the Commission, as failure to cope with it promptly and effectively can only lead to a breakdown in our industrial defense program.

I am enclosing for your considered attention copies of resolutions and the program of action adopted by representatives of the Bethlehem Steel and shipyard workers in their conference of August 11, 1940, at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. I am also sending copies of this letter and the enclosure to the other members of the National Advisory Defense Commission.

Progress Report— 5 CIO Pacts In Cleveland

Cleveland, Aug. 24. — Here's the progress report of recent CIO gains in Cleveland's Steel Workers Organizing Committee, as announced by Wm. F. Donovan, SWOC district director.

Contracts have been signed with the Ledere Iron and Steel Company of Cleveland, Ohio, for one year, carrying many fine improvements and increases in wages from five to 10 cents per hour.

A contract has been signed with the Marquette Steel and Supply Company of Cleveland, Ohio, for one year, effecting increases in wages from five to seven and a half cents per hour.

Negotiations have been completed with the Sanymetal Products Company of Cleveland, Ohio, which we have under contract, for a vacation plan. The vacation plan agreed upon calls for one day's vacation for every year's service up to five years, and five years and over one week at the regular rate of pay.

Negotiations at the Biggs Boiler Company Works in Akron, Ohio, have been completed where we have a contract for adjustments in wages. We have effected increases in wages because of these negotiations ranging from two to 10 cents per hour.

Negotiations for wage adjustments with the Burger Iron Company in Akron, Ohio, which we have under contract have resulted in a two cent per hour general wage increase.

New Probe Of Bridges Denounced

Washington, Aug. 24.—Recommendation of a new investigation of Harry Bridges, CIO Longshoremens' leader and California CIO regional director, was denounced as a "completely unwarranted attack on the elected leader of thousands of trade unionists whose only 'crime' is organizing unorganized workers" in a statement made here by Bjorne Halling, secretary of the CIO Maritime Committee.

The recommendation came in a favorable report by the Senate Immigration Committee on a substitute bill to the original Allen measure calling for immediate deportation of Bridges, which passed the lower House on a wave of anti-labor hysteria some weeks ago.

"The Senate Immigration Committee, in refusing us a hearing and in voting to recommend the adoption of the substitute bill by the Senate, is making itself a party to the persecution of Harry Bridges because of his militant trade union activities," Halling said.

"There is no reason for further investigation of the so-called 'Bridges case'. Less than a year ago, Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard University Law School cleared Harry Bridges of all the charges made against him after eleven weeks of exhaustive hearings.

"The Attorney General in his letter to Senator Russell, Chairman of the Senate Immigration Committee, on the original Allen bill, said: 'This same alien has been accused, investigated, and tried at great length. and judgment has been rendered that he had not been proved guilty of the charges made against him. By this bill the United States would deny faith and credit to its own duly conducted legal proceedings.' This statement applies equally to the substitute bill."

Need a Cab? —Call CIO

New York, Aug. 24.—A CIO day-and-night taxicab service guaranteeing a union driver for union-minded men and women in the Greater New York area has been started by the Taxi Division of the Transport Workers Union.

General Organizer Warren G. Horie said that a special telephone has been installed solely to service the hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers desiring union taxicab drivers. The number is Circle 5-9693. There is no extra charge for this service. The CIO stand for union taxicabs is located at 882 Tenth avenue in front of the union's new headquarters.

The CIO taxi drivers division invites all progressive and labor people to use a CIO-driven taxicab for all occasions, social and business.

CIO Workers To Build Timber Camp

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 24.—CIO Construction Workers will build the new Camp No. 5 for the St. Paul-Tacoma Lumber Co., following a contract signed between the company and Local 39 of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, it was announced here by Paul Spaur, UCWOC organizer.

The contract brings one of the biggest logging camp jobs in recent months to the CIO, it was explained. The logging workers in the camp, which burned down about a month ago, are all members of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America.

CIO Steel Lodge Wins Recognition

Sydney, Nova Scotia, Aug. 24. — Differences between SWOC Lodge 1064 and the Dominion Steel Corporation concerning the conciliation board report were successfully ironed out following another meeting of the board with SWOC representatives and company officials.

Sole bargaining rights were won by the lodge, a satisfactory solution was reached on disputes over previous recommendations regarding overtime for seasonal workers and the date on which the 15 cents per shift bonus will become effective.

Protest Anti-CIO Use of Draft Threat

WATERBURY, Conn., Aug. 29.—The conscription bill hasn't passed yet—it's being held up by the resistance of organized labor and the rest of the common people of America—but already anti-union employers are using it as a way of intimidating workers who want to join a union of their own choice.

Employes of the Acme Wire Co. here saw this at first hand when a foreman told a member of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers: "If you don't get out of the union the company will see that you're drafted out."

John J. Driscoll, Mine, Mill Union representative, is demanding that the company post notices at once repudiating this attempt to use the conscription bill as an attempt to deprive workers of their right to organize in the CIO.

Labor Press Has Millions of Readers

Washington, Aug. 29. — The American labor press has about ten million readers, a directory published by the American Council on Public Affairs reveals. The directory was compiled under the sponsorship of the University of Wisconsin's Labor Research Library with the assistance of WPA workers at the university.

CIO Certified At Celluloid Co.

Washington.—Local 277, Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, was certified as sole collective bargaining agency at the Celluloid Corporation, Newark, New Jersey, as result of a Board election on August 7. The CIO local defeated the American Federation of Labor's claim to represent the workers.

Farm Co-Op Signs Pact

TOLEDO, July 27.—District 50 of the United Mine Workers has signed a contract with the Ohio Farm Bureau Co-Op Fertilizer plant at Monclova, near here, and won wage increases of 11c an hour.

The agreement was reached after two months of negotiations which brought into action all branches of the co-op in the state.

Other sections of the contract provide the 40-hour week, double time for Sundays and holidays.

Lewis Urges 'Re-Dedication' to Peace, Security

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 — Calling on labor to re-dedicate itself to the struggle for peace, security and an end to unemployment, Pres. John L. Lewis directed his Labor Day Message, 1940, to the problems facing the American people as a direct outgrowth of the war in Europe and the defense program in this country.

Lewis' statement made clear the fact that the CIO and all American labor will make its full contribution to the defense of American institutions, at the same time demanding protection for labor's hard-won gains—not only as a matter of labor's right, but as the best defense against all threats to democracy.

Arms alone cannot defend our freedom, he warned. Unemployment, insecurity for the aged and the sick, lack of a chance for youth, and the other economic and social ills that trouble the nation cannot be cured by building cannon or conscripting the people.

"Only the kind of program set forth by the CIO can establish the most effective defense of democracy," he declared. "The strength of such a program increases with the growth of the CIO, the growth that is steady and unceasing."

Reach Accord On Ft. Worth, Okla. City Armour NLRB Cases

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 29.—Armour and Company will post notices throughout its Oklahoma City and Ft. Worth, Tex., plants stating that employes are free to join the CIO Packinghouse Workers without interference or intimidation by the management, it was announced here.

A signed stipulation entered into by the PWOC and Armour officials on the eve of Labor Board hearings in Oklahoma City calls for the notices to be posted on bulletin boards and in conspicuous places in all parts of both plants for a period of sixty days. The union, therefore, has dropped its charges of unfair labor practice against the company.

TEXT

"The Company will not interfere with the employes' rights to self-organization, to form, join or assist any labor organization. The employes shall have the right to bargain collectively, through representatives of their own choosing, with the Company and shall have the right to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection and the Company will not interfere with such rights.

"The Company will not interfere with, restrain or coerce the employes in the exercise of the rights guaranteed by the National Labor Relations Act which reads as follows:

"Employes shall have the right to self-organization to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection'.

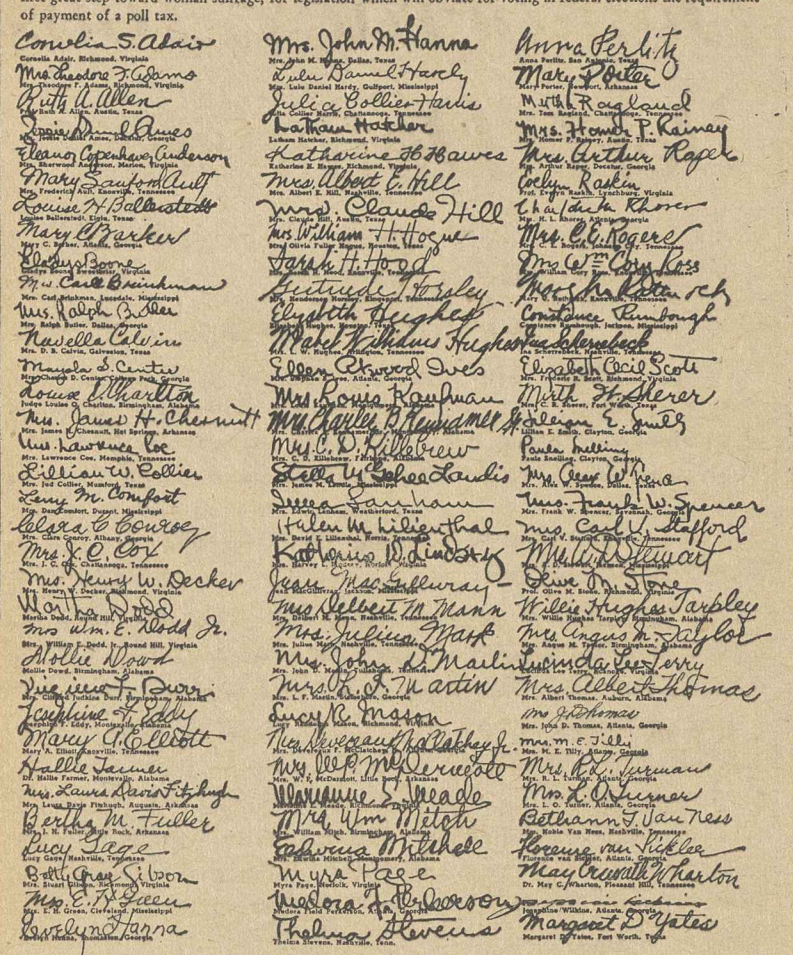
"Representatives designated or selected for the purpose of collective bargaining by the majority of the employes in a unit appropriate for such purposes shall be the exclusive representatives of all the employes in such unit for the purposes of collective bargaining in respect to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment; Provided that any individual employe or group of employes shall have the right at any time to present grievances to their employer'."



Kermit Fry, PWOC Director for District 13 reports that posting of the notices is expected to have a very good effect in the Armour plants making it possible to renew the organizing drive in both centers with prospects of speedy success.

Statement of One Hundred Southern Women

ON THE TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE NINETEENTH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

Twenty years ago today, the right to vote was secured to the women of this nation through the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. For years, America's women worked with devotion and courage toward this goal. We now realize that the victory was only partly won. We are gravely concerned that twenty years later countless thousands of women are still, in effect, disfranchised in those southern states which require payment of a poll tax before voting.

We, the undersigned women of these poll-taxed states, are proud of our states and seek through the removal of this barrier a fuller development of the democratic process. Therefore, we call on the Congress, on this anniversary of the first great step toward woman suffrage, for legislation which will obviate for voting in federal elections the requirement of payment of a poll tax.

PROTEST BAN: One hundred Southern women, prominent in civic and other progressive activities, signed this protest against the polltax that deprives millions of the right to vote. Protest marked 20th anniversary of the constitutional amendment giving women the vote.

Southern Women Protest Polltax On Vote Anniversary

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Twenty years ago this week the 19th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution was adopted, giving women the right to vote. Many newspapers carried editorials about the anniversary, describing the amendment as a great step forward for American democracy. None of them dwelt on the fact that American democracy in eight Southern states is still denied to millions of poor white and Negro workers and farmers, men and women alike, who cannot vote because they cannot pay the polltax.

One hundred Southern women, leaders in civic and other progressive groups in the eight polltax states, did not forget. Declaring themselves "deeply disturbed by the effects of polltaxes," they issued a statement of protest against disfranchisement of millions of fellow-citizens, at the same time commending Rep. Lee Geyer of Califronia for his efforts in introducing a repeal measure. The statement read:

District 50 Gaining In Jersey

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 29.—Substantial gains have been won by northern New Jersey workers in the last three months since District 50 of the United Mine Workers began a program of concentration in that area, union officers announced last week.

Among the major agreements concluded during the summer months were those with Asbestos, Limited of Millington, N. J., employing 200 workers, U. S. Gypsum in Jersey City, with 100 employes, American Rock Wool of South Plainfield and the Celotex Corp. of Metuchen. All of these brought wage increases, paid vacations, seniority rights.

Contracts were also renewed with the Spencer Kellogg Co. of Edgewater, covering 500 workers, the Dye Specialties Corp. of Jersey City, Clorox Chemical Co. and Charles Cooper Chemical Co.

The 15 existing locals in the area were consolidated through the creation of a Joint Board and a common treasury. All locals contribute to a joint strike and defense fund.

The organizing staff composed of R. W. Hanson, George Knott, David Elliot and Gerard Mullica, and an organizing committee of the Joint Board are pushing new organization in many other plants in the vicinity.

Ohio CIO Backs Lewis' Draft Stand

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 29.—Commending CIO President John L. Lewis "for his vigilance in opposing the conscription plan and other measures designed to involve us in war," the executive board of the Ohio CIO Council voted to acquaint all Ohio CIO unions with the danger of conscription, it was announced by Ted F. Silvey, Secretary-Treasurer.

Since "a conscript army is designed for aggression, and organized labor has become increasingly alarmed over the possibility of involvement in foreign wars, as illustrated in the conclusion of a military pact between the belligerent power, Canada, and the United States," it was voted to send appropriate resolutions to all Ohio Senators and Congressmen.

Labor and the Law

By JOSEPH KOVNER
Assistant Counsel, CIO

Every day brings new proof in support of the charges made by John L. Lewis that business is sabotaging national defense by refusing to take government orders unless its profits are guaranteed in black and white, free from taxes. At the hearings before the Senate Appropriations Committee on the latest bill appropriating nearly five billion more dollars, Admiral Furlong bluntly stated that business men were refusing to take government orders because it was less profitable than other business. A well known Washington business observer has said:

"Private industry is not to venture on arms plant expansion until it sees where the money is to come from, and what, exactly, are to be the rewards."

Like a highwayman, business is pointing two pistols at the head of the American people. With one, it wants to have all profit limitations removed. With the other it wants to be able to "amortize" the cost of the new plant and equipment.

It is simple to understand the issues involved in the demand of business to remove the profit limitations. It is not necessary to take much time to show that the eight per cent and 12 per cent profits now allowed business are absolutely reasonable, and that the complaints against such limitations are outrageous.

WHAT IS AMORTIZATION?

The amortization demand is a little more complicated, and it furnishes an easy way to set up a smoke screen and befuddle the ordinary person with a lot of technicalities. Just what does amortization mean? Ordinarily, amortization is simply a term used to describe the payment by a business for new plants and equipment in installments spread over a period of years. Obviously, if a business has to invest in a lot of new equipment, it cannot pay for it at once, and instead the cost if paid for out of the earning of the new facilities over a period of years as long as the facilities are capable of being used.

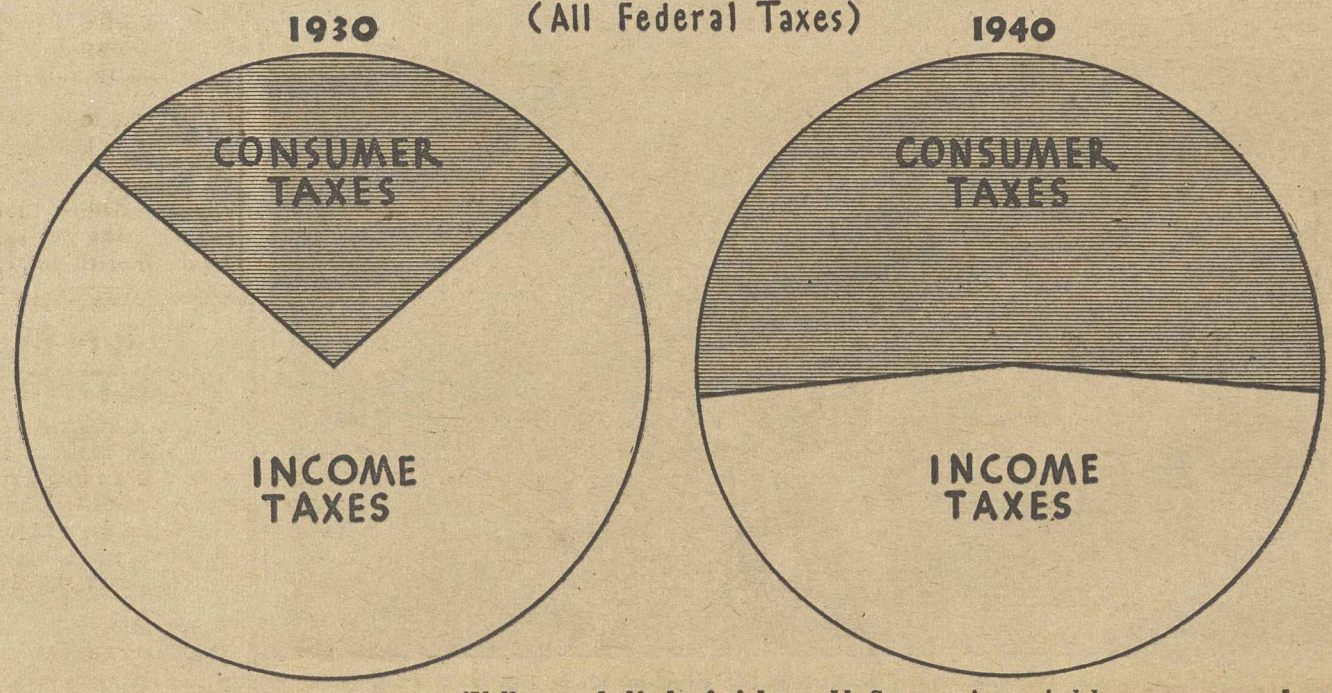
Ordinarily a business is entitled to deduct these installment payments from its income before paying taxes, provided they are spread out in regular installments. Now big business wants to use these ordinary rules for its special benefit. Big business is saying that it ought to be allowed to deduct the cost of any new expansion during this year and the next four years.

In other words, industry wants to be allowed to deduct 20 per cent of the cost of new cost of new plant and equipment for each of these five years from the profit it will make, before paying any taxes. The result is that in many cases there will simply not be any profits left that can be taxed after such a substantial item is deducted.

For example, suppose a firm puts in new facilities costing $5,000,000. In the next five years, it will be allowed to deduct $1,000,000 from its income before paying taxes. If it should earn $1,000,000 on government business in each year it won't pay one cent in taxes on those profits.

BUSINESS GETS THE GRAVY

This amortization argument covers up two important facts. In the first place, much of the cost of new plant and equipment will be financed by the government. The RFC will make the loans for the cost of the new facilities and the same amount will be included in the contract price which the government will pay.



In the second place, at the end of five years much of the new plant and equipment will still be good for continued use. The result is that business will be getting a lot of new plants and equipment, paid for by the public and free from any taxes. Coupled with the removal of any limitations whatsoever on profits. It means that business is just being given a Roman holiday at the expense of the public at a time of great national need.

To put it another way, the government takes all the risks and pays all the costs, while business takes no risk and gets all the profits.

There are already signs that the attempt to put this over on the American people may not succeed. Senators and Congressmen are awakening to the challenge of the CIO and other progressive groups and are demanding that business surrender its exorbitant demands and be compelled to produce for the national defense upon fair and reasonable terms.

Labor Day—Day Of Re-Dedication

Hosiery Workers Meet

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 29.—Over 45 representative CIO hosiery workers from the Carolinas' District, convening over the week-end in the Third Annual Hosiery Workers' Institute at the Southern Summer School for Workers, laid plans for an intensive organizational drive among unorganized mills in this area.

Henry I. Adams, Carolinas' Director of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, presided over the two-day Institute and Lawrence Rogin, of Philadelphia, educational director of the Federation, conducted discussions on the problems of the hosiery industry and how the union is trying to deal with these problems through organization.

The hosiery workers came from Durham, Charlotte, High Point, Greensboro and Asheboro, N. C., and Rock Hill, S. C., to participate in special entertainment and to prepare for increased union activity among the Southern hosiery workers.

65 Hour Week Brings CCC Aides to CIO

Washington, Aug. 29.—Civilian educational advisers in CCC camps in the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania have appealed to the United Federal Workers of America, CIO, following an order issued by Major General Parsons, Commanding Officer of the Third Corps Area, establishing a minimum working day of 12½ hours and a 65½-hour week.

The order was issued July 19th, but because of the scattered localities of CCC camps in the area, objection to its provisions was not crystallized until this week when the instructors, some of them travelling hundreds of miles, met with UFWA leaders here and mapped out a campaign to get the order withdrawn.

UFWA National Organizer Henry Rhine conferred on Monday with Charles Taylor, assistant director of CCC and was told that CCC authorities were protesting General Parsons' order.

CCC instructors are hired by the Office of Education; they are paid by the CCC and are under War Department supervision.

"This order is noteworthy for its utter lack of understanding of employe relations and its disregard for employe morale and cooperation. If it is permitted to stand unmodified, it cannot help but cloud hopes of sound employer-employe relationships in the public service. Surely, no public-minded person could agree that such a backward measure is necessary."

First Labor Day Law Passed in 1887

Washington, Aug. 29. (FP).—It took just 36 years for the legislatures of the 48 states to declare Labor Day a legal holiday. First state to act was Oregon, which on Feb. 21, 1887, designated the first Saturday in June as Labor Day.

The western legislators adopted the idea only five years after it had first been advanced by Peter J. McGuire of New York. Six years later Oregon amended its law to set aside the first Monday in September.

Next to act were Colorado (March 15, 1887), New Jersey (April 8, 1887), New York (May 7, 1887), Massachusetts (May 11, 1887), Connecticut (March 20, 1889), Nebraska (March 29, 1889), Pensylvania (April 25, 1889), Iowa (April 5, 1900) and Ohio (April 29, 1890).

When McGuire died in 1906, the legislatures of 39 states had written his idea into law. Arizona took action on April 29, 1912, two months after admission to the Union. The last three states to legislate on Labor Day were Nevada (March 11, 1913), New Mexico (March 15, 1915) and Wyoming (Feb. 8, 1923).

Labor Day Conceived In 1882

Washington, Aug. 29. (FP).—The founder of Labor Day was Peter J. McGuire, a young Irish carpenter. A native of New York, McGuire early became an important figure in the boiling labor movement of the 1870's. He was an effective speaker, an able organizer and a well-educated man—thanks to his own efforts to acquire schooling.

Elected as an American delegate to the Intl. Workingmen's Congress in 1881 in Zurich, he stayed in Europe long enough to make a thorough study of labor conditions. Upon his return he presented a new idea to the Central Labor Union of New York: a special holiday for workers on one day of the year.

It was on May 6, 1882, that McGuire offered his proposal. He was only 29 years old. Adopted by the central body, the plan was carried out on Sept. 5, 1882, with a parade up lower Broadway past a reviewing stand on Union Square.

Rapidly the idea of Labor Day spread to other cities, and within a few years state legislatures moved to make the day a legal holiday.

McGuire died in 1906, penniless, after 14 years' service as an AFL officer and 20 years as general secretary of the carpenters' union. He is buried in Camden, N. J.

Lewis Calls Democracy, Jobs Best Defense

By John L. Lewis

Let Labor Day 1940 be the occasion for a re-dedication of American labor to its task of creating in this nation the kind of a democracy that no alien philosophy or nation can conquer. The Congress of Industrial Organizations stands second to none in its determination to defend this nation and its democratic way of life, and labor will devote its energy without surcease to that end.

The very roots of effective defense of our nation lie in the loyalty of all its citizens. That loyalty must be grounded in the deep conviction that democracy is the best way of life.

It is the proud boast of the fascists that they have ended unemployment. Our best, our only answer to that boast must be that democracy too can end unemployment. It can, labor believes, end unemployment and insecurity without the destruction of human and civil rights, without the creation of an arms economy which, like a moloch, devours the youth and strength of the nation.

The enemies of labor seek in the guise of promoting national defense to resume their attacks on labor's rights. They would destroy our civil liberties. They would erode the right of collective bargaining. They would increase the hours of labor. They want to conscript into the army millions of our workers.

HOLD UP DEFENSE

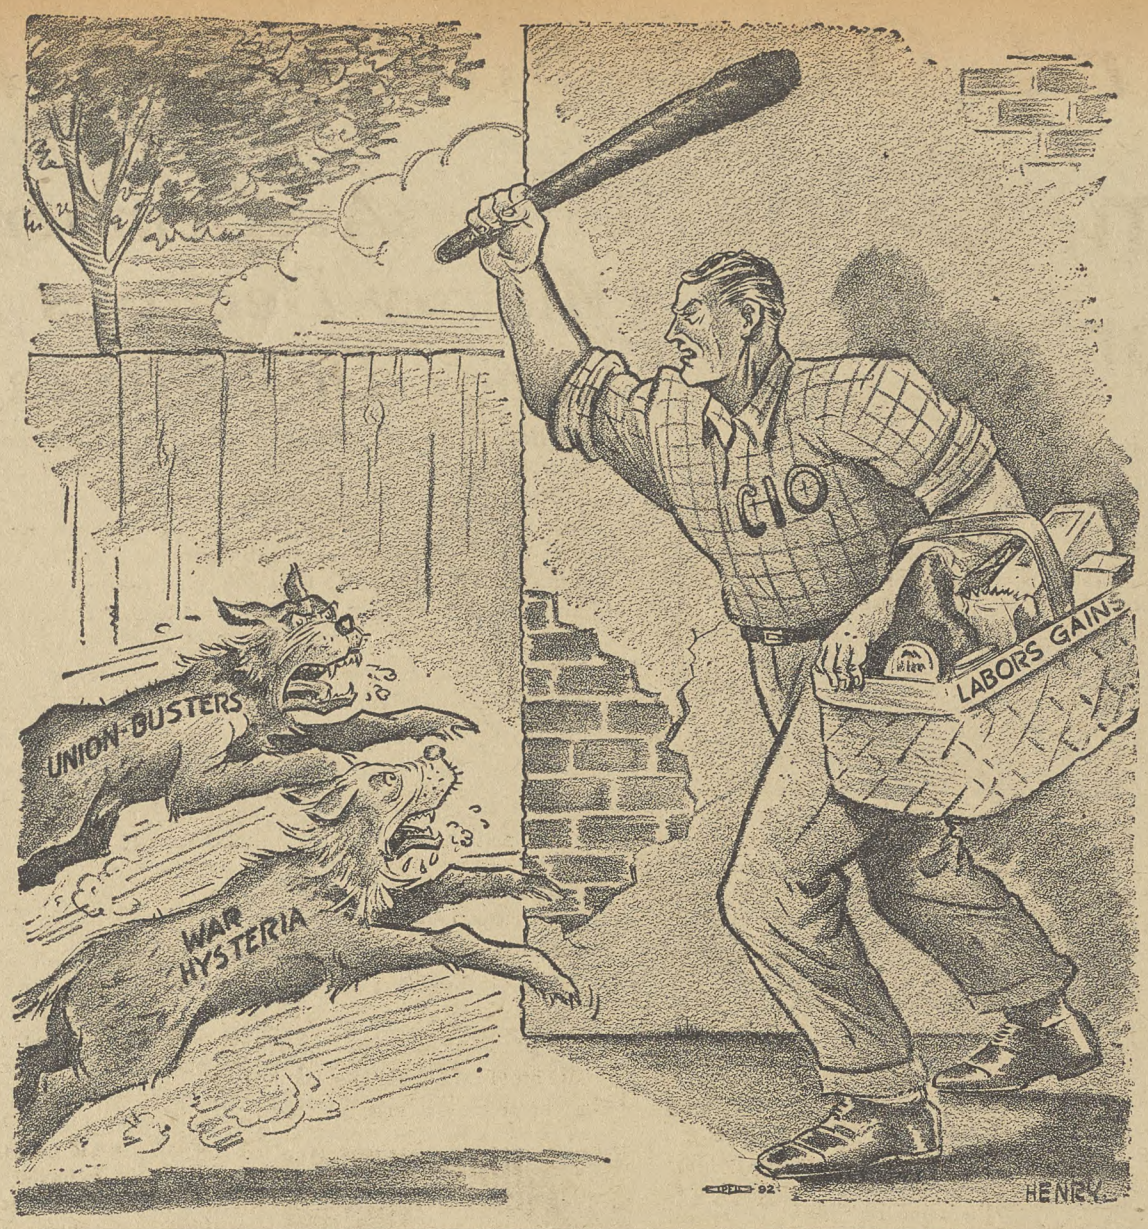
At the same time these enemies of labor join in the brazen attempt on the part of large industrial interests to hold up our national defense until they are guaranteed extensive profits free from proper taxation. Already our national defense production is lagging because some American manufacturers prefer 18 per cent profit from Great Britain to eight per cent profit from our own country. I do not believe the American people will long tolerate this condition.

Labor believes there is no conflict between effective national defense and labor's program of complete security and full employment. The productive resources of the nation are so great, both in manpower and in materials, that we can add the burden of national defense to our economy without in the least impairing its capacity to provide our people with things they need to live well.

STILL UNSOLVED

Let us have an end to unemployment. Arms alone will not do that. Let us wipe out insecurity of the aged. The building of cannon alone cannot do that. Let us provide opportunity for our youth. Conscription is not the answer to that.

Only the kind of program set forth by the CIO can establish the most effective defense of Democracy. The strength of such a program increases with the growth of the CIO, the growth that is steady and unceasing.



This year there are hundreds of thousands more members in the CIO than last year. Next year there will be a greater membership than that. And the only way that the things which the CIO stands for can be made certain is through the continued organization of the unorganized into industrial unions. The CIO pledges that this progress will not cease.

Labor Day 1940

The Congress of Industrial Organizations has grown greatly in stature and national importance since Labor Day 1939. A year of war in the world has speeded up the course of events in America. It has presented a challenge to American labor.

Two courses were open to the CIO. One was to take fright at the ominous thunderclouds, to run for cover, to submit to the hustling of powerful enemies, to be thankful for small mercies, to retreat all along the line on its social program.

The other course was to stand firm, to push organization vigorously, to allow no enemies to slip things over under cover of war hysteria, to promote labor's constructive demands vigorously, and to reassert the social validity of the CIO program.

The first course would have led to union disintegration, to the forfeiture of labor's rights. It would have meant that the CIO had failed to serve its country in a time of crisis.

In following the opposite course of advance, not retreat, the CIO during the past year has served labor well. Its unions have become steeled and strengthened. It has warded off a hundred attacks on the industrial and legislative fields, and pushed forward to new achievements.

But more than this, the CIO has become a beacon-light for millions of people outside its ranks in this year of crisis.

The vigorous Americanism with which it defends civil rights and democratic institutions as part of true national defense; its opposition to war-mongers and profiteers who would prey upon their country; its constant emphasis upon internal welfare and security as essential to the protection of the American people—all of this shows that progressive labor, through the CIO, is playing a truly patriotic and leading role.

Organizationally, the CIO has made many advances since Labor Day of a year ago. It has added hundreds of thousands of new members to its ranks and won many outstanding victories.

The record-breaking General Motors election was the greatest triumph at the polls. But dozens of other auto plant elections showed equally sweeping successes for the CIO. So did the voting at RCA, General Electric and Westinghouse and other electrical plants; at Armour's and many other big packinghouses; at shipyards, textile factories and scores of other shops.

The whole election trend has shown the CIO far, far ahead of the AFL and so-called independent unions in the past year.

The new contracts at hundreds of great steel mills, glass factories and throughout industry after industry have paid dividends to millions of CIO members in higher wages and many other improvements in their lot.

Legislatively, the CIO has held off the wolves and jackals that seek to prey upon the country in these critical days, by attacking labor and social laws, cutting relief and slashing at civil liberties.

It has kept before the country a legislative program for peace, security and jobs for all, while the war drums have been beating and while the powers-that-be have devoted their attention to everything else except solving the nation's domestic problems.

Thanks to the CIO, the Wagner Labor Act still remains unimpaired, despite the most vicious smearing campaigns and the most concentrated attacks of all of labor's foes and not a few of its false friends.

Today it is the CIO that is the forefront of the opposition to peacetime conscription. Supporting real national defense, the CIO is constantly on watch against profiteering saboteurs and all others who would endanger defense by their union-busting law violations.

The CIO has proved itself a great champion of the interests of labor and the whole American people. Strong in the loyalty of its millions of members, and in the inspiration it gives to all progressives and all true patriots, it faces the future on Labor Day 1940 with confidence and determination to carry on with the great work to which it has set its hand.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

HELEN OF TROY was supposed to have had a face that launched a thousand ships. Cleopatra was no slouch either. If her cute little nose had been an inch or so longer, a la Jimmy Durante, the whole history of the world would have been different.

According to the "human interest" school of historians, every war has been caused by the greed or ambition of the individual rulers of the day; by love affairs, especially triangles, or by personal quarrels.

If you think that this gossip-column type of historian has long since withered away under the searching gaze of those who probe for the real truth, you have another guess coming.

If old Homer lived today, his love-nest version of the causes of the Trojan war would be syndicated in hundreds of papers. For that matter, his Trojan horse story still rates first-page space. A more scientific and realistic version of how this and other wars really come to be, would be lucky to find space among "letters to the editor."

For here we are in the midst of another world war, and press and politicians are making millions believe stories as to what it is all about, that will be laughed at by the youngest school children not many years after it is all over.

War Causes

If history has taught one thing, it is that the real causes of most wars have had little to do with the slogans and catch-cries around which they were fought.

Hunger and other economic difficulties, commercial rivalries and the restless search of finance capital for new fields of exploitation have been the stuff of which wars are made. They have created the conditions which strutting kings, emperors and dictators, and greedy money-lords, have sought to turn to their personal or class advantage.

One year ago, just as the great European powers were beginning the present war, John L. Lewis in his Labor Day speech sought to apply the lessons of history to the America of today.

He put his finger on unemployment, insecurity and other economic disorders as the major danger for America. "Politically despairing and intellectually sterile statesmen," he said, turn to war as a way out from internal problems which they will not or cannot solve.

Labor's main demand, Lewis said, is "jobs for all Americans and freedom from foreign wars."

The past year has seen a continuous trend in the direction of militarism and war involvement; and a retreat from attempts to solve internal problems by peaceful and socially constructive means.

This trend has been slowed down only by the efforts of progressive labor and other liberal elements, who have seen the internal security and welfare of the American people as the main defense bulwark of this country's peace, prosperity and democratic institutions.

Labor's Foes

In the muddy waters of war propaganda, labor's enemies have found fine fishing. They have muddied the waters still further and pushed the war-ward trend, for very special selfish reasons of their own.

(1) To take advantage of labor's patriotism by rendering it submissive to a breaking-down of union conditions and social legislation, and to a denial of its legitimate demands.

(2) To take advantage of war hysteria to curtail civil liberties; to check union organization; and through conscription and other such measures to regiment the workers and make any kind of protest punishable.

(3) To reap large profits for themselves both by the above-mentioned subjugation of labor and through the special profit favors a war-minded government will grant to speed up production.

Great Task Ahead

In this setting, the labor movement, as represented by its vanguard, the CIO, has had during the past year to oppose moves toward war involvement; to emphasize continuously the primary importance of solving unemployment and other internal disorders; and specifically to resist the many attempts to break down union conditions, social legislation and civil liberties.

For these huge tasks, labor has had, and still has, to expand greatly its organizational strength; and, since it is constantly subjected to political attack, to develop its political consciousness.

The CIO has gained hundreds of thousands of new members since last Labor Day. It has won the most sweeping victories in the largest Labor Board elections ever held. New contracts have been won in hundreds of great plants, bringing countless new benefits to millions.

Politically the year has been one of turmoil and searching of hearts in labor's ranks. Hard lessons have been taught by the rush of events. Millions have been jolted out of the ruts of complacent or submissive thinking.

And throughout the year, CIO President Lewis has delivered a series of speeches of historic importance—all devoted to stirring up labor's thinking; to clarifying its ideas; to buttressing its independence; and to developing that political consciousness which will equip it to play its proper and leading role in days ahead.

The Record Of Labor's Year

CIO Program, Gains Aid Fight For Peace, Security

By C. W. Fowler

The 12 months since Labor Day 1939, have been a period of challenge to all workers, to all Americans. How has the CIO met that challenge? How has it met the issues that arose from the war in Europe, from the destruction of democracy and trade union rights in the belligerent countries, how has it met attacks on labor and democracy in this country?

FACING THE ISSUES

The CIO has met the challenge of a new world situation in the way set forth by the San Francisco convention of October, 1939—the way of organizing the unorganized, the way of bringing the message and the hope of industrial organization to the working men and women of America, of defending democratic rights through organization.

Since Labor Day, 1939, the CIO has organized hundreds of thousands of previously unorganized workers. It has won new contracts, signed up thousands of workers for better living and working conditions, brought improvements in hundreds of plants, made working and living conditions better in hundreds of communities. It has brought more money into the pockets of the people who make the wealth of America — has made life fuller and richer and freer for thousands of American working men and women.

CIO GAINS

Here are a few of the things the CIO has done since Labor Day, 1939:

Won every major collective bargaining election under the Wagner Act, including the Chrysler and General Motors polls, where more than 150,000 workers showed their preference for the CIO ways of organizing.

Renewed scores of contracts in basic industries, winning improvements in most, surrendering none of the gains made in past months, consolidating the CIO in steel, autos, electrical and manufacturing industries, building better conditions in every field where the CIO is active.

Extended the CIO to new areas, mostly notably in the construction and white collar and professional trades; moved into new fields — the latest, in the paper industry — built strong new industrial unions where organization at best was weak before, in places unknown.

Defended labor's gains against the onslaught of reactionary politicians in Congress, an onslaught backed by anti-labor employers and entrenched interests who seek private gains in labor's defeat.

Made clear the fact that organized labor is ready and anxious to defend democratic American institutions — but is steadfast in refusing to sacrifice labor's rights under the pressure of "national emergency." '

A FIGHTING RECORD

The record of the CIO since Labor Day, 1939, is a fighting one. The going for labor has not been easy. Starting with the struggle of reaction to emasculate the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the Wage Hour Act, and other social gains of the past few years, the forces of reaction tried their best during the past 12 months to tear down the fabric of social and progressive legislation.

These forces found allies in places where workers might expect to find labor's friends — chiefly in the leadership of the American Federation of Labor. The story of the fight to save the Wagner Act is the perfect illustration of this process. During the past year, the Wagner Act, labor's magna charta, has been effectively defended by only one major force in America — the CIO — and has been attacked by every anti-labor employer, by every chiselling corporation — and by William Green, president of the AFL.

Lewis showed that Green and Padway, his chief counsel, met with NAM attorneys — several times choosing the Union League Club for their meetings — to draw up the bill to amend the Act offered as the AFL measure.

THE PROGRAM OF THE CIO

The fight for the defense of the Wagner Act is not the only legislative achievement of the CIO during the past 12 months. The CIO program, presented to Congress when it convened in January of this year, outlined basic points of the demands that the working majority of the American people make on their elected representatives. Briefly, these points are:

1. "The U. S. must keep out of any involvement in foreign wars.

2. "The attention of this country and the energies of our government, industrial and labor leaders must be directed toward the immediate solving of the problem of unemployment.

3. "The democratic rights and institutions of this country must be preserved.

4. "There must be continued assurance and protection of the rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively as the cornerstone for the preservation and extension of any economic and social program."

The CIO has been fighting to put this program into effect. Its affiliated unions have made refeated demands that such a program be made the basis for a real national defense. Early in the year, at the 50th anniversary convention of the United Mine Workers of America, John L. Lewis served warning on politicians that labor's demands must be heard.

That blunt warning was followed up with statements equally pointed, with demands on Congress and on the political parties for the fulfillment of the CIO program as a program representing the needs and aspirations of the American people, with notice to the members of the CIO that their only hope of achieving their demands lay in organization.

SHADOW OF WAR

As labor's year moved on, the shadow of war lengthened and grew more menacing. War hysteria reached new heights in the nation's commercial press, was reflected in a sharper turn toward reaction on the part of Congress. The Smith ripper bill against the Wagner Act went through the lower House supported by Mr. Green of the AFL. Anti-alien legislation was rushed through for White House signature.

For the first time in history, Congress voted a bill directed against one individual — the bill to deport Harry Bridges, Australian born leader of thousands of California workers. Unemployment, health, housing, social legislation were forgotten — or where remembered, were subject to vicious attack.

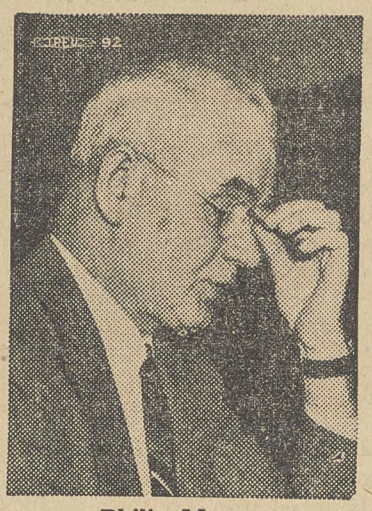
The CIO stands out today in its opposition to attacks on basic American rights. The fight against peacetime conscription, now at its height in Congress, is the most spectacular example of the CIO in action against a measure that John L. Lewis described as "a very definite departure from the basic principles of the Constitution of the U. S. and the Declaration of Independence" and as a threat to "basic civil liberties, including freedom of speech and freedom of press, freedom of individual initiative and enterprise."

Hundreds of CIO delegates, representing the millions of the CIO, have been coming to Washington to protest against this unAmerican, undemocratic proposal to militarize a peaceful nation. Thousands of letters, wires, resolutions have been pouring in on Congressmen and Senators against it.

Each of these CIO delegates and each of these messages reiterate the fact that American labor will defend democratic American institutions— but will defend them in the American way, will defend them by preserving American rights and American concepts of liberty.

Thousands of American workers, following the lead of John L. Lewis and the CIO, are asking if America must be defended at the cost of our country's historical freedom, are asking why viciously anti-labor, anti-democratic corporations should get rich rewards for their illegal activities in terms of profitable government contracts, freely handed out in the guise of "national defense."

The millions of the CIO face a new labor year with these questions uppermost in their minds — and with the determination to answer them in the truly democratic, truly American way — the way of organizing in strong, democratic industrial unions — the way of the CIO.



UnionsAreDemocracy, Murray Declares In Labor Day Message

(Following is the full text of the Labor Day message of Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and vice-president of the CIO.)

With more than four million workers in America mass production industries holding membership in the CIO, Labor Day, since the birth of the CIO in 1936, has taken on a new significance. Labor Day in 1940 finds millions of American workers, who never before belonged to a trade union, now active members of large well-built labor organizations.

Powerful new unions, such as the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, have sprung up to take their place along-side such organizations as the United Mine Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and other pioneers in the labor movement.

A new era of industrial relationship and collective bargaining is under way, based on recognition of the rights of labor. The CIO steel union, for instance, typical of this new era, in four years has established a record never before equalled in the labor movement.

STEEL ORGANIZED

Facing the gigantic task of organizing the nation's steel industry, the SWOC boldly set about the task of signing up hundreds of thousands of steel workers. In less than a year's time the great United States Steel Corp. signed a union contract. Other large steel firms quickly followed the lead of the "Big Steel," and today more than 75 per cent of the steel industry is operating under signed union contracts.

As a result of their own power gained through strong unions, the nation's workers are today enjoying a measure of economic security and freedom never before realized. Not only are they enjoying industrial democracy, but wage standards have been raised, hours of work reduced, and working conditions improved.

This new and powerful labor movement must now have a full consciousness of the responsibilities that go with the acquisition of power, and this responsibility must be inculcated in the minds of all the union members. Systematic organization must be pushed forward and the forces of both political and industrial democracy must be fortified by the extension of organization.

In these days of crises, when wars, unemployment, and poverty face us on all sides, strong unions can perform a patriotic service to our country. We can set ourselves as a bulwark against the subversive elements who are constantly at work in an attempt to undermine our democracy.

UNIONS ARE DEMOCRACY

Unionism is based on democracy. That is why the CIO is diligently seeking a solution to America's internal problems. That is why we are demanding a program that will wipe out unemployment — which is undoubtedly the greatest threat to American democracy.

The CIO and its millions of members, is solidly behind America's program of national defense. The nation has already been assured by CIO officials that the CIO and its membership is fully prepared to discharge their responsibilities in the present national emergency.

We are prepared to lend all possible cooperation in any undertaking to protect this nation and prepare for national defense. However, in such a national emergency there is the danger that certain reactionary elements will attempt to scuttle the social and economic gains won through hard struggles by labor over the past several years.

It is against such action that we must be unanimous. We must be forthright in demanding, at all times, the right of wage-earners to organize into unions of their own choosing; the right of union members to bargain collectively; the right of wage earners to freedom of speech, assembly, action and worship.

While we cannot know what the future holds for us, we must be determined that Labor Day next year, and years after, will find us not retreating. The CIO must be the spearhead in pressing even further to make America a better place in which to live, and a nation that will always hold up the light of democracy.

Railroad Workers Hit Conscription, Arms Profiteers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. — Organized railway workers, more than 1,000,000 strong, are on record with the CIO and with AFL unions in opposition to peacetime conscription, and they're asking the same questions about excess profits on arms and the sabotage of U. S. defense by profit-greedy corporations.

Their protest was made in letters from the Railway Labor Executive Assn., organization of leaders of U. S. railway unions, sent to Senators Johnson of Colorado and LaFollette of Wisconsin.

Both letters called attention to the sharp contrast between Congressional haste to conscript men and Congressional reluctance to press for any restrictions on profits for arms makers. The letters called attention to the fact that conscription offers a "serious menace to civil and economic liberty and tends to completely destroy real American democracy."

"It is unbelievable that Congress should conscript manpower and neglect entirely to conscript big industry now on sitdown strike," the Railway Association wrote to Sen. LaFollette.

PROFIT RACKETEERING

"All information is replete with information that big industry is again not only endeavoring to repeat the World War exaction of exorbitant profits but to outdistance that practice by now exceeding the unconscionable profit racketeering."

Organized railroad labor is "fully cognizant" of this attempted holdup of the U. S. by big industry, the Association added, and realizes the need for concerted labor effort to stop it. To this end, the Association adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, that a committee be appointed composed of one man from each of the four groups in connection with other organized labor groups for the purpose of formulating a program intended to meet the menace of the sitdown strike now being carried on by big business against our government and the people of this nation in refusing to cooperate in the present defense program until they are guaranteed excessive profits.

"Manpower has its income very materially reduced when loyalty to its government is demanded, still industry demands unconscionable profits and patriotism for this nation and its people is thrown into the discard pack fit only for the wolves preying unmercifully on those whose burden it is to fight for liberty and democracy."

Toward World Peace

Selby, Calif. — Members of Carquinez Local 51 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, believe the "European war for conquest and exploitation" is being used to "delay the realization of our aim of economic security and social justice for the American people."

A resolution adopted by the local says in part: "The correction of our own economic evils would be the greatest possible contribution to world peace and we could then hold forth the light of hope to warring nations."

Labor Bulwark Of Democracy, Haywood Says

Washington, Aug. 29.—"This Labor Day brings forcibly to the attention of the American people, workers particularly, that organized labor is a bulwark of democracy and assures perpetuation of American ideals and way of life," Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, said here in his Labor Day message.

"The present crisis prevailing in Europe makes it more than ever necessary that we should intensify our activities to bring more and more unorganized workers into the folds of the CIO; building up strong powerful unions assures maintenance of our civil liberties; establishment of a higher and securer life.

MAJOR ROLE

"CIO is playing a major role in shaping national policies and resisting attacks by forces of reaction. This influence and prestige must be increased by more and more organization. Labor is prepared to play its part in defending American freedom against attacks of any aggressor from without or within; it demands that the right to organize be accepted in fact, and its hard-won gains secured. Our duty to America, to this and future generations is to do our part individually and collectively. Organize!"

'Croppers Study Unionism

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 29.—Twenty or more sharecropper students started for their homes Sunday after two weeks of intensive training in unionism in a workers' school conducted under the sponsorship of the Southern Cotton States Council, affiliated to the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, CIO.

The school, which was inaugurated for the purpose of preparing southern sharecroppers for an intensive membership and servicing campaign soon to be started in the cotton states, included various phases of trade unionism as applied to agricultural workers, according to Harry Koger, school leader and District President of the UCAPAWA.

'SLAVERY'

"Unfair exploitation of southern sharecroppers and farm laborers is a dark blot on our southland," Koger said. "We believe that all honest people, both in the north and in the south, realize that our country can never attain the freedom guaranteed under its constitution as long as millions of its citzens, both white and Negro, are held to the virtual slavery which exists on many of our large plantations.

"The only way to remedy this condition is by organization. The only way to effectively organize is to train effective leadership. Hence our training school."

A close study of farm labor problems, the plantation system and the setting up and functioning of a model labor union, were among the subjects presented in the course. The student body was made up of UCAPAWA members, both Negro and white, from the states of Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, many of whom are local officials or leaders in their respective locals.

Springfield, Mass. — Local 137, United Furniture Workers, CIO, struck at the Berkshire Upholstery Co. plant here. The local said the strike was the most important development in its local drive. Two hundred workers walked out.

How Dust Hazards Were Reduced In One Industry

The following article on dust hazards and their control in stone drilling was prepared by the Quarry Workers International Union, CIO.

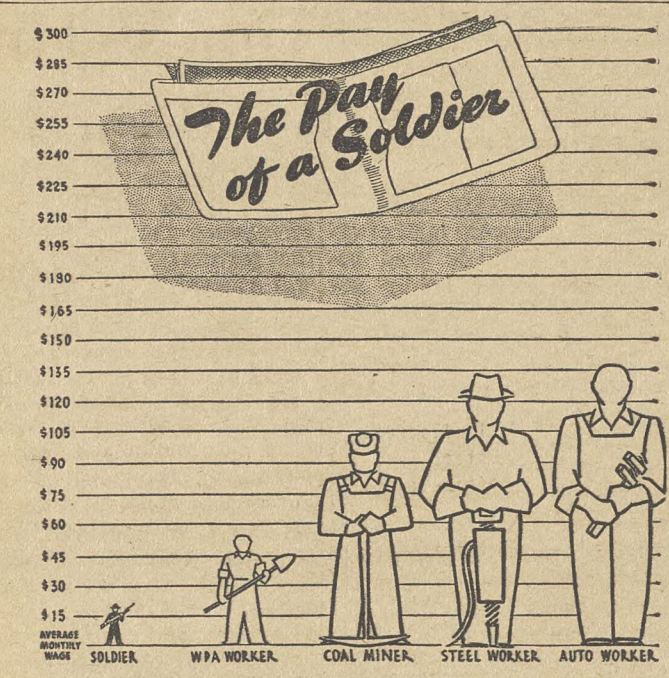
Have you ever noticed the small holes drilled in a curbstone and wondered how they were made and for what purpose?

In ancient times artisans discovered that rocks could be split by the use of wedges placed in natural cleavage cracks. In modern times science developed a method of creating such cracks artificially by the use of steel wedges properly located in a line of drilled hoes.

At first these holes were made by striking a steel drill with a hammer while slowly rotating it, a laborious, time-consuming process. Later, production demands speeded up the drilling process by supplementing pneumatically the output per man nearly fifty times.

ONE OBJECT

Modern labor saving devices, however, are created with only one object foremost, i. e., to increase man's output. Rarely has thought been given to controlling resulting health hazards so often created. Thus the introduction of pneumatically operated plug drills produced injurious dust in large quantities which was inhaled by workmen for many years before the seriousness of this practice was discovered. To further increase drilling speed, exhaust air from the drills was often directed near the hole resulting in intensifying the hazard and further shortening men's lives.

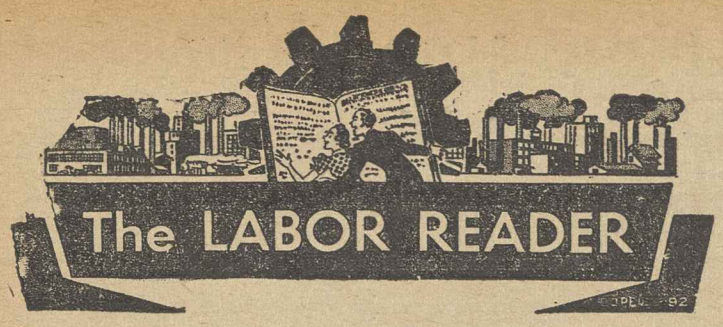


In the last few years men's working conditions have been improved in many ways and a new device recently developed can now be obtained to control this hazard which is present wherever holes are drilled in rock stone, or cement for any purpose either indoors or outside. This device consists of a small rubber hood through which the drill is inserted. This hood is attached to a source of suction by means of a small flexible rubber hose.

The dust created while drilling is thus effectively removed at its source, and since this hood covers the point and a portion of the shank of the drill, flying dust particles and chips can no longer escape to cut the forearms or cheeks of the drillers, or cloud their eye glasses.

HAZARDS CUT

Both a health and an accident hazard have been eliminated by effectively removing the dust, and, as is not often the case, production demands have been still further satisfied since an increase in the drilling speed and the number of holes per drill has resulted.



The accompanying illustrations show how a dust control system of the above type solved the dust problem in the yard of a large Barre, Vt., granite quarry. Thus inventive genius applied to a new goal of improving men's working conditions came to the rescue and completed the work first directed to the ever increasing demands of production upon labor.

THE LOAN RACKET

By C. W. FOWLER

The poor always pay more proportionately and get less value for the things they buy than the rich or the well-to-do. A basic economic fact governs this; the less money you have, the less you get for it. The poor are cheated more than the rich, for the same reason. Poverty makes you any racketeer's fair game, from the slum landlord down to the smallest chisellers that prey on poverty and distress.

One of the chief species of racketeer that lives by gouging underpaid workers is the small loans agent, the man that the poor must go to for quick cash when sickness or an accident or any financial crisis overwhelms an already inadequate income.

It's a profitable racket, too, as William Trufant Foster, author of "Loan Sharks and Their Victims," one of the Public Affairs Committee's recent pamphlets, relates. One practitioner, operating in Dallas, Tex., turned a $20 loan into a $1,053 profit. Another turned $1,300 capital into a monthly income of $600. Of 1,000 cases investigated in one state, the lowest profit was 120 per cent per year, the highest 1,131. This is how the financial wizard of Dallas did it, in Mr. Foster's words:

"One of the illegal lenders let him have $20 to meet the costs of hospital care and charged him $2.25 a week. That was in November, 1929. Every month after that until November, 1938, he renewed his note. By that time he had paid $1,053 for the use of $20, and he still owed the lending company more than he had borrowed. He had paid interest at the rate of 585 per cent a year."

CREDIT UNION A SOLUTION

Legislative curbs aren't much of a solution, Foster declares, since they can be easily evaded by fly-by-night lenders careful to avoid a fixed address and very watchful of the authorities. Fixing low rates by law simply drives out legitimate lenders, he writes, and encourages the loan-bootlegger who lives by cheating the borrower. Banks are not interested, since the cost of investigating clients is high and the amounts involved are low.

The best solution, Foster indicates, is the credit union, set up in factory or shop and functioning as a consumers' cooperative controlled by the people who work in the establishment. Started a few years ago, credit unions are already doing business equal to that of the loan shark, according to a 1939 study.

CIO Utility Workers Top Poll Again

Washington, Aug. 29. — Again the CIO Utility Workers won the highest number of votes in the second Labor Board election conducted among employes of the Consumers Power Company at Jackson, Michigan, failing by only 39 votes of winning a majority.

The vote was 1302 for the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee; 1020 for the AFL, and 357 for neither. With 2690 valid votes cast, the CIO needed 1346 to win, missing by 44 votes.

At the first election held in January 1939, the UWOC was also at the top of the list, winning 1164 to 1072 for the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, while 506 voted for neither.

A run-off election was then ordered by the NLRB between the CIO union and no union, but the AFL protested against being left off the ballot and threw the case into court where it was tied up for many months.

Subsequently the Supreme Court dismissed the proceedings and on March 4, 1940, the Labor Board again directed the holding of an election for or against the UWOC, but set the order aside later on the basis that its policy for holding run-off elections had changed, and ordered a new hearing.

Last month it ordered a new election to be held on the basis of the payroll previously used. The Board dismissed this contention and ordered the new election which was again won by the CIO union.

Officials of the CIO Utility Workers immediately asked the board to hold a run-off election as soon as possible, to determine the qualified union representative for the workers who have been left with no bargaining agency pending settlement of the case.

Pointing out that the CIO carried more votes in the second election than in the first, the officials expressed confidence that the UWOC would win the run-off easily.

Monopoly at Work— Even on the Junkpile

Toledo — (FP) — When you're out of work and scratched off the relief rolls and kicked outside the economic pale of civilized society, you can make a last stand in the junk business.

In this marginal field of enterprise the fag-ends of individual initiative can still pit their surviving strength against the rigors of a competitive world. But the old American way is being threatened by the growth of monopoly.

Several hundred semi-destitute Toledoans from the body-economic of their native land, have landed upon the municipal offal piles skirting the Maumee river. Within sight of the city's downtown skyscrapers they have built their own miniature state-within-a-state.

Cartons and old sheetiron were the materials for the series of squat little shacks facing the river, close by the dumps where the city deposits (fresh daily) heaps of rusty tinware, spoiling fruit, old crates and oddments of furniture.

Salvaging as much as possible, these virtuosos of the junk pile manage to squeeze out a sub-human existence. To all evidence they still breathe, digest food and react to variations in temperature.

CONCESSIONAIRES

Recently, however, some entrepreneurs among the junk-pickers managed, by paying city officials $10 a month, to obtain concession rights over the garbage. This means the right of first-pick—after which the others may continue to exercise their native initiative as much as they want to without seriously diminishing the haul of the monopolists.

I talked with one of these concessionaires as he waited for the next consignment to enrich his growing pile of old bottles, tin cans, wire and wooden boxes. He complained of the growing dishonesty of the shack dwellers living at the foot of the dump. These men he charged with disregarding the elementary rights of the concessionaires.

"They steal," he said, with bitterness. "They get away with old metal and bottles and hinges. I haven't figured a way to stop them yet. There's a lot of downright dishonesty among them!"

Visiting the shacktown citizens, I found that a strict code of personal honesty prevailed within their own boundaries. No one ever locked his door by day or night. Everyone left articles lying about outside, apparently unconcerned for their safety.

$2 A WEEK

But there was strong complaint about the shrewd fellows who paid city officials for first rights on the dumpheap and were consequently pushing the citizens of shacktown deeper into the mire of economic despondency.

One fellow looked back on the boom times when he managed to earn as much as $2 a week from the things that working Ohioans throw away. He must now look for his junk in the city and his earnings have been cut to a mere 75c a week. Thirty-five years in this country, he is not a citizen and has been off the relief rolls for two years.

Toledo city officials who recently inspected the shacktowns deplored their unsanitary condition but decided to let them stay. The forgotten men's homes, the officials decided, represent the honest fruit of genuine American initiative.

'Times' Hit By Board

Washington — (FP) —The New York Times, most influential newspaper of the United States, was ordered by the National Labor Relations Board on August 26 to stop violating the Wagner Act.

Concurring in a trial examiner's findings that the paper had tried to block unionization, a majority of the board ordered reinstatement with back pay for Grace Porter, fired in January, 1936, and Fred Jaeger, dismissed in July, 1937. Reinstatement to a position from which he had been transferred was ordered in the case of Isaac Gilbert. All three are active members of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO.

List of Stations For Lewis Labor Day Broadcast

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—CIO unions all over the nation are set to turn out their members and friends for the biggest Labor Day celebrations ever seen in labor history. Highlight of these meetings and demonstrations will be the nationwide radio speech of Pres. John L. Lewis, to be broadcast over the Blue Network of the Natl. Broadcasting Corp. from 4 to 4:30 P. M., Eastern Standard Time.

THE CIO NEWS reprints again the list of stations over which Pres. Lewis' speech is scheduled. CIO members and union officials are again asked to make sure that their local station carries the program.

CIO Auto Workers Protest New Wave Of Ford Terror

R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, declared today that the union will take steps for an "immediate show-down" with the Ford Motor Company on "its policy of ruthless discharge of union members in clear violation of the law."

Thomas and George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer of the union, flew to Washington for conferences with CIO leaders, at which the new developments in the Ford situation will be acted upon, Thomas said.

The Ford Company on August 20th laid off 74 skilled patternmakers, members of and supporters of the UAW-CIO. Thirty-seven of them had attended a UAW-CIO meeting a few days previous. A request for a conference sent by the union to Edsel Ford, president of the Company, went unanswered today at the expiration of a 24-hour deadline fixed by the union.

REJECTS BENNETT PROMISE

Harry H. Bennett, Ford spokesman, announced, following the union's protests, that the lay-offs will be "temporary."

Thomas said today that "the UAW-CIO has no faith in Bennett's assurances."

"Bennett's promise that the lay-offs will only be temporary," said Thomas, before leaving for Washington, "may be a sign that the Ford Co. realizes it can no longer get away with Nazi tactics in the United States. Whether his statement is the usual bad faith we have come to expect from Bennett remains to be seen.

"However, the UAW-CIO does not intend to wait upon the doubtful good will of Bennett and the Ford Company. We are determined that this company's ruthless firings shall be brought to a halt.

"Charges will be filed with the National Labor Relations Board without delay, but we do not intend that the discharged men shall be sacrificed while the Ford Motor Company resorts to the red tape which has stalled other labor board cases for two and three years.

"Decent labor relations require that there be an immediate showdown with the Ford Company on its policy of ruthless discharge of union members in clear violation of the law. In this move we shall employ the full resources of the UAW-CIO as well as the support of the entire CIO."

MANY JOIN CIO

Thomas said that the Ford River Rouge plant at Dearborn has taken on "the aspects of a concentration camp during the last few days." He said that "the Service Department has been augmented and its agents much in view throughout the plant."

Thomas added that "three times as many as were discharged by Ford on August 20th joined the union yesterday."

New Homes for Old:

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing. Contributions are received from a number of sources, and do not always reflect the views of the Committee.

Owners of slum shacks and tenements always opposed this program. When workers can move into a sunny, well-built USHA project at rents of $10 and $15 a month, there are less customers for slum housing. The slums become somewhat less profitable.

With the coming of the national defense program the banks and landlords with investments in slum property saw a golden opportunity to kill the USHA program. With the aid of Representative Gore of Tennessee they succeeded in keeping USHA legislation buried for many months in the House Banking and Currency Committee. When popular pressure forced the bill out, they succeeded in keeping it on ice in the House Rules Committee—where it still is.

The defense program brings visions of plenteous superprofits not only to manufacturers but also to the owners of homes for rent. The new defense orders to airplane factories, ship yards, metal plants and other industries usually means a great influx of workers from other towns.

But where are these workers going to live? In most of these towns, even before defense expansion, there was an acute housing shortage. Today, with new workers flocking in, this shortage is being intensified.

Boon to Landlords

This situation may be bad for the manufacturers, who are interested in an efficient working force, but it is a heaven-sent boon to the owners of rental housing. The shortage gives them an opportunity to raise rents immediately.

And they have wasted no time in taking advantage of this opportunity. In South Bend, Ind., for example, rundown homes that used to rent for $20 a month now rent for $40. In order to make room for workers who can pay more, relief clients are being evicted and moved out to a tent colony. In Newark, N. J., the rent problem is so bad already that the local housing authority has asked for an official investigation.

And so the USHA is being led to the guillotine. A concerted movement is under way in Washington to see that no more USHA projects are built. This campaign moves under a smokescreen of propaganda to the effect that the Public Buildings Administration or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation can do the job of defense housing better — or that private builders can do the job themselves. Whether or not the campaign is successful will be determined in the next week or so.

"Little Five" Negotiating New Pacts

Chicago, Aug. 29 — Reports from PWOC District Director Frank McCarty indicate that substantial progress has been made in contract negotiations with Chicago's "Little Five" packers, Miller & Hart, Roberts & Oake, Illinois Meat, Agar Packing and Provision Co. the P. Brennan Packing Co., and with the H. Levi Casing Co.

The PWOC is pressing for modifications in the expired contract which would liberalize vacation arrangements and clarify a number of other clauses in the old agreement. McCarty reports that the broad outlines of the new contract have been agreed upon and only details remain to be cleared up.

Expect Board Action on Wilson Phony

Chicago, Aug. 29 — In the expectation that NLRB Regional Director Patterson will shortly announce a date for formal hearings on charges that Wilson and Company packers supports a company union in its Chicago plant, a large and enthusiastic group of Wilson stewards met at PWOC headquarters last week to map out plans to consolidate the local and prepare for a fast moving campaign throughout the plant in connection with the hearings.

Dues payments have zoomed upward and August collections will far surpass those for July. Each steward has pledged to get one more worker in his department to act as a steward, thus doubling the number of active union leaders inside the plant.

Indiana Labor League Meets

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 29.— The new constitution adopted at the recent convention of Labor's Non-Partisan League of Indiana provides for the inclusion of all labor groups, as well as farmers, Negro, religious and youth organizations.

Henceforth the Indiana LNPL will be on an independent financial footing, since the new constitution places a one cent per capita tax on league members and affiliates. In the past, financial assistance was secured through donations.

Ora A. Gasaway, international board member of the United Mine Workers, was re-elected chairman; James Robb, CIO Regional Director, was again named vice president, and Larue Leonard, Educational Director of District 3 of the United Automobile Workers, is the new Executive Secretary and Treasurer.

The convention adopted resolutions opposing conscription, for improvements in unemployment compensation and old-age pension acts and for a state wage-hour bill and a "little Wagner Act."

Shoe Firm Declared Unfair

Gowanda, N. Y., Aug. 29.—All products of the Moench Tannery and the Brown Shoe Company, which owns the tannery, have been put on the unfair list by Local 44, International Fur & Leather Workers Union, because of the company's anti-labor attitude.

Attempts to bargain collectively with the firm, have been met with shut-downs, threats of moving the plant out of town, company unionism and other hostile action, a statement issued by the local's executive board declared.

"The company has refused since March, 1938, to rehire 200 of its former employes, most of whom have been in their employ for many years," the board said. "These workers wanted the right to belong to a union, to bargain collectively, and to protect their standard of living.

"This firm has shown its stubborn refusal to bargain collectively even after it was found guilty of unfair labor practices and refusal to bargain with the CIO in a recent decision handed down by the NLRB which gave Local 44 exclusive bargaining representation for the employes of the company.

"The Brown Shoe Co., owner of the Moench Tannery, makes shoes for men, women and children under trade names such as 'Brown-Built,' 'Buster Brown,' 'Air Step,' 'Roblee,' 'Central Shoes' and others. We urge that the entire CIO cooperate in placing these products on the unfair list and refuse to buy them."

Employers 'Freezing' Jobs, CIO Technicians Union Charges

New York, Aug. 29.—Employers of engineering and technical employes are engaged in a conspiracy to freeze workers to jobs and prevent their seeking employment with better wages and conditions, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians charged today. FAECT officials characterized this practice as "forced labor for highly trained employes whose skills are being mistreated in national defense production."

Engineers and draftsmen seeking employment find that certain firms refuse to hire men coming from the inside group of their competitors. An investigation instigated by FAECT reveals that officials of various large enginering concerns in New York City have agreed among themselves to carry out such a policy of freezing men to their jobs in order to prevent wage increases since they will not be able to leave their present jobs for more remunerative employment.

FAECT further stated that engineering firms are trying in this way to beat the gun on the proposed conscription bill which would also freeze all workers to their jobs, and is a practice exposed and condemned by the La Follette civil liberties investigation.

MushroomCo. Held Unfair

Denver, Col., Aug. 29 — A decision of the National Labor Relations Board that the Great Western Mushroom Co. at Adams County, Colorado, was guilty of unfair labor practices, was hailed by Local 300 of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, CIO, as a significant victory which extends the protection of the Wagner Act to thousands of mushroom workers.

The Board overruled the company's claim that its employes were agricultural laborers and therefore not under the jurisdiction of the Wagner Act.

The Board decision orders reinstatement with back pay for three discharged workers, ends the no-strike agreement which the company forced all workers to sign and requires the company to post notices that it will cease discouraging union membership.

Washington — In a nationwide drive for compliance with the wage-hour law 237 inspectors will start an immediate check-up at 5,000 plants, Wage-Hour Administrator Philip B. Fleming said last week. The industries concerned are furniture, leather goods, shoe, hosiery and woolen goods.

CIO Unions Show Strength In Big Labor Day Parades

Klan Union Defeated By CIO

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 7.—The Ku Klux Klan-dominated Independent Employes Association, headed by Grand Dragon Ben E. Adams, met a smashing defeat here on August 23 when the CIO Textile Workers Union carried the highest number of votes in an election at the Columbia Duck Mills.

The vote was TWUA, 534; Employes Association, 493; neither, 37; and challenged, 5.

The TWUA outdistanced the Klan controlled independent in spite of the fact that the Labor Board set July 29 as the payroll date from which the list of those eligible to vote was taken.

ADDED WORKERS

The CIO union had requested that the July 3 payroll be taken as the company hired more than 30 new workers between July 3 and July 29, and they were suspected of being hired to vote against the CIO.

Whether the TWUA will be certified as the bargaining agency or whether a run-off will be held is now up to the Labor Board. The total vote cast including the five challenged votes is 1069, meaning that the TWUA needed 535 to receive a majority, and received 534.

Four of the five challenged votes were contested by the CIO, and one by the independent.

$10 Weekly Wage Boost In Philly

Philadelphia, Sept. 7 — Wage increase of $10 and more a week, together with the closed shop, were won here today in negotiations concluded with J. B. Liebman & Co., largest credit department store of its kind in the country.

The 95 employes were represented in the contract discussions by Local 117, United Retail & Wholesale Employes, CIO.

In addition to the pay increase, the workers gained paid vacations, holidays and sick leave, the check-off, arbitration of disputes, and job security in the event of conscription.

709 Professors Rap Smith 'Ripper' Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Seven hundred and nine college and university professors today had sent Sen. Elbert Thomas of Utah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor a plea that the Smith Amendments to the Wagner Act be defeated.

Sent by the Committee for the Defense of the National Labor Relations Act, the communication carried the signatures of economists and political scientists from scores of colleges in nearly every state of the union.

Professor Colston E. Warne of Amherst College in Massachusetts, writing to the Senator on behalf of the committee, said that its criticism of the Smith bill was "carefully prepared by members . . . who are specialists in the field of industrial relations and labor law.

"It is our considered judgment that the Smith amendments, if adopted, would serve to disrupt sound industrial relations for years to come. We sincerely hope that H. R. 9195 will not pass," Prof. Warne declared.

A Warning

LOS ANGELES (FP)—Leonard E. Read, general manager of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, has warned local employers against any conscription bill provision that would require the rehiring of drafted men.

Pres. Lewis Asks U. S. Heed Labor Peace Demands

(See Story Page Three)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—CIO unions, augmented by thousands of new members in recent months, staged the largest Labor Day parades and meetings in recent years, reports here indicated.

In all parts of the country marching throngs, picnics, jamborees and meetings gave evidence of CIO union strength, both in industry and in political affairs.

Theme of most meetings was opposition to U. S. involvement in war and to peacetime conscription, and demands for preservation and extension of labor's recent hard-won gains.

In a radio speech broadcast over a nationwide network and relayed to many local meetings, Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO warned that national defense was being impaired by widespread unemployment, insecurity, ill health and low incomes. Calling for an adequate labor voice in national defense affairs, he pointed to dangers of dictatorship at home during periods of hysteria.

Speaking at a big rally in the TVA country near Chattanooga, Tenn., CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray denounced the "dollar patriotism" of many industrialists, and demanded steps be taken to curb huge war profits.

TYPICAL SCENE: Growing CIO forces throughout the country celebrated Labor Day with parades, picnics, celebrations surpassing any in recent years. Typical was Toledo, Ohio, where 20,000 unionists paraded, picnicked and listened to radio speech of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis. Speaker at the Toledo meeting was Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union, shown in inset.

Eight CIO Groups In Convention This Month

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Eight CIO affiliates—five international unions and three state councils—will be holding conventions in widely separated sections of the country during the rest of this month.

The Oil Workers Intl. Union will meet in Fort Worth, Texas, on Sept. 9; the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in Baltimore on Sept. 12; the Novelty & Plaything Workers in New York on Sept. 13; the United Rubber Workers in Detroit on Sept. 16; and the United Federal Workers in Washington on Sept. 17.

The Missouri State CIO Council will open its parley in Jefferson City on Sept. 16, while on Sept. 20 the New York CIO will convene in Rochester and the Washington State CIO in Olympia.

Shipyard Union Meets As Industry Booms

By SAM KRAMER

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 7.—With but seven more days to go, all arrangements are completed for the Sixth National Convention of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, which will open here at the Southern Hotel next Friday, September 13, and continue over the week-end.

With the Union at the peak of its strength, both in national prestige and in membership, this convention promises to be the greatest in its history, Pres. John Green and Sec.-Treas. Philip Van Gelder pointed out.

Over a hundred delegates are expected at the sessions of the convention. They will represent local unions from Maine to Florida, and from the Gulf and Pacific coasts. In addition, numerous visitors and friends of the organization have indicated that they will attend this great meeting, swelling the ranks of the shipyard workers present at the event.

FACE MAJOR PROBLEMS

Unlike other conventions, those held by the Industrial Union are not a round of gaiety, but usually days of long and diligent labor. With the union at the threshold of the greatest expansion ever seen by the shipbuilding industry, plans for the future must be drawn with the utmost concentration.

The convention will also adopt the union's policy on numerous and weighty problems, civic as well as economic. This is in line with the Industrial Union's traditional policy of internal democracy in the determination of policy.

THREE LOCALS HERE

In view of the great progress made by the IUMSWA, it is most appropriate that Baltimore was chosen this year's convention city. For the three local unions here, 28, 31 and 33, which will be hosts to the convention, have taken their place in the union's role of honor by their achievements. This progress was made chiefly in Bethlehem's huge Sparrows Point shipyard, and at the Maryland Drydock, a subsidiary of the Koppers Co.

It is interesting to note that in the wake of the IUMSWA's successful organization campaigns in the shipyards here, this city, long notorious as an open shop center, has had a renascence of union activity, and is well on its way to joining other strongholds of labor.

Plaything Union Meet To Hear of Progress

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Close to 200 delegates are expected to assemble in the Hotel McAlpin here for the first constitutional biennial convention of International Union Playthings and Novelty Workers of America. The convention will open on Friday, September 13 and will continue through Sunday, September 15.

CIO Regional Director Pete Moselle will officiate at the opening ceremonies before President Esposito will launch the convention which promises so much for the thousands of workers in the industry.

CIO Organization Director Allan Haywood, Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers, and Kathryn Lewis, daughter of the CIO president, are listed among the speakers to the convention, and guests will include J. R. Bell, Walter Smethurst, Michael Widman, Samuel Wolchok, Morris Muster and others.

This convention will mark two years of growth and progress during which time the number of local unions affiliated increased from 13 to 51 and the membership was more than tripled. Tremendous progress has also been made in the field of securing contractual relations with the employers.

Only eight local unions today have no relations with their employers, and these are locals recently organized and still in their infant stage. Local 112, Middletown, Ohio, has just received a favorable NLRB decision in its two-year battle against the company unions in the Sorg Paper Company, and negotiations with the firm are expected to begin soon.

PLAN BIG DRIVE

The keynote of the convention will be organization and preparations are now under way to launch a national drive in the paper and novelty industries immediately after the convention.

The General Executive Board, meeting on August 30 and September 1, authorized the appointment of four additional organizers for organization work in the paper converting industry.

Two of these posts were immediately filled when President Anthony Esposito appointed Charles Bridgewater of Philadelphia, and Burt J. Mason of Chicago to take the field.

OFFICE UNION MEETS: Third annual convention of the United Office & Professional Workers, held this week in Chicago, showed big organizing gains for the union in a half-dozen white collar occupations

White Collar Workers Report Gains For Union

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Unanimous and enthusiastic endorsement of the policies of the CIO and the leadership of John L. Lewis in national affairs, including emphatic opposition to the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill and an all-round fight for labor's rights and civil liberties, highlighted the Third Constitutional Convention of the United Office and Professional Workers of America CIO meeting here.

Two hundred delegates from 60 local unions met in general sessions and special panels for the insurance, art, social service, publishing, advertising and general clerical divisions of the UOPWA to plan vigorous campaigns for organization of the unorganized and the legislative needs of all white collar workers.

On the opening day President Lewis Merrall read a report based upon the General Executive Board appraisal of union achievements since the 1938 convention.

The GEB report listed 124 new written contracts for collective bargaining by local unions, and as many renewals, in addition to numerous informal collective bargaining arrangements. Solidity of membership in all divisions and achievements in legislative and educational campaigns were recorded by President Merrill who stood unopposed for reelection to office. In recognition of his services, New York locals presented him with a set of prints made by artists of Local 60.

LEWIS CHEERED

Delegates cheered CIO President John L. Lewis when he declared in a greeting to the convention that "organized workers in the CIO are a bulwark against anti-democracy. His Labor Day address was re-broadcast into the convention hall.

Haywood declared that the CIO is making more headway than ever before. He specified the victory in the Girdler "little steel" case, returning $7,000,000 in back pay to steel workers. "We are going to organize aviation workers, and bring Mr. Henry Ford to real Americanism through organization of his workers," he declared "As a member of the National Defense Labor Advisory Council, I have been ceaseless in demands for recognition of labor's rights and denial of contracts to violators of the Wagner Act," he said. "A recent official statement issued in Washington declares that employers gaining national defense contracts should live up to labor legislation. We demand that 'should' be changed to 'shall.'"

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, warned against attempts "to torpedo our liberties from within and without" in a Labor Day address which was read to the delegates by Byrl Whitney and broadcast by CBS.

The delegates were greeted by Chicago Regional CIO Director Ernest Pugh when they assembled on Saturday for the first session. Other speakers included President Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; President Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union; Editor Len De Caux of the CIO News; and Jack McMichael, chairman of the American Youth Congress, with which the UOPWA is affiliated.

Form Rayon Union Council

Washington, Sept. 7.—A National Advisory Council was set up at a meeting held here of presidents of the rayon locals of the Textile Workers Union of America.

Temporary officers named were James A. Dundon, Cumberland, Tenn., Celanese local, president; Lloyd Chapman, mayor of Nitro, W. Va., and officer of the Viscose local, vice president; and Florence Freeland, secretary.

The Council was formed to study and coordinate an industry wide survey of employment and conditions in rayon plants.

Indiana CIO Parley Flays Draft, War

GARY, Ind., Sept. 7.—Delegates representing more than 55,000 workers in industrial unions throughout the state attended the convention of the Indiana CIO Industrial Union Council which met here the last of August.

Officers elected to head the Council were: James Robb, CIO regional director, president; Thomas Davis, organizer for the United Construction Workers, vice-president; and John Bartee, United Automobile Workers, secretary-treasurer.

Highlight of the convention was the stand taken against conscription and the war. Declaring that labor must not be sacrificed to the war drive, a resolution was passed opposing the draft as a measure which would "brutalize and militarize" America.

CIO Secretary James B. Carey was given a rousing ovation when he declared in his speech that "labor's rights must not be over-ridden under the guise of a national emergency."

RESOLUTIONS

The convention endorsed President Roosevelt for a third term; called for a drive to organize the unorganized workers in Indiana; backed the CIO legislative program; opposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act; called for an adequate national defense program and asked that the Walsh-Healey Act be amended to bar concerns who do not comply with the NLRA from receiving contracts.

The constitution was amended to bar fascists, nazis and communists from holding office.

MEMBERS OF BOARD

Another amendment changed the number of vice-presidents from 11 to one, and provided for the election of 12 directors from the various unions represented in the Council. Those elected were:

John Oglesby, Steel Workers Organizing Committee; Carl Parker, United Automobile Workers; Walter Truman, American Federation of Hosiery Workers; Frank Stackhouse, United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers; Frank Napolitano, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Adam Mair, United Mine Workers; Walter Frisbie, Oil Workers International; William Abel, United Rubber Workers; Clyde Thomas, Farm Equipment Workers; G. B. Murphy, Packinghouse Workers; Donald Nail, Plaything, Toy & Novelty Workers; and Faye Trester, United Furniture Workers.

Electrical Union Reports 50,000 New Members

CLEVELAND, Sept. 7.—Cheered by reports of remarkable union progress during the past year, the sixth national convention of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers reelected Pres. James B. Carey and other officers by acclamation and made plans for continuing the union's rapid expansion.

Re-elected along with Carey were Julius Emspak, general secretary-treasurer, and James J. Matles, director of organization.

The delegates declared themselves vigorously in opposition to peacetime conscription and adopted a series of resolutions supporting the general CIO program and the leadership of John L. Lewis.

Visiting CIO leaders who addressed the convention included Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers and Pres. Michael J. Quill of the Transport Workers Union. Lewis and Pres. S. H. Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers were expected to speak before the convention adjourned.

Pres. JAMES B. CAREY

REPORT BIG GAINS

Organizational progress related in the report of the general officers, Carey, Emspak and Matles, included an influx of 50,000 new members during the year; an increase of 43% in dues-paying membership; the winning of 43 elections involving 52,507 workers; contracts with 424 establishments employing close to a quarter of a million employes; and improvements in conditions including millions of dollars in wage increases, paid vacations for 189,000 workers and many other benefits.

There was vigorous debate on the conscription issue. Both majority and minority committee reports opposed the Burke-Wadsworth bill. But the majority report added "or any other bill embodying the principles of conscription in time of peace"; while the minority report would have added opposition to "any form of peacetime conscription unless it is proven to the satisfaction of organized labor that an emergency exists." The majority report was finally adopted by a rollcall vote of 423 to 197.

TORY VICTORY

The resolution declared that peacetime conscription would be the "first major victory of the anti-democratic forces in the United States," involving a "very definite departure from the basic principles of the constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence."

Both Thomas and Quill assailed conscription in their speeches. Thomas declared that "the conscription bill was thought up by the monied interests in New York. They favor conscription of human lives while opposing any conscription of their property," he said.

The auto union president also attacked the granting of defense contracts to concerns that violate labor laws. "The owner of the Ford Motor Co.," Thomas said, "who has broken practically every law of the land, who sets himself up as something bigger than the United States government, is given government orders," Thomas said.

See Need For Labor Voice On Draft Boards

Washington, Sept. 7. — Fear that organized workers may suffer unduly if conscription plans carry through, unless labor is accorded full and adequate representation on some 6,500 projected community draft boards was expressed here today.

A glimpse of how the draft will operate was given Washington newspapermen recently by Major Lewis B. Hershey of the U. S. Army, who is Executive Secretary of the Joint Army and Navy Selective Service Committee. The committee has been studying draft techniques for several years.

Major Hershey indicated that employers will dominate the various community draft boards, which will shoulder much of the "burden and responsibility" for future conscription.

DESCRIBE METHODS

The Selective Service Committee, in a pamphlet entitled "American Selective Service," sheds some light on how the draft will be conducted. Draft registration cards will be turned over to the local boards, each one of which "then shuffles its cards haphazard and gives them serial numbers" for future drawings.

No very clear reply was given to a newspaperman's question as to what might happen if an employer-dominated local board were to "neglect" shuffling the cards of union leaders or others considered "trouble-makers" by anti-labor individuals.

BOARDS WORKING NOW?

That the 6,500 local boards are already selected, and in some cases even functioning quietly, was hinted this week by two Washington columnists, Robert Kintner and Joseph Alsop. The two writers have this to say:

"Although the War Department hesitates to discuss its efficiency, for conscription is not yet a law, it is generally known that each state has a well-developed plan, centering on local boards and heading up to the governor and adjutant-general. In fact, the Army is urging caution on state officials, who are advertising that their local boards have already been selected. . ."

Thousands March In Labor Day Parades

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—CIO unions this year staged the greatest Labor Day celebrations in the country's history.

Reports from cities and towns, large and small, all pointed to the same fact: that the unions of the CIO, at peak strength after a year of strenuous and successful organizing, turned out in thousands on the workers' own holiday.

Ten thousand participated in Cleveland's Labor Day parade, the first the Ohio city has seen in 24 years. At Toledo, the largest parade ever staged by the city's powerful Industrial Union Council marched through downtown streets, and wound up at a big Jamboree in a nearby amusement park.

Detroit, where the unified United Automobile Workers has marked its most successful year, CIO members from the auto industry and a score of others, participated in that city's parade.

MURRAY IN SOUTH

CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' stirring Labor Day speech was heard by millions. At many Labor Day outings his broadcast was piped through loudspeaker systems as the climax to local speaking programs. Vice-Pres. Philip Murray addressed several thousand CIO members in Tennessee; he spoke during the TVA celebration.

Predictions that labor's gains would be preserved were made by Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman, a member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, in a Labor Day evening radio interview. Other CIO officials addressed crowds in many parts of the nation.

MINNESOTA

One of the most spectacular Labor Day demonstrations was staged at Austin, Minn., strongly-organized meatpacking center which played host to the state's CIO council.

A parade, in which scores of floats were entered, took two hours to pass any one spot on the main street of that city of 20,000. The city council and the local chamber of commerce joined in welcoming the labor throng.

At St. Louis a parade of several thousand CIO members contained six bands of AFL musicians to provide the marching tunes. Paul Fuller, CIO regional director in Cincinnati, was the chief Labor Day speaker.

Connecticut's CIO held its celebration a week before Labor Day with a state-wide outing and field day in East Haven, with Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, acting as principal speaker.

WEST COAST

Labor Day parades were held in a number of West Coast cities. In Portland, Oreg., 4,000 CIO members marched, together with workers from AFL unions and the railway brotherhoods.

At San Francisco, a big parade started from the wharves along the Embarcadero, and, led by the longshoremen's union, marched through the city to the huge civic center, at which the 1939 national CIO convention was held.

In Oakland, across the bay, 15 musical floats, brass bands, drum corps and drill teams added color to the columns of marching thousands. Stockton's two-day celebration attracted workers from three counties. Other parades on the West Coast were held in Los Angeles and Seattle.

Throughout the midwest, sizable meetings and demonstrations were scheduled in numerous steel, auto, packing and manufacturing centers.

U. S. Drift to War Growing, Lewis Warns

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Within the past year the leaders of the nation, "too bankrupt of idea and energy to meet our domestic problems face to face" have moved further down the path to involvement in war, "an involvement which labor abhors," John L. Lewis warned in his Labor Day address to the nation, broadcast from the capital over a coast-to-coast radio network.

At the same time, he said, labor fully recognizes the dangers in the world situation, and is fully prepared to take its part in the front lines "against any who seek to attack the integrity of our nation."

Lewis' speech, heard by millions of workers at CIO Labor Day rallies throughout the country, contained sharp attacks on the conscription bill passed through the Senate and now in process through the lower House.

"Military conscription now would establish the principle in this country that the lives of our young men are less privileged than the profit rights of dollars," he declared. "The present program seems to call for the conscription of men while wealth retains its privileges."

HYSTERIA

He traced the current politicians' and newspaper publishers' war hysteria to a conspiracy to draw the people's attention away from the problems of unemployment, of security, of freedom of speech and assembly, and to a desire to slip over conscription under a cloud of high-pitched talk about the national emergency.

Labor is prepared to do its full part in defending the nation, he said, but it is also prepared to defend the kind of democracy that means better living and working conditions for the workers and the common people as more basic to the nation's welfare than the dividends of "profit-mad millionaires." "A defense program administered

Murray Scores 'Dollar Patriotism' of Business

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 7. — Thousands of CIO members in two Southern states greeted CIO Vice-President Philip Murray during a series of meetings in Birmingham, Ala., and a huge Labor Day celebration in Chattanooga.

The remarkable enthusiasm of the Southern union members led Murray to predict after the meetings that the South is going to be a strongly-organized segment of the CIO's goal for ten million members.

Speaking at banquets given in his honor by CIO members in Birmingham and Chattanooga, and at two large mass meetings in both cities, the CIO leader concentrated on vital economic problems facing the United States and the role labor is playing in the national defense program.

ASKS DEFENSE EFFORT

He scored certain large industrialists for their "dollar patriotism" and demanded that they join with labor in cooperating with the defense program of the United States.

Calling upon the government to stop profiteering by business at the expense of national safety, Murray declared that manufacturers "should not be allowed to stick a knife in America's back."

The position of these manufacturers "is most disheartening and sickening" and "is endangering the security of America," he said.

Any doubts as to the loyalty of American labor to American institutions were dispersed by Murray. He declared labor as a whole today is just as loyal to American institutions as it has ever been, and will go the limit in support of the Government in any emergency.

ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

While speaking at length on labor's role in the national defense program, Murray pointed out that there are many economic problems which constitute a serious menace to the United States.

"Unemployment is the outstanding problem facing the country which must be solved if our nation is to survive," he declared. "This country cannot support perpetually ten million idle able-bodied persons, who, with their dependents, represent 22 per cent of our population.

"In a war-maddened country, concentrated on national defense, the citizens are prone to forget grave internal problems such as unemployment.

"Production is between 95 and 99 per cent of the 1929 level, and

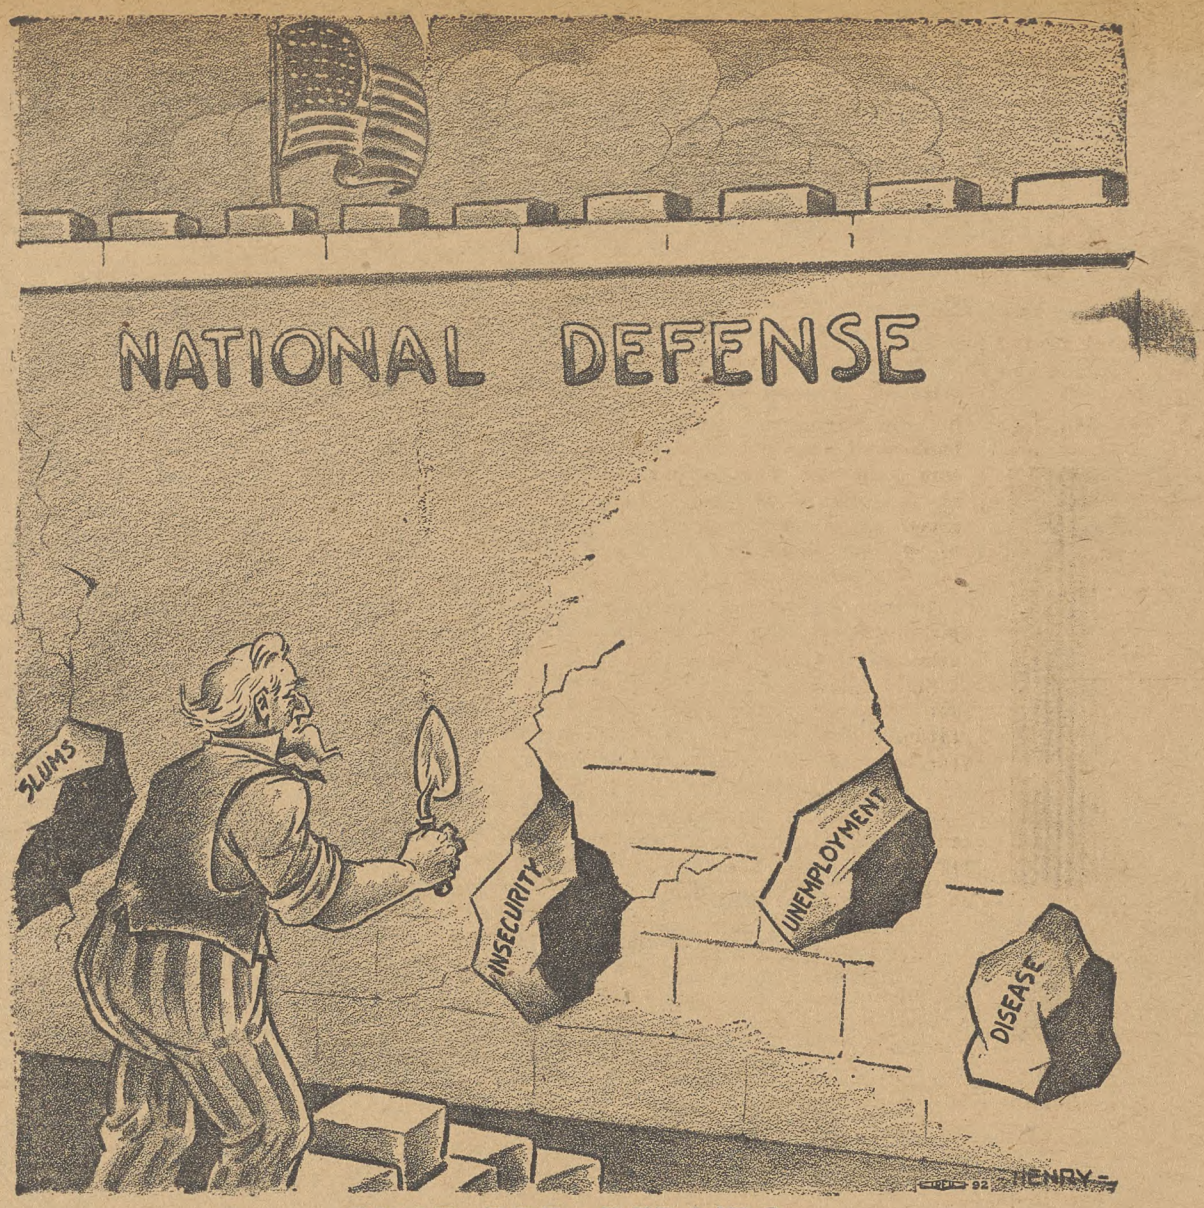
Auto Union Wins Poll By 4-1



Detroit, Sept. 7. — The United Automobile Workers won National Labor Relations Board election at the American Brakeblok Corp. plant, Detroit, Aug. 27, Regional Director Richard T. Leonard of the union announced today.

The vote was 142 for the UAW-CIO; no union, 38.

The company employs about 190 and makes brake linings for General Motors, Chrysler and other firms, Leonard said.

Rehire Agent

Boston, Sept. 7.—The John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company was ordered by the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission last week to reinstate with back pay, Agent Frank Curtin, at its Salem office fired for activity in the CIO Insurance Agents' Union.

TIME FOR REPAIRS

An Inspiring Record

Every CIO union member, and a lot of other people as well, should read, mark, learn and inwardly digest what the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers have done for themselves, for the CIO and for their country in the past year.

Here are some of the facts presented in the report of President James B. Carey, Secretary Julius Emspak and Organization Director James J. Matles to the union's sixth national convention:

More than 50,000 new members have joined the union during the year, and dues-paying membership has increased 43%.

The union has won 43 elections covering 52,507 workers. These include many big plants of RCA, General Electric and Westinghouse, whicn companies are now nearly completely organized.

It now has exclusive bargaining agreements in 424 establishments covering close to a quarter of a million workers.

New and renewed agreements have secured $3,046,336 in wage increases, not including tens of thousands of dollars secured by locals and shop committees.

More than half the contracts have either closed shop, union shop or preferential shop provisions.

Seniority rights and a 40-hour week or less are enjoyed by more than 95% of the workers covered by union contracts.

More than 78%, or 189,000 workers are under agreements that provide for paid vacations.

All of this and other progress has been achieved wtih a minimum of industrial disturbance. Only 2.9% of the employes covered by contract were involved in strikes or lockouts, of which there were fewer than in any previous year.

The whole makes up a remarkable record of a great CIO union. In benefiting hundreds of thousands of workers, the UERMWA has also benefited the country and set an inspiring example of organizing progress for the whole CIO.

What Unions Can Do

"Visitors to Austin, look around and see what a union can do for a city!" So read one of the banners carried in the big CIO Labor Day parade at Austin, Minn. Then followed some figures on the city's growth.

Visitors who followed the sound advice on the placard would have found in Austin a city of close to 20,000 population that is nearly 100% organized in the CIO—a city that has grown rapidly and where business is booming since the CIO came to town.

A big meat packing plant employing close to three thousand workers is the main industry. It is a 100 per cent union shop of the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, with a guaranteed weekly wage the year around averaging $32.

CIO organization has spread from the packing plant to stores, hotels, restaurants and all other employment until there is hardly a worker who does not enjoy the benefits of union conditions.

The present union conditions were not won without sharp struggle in many instances. But since the CIO won out, harmony has prevailed for the most part, and the local business and professional people have been among the first to benefit from the increased purchasing power of the workers.

The experience of Austin can be duplicated, in one form or another, in hundreds of industrial communities throughout the United States. Union organization, once accepted in good faith, is a powerful factor for business upturn and community welfare.

Reports from all over the country indicate that CIO Labor Day parades and other celebrations were bigger and better received this year than ever before.

They were bigger because more workers have been organized by the CIO. They were better received because the benefits the CIO has won for the workers have also benefited the towns in which they live.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IN THE early days of the CIO each union was the concern of all to an unusual degree. A campaign in one industry aroused the interest of unorganized workers in a dozen other surrounding industries.

The magic of the initials CIO and the fame of John L. Lewis brought applications to join the steel and auto union, for instance, from plants making everything under the sun, and from men and women of every occupation, as well as from steel and auto workers. They didn't think in terms of any particular union. They just wanted to join the CIO.

By the same token, each CIO union followed closely the progress of every other CIO union. There were not so many of them then, for one thing. And for another, a success for one was a boost for all in a very direct sense.

One of the penalties of the amazing growth of the CIO has been a weakening of this early sense of intimate association. Scores of powerful unions have grown up, have become self-supporting, have dug their roots deep. Each has assumed its distinct identity.

All are bound together by their common membership in the CIO. But the movement has become so huge and has expanded so widely that it becomes difficult to keep up with other branches than one's own.

A great election like that in General Motors, a big strike or other national news that makes headlines all over the country, will still occupy the attention of all CIO members as a matter of common CIO concern. But quieter and less publicized progress no longer is followed as closely as it should be outside of the industry or localities immediately concerned.

So it comes about that one of the greatest success stories of the CIO—the progress of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in the past year—has not received its need of recognition throughout the CIO, and still less in the general press.

CIO Electrical Workers

The delegates who assembled in Cleveland for the sixth convention of the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers were a quiet, orderly, self-confident and purposeful group.

There was youth and vigor in this organization led by one of the youngest union presidents, James B. Carey, who is also national secretary of the CIO. But at the same time there was a maturity and poise about the delegates that comes from knowing what you want—and having got it, in large part.

There were no great fireworks about this convention; no factional fights to attract a fight-hungry press. But in the report of the officers there was a record of union achievement that is almost epic in proportions.

That this record should almost seem to be taken for granted by the delegates and officers told a story in itself. They had set out seriously and planfully, step by step, without fuss and feathers, to organize some of the world's greatest corporations in one of the most modern mass-production industries.

And if they had now substantially achieved that goal, well, what about it?—that was what they set out to do!

Grounds for Confidence

All through the past year, the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers has been winning election after election, in RCA, General Electric, Westinghouse and other plants—each one of them involving thousands of workers.

Through the orderly processes of collective bargaining, with hardly a strike, this CIO union has won new contracts and contract renewals with hundreds of plants.

These contracts have brought millions of dollars in increased wages to hundreds of thousands of workers. Vacations with pay, seniority rights, shorter hours and countless other benefits have followed in the union's train.

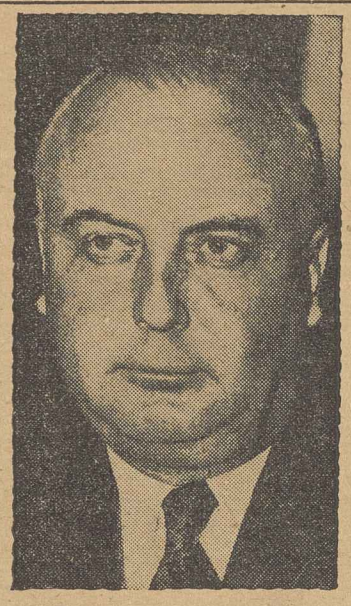
To the union all this has meant a huge increase in dues-paying membership, internal stability and a solid basis for continued growth. And to the membership it has brought that self-respecting independence and quiet confidence reflected in the whole behavior of the delegates assembled at the Cleveland convention.

Office Union

In Chicago meanwhile another important CIO union was meeting. It was the United Office & Professional Workers—a union with a potential membership of millions, and with a function of peculiar significance to the general labor movement.

The wide scope of this organization became evident when the several hundred delegates divided into panels for the separate consideration of each group's problems.

Insurance workers met in one hall; bank and brokerage employes in another; social service employes in yet another; commercial and fine art locals elsewhere. And then there were sessions for general clerical workers, book and magazine employes, advertising workers and others.



In all of these fields the UOPWA has a solid nucleus from which to expand. Nearly all its members are covered by contracts, and thousands of them by closed shop agreements. It is now negotiating a contract with one of the biggest insurance companies, the John Hancock.

Rep. Murdock, Foe Of Smith Bill, Heads For Senate

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept 7. — Utah's Democratic voters today had retired from the Senate one of that body's most outspoken reactionaries and nominated in his place one of Congress' staunchest supporters of organized labor.

On the basis of still incomplete returns, Rep. Abe Murdock had scored a 3-1 victory over veteran Sen. William H. King and a 2-1 majority in the three-man nomination contest.

Murdock, an ardent believer in New Deal labor and social legislation, received additional plaudits from labor at this session of Congress when he joined with Rep. Arthur Healey of Masachusetts to form a dissenting minority on the Smith Committee. The minority report tore into shreds the arguments of the Wagner Act foes and helped forestall destruction of the Act at this session.

REP. ABE MURDOCK
Nominated for U. S. Senate in Utah.

FOUGHT EXILE BILL

More recently he has taken a strong position against reactionary efforts to deport Harry Bridges, California CIO director. King, on the other hand, led Senate efforts, to exile Bridges and boasted he would defeat Murdock on that issue alone.

Workers in the state rallied to Murdock's cause, and helped contribute to his powerful majority, which surprised veteran political observers here. Labor's Non-Partisan League, the CIO, the railway brotherhoods and many AFL groups took an active part in his campaign.

Murdock's nomination constituted another political setback for AFL Pres. William Green. The federation boss has been calling for the defeat of all Congressmen who voted against the Smith bill.

Sen. King, rounding out four terms in the Upper House has consistently opposed labor and liberal legislation.

He voted against the wage-hour, housing and bituminous coal bills, abstained from voting on the Wagner Act in 1935, voted against most relief bills, opposed continuation of the civil liberties committee, fought repeal of the 18-month layoff provision in WPA, and supported the peacetime conscription bill while voting against limitation of National Guard Service to U. S. territory and possessions.

League Head Hails Vote

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.— Congratulations to Rep. Abe Murdock of Utah in his Senatorial nomination victory were wired today by John T. Jones, director of Labor's Non-Partisan League. The telegram:

"Congratulations on your nomination to the U. S. Senate. Labor prides itself on having the honor to support such an outstanding person as your good self."

Electrical Union Hits Draft

who would be the leader of the fifth columnists, I would say without any hesitation—Henry Ford."

Quill described the war as "a bankers' war." "We hold no brief for the madman of Berlin," he said, "but it was the bankers of America and Europe who made him. They encouraged this lunatic so they could smash labor. Those who profit by war should be made to pay for the instruments of war."

The officers' report revealed an amazing story of union progress since the organization's small beginnings a few years ago. Expansion and consolidation have been particularly marked in the past year.

BIG COMPANIES

Included in the union's 43 recent election victories are many big plants of General Electric, Westinghouse, RCA and the General Motors Electrical Division.

Nineteen major plants of General Electric are now covered by the union's national agreement, as a result of these elections, as compared with 10 at the time of the last convention. Some 15,700 additional employes are now covered.

"What remains to be organized in General Electric is fewer than 5,000 employes working in about two dozen small shops spread throughout the nation," the report states.

The CIO unions has now become exclusive bargaining agent in 19 Westinghouse plants, as compared with 14 a year ago. Only two major plants remain to be covered.

Four electrical manufacturing plants of General Motors, employing 15,000 workers, have been added to those on the union's exclusive bargaining list.

UNION GAINS

Besides $3,046,336 recently obtained in wage increases in new and renewed contracts, the union points to the other contract benefits for the quarter million workers covered, as follows:

"Seniority rights are enjoyed by 95.7% of the employes covered. The 40-hour week, or less, is in force for 95.2% of employes; 83.3% have their wages protected by minimum wage provisions for 40 cents per hour or more; 78.1% of the employes covered by contract enjoy agreements that provide for paid vacations; 92.8% of the employes have overtime provisions, and 73.5% get double pay for any work on Sundays or holidays."

The union's peaceful record is emphasized in the report on strike activities. "Our gains were made," the report says, "with only 2.9% of the total number of employes covered by contract being involved in strike or lockout. . . During the past year, we had fewer stoppages of work and fewer members involved in such stoppages than in any previous year."

solely by profit-mad millionaires will be a failure," he declared, in calling for fuller labor representation than now exists in the building of U. S. armaments.

NOT ARMS ALONE

More than arms are needed, if the American people are to defend the country against threats of attack, he pointed out. "Labor believes that national defense means the creation of a nation of strong, healthy people, dedicated to the belief that the democratic way is the best way of living.

"An army of four million conscripts cannot save our nation if the people doubt it is worth saving. Two million automatic rifles and 50,000 airplanes cannot make a nation strong whose heart is weak."

DECENT LIFE

The wealth of the U. S. is great enough, he declared, to produce both sufficient arms for real defense and to produce a decent life for every man, woman and child in the country—if it were properly used to bring about full production. Our industrial capacity and our labor power can easily produce a national income of 100 billions, he said, compared to the 60 billion level of the present time.

Lewis' speech also showed pride in the continued progress of the CIO. "Each day brings new information of workers organized, of unions created, of elections won," he said. "It is a high tribute to the common sense and intelligence of American workers that the campaign of vituperation and false attacks against the CIO has failed to dim their conviction that their needs will best be served by organization into industrial unions."

He ended, however, on a note of warning, telling his hearers again that "it is time for all Americans to become articulate and to demand consideration of American problems, if America as we know it is to be preserved."

yet we have ten million unemployed."

ASKS CONFERENCE

He predicted that unless the problem is solved there will be severe repercussions to this form of government.

As a possible solution to the unemployment problem, Murray repeated the CIO demand that a national conference of business, labor, agriculture and government leaders be "drafted like soldiers" by the government to study the problem and seek a solution.

Murray spoke at a banquet sponsored by CIO groups in Birmingham on Aug. 30, and at a mass meeting the following day. At a banquet on Sunday evening, Sept. 1, he was presented with a silver service set by members of the United Mine Workers in District 19.

AT TVA FETE

On Labor Day the mass meeting addressed by Murray was held at Chickamaugua Lake, just outside of Chattanooga. The Labor Day meeting was held in conjunction with the three-day celebration of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Appearing at the meetings with him were William Mitch, Southern CIO leader and regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; William Turnblazer, Tennessee CIO director and president of District 19, UMWA; Yelverton Cowherd, Alabama CIO director, and Niel R. Beddow, executive director of the SWOC.

JOHN L. LEWIS' LABOR DAY SPEECH:

Following are excerpts from the Labor Day 1940 speech of CIO President John L. Lewis, who spoke to the nation over a coast-to-coast network of the Natl. Broadcasting Co.

I am happy to extend greetings and my sincere good wishes to the hosts of labor who are assembled in countless gatherings throughout the country today.

Labor Day in 1940 finds labor and the things in which labor believes more in jeopardy than at any time during the history of the modern labor movement. The fears and tensions created by the wars in Europe have stirred to new effort the traditional enemies of labor. Some who have called themselves labor's friends are, through fear, scurrying to join the enemies of labor, hoping to gain for themselves a sort of dubious security.

I am glad to report that the Congress of Industrial Organizations and its affiliates are stronger than ever. I am cheered by that fact. I have just returned from a trip which took me to the far corner of the country. I was deeply impressed by the growing strength of the CIO, by the eagerness for organization on the part of those workers who have not yet had the opportunity to organize, and by the unanimity with which the common people of the country look to the CIO for leadership in these trying days.

Many New Members

The CIO has many hundreds of thousands of new members added to its ranks since last Labor Day. Each day brings new information of workers organized, of unions created, of elections won.

It is a high tribute to the common sense and intelligence of American workers that the campaign of vituperation and false attack against the CIO has failed to dim their conviction that their needs will best be served by organization into industrial unions.

With this new and growing strength, the CIO confidently offers to take its place in the defense of the nation. It has publicly and officially declared its desire to add all strength to sound efforts to preserve our democracy and our nation. Our people have worked diligently that American industrial workers should play their part in effective production.

There are men in high places in the nation today who do not want labor to participate in the national effort. They do not want labor to participate because they know that labor's voice will be raised against their efforts to pervert the idea of national defense to the service of private greed.

One cry these persons raise is the accusation that in the Republic of France, it was labor and labor's influence in the government which prevented the effective production of war material. This falsehood has been repeated in many places. It is used to hint or to say outright that similarly in this country labor is responsible, or will be responsible, for delays in national defense.

The Real Saboteurs

The circulation of this vicious falsehood should be stopped now. French labor was not responsible for France's failure to arm adequately, no matter what may be the wishful thinking of some millionaire ambassadors. The French financial powers and armament kings deliberately sabotaged French arms manufacture to destroy the gains of French organized workers, and to preserve their own profitable privileges.

With the connivance of the financial powers of Britain, they deliberately destroyed a government in France in which labor had a voice, heartlessly turning their nation and the working people of their nations into the hands of the French politicians who betrayed the nation to the Nazis. At the height of French preparation, only 49,000 workers were employed in the vital aircraft industry, as contrasted with the 200,000 men employed in German plants in similar production.

In Britain, too, certain arms manufacturers have refused to expand their facilities or to extend their efforts for the armament of Great Britain, because such action might destroy their easy profit. Until the Nazi army stood on the shores of the English Channel and leaders of labor were put in the Cabinet to speed the production of arms, the British financial powers and arms manufacturers pursued their leisurely way, uninterested in anything but the most effortless profit.

Today, in the United States, the financial powers and the arms manufacturers are beginning to pursue the same course. Their agents have been placed as the responsible representatives of government and the people have no check-up on them.

18% Profits

For months now, large and key industries of the nation have refused to accept national defense orders and to expand their manufacturing facilities—because it might not be profitable enough. They have demanded of this administration and of Congress that just and proper taxes be set aside. They have served notice that they require that new plants be given to them free. They have turned aside from national defense orders, upon which profit was limited to a meager eight per cent, that they might accept 18 per cent profit upon orders from Great Britain. Openly and boldly they have served notice upon the government that they do not intend to manufacture for national defense until their conditions are met.

Today the government of the United States continues to enrich by extensive government contracts many of the corporations who have most outrageously violated the law of the United States, the National Labor Relations Act. It is most incredible to me that this government should continue to provide aid and comfort to the very violators of the laws which it is under obligation to enforce.

It passes my understanding by what logic corporations who have boldly and openly violated the law of the United States continue to receive profitable national defense contracts, while labor's rights are trampled under foot.

Drift to War

Last year, on Labor Day, I warned our people that the nation was drifting toward war, because the nation's leadership, political and industrial, was too bankrupt of idea and energy to meet our domestic problems, face to face. Within the year, we have moved further down the same path, and now we stand closer to the brink of involvement in war, an involvement which labor abhors.

Labor recognizes that there are dangers abroad in the world, against which we must be prepared to defend ourselves. Let there be no doubt that American working men will be in the front lines against any who seek to attack the integrity of our nation.

We believe there is now no cause for hysteria, and that those who seek to create hysteria do it for no good purpose. We can arm ourselves and train ourselves properly without excitement and without chaos. The purpose of excitement is to put over on the American people things they would never accept after calm examination. The purpose of excitement is to withdraw the minds of the people from their overpowering domestic concerns and to get them to turn their faces abroad.

One of the purposes of creating hysteria is to pass a bill providing for peacetime military conscription. All labor, church people and the common people of the country are unified in opposition to such a measure. The proponents of such conscription know that only through the creation of hysteria could they guarantee the passage of the bill.

The auspices under which the proposals of peacetime military conscription have been raised are very doubtful. Those who initiated the bill, and who have introduced it in Congress, are persons whose record of opposition to measures for the welfare of the people generally is consistent. Peacetime conscription has become one of the major planks in the platform of reaction, standing beside calls for repeal of the Fair Labor Standards Act, for the scuttling of the National Labor Relations Act, for the destruction of our civil liberties.

Military conscription now would establish the principle in this country that the lives of our young men are less privileged than the profit rights of dollars. The present program seems to call for the conscription of men while wealth retains its privileges.

An End of Democracy

Organized labor knows better than any other group in the population how quickly peacetime military conscription would break down our civil liberties. It would immediately establish the principle of compulsion by government, and in effect make opposition to government policy a crime. That would be the beginning of the end of our democratic way of life.

There is further something sinister about the attempt to force conscription upon our nation, with no revelation of the purposes for which conscription is sought. What kind of a foreign policy, what kind of a military and naval policy demands an army of four million? The American people want to know whether the plans behind the conscript army provide for an expeditionary force.

More Than Arms

Labor believes that national defense is more than building great armories of airplanes, tanks and guns. Labor believes that national defense means the creation of a nation of strong, healthy and happy people, dedicated to the belief that the democratic way is the best way of living. An army of four million conscripts cannot save our nation if the people doubt whether it is worth saving. Two million automatic rifles and 50,000 airplanes cannot make a nation strong whose heart is weak.

This nation is the richest in the world, and it could be much richer if its people had their share of its riches. Last year, the nation produced a national income of sixty-nine billions of dollars. We could, with our unemployed labor and with our industrial capacity, produce at least one hundred billions of dollars. We could, in short, produce our six billion dollars worth of arms and still raise the national income twenty-five billions of dollars. And next year we could increase it. A program to accomplish this end is the kind of program labor envisages for real defense of the nation.

There are plenty of men and women in this nation who need, and can well use, the things that our idle men and plants and farms can produce. We must not forget that two-thirds of all our American families are receiving less than $1500 a year, and the average of these families of only $826. Four million families in these United States received less than $312 a year. That is only about one-half of what it costs the United States Army to keep a private in the Army.

It requires no stupendous intellect to understand that the total defense of our nation and its free institutions requires enthusiastic participation and cooperation of all segments of our population. Obviously, a defense program which ignores the rights of labor and fails to give its leaders adequate participation in the nation's defense councils, will be less than efficient, and will contribute to the increased jeopardy of the nation.

Labor Wants Voice

A defense program administered solely by profit-mad millionaires will be a failure. If our seat of government at Washington is to become a mecca for the avaricious in finance and industry, and if rapacity and greed in defense expenditure is to be unrestrained, then confidence will be struck down and despair and bitterness will become the portion of the people. It is time for Americans to cooperate, each with the other, upon a basis of good faith and common objectives. It is time for our statesmen and our government to recognize the rights of labor and the common people in the emergency which is here. It is time for the government to avail itself of the great strength of the democratic instrumentalities of our community life.

Labor demands adequate representation upon the policy making agencies of government. Labor demands adequate representation, and not on the basis that now exists, of one lonely representative of labor to 100 millionaires.

The ancient and puissant British Empire found it necessary to invoke and accept labor's aid, labor's policies and labor's statesmen. Why should the combined forces of wealth and politics in our own land cling to the pitiful belief that they can do any less?

Within the coming months and years, labor and the common people of the country, the aged, the youth, the Negroes, have several choices to make about their leadership. They must decide whether the two major political parties, constituted and directed and controlled as they are, can fulfill the nation's needs. These decisions will be made upon the basis of what our present political leaders do to meet the needs of our people.

Greatest Problem

Our greatest domestic problems remain unsolved. Unemployment, which is the greatest of the questions which confront us, still menaces our prosperity, our security and our happiness. For years, labor, farmers and others have unceasingly called for a national conference on this subject. No steps have been taken, and no plans have been made for the abatement of this monstrous evil. Those who believe that the making of guns will solve the question of national unemployment have little comprehension and smaller understanding of the play of the world's economic forces.

With the coming of peace between the warring nations will also come a new and terrible depression, of catastrophic proportions. We cannot wait until its arrival to lay plans and devise measures to meet it. It is time for Americans to take counsel. It is time for American statesmen to give some attention to their own nation and its own problems. It is time for all Americans to become articulate and to demand consideration of American problems, if America as we know it is to be preserved.

Minnesota, Iowa CIO Councils In Session

Austin, Minn., Sept. 7 — Pledging full support to the leadership of John L. Lewis, the third State CIO convention of Minnesota in Austin, Aug. 30, Sept. 1 declared for a "real defense program guaranteeing the fullest democracy to all our people, reducing unemployment, and securing decent wages and living standards for the producers."

The convention added its "voice to that of the CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods, churches and a vast majority of the American people who have denounced all conscription proposals at this time," and demanded defeat of the Burke-Wadsworth Bill in Congress.

Alarm was expressed on the placing of national defense in the hands of millionaire industrialists and its attendant insuring of high corporate profits and curbing of labor's rights.

In mapping a far reaching program on national, state and local issues, the convention called for:

1. Increased independent political action of labor in support of tried representatives of the people in the election campaign toward the end of furthering development of a third party nationally.

2. Increased farmer and labor cooperation along the lines begun by the Austin Packinghouse Workers.

3. Attention to the problem of the 10,000,000 unemployed in this country whose plight will not be alleviated by the arms program.

4. Saving the Wagner Act from the emasculating Smith amendments.

5. Condemnation of the Minnesota Labor Relations Act, as a weapon in the hands of employers.

To lead the Minnesota CIO in carrying through its program for the coming year, the convention elected Frank Ellis, PWOC Local 9, Austin, president, and Leonard Lageman, UERMWA Local 1139, Minneapolis, secretary-treasurer.

Sioux City, Ia., Sept. 7.—Poverty and unemployment are far more of a menace to America than European dictatorships, Michael Widman, assistant CIO national director told 200 delegates and visitors to the third annual convention of the Iowa-Nebraska Industrial Union Council which met here August 23-25.

Attacking conscription as un-American, Widman said that the CIO advocated voluntary enlistments for one year with an increase in pay to $30 a month.

Condemn Peacetime Draft

Later the convention adopted two resolutions on the national defense. One condemned peacetime conscription as opposed to democratic principles of government and called for voluntary one-year enlistments to "provide the framework for an adequate peacetime army."

The other attacked key defense manufacturers who refuse to take work on government defense contracts and asked that the U. S. "conscript the properties of all industrial sitdown strikers who have refused to conform to defense policies."

Copies of both resolutions were ordered sent to senators and representatives from Iowa and Nebraska.

Delegates also adopted an amendment to the constitution providing for a woman member-at-large on the executive board and elected Mrs. Jennie Shuck of Sioux City for the office.

Officers elected to head the two-state Council were: Lewis Clark of Cedar Rapids, president; Ben Henry, Des Moines, secretary-treasurer and the following vice presidents:

Unions Add to Protests On Draft as Vote Nears

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The drive to put over peacetime conscription—described by Pres. Lewis in his Labor Day speech as "one of the major planks in the platform of reaction"—moved into the House of Representatives from the Senate this week, again focusing the attention of the nation and bringing renewed protest from labor, from farm groups, from youth, from religious bodies, women's organizations, and the entire articulate American people.

In Washington, Pres. Lewis devoted a large section of his Labor Day broadcast speech to denunciation of the draft measure, analyzing it at length as a threat to democracy, to the labor movement, and to the peace of America, asking "what kind of a foreign policy, what kind of a military and naval policy demand an army of four million," and declaring that the American people "want to know whether the plans behind the conscript army provide for an expeditionary force."

The CIO's fifth largest union, the 250,000 strong Electrical and Radio Workers, passed a unanimous resolution condemning the bill at its convention in Cleveland.

STORM IN CONGRESS

A brief Congressional storm broke over the question of "drafting industry" as well as men, with a number of threats that industry might be treated sternly if it refused to cooperate in the arms program. The debate, however, had left the issue unsettled at the time of writing. Also unsettled was the question of taxes on excess profits from arms.

An estimated 2,000 delegates from labor unions, youth groups, farm organizations, etc., came into Washington to call on their Congressmen urging them to vote against the conscription bill. They added their protests to those that have been pouring in on Congress by mail and wire in the past few weeks that the bill has been under debate.

Chief speculation on possible changes in the bill as passed by the Senate centered on the question of age limits. In the Senate version, the ages for registration were set at from 21 to 31. (The original Burke bill set them at 18 to 64).

The version recommended by the House Military Affairs Committee raised the top limit to 45, which would require some 12,000,000 Americans to register for the draft and to prepare to leave their homes & families for compulsory military service.

Plan Council In Illinois

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 7—Invitations have been sent out by Ray Edmundson, CIO regional representative and state head of the United Mine Workers, for a conference of CIO union representatives in Springfield on Sept. 16, to consider organization of a state Industrial Union Council for Illinois.

Bata's U. S. Boss Here Illegally, Union Charges

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Officials of the United Shoe Workers who have been after various government agencies and congress to investigate the Nazi connections of the Bata Shoe Company since September of last year, have finally produced evidence themselves that is expected to force various government agencies into action.

On September 7, 1939, the United Shoe Workers of America, in a resolution sent to President Roosevelt and various other government officials said: "It is obvious there must be a working agreement between this company (Bata) and the Hitler government."

On June 1, 1940, the British government issued a blacklist of firms under their "trading with the enemy act," including Mr. Jan Bata and a large number of his affiliated companies.

ILLEGAL ENTRY

In addition, the United Shoe Workers presented documents to the Department of Justice which prove that John Hoza, who heads the factory at Belcamp, Maryland, entered the United States illegally. The documents proved that Hoza who had become a naturalized citizen in the 1920's had renounced his American citizenship during 1936 - 37 - 38 in the process of securing American patents on some shoe factory inventions.

The New Canadian Congress of Labor

Toronto, Canada, Sept. 7—September 9 will see the birth of the new Canadian Congress of Labor, merging the Canadian locals of the CIO with the national industrial unions now affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labor.

Three major objectives will be accompanied by this merger. The bitter nationalist division which has split the purely Canadian union movement from the international union movement will be ended. Craft unionism, which has dominated the Canadian labor scene through the AFL-controlled Trades and Labor Congress will be challenged by a unified, industrial union movement almost its equal in present membership and far greater in potential membership. An organizing center will be provided to Canadian workers with the money and determination necessary to any serious program of organizing the unorganized.

LONG OVERDUE

Such a move is long overdue. Canada is a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations. Her sister dominion, New Zealand, as a result of enabling legislation passed by a labor government, has almost 100 per cent organization of labor.

Great Britain, the mother country, faced with the growing importance of labor both politically and economically, sees trade union organization reaching over the 80%, even in face of invasion and war.

In the United States, due to CIO efforts within recent years, new millions have been added to the ranks of labor. Despite all these factors, less than 12 per cent of Canada's workers are organized and the entire Canadian union movement has nearly 6,000 more members than it had in 1919.

MANY FACTORS

It is difficult to blame any factor for this situation. Provincial rather than federal control over labor legislation has produced a muddled and divided social picture. Monopoly has an even greater hold upon Canadian industry than is the case in most national economies.

But these drawbacks are not new. They have been faced and defeated by workers in other lands. It must be admitted that Canadian labor has weakened itself by allowing numerous divisions to be created within its own ranks.

FOUR LABOR GROUPS

1. The Trades and Labor Congress, constitutionally dominated by the AFL, is a purely legislative body with no organizing authority granted by constitution, yet recognized as the "official" voice of labor within the dominion. At one time the Trades and Labor Congress united the overwhelming majority of Canadian labor. Today it is merely the largest single group in a maze of conflicting centers.

2. The All-Canadian Congress of Labor, one of the two groups which will launch the united Canadian Congress of Labor on Sept. 9, is an industrial union movement, purely Canadian in character. Its basis is the powerful Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes, an industrial union formed when the railway craft unions couldn't be bothered organizing the less-skilled railway workers.

This group was later expelled from the Trades and Labor Congress when it refused to turn its membership over to the several different railway crafts after they became envious of the income possibilities it represented. Around it have gathered smaller Canadian unions which have favored industrial form of organization but have resented the idea of American control over Canadian policies.

3. The Catholic unions, comprised of Quebec workers, was organized largely in 1928 when profit-hungry interests decided to transform the previously agricultural Quebec province into a source of cheap labor.

A French-Canadian Catholic membership, rabidly nationalist yet eager for organization, they have been denied affiliation to the Trades & Labor Congress because of their duplication of AFL crafts which have never bothered to organize the Quebec area outside of a few isolated crafts.

CIO GROWING

4. Last, and most recent are the Canadian locals of CIO unions, (forced out of the Trades and Labor Congress upon the orders of the AFL) an industrial union movement, organized in international unions and the most rapidly growing single group of unions in the country.

The Canadian CIO membership, forced out of the Trades Congress against their will and anxious to avoid further duplication, instructed their leaders to seek out every possible avenue for the establishment of Canadian labor unity.

It was quite apparent that the chief difficulty in Canada was the conflict between international organization, which was obviously stronger, and national freedom of action which was lost as the price of solidarity with the American movements.

The Canadian CIO leaders, therefore, approached the CIO national leaders and explained the Canadian situation. They asked for Canadian autonomy over the matters of organizational strategy, affiliations and a legislative program. More far-sighted than the AFL, the CIO granted such autonomy. The international structure would remain in each union, but when it came to collective Canadian action there would be complete self-government.

ENDS BARRIER

Thus fell the barrier to unity. The leaders of the ACCL had been asked by their membership to find a road toward unity of labor. Both groups believed in the industrial form of organization. Now that the CIO had Canadian autonomy, the purely nationalist arguments receded into the background. The time had come when industrial unionism could unite in a drive to organize the unorganized. CIO and ACCL leaders met jointly to discuss these possibilities.

The government, faced with the bewilderingly complex problems of modern war, has openly advocated union organization as the best guarantee of employer-employe cooperation in the grim crisis which is upon us. The new Canadian Congress of Labor hopes to add to these ideal objective conditions the activating factor of a unified Canadian industrial union movement which will have both the money and determination necessary to take full advantage of the opportunity.

A BIG JOB

Canadian labor is hopeful that the far-sighted autonomy decision of the CIO and the broadminded decision of the ACCL to forget past differences will combine to produce a new era of security and advancement for the long-deserted majority of industrial workers of Canada.

Probe AFL Thuggery In St. Louis

Attack Menaces Low-Rent Housing Program

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Efforts by AFL unions and building material dealers to prevent erection of pre-fabricated houses and installation of pre-shrunk millwork in the East St. Louis and Centralia districts of Illinois are being closely watched by special United States Attorneys working out of the anti-trust division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in St. Louis.

The most recent attempt by AFL groups to discourage importation of pre-fabricated houses occurred Aug. 23 at Belle-ville, a community adjoining East St. Louis, where a special Federal grand jury is preparing for its third investigation of the situation since being impanneled last June.

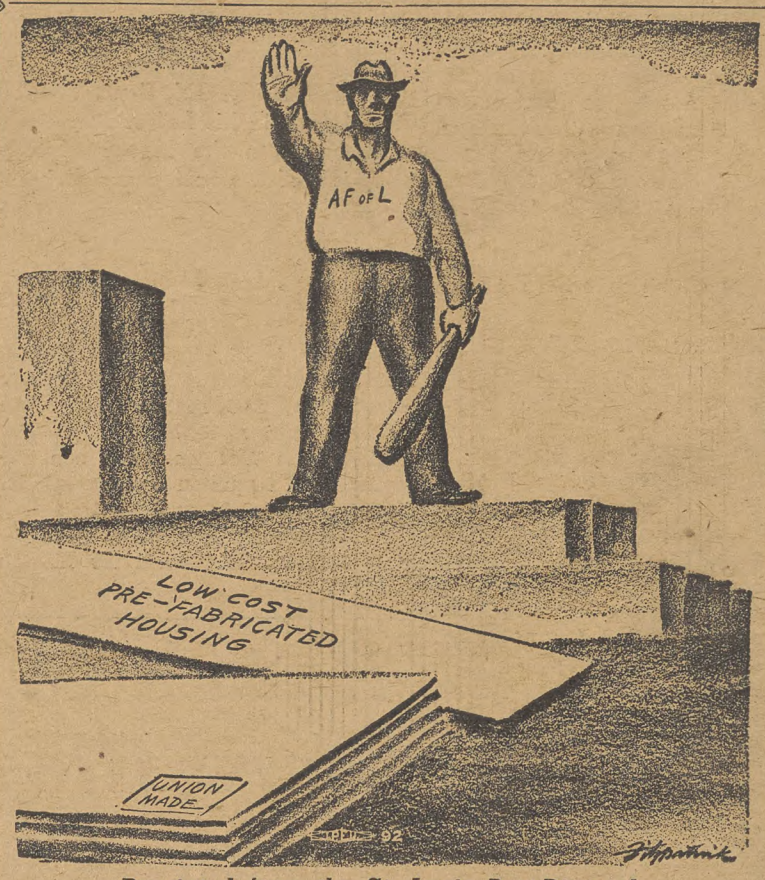
FOUR INJURED

Four members of the CIO United Construction Workers' Local 71, East St. Louis, were set upon by about 30 AFL workmen and severely beaten with wrenches and wooden clubs while they were laying the foundation of a pre-fabricated dwelling being erected at Eighty-second and West A streets, John O'Hara, a carpenter, suffered a fractured skull; Bert Powers, also a carpenter, a fractured arm; and Orville Ihmels and James Cummins, bricklayers, were treated for severe cuts and bruises. Two other CIO workmen escaped injury by fleeing.

This attack came after the AFL had turned down a contract to erect the house, a $6750, 5-room dwelling which had been sold by the Franke Realty Co., St. Louis, agents for the Gunnison Housing Corp., of New Albany, Ind., which employs CIO men.

REFUSED BY AFL

"We awarded the contract to a man on the East Side, who kicked it around for a couple of weeks and then brought it back to us because the AFL wouldn't let him go ahead," reported Lucas H. Franke, president of the real estate company. "Then we let the contract to a CIO man."



The Housing Committee of the AFL issued a condemnation of the building of pre-fabricated homes on the grounds that it would increase unemployment among union tradesmen.

PAPER COMMENTS

Activities of the AFL hoodlums brought severe condemnation from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which said the affair could have "no conceivable defense."

"The AFL men were not trying to get the work for themselves, for they had turned down an offer for AFL labor to be used exclusively on this job. The workmen attached, moreover, were union men, members of the CIO United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, hired after the AFL groups had refused the job.

"Thus, the incident did not grow out of a legitimate labor dispute at all, but was a high-handed attempt of the AFL building trades unions on the East Side to arrogate to themselves the right to say that they will permit no new development in the housing industry . . ."

Furniture Pact Signed In South

New Orleans, La., Sept. 7.— The United Furniture Workers of America has been recognized as bargaining agent for the 450 employes of the New Orleans Furniture Co., union officials announced this week. The management granted recognition of the CIO union after a check of membership cards against the payroll.

A holiday by the workers in the plant won quick action and negotiations for a contract are now being conducted by UFWA Vice-President Davis Spears, CIO Director Fred Pieper and John Bouche.

Workers in the New Orleans plant formerly belonged to the AFL Carpenters & Joiners but the organization disappeared. Feeling the need of an effective union, the CIO regional office was contacted and assistance asked.

Indiana CIO Signs Dairy Contract

Mishawaka, Ind., Sept. 7—United Dairy Workers Local 1059 has signed a contract with the Oak Ridge Dairy Company here, the union announced this week.

The agreement which recognizes the CIO dairy union as sole bargaining agency for the company's employes, sets a minimum weekly pay at $25 for retail and wholesale drivers and some inside men.

The weekly minimum for other inside workers is set at $20.50. Vacations with full pay after a year's service and time and a half for work beyond eight hours a day is also provided in the agreement.

Building Service Pact Brings Raises

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 7—The United Building Service Workers Local 991 this week announced the signing of its first contract with the Hoosier State Window Cleaning Co.

The agreement provides for a 40 cent hourly minimum with a five cent increase every three months, until an hourly rate of 60 cents is reached. After 15 month's service all employes will receive 75 cents an hour.

HOMES IN HARTFORD

Hartford, Conn. (FP) — The Hartford Housing Authority will receive a federal loan of $4,307,000 to build 1,000 homes for workers in defense industries.

Launch CIO Building Service Drive in New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The CIO has started a drive to organize thousands of unorganized building service employes in this city, according to an announcement by Pete Mosele, acting CIO regional director.

The drive starts out with a membership of more than 1,000 workers and contracts with more than 100 building owners, Mosele said. The 1,000 nucleus came over from the AFL Building Service Union, it was explained, after years of dissatisfaction with AFL failure to organize properly and to secure good working conditions.

"We know that the industry can and will be properly organized and the workers greatly benefited through unionization under the banner of the CIO," declared the new CIO union's officers, George Graham and Neil Barrett.

Union Heads Voice Plea: 'Avoid War'

Chicago, Sept. 7. — A call to American labor and all of its progressive allies to save America from conscription and from war was sounded here this Labor Day week-end by three CIO leaders who addressed the Emergency Peace Mobilization.

The warnings that such measures of repression as the Burke-Wadsworth Conscription Bill can lead to fascism and to war and the pleas for the building of a real, effective national defense based on a people's program of jobs and democracy were sounded by CIO Vice-President Reid Robinson, head of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; by Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union; and by Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union of America.

Pointing out that the workers in the metal industries are opposed to war even though these industries are boomed by war preparations, Robinson said:

"We hate war for what it does to people, to nations, to civil liberties and to democracy. We hate war because the workers do the fighting, the bleeding and the dying, while others reap the harvest of blood-soaked profits."

WHY THE DRAFT?

"Why, then, this mad scramble for conscription and armament? Why, then, under the guise of emergency, are we being deprived of our civil rights and liberties?

"Is it because the nation has failed to meet its greatest problem—that of 10 million unemployed people? Is it because with no sound domestic economy taking care of the needs of the people of America the corporate interests must have Government armament orders to make huge profits?

Defense and extension of the workers' civil rights and economic gains was demanded by Curran.

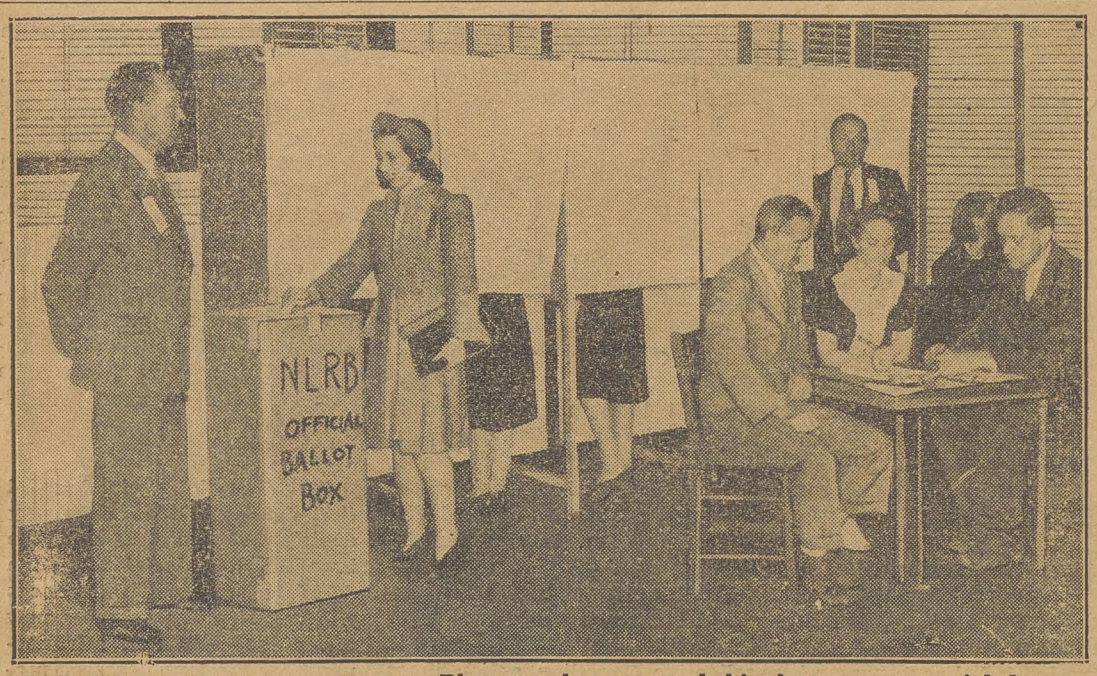
DOUBLE TASK

"Defending democracy is a double task," he told the delegates. "First, we must preserve what we already have. That means defending the civil rights for which generations of our forefathers fought and died.

"It means defending the work standards and the living standards which took so many, many years to establish. And, finally, it means preserving every single one of the political, social and economic gains won by the American people in the last decade.

"But we don't want to stop there. The second part of our task is just as important. It is to extend all these things and bring them to those strata of society for whom they do not yet exist."

BETTER DEMOCRACY



In a fiery talk, Quill objected to those who would rob the American people of their democratic way of life in the name of saving democracy from fascism.

"We are of course glad to live in a democracy," he said. "The only difference is that we want to make it a greater democracy because we are the working people of this country.

Sign Contract With Unit Of Anaconda

Tooele, Utah, Sept. 7. — One more link in the chain of CIO contracts covering the Anaconda Copper Co. was completed with the signing of a contract between Local 376 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and the Natl. Tunnel and Mines Co., an Anaconda subsidiary here.

The contract was won after several months of negotiations. Chief obstacle was a company bonus system that only became applicable under conditions amounting to speedup. The contract brings wages into line with the recent state-wide mining agreement signed by the Mine, Mill union.

Ask House Act On Coal Mine Safety Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Possibility of House action on the Neely-Keller mine safety bill grew today as more Congressmen placed their names on a petition to by-pass the measure around the Tory-dominated Mines Committee.

The bill, already passed by the Senate, has been bottled up for several months. Unless 218 Congressmen sign the petition in the House, chances for improvement in mine safety conditions may be held up for a long time to come.

Wages Jump 52% As CIO Wins Pact

Baltimore, Sept. 14—A CIO contract this week boosted wages 18 to 52 per cent for 51 employes of the Atlantic Waste Paper Co., Frank J. Bender, regional CIO director, said today.

Gained also were practically closed shop provisions, with check-off of dues, 50 cents more per week for Union members than non-union, and application of the contract only to CIO workers.

Workers will get a week's vacation with pay, 3-cents-an-hour bonus for night work, double time for Sundays and for six holidays a year, guarantee of four hours' pay when called to work and back pay for anyone fired or laid off unjustly.

CIO Still Leads AFL By 3-1 In Elections

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14. — Regularly, the AFL puts out a story or has Bill Green make a speech to the effect that the CIO is slipping, that it is losing elections right and left, that it can't hold its members. Regularly, too, the National Labor Relations Board puts out a summary of recent elections, showing how many the CIO won and how many went to the AFL.

The latest Board summary, up to date as of September 3, shows the usual ratio of three CIO victories to one for the AFL. Here are the figures, covering the period August 20-September 3:

Twenty-six elections were held, in which the CIO took part in 19, the AFL in 12. A total of 6,497 workers voted CIO, 2,147 AFL. CIO's elections were much bigger, including one in which over 4,000 workers voted for their own choice of a union.

Dairy Farmers Pledge Friendship With Labor

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 14 (FP)—Organized dairy farmers of the New York milkshed renewed their pledge of friendship and support for organized labor at the annual convention of the unaffiliated Dairy Farmers Union.

Meeting in the same hotel where last summer's milk strike was settled, delegates this year sought correction of existing abuses and low prices through the channel of the federal milk marketing order, resolving, however, to "call upon the membership of the union, and all producers, in case of the failure of this procedure, to stand by to put on the biggest milk strike this milkshed has ever seen."

The need for higher milk prices on the farm during the coming months has been sharpened by early frosts which have rendered thousands of acres of field corn unfit for winter feeding of cattle. This loss of fodder alone will materially increase the cost of producing milk from October until the cows go to pasture again in May.

Delegates gave Archie Wright, DFU general chairman, unanimous thanks for his services and a vote of confidence for his work in the future.

THANK LA GUARDIA

Besides indorsing continued cooperation and friendly relations with labor unions, the delegates thanked Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York for his help in wringing $91,090 out of Borden and Sheffield in final settlement of the 1939 milk strike.

Labor Spy Indicted For Murder

NEW YORK, Sept. 14. — Jerome King, former secretary of the National Maritime Union who was expelled from that organization when he was exposed as a paid agent of shipowning interests, was indicted for murder today.

King, together with one Thomas Harmon, was indicted by a city judge and held without bail pending further hearings. Victim of the attack was Bruce Camerson, whose neck was broken during the course of a fight.

Urge Changes In U. S. Shoe Buying Policy

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Proposals aimed at providing union shoe manufacturers at least a taste of government nationa defense orders today were placed before Sidney Hillman, National Defense Advisory Commission member, by the CIO United Shoe Workers of America.

The union, in a two-page letter, pointed out that corporations which have flouted federal labor law have been getting a near-monopoly of Uncle Sam's big shoe purchasing orders, while fair employers find themselves out in the cold. Many of the open shop plants are situated in southern communities which offered substantial subsidies if the firms would run away from unionized centers.

In its letter to Hillman, the USWA suggested that a joint conference of employers, union leaders, consumers and government purchasing agents be appointed to hand out the U. S. contracts.

The communication, signed by USWA Research Director Leo Goodman, called attention to the "anti-social results which have prevailing under the present system of awarding shoe contracts.

JOBLESS STAY JOBLESS

"I repeat, the most important of these include the failure to make use of the large number of skilled, trained unemployed shoe workers in many shoe producing districts throughout the United States."

Present policies of the government purchasing agents, the letter warned, "will bring chaos and confusion into the shoe industry at a time when stability and production are most necessary."

Many employers, hoping to qualify for the contracts—or using that hope as an excuse—have attempted to force wage cuts on their employes, Goodman charged.

WAGE-HOUR DRIVE

In another letter issued by USWA headquarters, this one addressed to officers of its locals, the union called upon shoe workers to help enforce the wage-hour law.

It was pointed out that although 50 wage-hour inspectors are now making a check-up of conditions in the shoe industry, speed-up policies introduced by some executives of the government agency are forcing inspectors to mass-production tactics at the expense of thoroughness.

Strike W. Va. Bus Line

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 14.— Refusal of the local bus company to live up to its contract with the CIO Transport Workers Union here brought all employes out on strike today. Though the contract, signed only a short time ago, provided for a CIO union shop, the company has persisted in hiring some 19 members of an AFL union.

The strike affects buses in Huntington and in valley areas nearby.

Office Workers Hits Draft Bill

CHICAGO, Sept. 14. — Voicing opposition to peacetime conscription and pledging loyalty to the political policies of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis and Labor's Non-Partisan League, the United Office & Professional Workers ended its third constitutional convention here.

Lewis Merrill was re-elected without opposition as president of the union, and John Stanley was chosen as secretary-treasurer.

In adopting its political stand, which withheld union endorsement of either Pres. Roosevelt or Republican candidate Wendell Willkie, the UOPWA recorded emphatic opposition to the use of national defense measures for the stifling and suppression of organized labor.

The resolution emphasized the necessity of electing Congressmen pledged to defend existing labor legislation and to carry out a program containing "labor's demands for peace and the pursuits of peace and labor's constructive social and economic program."

An enthusiastic demonstration greeted passage of a resolution pledging support to Pres. Merrill's campaign for Congressional nomination on the American Labor Party ticket in the 16th District of Brooklyn.

ASK RESPECT OF RIGHTS

During the discussion on the union's political stand a number of delegates expressed strong criticism of governmental actions which might lead to war, restriction of civil liberties and attacks upon the gains of organized labor.

Resolutions bearing directly upon problems confronting white collar workers came out of panel sessions for various divisions of the union.

Social service employes specified their fight against retrenchment in private agencies and their need to be included in provisions of the Social Security Act.

Insurance employes crystalized their experiences of the past two years in collective bargaining, demanding strengthening of social legislation and pledging to organize employes in major insurance companies.

The art group presented a full program for legislative activity to effect stoppage of WPA cuts, abolition of finger-printing and the 18 month clause, and extension of white collar projects to absorb the one and one half million unemployed white collar workers.

Other divisions of the UOPWA including publishing employes, advertising and art workers, bank and brokerage and general clerical employes, brought in resolutions specifically dealing with their fields of organization and activity, and joined with other delegates in voting increased finances for organization of the unorganized white collar workers by the UOPWA.

NEW BOARD

All divisions of the union are represented on the new General Executive Board of the UOPWA which comprises 17 members as follows: Leon W. Berney, New York; Lucy Carner, Chicago; Peter K. Hawley, and Robert Josephy, New York City; Harry Jung, Los Angeles; Rockwell Kent, New York City; Joseph H. Levy, Chicago; Richard Lewis, New York City; Alice F. Liveright, Philadelphia; William Piehl, New York City; Robert G. Poirier, Boston; Meyer Reich, New York City; Norman Sayre, Trenton, N. J.; Frank Soutar, Chicago; Lou Vennett, Philadelphia; Morris Yanoff, New York City; and Ralph Hetzel, Jr., Washington, member-at-large.

The convention went on record in support of the American Youth Congress in all localities and endorsed the American Youth Act.

SEEK 5-DAY WEEK

Other resolutions to be included in union educational and legislative activities during the next few months concern: launching a new campaign for the 5-day week; extension of the Social Security Act to insurance and social service employes; a fight against the Dies Committee and other anti-labor juntas; and support of measures granting sanctuary to anti-fascist fighters and their families in danger of death from Hitler.

The convention also went on record against attempts to deport CIO leader Harry Bridges, and condemned efforts to convert national defense measures into a fascist straightacket for labor.

By SAM KRAMER

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14.—"The occasion of our Sixth National Convention finds us with a larger membership, more collective bargaining agreements, a stronger financial position, and a larger organizing and administrative staff than at any time since our Union was established seven years ago. Wages and working conditions have been brought, through our effort, to the highest point in the history of the industry."

So read the opening paragraph in the report presented today to delegates at the convention of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America by President John Green today. The report, mimeographed and distributed to every accredited delegate, is a summary of his stewardship of the union during the past year, combined with a summary of the union's financial position by Secretary-Treasurer Philip H. Van Gelder.

The convention, largest in the union's history, opened with more than 100 delegates in attendance.

EXPECT MORE GAINS

Citing the great increase in employment during the past year, and the further gains expected in the months ahead, Pres. Green's report asserted that the national defense emergency has focussed public attention on the shipbuilding industry which is undergoing marked expansion. In connection with this, Pres. Green mentioned his appointment by Sidney Hillman to the Committee on Industrial Training, which is now developing plans to fill the employment needs of shipyards "by methods which will be speedy and efficient, and will not endanger the standards established by our union."

In view of this boom, the report called upon shipyard workers "to show their patriotism by establishing industrial democracy throughout the shipyards of America."

IMPROVED STATUS

"During the past year," Pres. Green's report continued, we have renewed or improved all agreements between this Union and shipyard employers, with a few very minor exceptions, and have added several new firms to the list of union yards, notably the important Todd-Johnson shipyards of New Orleans.

"We have established a local organization in Halifax, Nova Scotia, which we hope will be the beginning of a widespread organization among the now underpaid shipyard workers of Canada. We have also set up a local in the Philadelphia Navy Yard which should be the fore-runner of industrial unionism throughout this important branch of the industry."

RAPS BETHLEHEM

The report castigated Bethlehem Steel, which, with its satellites, "is the greatest single force against complete organization of the shipyard workers of America into one industrial union.

The report also assailed the obstructive efforts of the AFL and the underhand means it used to obtain a precarious foothold in the industry. It cited the craft unions' collusive back-door agreements, obtained not by organizing the workers, but by approaching the employer as soon as a Maritime Commission contract is awarded, and signing a closed shop agreement before any man is hired on the job.

PRES. JOHN GREEN

AFL COMPANY UNIONS

The report foresaw that the task of shaking the AFL loose from these foot-holds will be made easier when the workers under these collusive agreements "become disgusted with the craft union racket methods, and realize that only through democratic industrial unionism can their rights and interests be protected.

In connection with this, the report later mentioned that "this union has yet to lose an election to the AFL in any major shipyard in the country."

A tabulation of Labor Board elections last year, revealed that in nine polls, 6,213 votes were cast for the IUMSWA, 847 for the AFL, 1,584 for no union, and 710 for company unions. Agreements with 33 employers were listed, covering the major part of organized shipyard workers in private yards.

The report then went on to trace the progressive part played by the union in legislation and government actions, and its policy of cooperation with the National Defense Program. The report commended the assistance given to the union by Sidney Hillman, of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

Pencil Strike Settled

Hoboken, N. J., Sept. 14.—Increased wages and five holidays with pay were provided in a contract which ended the Textile Workers Union's eight-week strike at the American Lead Pencil Co. here.

Minimum wages are lifted from $13 a week to $14.50 as a result of the agreement, and a closed shop provision is retained.

Rubber Union Membership Rises 21%

By ROBERT CRUDEN

DETROIT, Sept. 14.—An increase of 21% in dues paying membership——

Chartering of 13 new locals since its 1939 convention — —

These are the highlights of Pres. S. H. Dalrymple's report presented to the Fifth Annual Convention of the United Rubber Workers of America, CIO, which opened at the Hotel Fort Shelby here Sept. 16.

Among other gains registered by the five-year-old union were the signing of its first contract with the anti-union Ohio Rubber Co., at Willoughby, Ohio, following an NLRB order compelling the company to pay $19,000 to union members whom it discriminated against; chartering of a local at Goodyear's run-away plant at Jackson, Mich.; and reinstatement of discharged union members with $7,100 back pay at the Firestone plant in Los Angeles. The company is now negotiating on a contract with the rubber union local there.

MUST PRESERVE GAINS

Dalrymple, who is a member of the Labor Policy Advisory Committee to the National Defense Council, reported that "while labor generally is committed to full cooperation with the National Defense Program, we wish to see that program carried through efficiently and with a minimum of waste and cost to the people of our nation.

"Therefore, labor feels that the best interests of national defense require the full maintenance of labor's legal rights and the social gains which it has won in the last few years," the rubber union leader continued.

"Labor must be vigilant to see that unscrupulous employers do not take advantage of the defense program to attack labor, just as our people generally must be on guard to see that private interests are not permitted to gouge our government in its hour of need."

"Democratic institutions must be preserved and it is labor's responsibility to see that our democratic heritage is preserved for our people," Dalrymple declared.

BACKS LEWIS STAND

His report also stated, "The United Rubber Workers endorses the position of Pres. John L. Lewis of the Congress of Industrial Organizations that government contracts, and especially defense contracts, should not be granted to violators of the National Labor Relations Act. This situation is serious in our industry, where certain open and avowed enemies of labor have already received substantial government orders."

Dalrymple's report also disclosed that while production levels in 1939 ran away ahead of 1937 figures, employment dropped from 129,800 to 113,800.

"Failure of employment to keep pace with production is a well known trend in the rubber industry," he reported. "These figures leave no doubt as to the seriousness of the trend in terms of the jobs of thousands of rubber workers. They also leave no doubt that the union program of shorter hours and maintenance of wage standards is not only justified, but is a social necessity."

CORRECTION

In the Aug. 19 issue of THE CIO NEWS a news item from Cincinnati appeared stating that CIO Construction Workers "did the painting job on the headquarters of the city's AFL building trades department."

The AFL union headquarters painted by CIO men was that of the Painters District Council, not the general Building Trades office which is in another building. Otherwise the news item was correct.

The AFL Painters Union meeting hall was painted inside by CIO painters employed by a UCWOC contractor. Which only goes to show!

Ex-Champ Aids Pickets

LYNN, Mass., Sept. 14. — Jack Johnson, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, was the "hit" of a strike being waged against the LeBlanc Cleaners by the Cleaners and Dyers Division of the ACWA, of which Johnson is an honorary member.

Johnson was interviewed by the press as he walked in the picket line and signed scores of cards for autograph seekers.

Johnson told Edward Jackson, business agent for the Cleaners and Dyers and vice-president of the Massachusetts CIO, that he wanted to justify his honorary membership in the CIO by doing some picket duty. He said he felt that "the CIO is the major force in this country working for the betterment of the Negro people because it grants them equality in the unions and in industry."

Flay Efforts To Ease Excess Profits Tax

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Proposed tax measures are "an abject surrender by Government to the demands of industry achieved by the sitdown strike against the rearmament program," according to a statement released here by the Committee on Taxation of the Natl. Lawyers Guild.

The report condemns the recommendations of the Senate Finance Committee abolishing limits on arms profits as "a victory for the arms merchants against the interest of the nation. It proposes a substitute measure to limit tax exemption claims to nine per cent of a corporation's current capital.

Amortization proposals, by which arms makers can add 20 per cent a year of the cost of expanded plant to the price of their products for five years, thus allowing cost to be completely recovered in a third of the usual tie, are also criticized in the report.

"The nub of the entire matter is that industry seeks to fatten on the rearmament program while labor is conscripted," the report states. "There is no amortization of the losses of wages or careers disrupted of men who are inducted into the nation's armed forces."

Wheeler Asks Arms Trust Be Probed

Washington, Sept. 14.—Ties between arms makers in this country and their colleagues abroad will be probed by Congress, if a resolution (SR 309) introduced by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana passes the Senate.

The resolution, citing reports showing that "German and other foreign corporations enjoy a measure of control over some of our most important defense industries," asked for a $50,000 appropriation for the Interstate Commerce Commission to carry out the probe.

The resolution added that "large concerns important to national defense have deferred national interests to monetary considerations by giving preference to foreign orders," and that "national defense, with which the American people are vitally concerned, demands the elimination of any such abuses and foreign controls which are contrary to our national interests."

No U. S. firms were named, but it is known that huge concerns like duPont, the Mellon trust, certain optical works, etc., all necessary for U. S. defense orders, have many connections with German and other international finance centers.

Washington observers remembered the Nye munitions industry investigations, which showed intimate connections between arms makers of hostile and belligerent countries during the last World War.

AFL Loses Suit For Union Funds

Pittsburgh, Sept. 14. — Long-drawn-out attempts of the AFL top leadership to obtain possession of funds in the treasury of the Aluminum Workers of America received another setback today, when a federal district judge threw the case out of court.

The union, once affiliated with the AFL, was expelled and subsequently joined the CIO.

Form United Labor Body In Canada

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 10.—A national central labor body, known as the Canadian Congress of Labor, was established here this week when delegates from CIO and All-Canadian Congress of Labor unions in joint convention approved the merger of the two groups.

The amalgamation brings together under one banner over 100,000 members, making the new congress the second largest labor body in the dominion.

Greeted as a major move toward total unity of labor in the nation, the merger was endorsed in principle at the first session of the convention after considerable debate resulting from a demand for more information concerning the unity move.

Convention leaders predicted the new congress, increased in strength and in personnel as a result of the convention decision, would permit an organizing campaign throughout Canada "which will, within a comparatively brief period, make the congress the largest labor organization in the dominion."

SEEK RECOGNITION

The congress decided to make a bid for government recognition as "the official voice of Canadian industrial labor organizations."

Among the resolutions adopted were those calling for a movement to seek a general wage increase throughout industry in Canada to compensate the workers for the increase in the cost of living.

Opposition was expressed to any official lengthening of the hours of labor "as long as there is available a sufficient number of workers to take care of the requirements of industrial production essential to the nation's war effort."

TO ESTABLISH TIES

The delegates also voted to take necessary measures to establish fraternal relationships with the British Trades Union Congress and the CIO in the United States.

The meeting denounced all subversive doctrines and decided to refuse membership to any members of subversive groups.

The new executive was instructed to explore the possibility of bringing about, in cooperation with the Trades and Labor Congress, a complete consolidation of Canadian Labor.

In his presidential address A. R.

Federal Union Meets Sept. 17

Washington, Sept. 14. — More than two hundred delegates from all sections of the country are coming into Washington for the first Constitutional Convention of the United Federal Workers of America, CIO's affiliate in the Federal government service, scheduled to get under way September 17.

The convention will carry over through September 18 and 19. Jacob Baker, UFWA president, will be chairman.

INVITE LEWIS

CIO President John L. Lewis has been invited to speak. Other convention speakers will be: CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood Senator James Mead, N. Y.; Congressmen Frank Fries, Ill., and Robert Ramspeck, Ga.; Harry Mitchell, president U. S. Civil Service Commission; UFWA Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson, National Organizers Irwin Elber and Henry Rhine, and Ted Silvey, Secretary, Ohio State IUC, Sydney Katz, Secretary-Treasurer of the District of Columbia and Maryland IUC will open the proceedings.

FORMED IN 1937

Established in 1937 the UFWA has made great strides in membership and in its program to bring better working conditions to the public service.

It has won wage increases and

OPPOSES SMITH BILL: CIO arguments against the Smith bill to rip the heart out of the Wagner Labor Relations Act were presented at closed hearings to the Senate Labor Committee last week by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis. He's shown here with committee members: Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, Sen. Ellender of Louisiana, Lewis and Sen. Elbert Thomas of Utah, committee chairman.

A FRIENDLY LIGHT

Spoiling Their Fun

Labor-baiting is great fun for a Senator or Congressman who is safely removed in Washington from the folks back home and surrounded by toadying lobbyists of the wealthy interests.

How some of them love to get up and rave against the CIO, to denounce the Wagner Labor Act, to demand the deportation of Bridges and generally to "put labor in its place!"

And when they get through with their great orations and with their fist-shaking at all who stand up for the poor and lowly, how the social lobby flutters around them at cocktail parties and banquets! They strut around like pouter pigeons and gloat over editorials which call them "real statesmen" and "courageous patriots" each time they kick labor in the face.

But alas and alack, every once in awhile they have to return to the "rabble" whom they have been "keeping down" in Washington and ask them for their votes.

Senator Wm. H. King of Utah was recently one of those who had to return to his makers after many happy years opposing labor and liberal legislation and insulting union leaders. He made his demand for the deportation of one of them, Harry Bridges, a main election issue and bragged he would be re-elected on that issue alone.

Whereupon the Democratic voters of Utah deposed this King in the primaries by a three-to-one vote in favor of Congressman Abe Murdock, who was supported by the CIO, who voted against the deportation of Bridges and who staunchly defended the Wagner Act against its attackers.

There was also a Senator Burke of Nebraska, who stood out as a leader in the fight against the Wagner Act and won great praise from the manufacturers' lobby and the business press. He, too, was voted out of political circulation in the primaries not so long ago.

And, oh yes, there have been quite a few others whose labor-baiting fun has been ended by serious-minded voters when they got back home from Washington. For latest results, see the papers, as the list grows all the time.

You know, the Wagner Act is supposed to be so "unpopular," if you read the editorials. But the funny thing is that every time a Senator or Congressman tries to make himself popular by leading the attack on this labor law, the voters who evidently don't read the editorials jump all over him.

It might be a good idea for more members of Congress to read recent election results instead of the editorails in the anti-labor press.

Many members of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers have been writing their Congressmen opposing amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, according to a convention report. One phrased it this way: "Confucius say, Congressman change Labor Act, people change Congressman."

Rewards For Wrongs

At least seven hundred million dollars worth of government business has just been awarded to the Bethlehem Steel Co. and the Electric Boat Co., according to the Navy Dept. Added to earlier Naval orders, it makes a total of close to a billion dollars in the past four months for these companies.

Now it so happens that the Bethlehem and Electric Boat companies have repeatedly broken the law that Uncle Sam is supposed to enforce, by violating the Natl. Labor Relations Act and the right of their workers to bargain collectively.

The story about the lawbreaker sentenced to "10 days or $100," who said he'd prefer to receive the hundred dollars, used to be considered a joke.

But now the government seems to take it seriously by handing out a cool billion dollars to companies that break its laws, instead of compelling them to comply.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

A TRIP through a few industrial centers reveals many signs of a definite pickup in CIO organization at the present time.

Labor Day parades and demonstrations were bigger and more impressive than ever before. Hundreds of thousands marched in hundreds of cities. CIO floats, CIO banners and CIO buttons were everywhere in evidence.

Look in at local union offices and there is hardly one that will not report that dues payments are picking up or at least becoming more regular.

In some cases many new members are coming in, new shops are being organized, new contracts won. But even where new ground is not being broken, there is hardly an exception to the reports of greater union consolidation — delinquent members returning to good standing, improvements of contracts, greater union stability.

Rapid Growth

International union reports to recent conventions summarize such progress and verify impressions gained in the field.

The United Rubber Workers, meeting at Detroit, reports a 21 per cent increase in dues-paying membership, chartering of 13 new locals and the winning of a number of recent elections.

The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, meeting a week earlier at Cleveland, reported a 43 per cent increase in dues-paying membership, winning of 43 big elections and contracts with 424 establishments.

The CIO is booming in the shipyards, with the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers reporting to its Baltimore convention a great influx of membership, bringing it to peak strength, with a substantial record of election and contract victories.

A few weeks ago, the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers' convention reported a 20 per cent increase in dues-paying membership, a 53 per cent increase in union contracts and a 91 per cent victory record in Labor Board elections.

The giant CIO United Automobile Workers, making one of the greatest comebacks in history from AFL attempts to wreck it, reported a 93 per cent increase in membership and a 100 per cent increase in number of plants under contract—to a total covering more than 400,000 workers in 647 plants—and a succession of landslide election victories.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee at its convention reported an increase in contracts from 445 to 654, covering 550,000 workers—75 per cent of them providing sole bargaining rights or the union shop—and wage increases averaging 26 per cent.

Why They Join

This sort of listing of recent union growth could be continued indefinitely, since there is hardly a CIO union that cannot tell a similar story. But let us rather examine some of the reasons for it.

There has been some pickup in employment, and more regular employment for some of the employed, which always helps. But this pickup is not as great as the pickup in CIO organization. And there still are some ten million unemployed.

What is chiefly on the minds of the new members joining the unions today, or of the old members who are paying up their dues and showing greater concern for the strength of their organizations

Wages, of course. are one factor. Profits, particularly in defense industries, are rising to dizzy heights. A recent listing in the CIO "Economic Outlook" shows big industrial corporations increasing their profits, not only by 20% or 50%, but by as much as 300%, 400%, and even 750% and 1,740%.

With living costs rising, the workers know three things: (1) that wages must be raised if they are no more than to break even; (2) that industry is making enough money to pay higher wages; and (3) that without union organization, they will not only not get their due but will be left holding the bag.

Insecurity

But looming even larger than wage and hour considerations in the workers' minds at the present time, according to most union organizers, is an ominous sense of insecurity.

War has shaken up the whole world, including the United States. No one knows what the morrow may bring forth Not only working conditions, but cherished rights and liberties and even life itself may be threatened at short notice.

Even if a man has a steady job under fair conditions today, he knows that millions of his fellows are still out of work, in a period of so-called war boom. So what will happen when this boom collapses—as collapse it must eventually?

Inflation, deflation, every shift in the feverish economic temperature induced by war conditions, carries its threat to the livelihood, the savings, the security of the working man and his family.

So thousands upon thousands of workers are prudently turning to CIO organization for union protection, in the widest sense, and for the increased security this brings in an insecure world.

Final Voting Due On Conscription

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Peacetime conscription, most strongly contested measure in recent U. S. legislative history, took all of Congress' time again this week, as unions, churches, youth groups, farm organizations and liberal leaders carried their fight against it to the conference room where differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill were being compromised in a dash for a quick final vote.

Outlook for settlement of the differences, expected at the time The CIO NEWS went to press, was for a compromise on the age limit at 21 to 35 years, inclusive. Originally the Senate version stood at a maximum of 31; House limit at 44. The House amendment to postpone drafting for a 60-day trial of volunteers was thrown out. Sixteen million men would be subject to the draft in the compromise age ranges, from which Army officials estimated at least five million would be eligible for compulsory service. Pay was expected to be left at $30 per month.

'DRAFT INDUSTRY" PROPOSAL

Congressional talk and action on "drafting industry" were less decisive. As reported here, the conferees agreed to limit the possibility of "taking over" recalcitrant defense industries to periods of "imminent emergency" as proclaimed by the President.

House and Senate votes on the conference report, scheduled for late this week, will settle the fate of the bill. In the meantime, opposition from labor and liberal groups continued. Meeting in Washington for its first convention in five years, the Teamsters union, largest AFL affiliate, passed a unanimous resolution declaring that conscription "means the regimentation of American Labor," and that it will result in "conditions not dissimilar to conditions in Nazi Germany." The resolution also included a clause pointing out that conscription would bring an enormous tax burden to be paid by "those who can least afford to pay."

CLUB OVER LABOR

Speaking in the Senate while the bill was in conference, Burton K. Wheeler of Montana declared that the Burke-Wadsworth bill, if passed, would be "a club held over the heads of all workingmen in all communities in the U. S. It will mean for the laboring people that if they do not do as they are told to do they may be drafted into the Army.

"That is not theory. I can name community after community in which such a club was held over workingmen during the last war."

Wheeler was followed by Sen. Clark of Missouri, who referred to plans for conscription worked out some years ago as a weapon to force down labor standards. "The document did not say in so many words that it was planned to conscript labor, but it was the intention, by use of the draft system, to exercise such a club over labor that, if it was desired labor could be drafted into the military service, and the authorities could force any conditions on labor they pleased, just as was done in the last war. . .," he said.

WARNS OF DANGER

Wheeler expressed a sharp warning to labor on the meaning and purpose of peacetime conscription, saying: "Let no laboring man in the country fool himself as to what the real purpose of the legislation is and what the result will be. It will result in a club being held over the laboring men of the country in every industrial center.

"I am not a prophet, but I venture the statement that very soon after the legislation goes into effect we shall find out what will take place under it."

MANY DELEGATES

Hundreds of delegates from labor, youth, farm and other organizations continued to make the rounds of Congressmen and Senators while the bill was in conference. Following forcible police action to break up a nightlong meeting for prayer against conscription, the group filed a suit for an injunction against Washington police and Capitol authorities.

Writing in the current issue of the Machinists Monthly Journal, published by the AFL Intl. Association of Machinists, vice-president F. D. Laudemann strongly contrasted Congressional haste to conscript workers with its reluctance to put brakes on excess profits. His article carried the title: "Amortization for Employers —Conscription for the Workers— The Reward of Cooperation."

OFFICE WORKERS

Main feature of the resolutions at the CIO Office and Professional Workers convention in Chicago was opposition to the pending bill, together with criticism of the Administration for "ignoring of the serious problems of unemployment, retrenchment in relief, concessions to wealthy profiteers and financial groups. . ." and the like. Earlier the powerful CIO Electrical and Radio Workers also made opposition to the bill a main point in its convention decisions.

Two hundred and sixty youth delegates meeting in Chicago heard Leonard Detweiler, president of the Natl. Intercollegiate Christian Council, pledge the support of his organization in opposing the bill. The youth delegates, members of the American Student Union, further resolved to support all Congressional candidates pledged against American entry into war, and to refuse support to either of the two leading Presidential candidates.

In New York, the Lawyers Committee to Keep the U. S. Out of War joined labor and other progressive opposition with a brief declaring the Burke-Wadsworth bill to be a threat "to our American way of life . . ."

REPEAT PERFORMANCE: On July 25, 1917, Sec. of War Newton Baker presided over the lottery to pick men in the country's wartime draft. Now, with peacetime conscription apparently slated for the books, scenes like this will be re-enacted as some 900,000 men are chosen for the army forces.

File Suit To Protect Civil Rights

Washington, Sept. 14. — Legal suit to compel Washington city and police authorities and Capitol police to stop interfering with anti-conscription meetings and leaflet distribution was filed here in the name of individuals and of two organizations that have been opposing the measure.

The suit grew out of forcible dispersal of a meeting of delegates on Capitol Hill whose attempt to hold an all-night meeting for prayer against the bill was broken up by police. Nightsticks were used to force them out of the Capital grounds and off the steps of the U. S. Supreme Court, the suit charged.

In addition, the suit asked for an injunction to stop police from preventing leaflet distribution, from ordering removal of badges and buttons, and from ripping anti-draft and other banners, stickers, etc., from automobiles. Test of the legality of local anti-leaflet regulations was also sought.

Actions of the police brought sharp disapproval in liberal circles, and were the subject of a strongly critical editorial in one of the local commercial news papers.

Bethlehem, Electric Boat Get More U. S. $$$

September 14, 1940. — Bethlehem Steel Company and Electric Boat Company have just received orders for over 700 million dollars worth of naval vessels, the Navy Department announced today.

These two companies, repeated violators of the National Labor Relations Act, and the right of collective bargaining, have been constructing the major portion of U. S. Navy vessels.

It was announced today that contracts for 200 new Naval Vessels were let to eleven companies. 73 of these vessels or over one-third are to be built by Bethlehem and Electric Boat, both companies long known for their anti-labor record.

Between June 6 and the time this last order was awarded Bethlehem and Electric Boat have received one-quarter of a billion dollars worth of Naval orders. This makes a total of almost one billion dollars in Naval orders awarded these two companies in the last four months.

CIO POSITION

President Lewis and the CIO have made many efforts to secure legislation by Congress or an executive order by the President to prevent violators of the NLRA from receiving government contracts. The Senate has passed this type of legislation three times but each time it has been bottled up in the conservative Rules Committee of the House of Representatives.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Automotive Industry

• The major use of stainless steels in the automotive industry is for trim which will not rust or tarnish. This metal is also used to a large extent for certain parts, such as pump shafts and valves, which are subject to corrosion and heat.

Stainless steel meets these requirements perfectly because it is easy to keep clean and bright. It resists hot corrosive fumes and gases. Its smooth hard surface resists denting and scratching, and can be washed as easily as glass. In addition, its deep drawing and forming properties make it a suitable material from the point of view of the manufacturer.

Efficient, trouble-free performance and long life may be confidently expected from products made of stainless steel.

Demand Congress Act On Mine Safety Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—"Playing politics with human lives" is a phrase often tossed around loosely in the heat of a political conflict. With precise meaning, however, it can justly be used to describe the course of the mine inspection bill, S. 2420, in the present Congress.

At the present time a petition to force the bill on to the floor of the house for debate and voting has received close to 200 signatures of Representatives. A minimum of 218 is needed to get action, and this week Labor's Non-Partisan League appealed to all unions to urge their Congressmen to sign the petition.

Two hundred and fifty-four miners have been killed by mine explosions alone since the measure was introduced on May 16, 1939, by Senator Neely (D., W. Va.) in the Senate and Congressman Keller (D., Ill.) in the House. A total of 1,538 men have been killed in mines from all causes since the bill was put before Congress.

It passed the Senate on January 23, 1940, following the Bartley mine explosion in McDowell County, W. Va., which snuffed out 91 miners' lives, creating 70 widows and 143 orphans, on January 10. There was no record vote in the Senate. The facts brought out by Senator Neely and other proponents of the measure were so overwhelming that no Senator argued against the bill.

'STATES' RIGHTS'

The only question raised in the Senate discussion was that of states' rights—opened up by Senator Austin of Vermont, Republican whip of the Senate. His doubts were quickly and easily dispelled by an explanation of the measure as only authorizing annual Federal inspection of mines in cooperation with state mine inspection services, and publication of findings.

After passing the Senate unanimously the bill was referred by the House of Representatives to its Committee on Mines and Mining. A subcommittee chairmaned by Congressman Andrew L. Somers of Brooklyn, N. Y., was appointed to consider it. That subcommittee lifted not a finger on the bill till an explosion in the Willow Grove Mine at Neffs, Ohio, on March 16, 1940, killed 72 miners, leaving 59 widows and 117 orphans.

Prodded by an eloquent letter from President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers two days after this latter explosion, members of the subcommittee went to Ohio to take first-hand testimony. That, however, proved to be a short-lived burst of humanitarian attention. The subcommittee members returned from Ohio and nothing further happened. Finally in June, 1940, the subcommittee decided to hold further hearings in Washington, D. C.

Bureau of Mines expert testimony made it perfectly clear that these major mine disasters and the daily deaths of individual miners in mine operations were not pre-ordained by God but resulted from disregard for safety rules with the modern machinery and practices to put those rules into effect. But the Congressional subcommittee was not even then spurred into action. After June 14, 1940, Chairman Somers of Brooklyn (what kind of mine influences could work on him in his metropolitan district?) and his subcommittee associates sank back into peaceful inactivity again.

ANOTHER DISASTER

Then, on July 15, 1940, came the explosion in the Sonman Mine near Portage, Pa., with 63 killed, leaving 34 widows and 108 orphans. President Lewis again addressed a letter to Congressmen, repeating the whole shocking story to date and asking Congress as a matter of simple human justice to act. John T. Jones, newly chosen director of Labor's Non-Partisan League, was put in charge of an active campaign to get the bill moved through the House. Thirty-five United Mine Worker officials were called in and started on the rounds of Congressmen.

At this writing the effort is still in process. The bottleneck of Chairman Somers and his subcommittee has not been broken but gives promise of being broken soon. Once the measure gets out of committee there is little doubt about action of the House membership. In their pedestrian tour from office to office the Mine Workers officials have met an encouraging response. A majority of the House membership gives signs it does not want to "play politics with human lives."

Order Election At Brick Plant

Washington, Sept. 14.—An election to determine whether employes of the Niles Fire Brick Co. of Niles, Ohio, wish to be represented by a CIO union, will be held in the next 30 days, the Labor Board announced today.

United Brick Workers, CIO Local Industrial Union 198, is the union that will appear on the ballot.

NEW JOB: Charles Fahy, who as general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, piloted that agency to the best court record in the government, has a new job. He's now assistant solicitor-general in the Dept. of Justice.

Softball Tourney

New York, Sept. 14 — Labor softball aggregations from a number of eastern states will fight it out for the championship at the New York World's Fair on October 13, the Trade Union Athletic Assn. announced today.

The meet will be the first Interstate Labor Champion Softball Tournament yet staged, and champs from Baltimore, New Jersey, Connecticut and New York will be entered.

Canada CIO In Congress

Mosher declared "the greatest service which we can render to Canada is to organize the largest possible number of workers in the shortest possible time and to obtain for them adequate representation in the councils of the nation both in peace and war."

Visiting the convention were Allan S. Haywood, CIO organization director; J. R. Bell, CIO comptroller; Frank McGrath, president of the United Shoe Workers, and Hugh Thompson, CIO director in Buffalo.

The convention was attended by over 260 delegates, the largest groups coming from the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes; United Mine Workers, Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the United Automobile Workers.

Federal Union To Convene

promotions for thousands of Federal employes established seniority rights in many agencies procured the extension of civil service for thousands of otherwise unprotected workers; and won reinstatement for many unjustly fired workers. Most of these gains have been achieved through the methods of collective bargaining which UFWA has introduced into the labor relations of the government.

"By carrying its program to successful completion, the United Federal Workers of America can be of very real service not only to its own membership but to the American labor movement as a whole."

No. 1 Chiseler: Forced Employes To Return Funds In Back Wage Checks

GAFFNEY, S. C., Sept. 14.—A federal injunction today had nailed one of the sharpest foes of labor in this state from further violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Judge A. M. Lumpkin, sitting in the federal district court at Columbia, enjoined the Hamrick chain of mills from flouting the minimum wage law and announced at the same time that workers would receive back wages due them under the law.

The company, it was obvious from the record, had no use for the Wagner Act and even less for the Wage-Hour law. Confronted with evidence that it had been paying employes less than the legal minimum, employing learners without compensation, falsifying hour records and forcing workers to rebate back wages, the company agreed to shell out the money.

Records show the firm has established a near-record low in its treatment of workers. Ordered early this year to pay back wages for previous wage-hour violations, the firm went through these motions, according to reports:

"The checks were drawn in amounts owed for back pay. However, the employes made sworn statements in which they declared that a representative of the mills accompanied them either to the bank or to the company store, and, after the workers had endorsed the checks, the money was obtained by this representative and returned to the management!"

When Wage-Hour inspectors came around to study conditions, they were "abused, impeded, threatened and intimidated by company policemen."

The second wage-hour decision against the company followed shortly after a Labor Board order directing the company to reinstate with full back pay 24 discharged members of the Textile Workers Union, CIO.

Defeat Stooge

GAFFNEY, S. C., Sept. 14.—Labor's growing strength in Cherokee county brought about the political defeat of Claud Fort, attorney for the chiselling Hamrick chain of textile mills.

Fort, a member of the state House of Representatives, was overwhelmingly defeated when he ran for re-election.

Furniture Pact Signed

New York, Sept. 14. — Renewal of a contract with the Breakfast Room Furniture Manufacturers' & Assemblers' Assn. for the coming years was announced here by Local 76-B of the CIO United Furniture Workers.

The new agreement contains provisions for further increases in wages, pay by the employers for the union label, and the establishment of an impartial arbitration machinery with a permanent impartial chairman.

The union has had contractual relations with the association since 1936, and in each succeeding year has been able to reach successful settlements.

Labor Scores in Primaries Held in 3 Key States

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Voters in three key states returned pro-labor candidates in primary elections this week by decisive pluralities.

Labor's Non-Partisan League and CIO forces in Michigan were celebrating victory of five congressional and one senatorial candidate, in addition to many candidates for lesser offices.

Representatives who were renominated with CIO backing in Michigan were: Hook, Lesinski, Dingell, Rabaut, and Tenarewicz, all Democrats. Labor forces had endorsed Frank Fitzgerald who won nomination for Senator in the Democratic primary.

Washington's liberal voters renominated that state's delegation who had strong labor support. Former Senator C. C Dill, generally known as a progressive, won over Gov. Martin in the Democratic gubernatorial race.

In Minnesota several staunch labor friends were nominated as the Farmer-Labor Party staged a comeback from its defeat of two years ago. Nomination of former Gov. Elmer Benson for Senator and of former Reps. Bernard and Teigan was hailed by CIO ranks in the state.

Voters of Maine renominated Mrs. Clyde Smith, widow of Rep. Smith of that state, who was warmly supported by the CIO shoeworkers and other labor forces.

Michigan Voters Kill Ford's Hopes

By CARL HAESSLER
Federated Press

Detroit — (FP) — Michigan voters defeated the headliner Ford candidates in the primary election Sept. 10. At the same time many of the men endorsed by Labor's Non-Partisan League placed in the Democratic column for the finals Nov. 5. Most of the Ford stooges ran as Republicans.

Labor's biggest triumph was the victory of Frank Fitzgerald, liberal Detroit attorney, as Democratic nominee for U. S. Senator to run against Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg. Louis B. Ward, the Ford man and former Coughlin editor, was a bad third.

Ford's pick for governor on the Republican ticket was O. L. Smith, corporation lawyer and interested in schools in Dearborn. He was badly snowed under in a big field in which Gov. Luren Dickinson got about 50% of all Republican votes cast.

All four congressmen endorsed by the League apparently were renominated, with Rep. Rudolph Tenerowicz having the closest race. The other endorsees were Rep. Dingell, Lesinski and Rabaut.

In Wayne county (Detroit) labor nominated Andrew Baird, incumbent by appointment, for sheriff but failed to place its candidate for prosecutor. A number of state representatives and state senatorial endorsees made the grade.

LEAGUE'S COMMENT

Commenting on the showing, Natl. Rep. Darrell Smith of Labor's Non-Partisan League said:

"The League is well pleased with the primary results in Michigan. We could have boasted of more wins if we had merely picked winners for our endorsement. But we concentrated on men representing vital issues for labor.

Price of Meat Spurting Up

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14. — Government officials today launched an investigation of sudden and drastic increases in the price of meat.

Miss Harriet Elliott, consumer advisor to the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission, said that many complaints have reached her office in the past ten days of rising prices for beef, pork and lamb.

In Washington, the price of round steak has jumped six cents a pound since mid-August. For the whole country, a 5c-a-pound increase in round steak was reported, an increase un-explained by small jumps in the price of cattle.

In New York City, the Bureau of Consumer Services revealed it had been unable to trace the cause of the sudden increase.

At Chicago a spokesman for the packing industry attempted to explain the rise as merely seasonal, throwing in for good measure a contention that higher payrolls helped cause the increase.

Electrical Union's 6th Parley Ends

Cleveland, Sept. 14—The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers ended their sixth annual convention here after declining to endorse a Presidential candidate at this time and authorizing the union's general officers, together with CIO Pres. John L. Lewis and Vice-Pres. Philip Murray to represent the UE's interests in future campaign developments.

Previously the trio of general officers—Pres. James B. Carey, Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak and Organization Director James Matles — had been re-elected to office.

SEE GAINS MENACED

The convention declaration, as finally adopted after a two-hour debate, charged that:

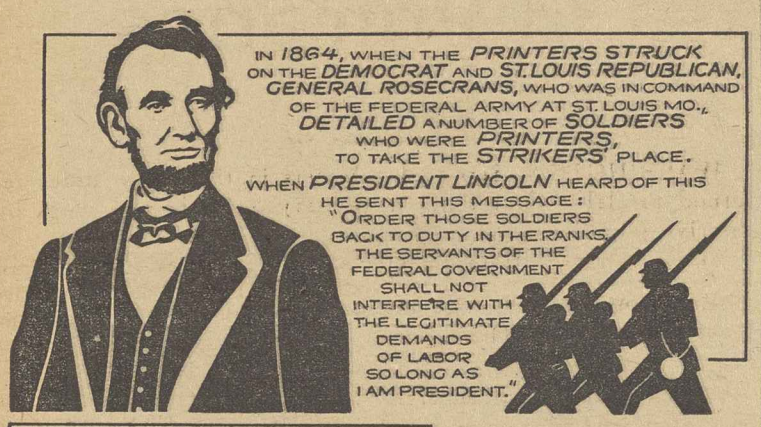
"Recent trends in legislation, foreign policy and the administration of labor law are endangering the further progress of labor and the maintenance of its gains.

"The endorsement of any candidate by this convention would serve to lessen the influence of labor in the rapidly changing political scene and weaken its hand in the determination of proper national policy."

The resolution concluded with the authorization that "our general officers, in combination" with Lewis and Murray, represent the interests of the UERMW relative to the endorsement of Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt for a third term and to transmit their joint recommendations for action to all UERMW locals."

The convention praised CIO legislative policies and the leadership of Pres. Lewis.

10,000 Sign Fur Union Protest Wire



New York, Sept. 14.—The longest telegram to go out of the New York office of the Postal Telegraph Company was a mammoth wire transmitted to Washington, and signed by 10,000 members of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union today. The telegram was addressed to President Roosevelt and protested the conviction and imprisonment of four leaders of the Fur Workers Union without bail though an appeal is pending.

Stretching 101 yards, the wire took 10 hours to transmit over the wires of Postal Telegraph, according to E. A. Hickey, Division Sales Manager of the Postal Telegraph Company. The total cost of the wire was $500, and was paid for by the individual signers at the rate of five cents a signature.

CHEER FOR VICTORY: Members of the CIO Transport Workers Union sound three lusty cheers as they hear of election victory over a "mutual aid society" — that's a new name for company union — on a Jamaica, N. Y., bus line.

LABOR FACTS By Scheel

A SHORT, SHORT STORY!

The Three-Way Chiseler

MR. SWEAT-SHOP SNEER is a three-way chiseler. He chisels against the worker whom he deprives of an average of thirty-seven cents an hour, because he pays forty cents while the union average is seventy-seven cents. He chisels against the 95% standard manufacturers who pay the union rate and provide decent working conditions. He chisels against society by setting up his own little anarchy in remote districts which hold out against the general progress.

Then Mr. Sweat-shop Sneer smuggles his lines into stores by offering special inducements, discounts and credits, and the bait is set for the customer.

Now, the worker, no matter how smart, cannot smell a non-union garment or shirt or tie; but he and his wife and family can outwit the chiselers by asking the salesman for the Amalgamated Union Label. If the salesman is evasive, hems and haws and glibly flatters you, don't let him side-step the issue. Demand the Union Label.

ASK FOR LABEL

Tell the storekeeper or clerk or manager what the union label means to you as a guarantee of fine workmanship under fair conditions; and as a protection to all workers in maintaining social standards. Most reputable stores do not carry sub-standard goods, but there is an active minority who are getting away with it, for the time being. Let the retailer know that you will not wear on your body the fruits of anti-labor and anti-social production. Let him do the squirming—not you. The non-union garments contain the sufferings of men and women deprived of the benefits of organization.

The surest protection for every CIO worker and his family is the Amalgamated Union Label on all his clothes.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, in a nation-wide educational campaign, is getting the support of progressive retailers, who are discontinuing sub-standard lines. We have the support of organized labor and of consumers' organizations. We have the chiselers on the run.

It's a battle of wits. Outwit the chiselers. Ask for the Amalgamated Union Label. Know where not to buy and what not to buy. Buy Union to Buy Wisely and Decently.

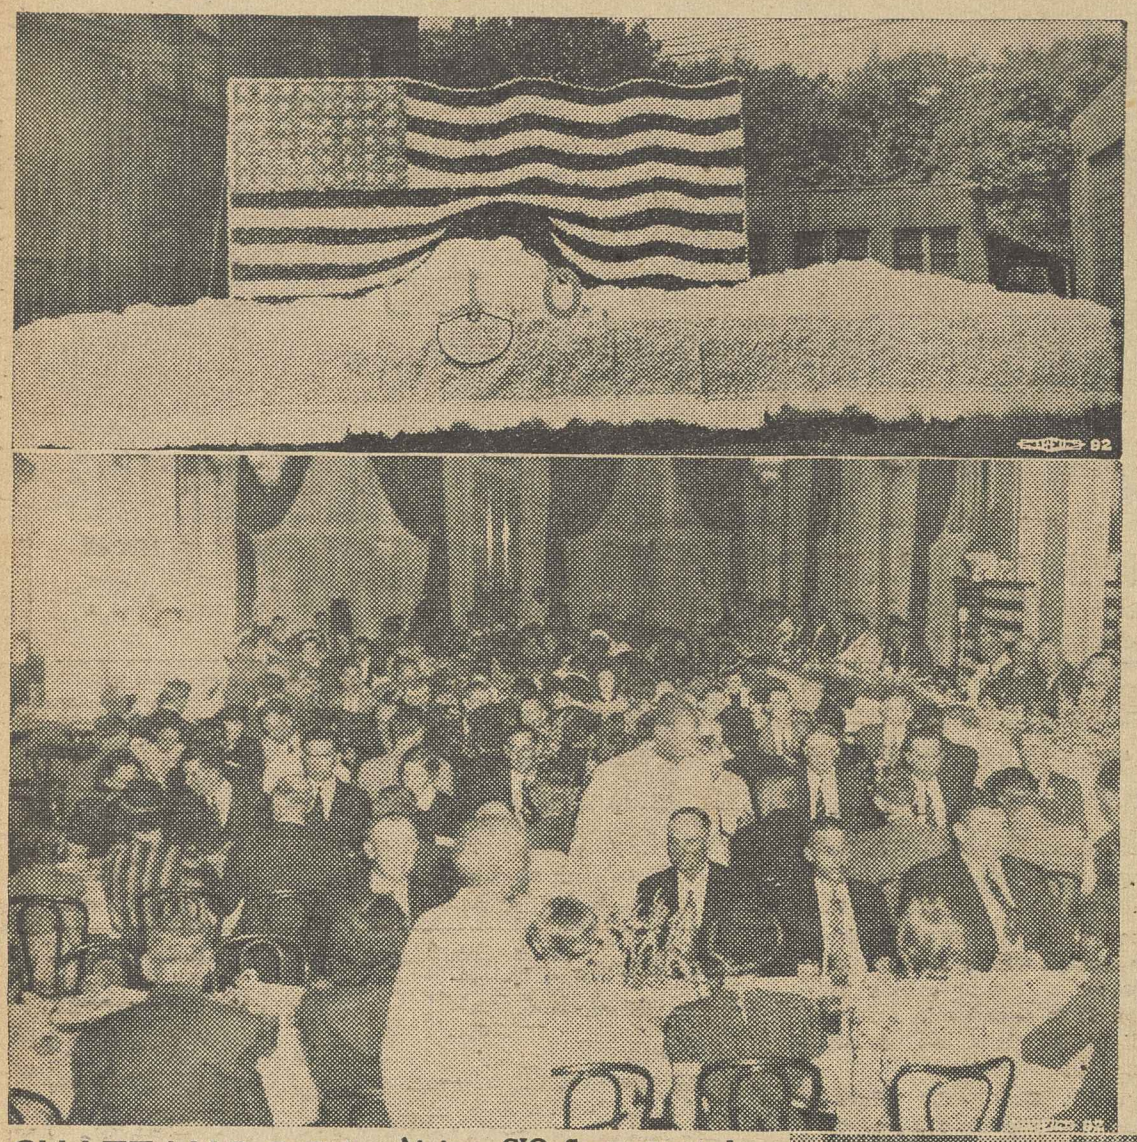
Order Eight Rehired In Screw Plant

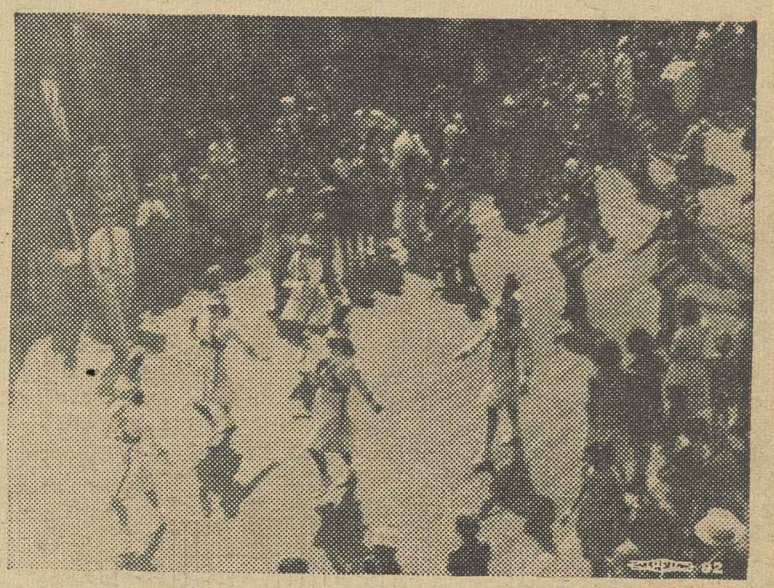
CLEVELAND, Sept. 14.—A Labor Board decision ordering the reinstatement with back pay of eight employes of the Triplex Screw Co. was hailed today by William F. Donovan, district director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, as a major defeat for company unionism.

The case, dating from March, 1938, was based on SWOC charges that employes had been intimidated and discharged when they showed signs of interest in the union.



WORKERS WISE

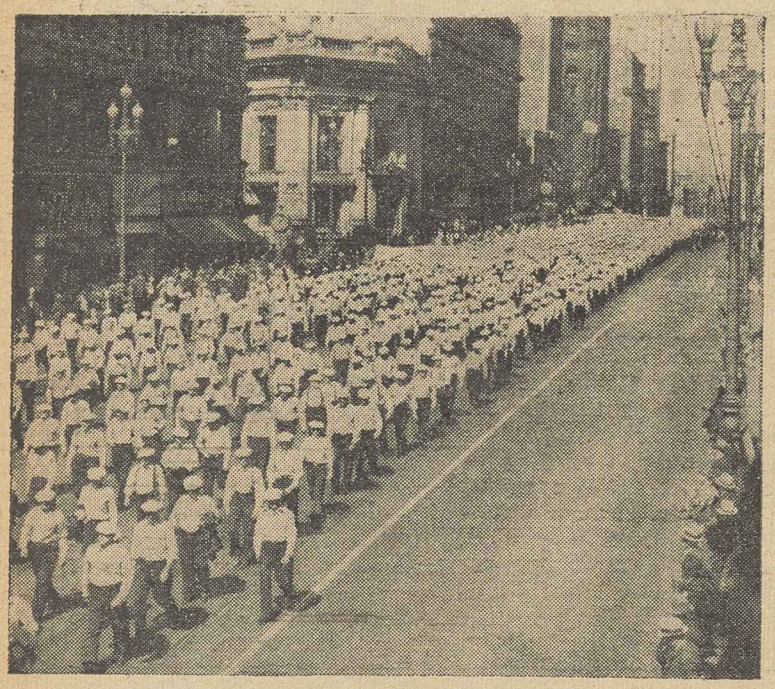
"We are going to have an organization in the Triplex Screw plant," Donovan said, "and I believe that Mr. Weber, company executive, will think twice before resorting to his old-time high-handed methods of intimidation. Because the workers are wise to him, and if he is wise he will quit trying to override the legal rights of his employes, and deal with them in an honorable, peaceful and sensible manner.



"The tables are turned," Donovan said. "The company union is dead, but the union spirit is still alive at the Triplex plant. The company union is an outlawed organization, but the SWOC is a legal, responsible union, and Mr. Weber's efforts to kill it have been declared illegal."

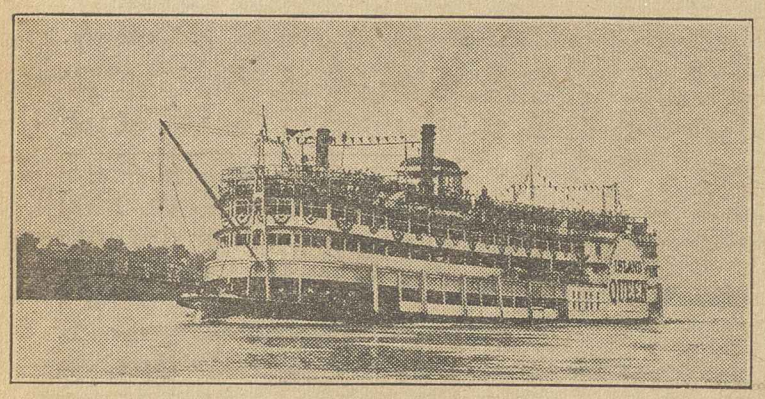
Donovan predicted that in a very short time Triplex Screw employes would convince Mr. Weber that it is to his advantage to have peace and harmony in his plant, and that in order to bring about this condition he will recognize the SWOC and its officers and members.

High-Lights of Labor Day Parades



UNION HISTORY was made on Labor Day, 1940, as scores of thousands of CIO union members paraded through their communities in an impressive display of the strength of their organizations and of the loyalty of the workers to real American democracy.

NEW KENSINGTON, PA.: Second prize in the Allegheny Valley's big parade went to this Bugle and Drum Corps representing Local 2, Aluminum Workers.



CHATTANOOGA: At top, CIO float attracted lots of attention in the big TVA Celebration parade, staged in Chattanooga over Labor Day weekend. Just above, city's labor and public officials banquet in honor of CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray, who delivered the Labor Day address there.

SAN FRANCISCO: Down 'Frisco's Market Street in solid phalanx march members of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union. Parade was one of the most impressive in the city's history.

CINCINNATI: The S. S. Island Queen, which carries AFL workers on their annual Labor Day outing, sailed this year for the first time with a union crew—a CIO union crew.

AFL leaders had justified their patronage in open shop days by claiming the ship could never be organized. It was—by the Inland Boatmen's Division of the National Maritime Union.

STOCKTON, CALIF.: Prizewinning float in Stockton's big CIO parade was this entry of the United Construction Workers.

CIO WINS PAY BOOSTS FOR THOUSANDS

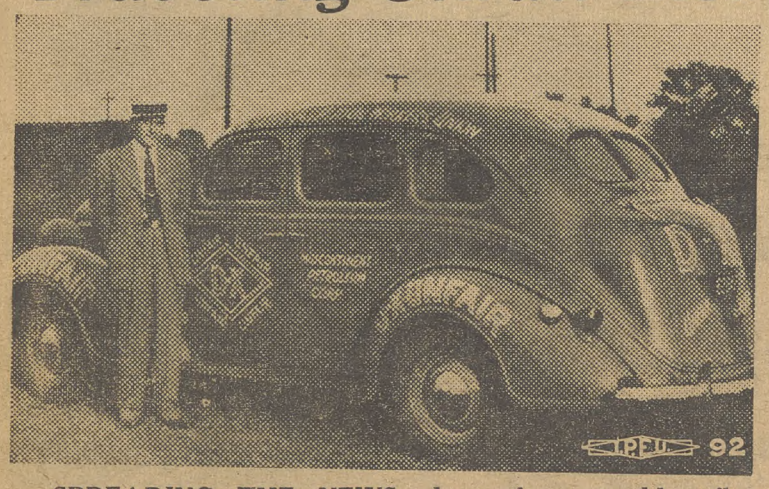
Biggest event of the week was a pay raise for 28,000 employes of the American Woolen Co., negotiated by the Textile Workers Union.

Following conferences with company officials, Pres. Emil Rieve, Vice-Pres. Joseph Salerno and local union officers announced the pay raises will go into effect early in February.

Rieve expressed pleasure that the negotiations ended successfully, "especially in view of the bitter labor struggles of the past, which took place in the city of Lawrence. Since the first union contract with the American Woolen Co. was signed a few years ago, relations between the company and the union have been most amicable and civilized.

"It is my sincere hope that the employers in the rest of the woolen and worsted industry will adopt the same enlightened labor policy that the American Woolen Co. has seen fit to adopt, and grant at once a similar increase in wages without the necessity of resorting to strikes or engaging in any bitter labor struggles."

Santa, Pontiac CIO Stage 'Mass Production' Party



PONTIAC, Mich., Dec. 30. — Santa Claus and the CIO got together here — and the result was a mass production Christmas party, by far the largest ever held in this city.

Fourteen thousand tickets were given out by Pontiac Industrial Union Council, which sponsored the affair.

Largest hall available for the shindig was the high school auditorium, whose capacity is a mere 1,700. As a result, the party was run in shifts, with CIO officials going on the radio to tell the kids when and where to attend the party.

Pres. Bob Poe of the Council said each boy and girl received candy, nuts and fruit. Entertainment was also provided.

Carpet Firm Lifts Wages For 1,500

New York City, Dec. 30 — An annual wage increase of about $20,000 goes into effect tomorrow for 1,500 workers of the Roxbury Carpet Company of Saxonville, Mass., according to Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO.

Judge Backs Miners' Claim to $1,500,000

CLEVELAND, Dec. 30.—A ruling which may put $1,500,000 in the hands of Ohio members of the United Mine Workers of America was handed down here by Commons Pleas Judge Joy Seth Hurd.

Judge Hurd upheld the UMW's contention that last spring's 43-day mine shutdown was a lockout, rather than a strike, and that the miners are entitled to unemployment compensation payments for the working time they lost.

In all, some 20,000 workers will receive $1,500,000 if the decision is upheld.

The ruling was made on an appeal by the U. S. Coal Co., which disputed the compensation claim of Charles Ambrose, one of the lock-out miners at Bradley, Ohio. Other firms joined the company in its fight for an injunction to restrain the state from paying the compensation.

POINTS TO FACTS

Pointing out that the miners had agreed to continue work for 30 to 90 days under the old agreement, Hurd said:

"In this case, the employes were not taking positive action to stop work, but were taking positive action to continue work under the existing terms of their agreement.

"Every strike perforce must be a labor dispute, but it does not follow that every labor dispute is a strike."

Maritime Union Gets Contract; Big Gains Won

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Substantial gains for American seamen were won in the new contract just signed by the National Maritime Union, CIO, and the shipowners after a three months' period of negotiations, union officials declared. The gains were won, they said, in the face of continued sharp opposition from the shipowners and their allies in Congress and Federal agencies.

Under the new contract, which runs for two years, the NMU workers will retain the union hiring hall as it is, based on the rotary system of spreading employment around all union members. This was the point on which the shipowners had declared they never would yield, and which forced the NMU to take a referendum strike vote in preparation for a possible walkout.

OTHER GAINS

Working rules and conditions on board ship were substantially improved, union officials said, bringing greater freedom and other benefits to the men while at sea and in port. Wages were retained at present levels, with a clause in the contract permitting discussion of changes every six months.

Contract A Week— Steel Union '39 Record

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 30.—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee has closed out 1939 with an average of better than one new contract each week throughout the year for a grand total of 638 signed union contracts—an unsurpassed record in trade union history.

Exactly one year ago the SWOC had 565 contracts, showing that 73 firms joined the ever-increasing number of companies dealing with the union during the year.

These 638 union agreements cover firms which are the backbone of the steel industry, including the vast properties of the U. S. Steel Corp. and its subsidiaries, most of the far-flung system of the American Can Co., Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., Wheeling Steel Corp., Timken Roller Bearing Co. and many others.

More than 600,000 steel workers are working under the union agreements. The contracts, together with the far-reaching effects of 1,100 powerful steel union lodges in every production center in the United States and Canada, give a clear indication of the growing strength of the organization.

LABOR BOARD ACTIONS

But, while peaceful industrial relations exist in mills of 638 major companies, union campaigns are moving ahead at full speed at plants of the "Little Steel" segment of the industry, with these important developments:

1. A smashing blow at Republic Steel Corp. was struck by the U. S. Circuit Court in Philadelphia recently through a decision supporting all charges of the SWOC and National Labor Relations Board. Republic was ordered to abide by a Labor Board order to rehire some 5,000 strikers with back pay totaling approximately $7,500,000.

2. Labor Board hearings are expected to get under way soon on SWOC charges against Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. The charges closely parallel those the steel union filed against Republic Steel. Several hundred union members will also be affected by the Board's action.

3. A Labor Board decision ordering Inland Steel Co. to sign a contract with the SWOC is awaiting action by the Federal Circuit Court in Chicago.

BETHLEHEM, WEIRTON

4. A Labor Board decision has ordered Bethlehem Steel Corp. to kill its company unions, and final action is pending in the Federal Circuit Court.

5. Hearings have been completed in the Weirton Steel Co. case and the decision will be forthcoming from the Labor Board.

In a radio address from Baltimore recently, Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC, reviewed the history of the CIO's steel union and pointed out that the steel workers of America have received, since the creation of the SWOC annual wage increases amounting to approximately $287,000,000.

"We have established 1,100 lodges, administering the affairs of our organization at almost every steel plant in America," he said. "We have selected through democratic processes created within our lodges, some 11,000 lodge officers, who are functioning as administrators of the affairs of these lodges.

"We have 8,200 grievance committeemen functioning every day in the mills of the United States, and Canada, taking advantage of the orderly processes provided in these collective bargaining agreements for the adjudication of all the grievances arising under these contracts.

"A sound responsible union," Mr. Murray declared, "is as necessary in a democracy as is the profit system. And let us fervently pray that this great democracy of the United States will be preserved.

"We can help preserve it through the building of unions. The ablest economists of this nation, ministers and priests, successful industrialists, all advocate collective bargaining — all advocate the right and necessity of wage earners of this nation belonging to unions."

Pictures Don't Lie:

CIO Offers Proof Of Starvation in Toledo

By WALTER PETERS

TOLEDO, Dec. 30.—Going on the premise that "pictures don't lie," CIO unions here produced a 2,000-foot movie film depicting actual cases of starvation among the city unemployed families who have been deprived of all aid since Sept. 16.

The film was produced as a challenge to Gov. John W. Bricker who has been telling the nation that there is "no one starving in Ohio."

The governor, city officials and other public officials were invited to see the first showing of the one-hour film here this week. Louis Didisse, president-elect of the Toledo Industrial Union, offered to take the film to Columbus and show it to a special session of the state legislature if Bricker would issue the call for the session.

The CIO began production on the film several weeks ago, after Gov. Bricker refused requests of labor unions and other organizations to call a special legislative session in order to aid the relief crisis in many Ohio cities, including Cleveland and Toledo.

SHOWS LOW FOOD SUPPLIES

The movie shows numerous unemployed families eating nothing but potatoes . . . and not enough of even those. Other scenes show the empty pantries. There are scenes of undernourished young children hungrily looking at a small portion of beans. The pictures were taken at random.

The CIO council president-elect, accompanied by a movie cameraman, walked into the homes of the unemployed and asked permission to take pictures of the food they had on hand. The willingness of practically every family visited to permit the movie taking showed the desperate plight of the unemployed, Didisse declared.

PLEASED AT PROPOSAL

President Roosevelt's promise to Ohio CIO President John Owens to set up army kitchens in the state to avert further suf ng was met with great joy by the victims of the relief crisis.

The City of Toledo recently voted a $100,000 monthly relief appropriation, however, this sum is aiding less than half of the 25,000 men, women and children who are dependent on relief here. Strict red tape prevents many of the worst cases to receive aid from this appropriation.

Your WPA Job:

NYA Conference Sees Need for Big Program

By RALPH HETZEL
CIO Unemployment Director

Talk about the problems of youth has been very popular of late. There have been open-forums and symposia on the air, there have been speeches from a multitude of rostrums; reports and surveys and statistics abound on every hand and the round-table conferences have been too numerous to keep track of.

REACHED OBVIOUS CONCLUSION

The conclusion that is reached is invariable and important enough to stand repetition. The latest conference, held on Dec. 13-14 under the auspices of the National Youth Administration and attended by leaders in business, education, labor and the government, stated this conclusion very simply:

"It is quite impossible to meet the urgent needs of unemployed young people of the present time without the expenditure of larger sums of public money than are now devoted to the solution of employment problems of young people."

This conclusion was inevitable to all present, including former Chamber of Commerce President Henry I. Harriman; Henry S. Dennison, president of the Dennison Mfg. Co., and other prominent business men, after the relevant facts in the situation had been carefully examined.

The conference statement pointed out that:

RECOGNIZED FACTS

"One-third of the young people of this country between the ages of 16 and 25 who are out of school are unable to secure employment.

"At least 4,000,000 young people between these ages are out of school and unemployed.

They agreed, as the CIO has always maintained, that "Employment should, so far as possible, be provided by private business, industry, and agriculture."

They saw very clearly that: "all young people who are out of work and out of school must be provided with opportunities for employment or with opportunities for assistance to continue in school.

"To the extent to which private enterprise does not provide jobs for youth who are out of school, unemployed, and seeking work, public employment should be provided."

In the light of these facts and these needs, the conference examined very carefully the extent to which public aid and public work has been provided for our unemployed young people.

And they found it woefully inadequate.

NYA, CCC FUNDS LOW

They found that the NYA had received an appropriation of only $100,000,000 for the year 1939-1940 with which they were able to employ an average of 225,000 young people on their work projects and to extend aid to around 375,000 high school and college students.

They found that the CCC had received an appropriation of $290,000,000 with which they had been able to take care of an average of 325,000 men and boys in their camps.

They contrasted these meager accomplishments with the only too evident needs, and they were forced to draw the conclusion that much more must be done by the government for American young people.

This is a conclusion with which the CIO is in hearty agreement and which the CIO has advocated for some time. In the CIO legislative program which has just been formulated, the special case of jobless young people was emphasized. A substantial increase in appropriations for their benefit was strongly urged.

It is now up to the Administration and Congress to implement this widespread conviction that youth must be served.

Lawyers, Teachers Plan Labor Law Parleys

Washington, Dec. 30—Prominent leaders in the legal profession and among university teachers are coming together here January 12 for a four-day session conference on labor law and labor relations, it was announced by the conference sponsors, the Natl. Lawyers Guild.

First session will be devoted to discussion of labor and the anti-trust laws, the Guild said, with the Wagner Act and the Norris-LaGuardia anti - injunction act as topic for the second. Rights of minority groups under the Wagner Act and labor issues in time of war emergency will be main topics in the third and fourth.

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, will address the second session. "Leaders of the bar, trade unions, and representatives of government and business will participate," the Guild said.

"The Guild confidently expects that the presentation of all points of view will crystallize the issues and provide a common ground for their solution in the best public interest."

CONVENTIONS:

United Mine Workers To Meet In Columbus For 50th Anniversary

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. — Officers of the United Mine Workers of America, the CIO's largest and oldest union, have issued the official call for the 36th consecutive constitutional convention which will open January 23, 1940, in Columbus, O.

The call was signed by President John L. Lewis, Vice-President Philip Murray and Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy.

With this convention, the miners' union will pass the half century milestone, celebrating the 50th anniversary of its formation. A new history of the union called "Coal and Unionism" is now in process of publication and will be ready for circulation at the time the convention meets.

Issued in honor of the UMWA's golden jubilee, the book was written by David J. McDonald and Edward A. Lynch, who between them have had 25 years' service with the United Mine Workers, it was announced at UMW headquarters here.

The only complete history of the UMWA so far to appear, the book covers not only the record of the present union but also describes the various miners' unions as far back as 1849 which preceded the organization of the UMWA in 1890.

Arkansas Council Holds Meet at Fort Smith

FORT SMITH, Ark., Dec. 30. — The second convention of the Arkansas CIO Industrial Union Council opens here tomorrow at the Labor Center. CIO unions from all over the state will send delegates, the largest number coming from the United Mine Workers.

Entertainment for the visiting delegates is being arranged by the Fort Smith unionists, and a number of outstanding speakers will address the convention. Dave Fowler, UMW district president and CIO regional director is expected to attend the second day of the convention.

A program calling for an extensive organizing drive throughout the state will be among the important matters to be taken up by the Arkansas Council.

Die Casters Convention In Capital Next May

TOLEDO, Dec. 30.—The Natl. Association of Die Casting Workers, fast-growing CIO affiliate, announced today that its sixth annual convention will be held in Washington starting May 2.

The meeting hall and hotel headquarters will be announced at a later date, Pres. George Peacock and Sec.-Treas. Edward Cheyfitz said.

U. S. Must Solve Key Problems in '40—Lewis

"Within the New Year, 1940, this nation will make decisions of profound importance to its future.

"It must decide whether it will listen to those who would divert attention from the difficulties of our internal problems and stake the nation's future on the vagaries of wars abroad. It must decide whether upon the first signs of increased business we should abandon all measures designed to bring security to American wage earners, whether we should repeat again the disastrous mistakes of 1937.

PRES. JOHN L. LEWIS

"Labor believes that the American people will vigorously reiterate their conviction that America's problems must and will be solved in this country by American methods, that we must steadfastly turn aside from giddy dreams of foreign ventures.

"The American people will, we believe, demand that those who are without work, food and shelter shall not be abandoned. They will require of their government that it adopt a vigorous progressive internal program, intensifying its efforts for the welfare of the many."

100% CIO Labor for Building Project In Washington

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The first building job in the District of Columbia with 100% CIO workers was announced this week by the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, CIO affiliate in the construction industry.

Under the closed-shop contract earlier agreed on between the UCWOC and a large number of local contractors, the erection of a modern printing plant in Silver Spring, Md., Washington suburb, will be done entirely with members of the UCWOC.

Signers of the contract for erection of the building are the Cornelius Realty Co., of Indianapolis, Ind., and Richard W. Frey, Inc., president of Construction Industry Employers, Inc., of this city. The latter is the association of contractors with which the UCWOC recently signed its contract.

Members of the UCWOC in Washington have been working for some weeks on various jobs obtained by subcontractors of the association, but the new contract marks the first complete building here under the UCWOC contract with the contractors.

SEATTLE PACTS

Six contracts were signed between Local 42, UCWOC, and contractors in Seattle, Wash., and vicinity.

The agreements provide the 6-hour day within city limits and the 8-hour day outside the city, the five-day week and a high wage scale.

Wage Boost

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 30—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee has signed its third consecutive contract with the G. I. Sellers Co. here.

The agreement provided a 2½c hourly increase for 250 workers.

10% Increase

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 30 — A 10 per cent wage increase for the workers in the plant of the Decca Record Company here was won in a closed shop contract signed by Local 237, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO.

Vacations with pay, straight plant-wide seniority, and double time for Sundays and holidays were also provided in the new agreement which runs for two years with the exception of the wage scale. This may be reopened for upward revision at the end of one year.

Bargaining Rights

Philadelphia, Dec. 30 — Sole bargaining rights for 430 employes of the E. Hubschman's Sons, Inc.. leather plant, were won last week by Local 30, International Fur & Leather Workers, CIO, as the result of a poll conducted by the National Labor Relations Board.

The election, held in the plant with the company's consent, was won 272 to 143 by the CIO union. No other labor organization was on the ballot.

Pay Up 41%

Detroit, Dec. 30 — Wages shot skywards like a thermometer in a blast furnace when Local 389 of the Oil Workers Intl. Union signed a contract with Penola, Inc., subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Pay jumped as much as $30 a month, with other increases running from 16% to 41%. More raises are to be granted six months hence under the terms of the agreement.

The Challenge of 1940

Opening its eyes on a war-torn world, the young year 1940 may wish it had never been born. And millions of people in every country may shudder in the cold dawn of New Year's day at all the prospects of misery and trouble ahead.

Even in the peaceful United States, the European war casts ominous shadows over the path before us. Elements of the social hysteria which war induces have entered our own national life. They are being deliberately created and stimulated by reactionary interests as a screen for attacks on labor organization, civil liberties and progressive legislation.

Labor-baiters, profiteers and political tories are looking forward to fishing in muddied waters. They think they can use war scares to confuse domestic issues; to cut down provisions for the unemployed and for social services; and to take away labor's rights.

But this is only one side of the picture. If mankind cringed and retreated every time reaction raised its head, no progress would ever have been made; no unions would have been organized, no democratic gains secured.

Fortunately red-blooded men and women react otherwise. When they cherish their liberties, are conscious of their goals and determined to reach them, the virulence of reactionary opposition serves as a challenge and actually steels their fighting strength.

The other side of the 1940 picture is full of hope. Thanks to the CIO, the New Year finds American labor better organized, under more progressive leadership and more politically conscious than ever before in its history.

Increased organizing activity, an influx of new members, more regular dues payments, Labor Board election victories, new contracts with wage increases and many other improvements—all these present signs, as the New Year begins, point to the fact that the CIO is a solidly organized and advancing movement.

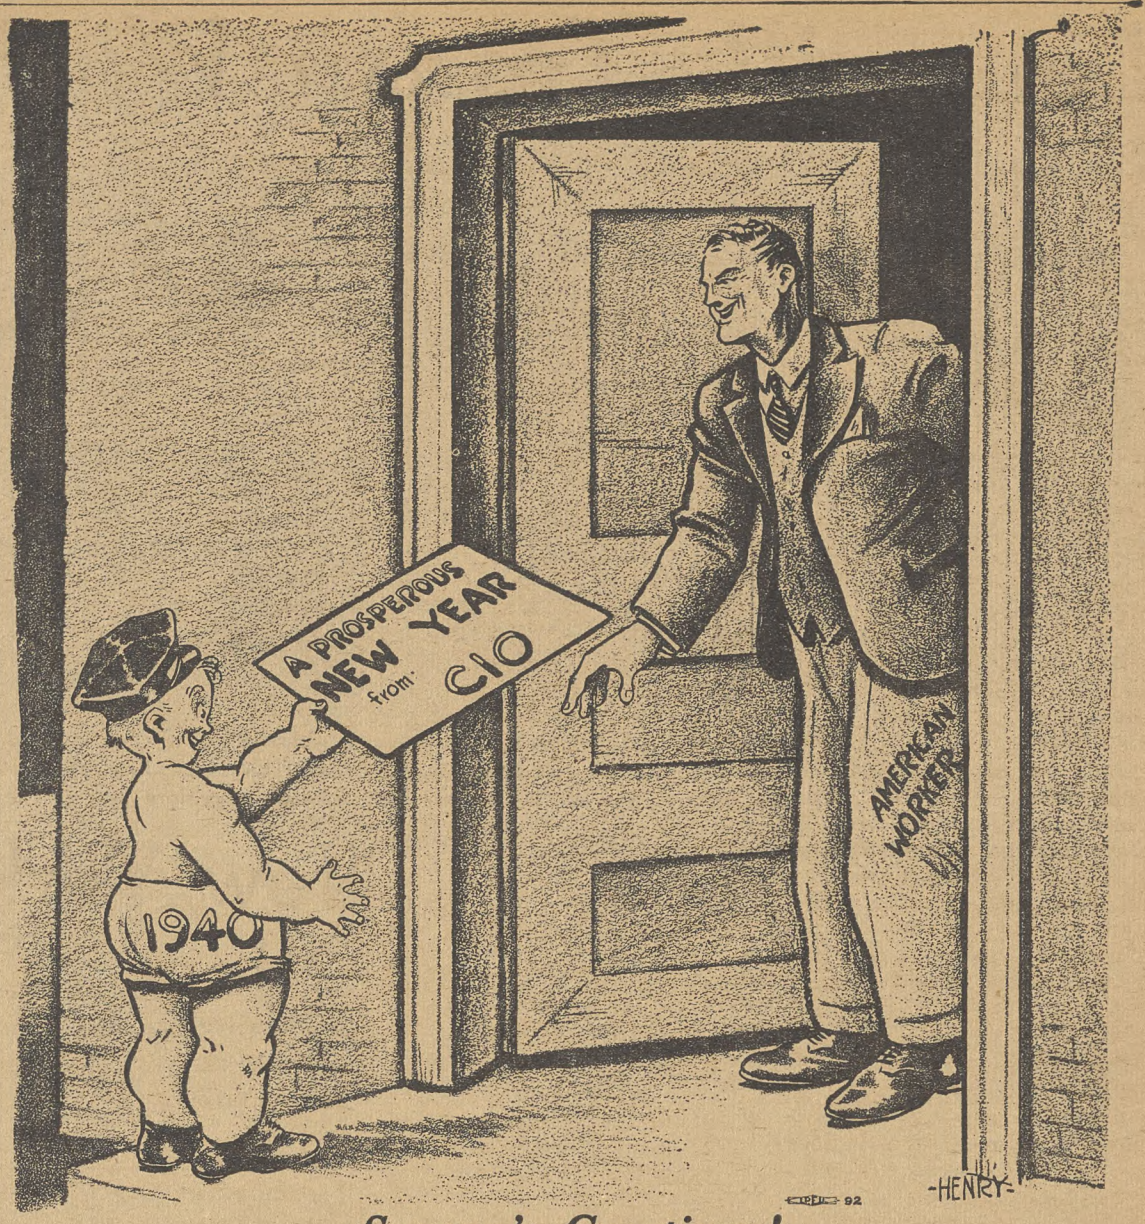
As the CIO advances industrially, in that proportion are the political forces of liberalism and progress strengthened. For the membership of the CIO is united behind a program that calls for no involvement of the United States in war; for preservation of our civil liberties and legislative gains; for more adequate provision for the unemployed and aged; and for new advances in social legislation.

Labor and the liberal forces to which it gives a lead have the power to defeat the threatening schemes of reaction in the coming year, and to make it a year of peace, progress and increased prosperity. But it will require organization and more organization, both industrially and politically; and courage, conviction and determination. That is the challenge of 1940.

What's Behind the "Labor Shortage" Talk?

There has been much talk in the papers of late about an alleged shortage of labor.

There is no such shortage, but quite the contrary, researchers of the Congress of Industrial Organizations point out in a recently published leaflet.



Some 9,500,000 men and women are out of jobs right now. More than five and a half million workers are registered by the U. S. Employment Service as seeking jobs. Since 1929, six million additional wage earners have entered the market for jobs.

There is no real shortage even of specially skilled workers. The files of the U. S. Employment Service show that there are many hundreds of thousands of skilled mechanics of all sorts unemployed. And the CIO unions in the industries requiring much skilled labor scoff at the suggestions of a shortage.

Why then the talk of labor shortage that emanates from chambers of commerce and reactionary financial sources?

It is misleading propaganda put out for a deliberate purpose. That purpose is to reduce public expenditures on behalf of the unemployed, and to wipe out WPA, public works and housing.

This propaganda is a danger signal. It is a warning to labor and all progressives to guard against this planned raid on the public welfare.

Season's Greetings!

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

A Year of Conflict and Progress

WAR speeds up the tempo of history. It shakes up economics and politics even in non-warring countries. It sharpens issues.

In the United States, the speeding up of social and political development in the war — year of 1939 was reflected in the increased hardness and aggressiveness of reaction, on the one hand; and in an increasingly solid, expanding and purposeful labor movement, on the other.

The Tory Conspiracy

When John L. Lewis testified before a Congressional Committee and described Vice President Garner as a "labor-baiting, whiskey-drinking, poker-playing, evil old man," he did more than spike the presidential aspirations of the Texas arch-tory.

The CIO president drew a vivid picture for the whole country of just what had been happening in Congress. He showed how Garner had been the instigator of a conspiracy between tory Democrats and Republicans directed against all legislation of benefit to labor and the common people.

Progressive labor, as represented by the CIO, had to fight a bitter and continuous battle against this conspiracy, in defense of the Wagner labor act, the WPA program, the wage-hour act and other legislative gains. The degree to which it checked the tory offensive was a measure of the CIO's growing political strength.

Anti-Union Drive Defeated

On the industrial field, reaction launched repeated attacks against labor organization. Its major offensive was the prolonged coal lockout. Powerful interests outside the industry chose this battlefield for their attempt to halt the progress of the CIO, by breaking its backbone union, the United Mine Workers.

The tremendous victory of the UMW, in winning union shop agreements covering 600,000 miners, decisively checked this offensive and turned the tide in favor of the whole CIO.

AFL Leaders' Role

In its 1939 political and industrial offensive, reaction found an ally in the discredited leadership of the AFL.

Just as they joined in the congressional attack on the Wagner act, so on the industrial field these leaders aided the anti-union employers by chartering every kind of rump and dual outfit to fight and disrupt the great industrial unions of the CIO.

Like a college boy swallowing a goldfish, the AFL courted indigestion by trying to assimilate that poor fish, Homer Martin. Its attempt to split the United Automobile Workers met with dismal failure.

1939 witnessed the rebirth of a stronger and more solid CIO auto workers union. The union won higher wages and better agreements in its successful Briggs, General Motors, Chrysler and other strikes. It mopped up the remains of the Martin clique in repeated Labor Board elections, which gave record majorities to the CIO.

CIO Progress

Similar attempts by the AFL in the textile and other industries flopped just as completely. Meanwhile the AFL developed increasing internal troubles of its own, and 1939 saw the defection of one of its oldest and most respected affiliates, the Intl. Typographical Union.

Every union of the CIO made decisive organizing progress in 1939, as shown in increased membership, many elections won, and countless new agreements bringing better conditions. The CIO also made a good start in a new field by setting up the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

The emphatic and increasing preference of American industrial workers for the modern unionism of the CIO was shown in Board election results during the year, in which the CIO polled far more workers' votes than all other unions combined.

Court Attacks

Checked on the political and industrial fields, reactionary interests tried to use the courts for their union-smashing purposes. The Apex verdict against the hosiery workers and the $7,500,000 suit of Republic Steel against the CIO showed their hand. But subsequent court decisions were won by the CIO in both cases.

A great victory for labor's civil rights was also won in the Supreme Court ruling on the Hague injunction in Jersey City.

Ready to Advance

The San Francisco convention of the CIO revealed progressive labor in a stronger position than ever before, and ready to take advantage of the economic upturn with a renewed and more intensive drive to organize the unorganized.

The close of the year was marked by the announcement of CIO's legislative program for 1940. Asserting labor's opposition to any involvement of the United States in war, the CIO calls upon Congress to devote its major attention to solving our domestic problems of unemployment and insecurity. It rejects the idea of any retreat before the gathering forces of reaction and, on the contrary, calls for a determined advance to new goals of social progress.

In the light of the real facts, Congress must be called upon to increase, not decrease, provision for the unemployed and aged, and to launch an expanded public works program that will really put America to work.

Louisville Transit Workers May Strike

Fight Company Union

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 30. — Complete tie-up of all transit service in Louisville was scheduled for the first week in January as Local 176 of the CIO Transport Workers Union prepared to call out the 900 employes of the Louisville Railways Company to enforce demands for wage increases, vacations, abolition of the company's infamous spy system and recognition of the TWU as sole bargaining agency.

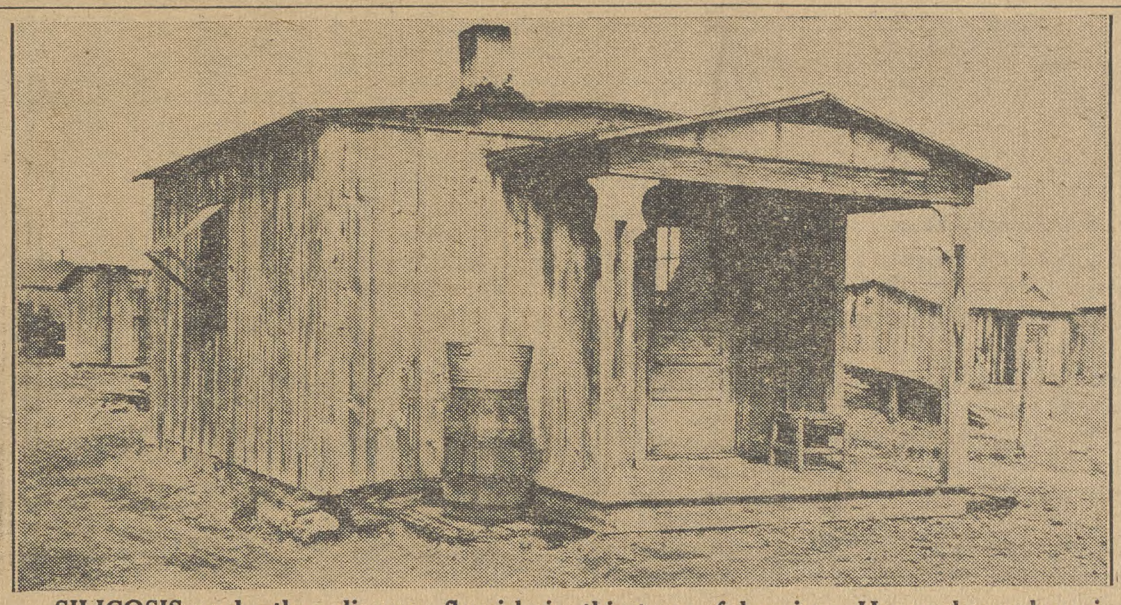
Public sentiment in this city definitely is on the side of the trolley workers as four weeks of campaigning has culminated in efforts by Mayor Scholtz and Federal labor conciliators to break down the stubborn refusal of the company to deal with none but its admittedly company-dominated and member-less company union.

POSTPONED BY REQUEST

Plans for a strike, which was to have gone into effect two days before Christmas, were recalled by M. J. Britt, international TWU representative, at the request of the Mayor and Federal labor officials.

Strike authorization, however, was still in force and Britt and J. Gilbert Prather, president of the Local, have announced they would put it into effect at few moments' notice should the company attempt any further dismissals of union members. To date eight trolley workers have been fired for union activity.

MINERS PROMISE AID



The TWU's organizing campaign is receiving active support from all forces in the city. Sam Caddy, head of the United Mine Workers and CIO director here, has been one of the main negotiators for the transit men. Harry F. Petty, president of the AFL Central Labor Council has pledged aid to the trolley men in the event of a strike.

Further encouragement to Louisville's transit workers came with a telegram that the TWU International Executive Board, meeting in quarterly session in New York, had voted full authorization and pledged full support for the impending strike.

The dismissed union men over the holidays received Christmas greetings from Michael J. Quill, president and John Santo, secretary-treasurer of the TWU. The greetings were accompanied by gifts of cash.

Louisville transit workers have sought bona fide unionization for many years. In 1936 the AFL Amalgamated Association had signed up the majority of the Railway men but Amalgamated officials skipped town as soon as they learned the company would not give up its 25-year-old company union.

Today, with the TWU, the men are determined to get wage boosts of at least 10 cents an hour, vacations with pay and other necessary improvements. At present they work seven days a week, 52 weeks a year.

New York CIO Offers '40 Program

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Sharply attacking both Republican and Democratic parties for anti-labor acts during the last state legislative sessions, the powerful New York CIO Industrial Union Council today made known its 18-point program for the coming year.

"During the 1939 legislative session, the two major political parties, though they had theretofore pretended to be friends of labor, nevertheless not only failed to enact legislation which was unquestionably in the interests of labor and the people as a whole, but combined to stifle labor's legitimate demands," the legislative committee asserted.

Ratification of the child labor amendment, enactment of a 40-40 state wage-hour law and unqualified opposition to amendments to the State Labor Relations Act are key points in the program. The AFL's state body is seeking modification of the "baby Wagner Act," while the Republican majority leader in the House revealed the GOP will seek "slight modifications" in all state labor laws.

PRESENTED TO LEHMAN

The CIO program, drafted by the state council's legislative committee—which is headed by Vice-Pres. Hugh Thompson, regional director in Buffalo—was submitted to Gov. Herbert Lehman, Democrat, last week with a recommendation that he study it while preparing his annual message to the legislature.

While fighting amendments to the state Wagner Act, the CIO will urge its extension to "insure the rights and benefits of collective bargaining to employes of non-profit institutions." It will seek additional legislation to provide "effective methods of collective negotiations and bargaining" for government employes, and enactment of a bill forbidding state loans, grants or contracts to violators of either the national or state labor relations acts.

WIDER COVERAGE

The program calls for wider coverage provisions under the unemployment compensation plan, with shortening of the waiting period and extension of the period of benefits.

A special plank pledges full support to farmers efforts to "engage in direct marketing free from control of monopolies," to flood control and to crop insurance plans.

HOUSING PROGRAM LATER

Thompson, in announcing the program for the state's several hundred thousand CIO workers, said a special housing legislative plank will be announced at some later date.

CIO unions in the state, while supporting their own demands for state legislation, are "100% behind the national legislative program announced by Pres. John L. Lewis in Washington, Thompson added.

Plan Big Campaign In Pennsy

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Dec. 30. — Plans to start the greatest union drive in the history of this region to extend the benefits of a strong labor organization to thousands of unorganized workers in Wyoming Valley, are being laid by the CIO Council here.

More than 200 officials of locals of the United Mine Workers attended an opening meeting and pledged their moral and financial support to the drive. At a meeting on January 5, the CIO Council will list the industries it will ask to sign CIO contracts.

Pressman To Discuss CIO Program on Air

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 — CIO members and friends of labor should tune in their radios next Wednesday night, January 3, from 10:15 to 10:30 p. m., on Columbia Broadcasting System stations, to hear Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, discuss the CIO Legislative Program for the coming session of the U. S. Congress.

Pressman will analyze and explain the CIO program for jobs, security and peace the same day that Congress opens its first 1940 session.

Time: Wednesday, January 3, 1940, 10:15 to 10:30 p. m., Columbia Broadcasting System, coast to coast network.

CIO Labor For New D. C. Building

UCWOC moved ahead vigorously despite the holiday lull on a wide front with activity in such widely scattered places as Oregon, Philadelphia, New Jersey, Detroit, California and Maryland. Meetings, radio talks, conferences with contractors, and similar actions were being taken in these and other centers.

Speaking to the Wayne County (Detroit) Industrial Union Council, August Scholle, CIO regional director, outlined the aims of the UCWOC and told of the encouraging response from construction workers in his area. R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, is a member of the UCWOC.

Scholle said:

"There is a large potential membership for the UCWOC in the Detroit area. They say they have the building trades organized here. Well, in the past month I have spoken to some of the building tradesmen. They come to my office asking the assistance of the CIO and I can get plenty of these people to testify they are not organized."

From the west coast came warm support to the UCWOC from the entire CIO there and pledges of complete cooperation. The Los Angeles Industrial Union Council has started an active campaign in the city.

CIO Marks A Year Of Progress; Many Tasks Ahead

Nineteen Thirty-Nine was a great year for labor in America. Major gains were made for progress, democracy, peace by CIO affiliates. Reactionary attacks were defeated on a dozen fronts. Led by the magnificent victory of the United Mine Workers in May, the CIO held and increased all its gains of the past four years.

Major tasks waiting accomplishment were faced by the CIO in its convention keynotes of organizing the unorganized, bringing a solution to America's No. 1 problem, unemployment, keeping the U. S. out of entanglement in foreign wars, liberalizing social legislation for the American people.

Below are recorded in telegraphic form outstanding achievements and programs of the CIO over the past 12 months.

JANUARY

Steel Workers Organizing Committee wins Labor Board order outlawing Bethlehem Corporation's 20 year old company union, "cease and desist" on interference with CIO union.

FEBRUARY

Two hundred and fifty thousand automobile workers, members of the United Automobile Workers of America, reject splitters, vote overwhelming support for CIO.

MARCH

CIO committee, headed by Pres. Lewis, proposes labor unity on basis of American Congress of Labor, to be made up of CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods. CIO, AFL, unaffiliated unions join in praising move.

United Rubber Workers win new contract with Goodrich Co., Packinghouse Workers win Stockyards agreement. American Newspaper Guild settles six month strike in Wilkes-Barre with Pres. Lewis' aid.

APRIL

LaFollette-Thomas 'Oppressive Labor Practices' bill to outlaw finks, industrial spies, employers' arsenals introduced, wins labor, progressive support.

R. J. Thomas and CIO progressive leaders elected in Auto Workers polls, pushing Homer Martin-AFL disrupters into wastebasket of union history.

MAY

Led by Pres. John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers smash seven week lockout of 500,000 workers, win union shop, bolstering entire CIO and American labor movement for struggle against reactionary attacks.

CIO marks second anniversary of Chicago Memorial Day Massacre, when 10 CIO steel workers were murdered for exercising their constitutional right to assemble peaceably.

JUNE

CIO Executive Board maps plans for mass organizing drives, aid for jobless, answers AFL leaders' failure to accept CIO unity proposal.

Mayor Frank, "I am the Law" Hague of Jersey City tangles with Bill of Rights, loses after vigorous CIO campaign.

JULY

Pres. Lewis blasts Garner fight against labor, social progress, describes him as "labor-baiting, whisky drinking, evil old man" bent on destroying past several years' gains of American people.

CIO forms United Construction Workers Organizing Committee to organize millions of unorganized building workers, bring order to construction industry.

AUGUST

United Automobile Workers sign new General Motors contract, win Packard, Motor Products Labor Board elections by overwhelming majorities.

SEPTEMBER

CIO helps New York dairy farmers win strike for decent return on labor, investment in milk supply to N. Y. monopolies.

Pres. Lewis, Philip Murray, Sidney Hillman, Jas. Carey hail CIO progress in Labor Day messages. Lewis emphasizes labor opposition to war, warns of attacks on labor's rights, calls on U. S. statesmen to pay attention to domestic problems.

OCTOBER

"Organize the Unorganized" keynote of second CIO convention in San Francisco. Keep U. S. out of foreign wars stressed by Lewis, CIO officials. Convention calls for higher wages, better conditions as answer to American people's needs.

CIO wins Chrysler Corp. election, 10 to 1, polling 80 per cent of vote.

NOVEMBER

Lewis warns politicians labor support depends on pledges fulfilled, not on campaign promises.

DECEMBER

CIO Legislative Program for jobs, security peace announced for 1940 U. S. Congress.

Plans for major CIO organizing drive announced for Southern areas.

CIO United Automobile Workers win Chrysler contract, raise earnings $6,000,000.

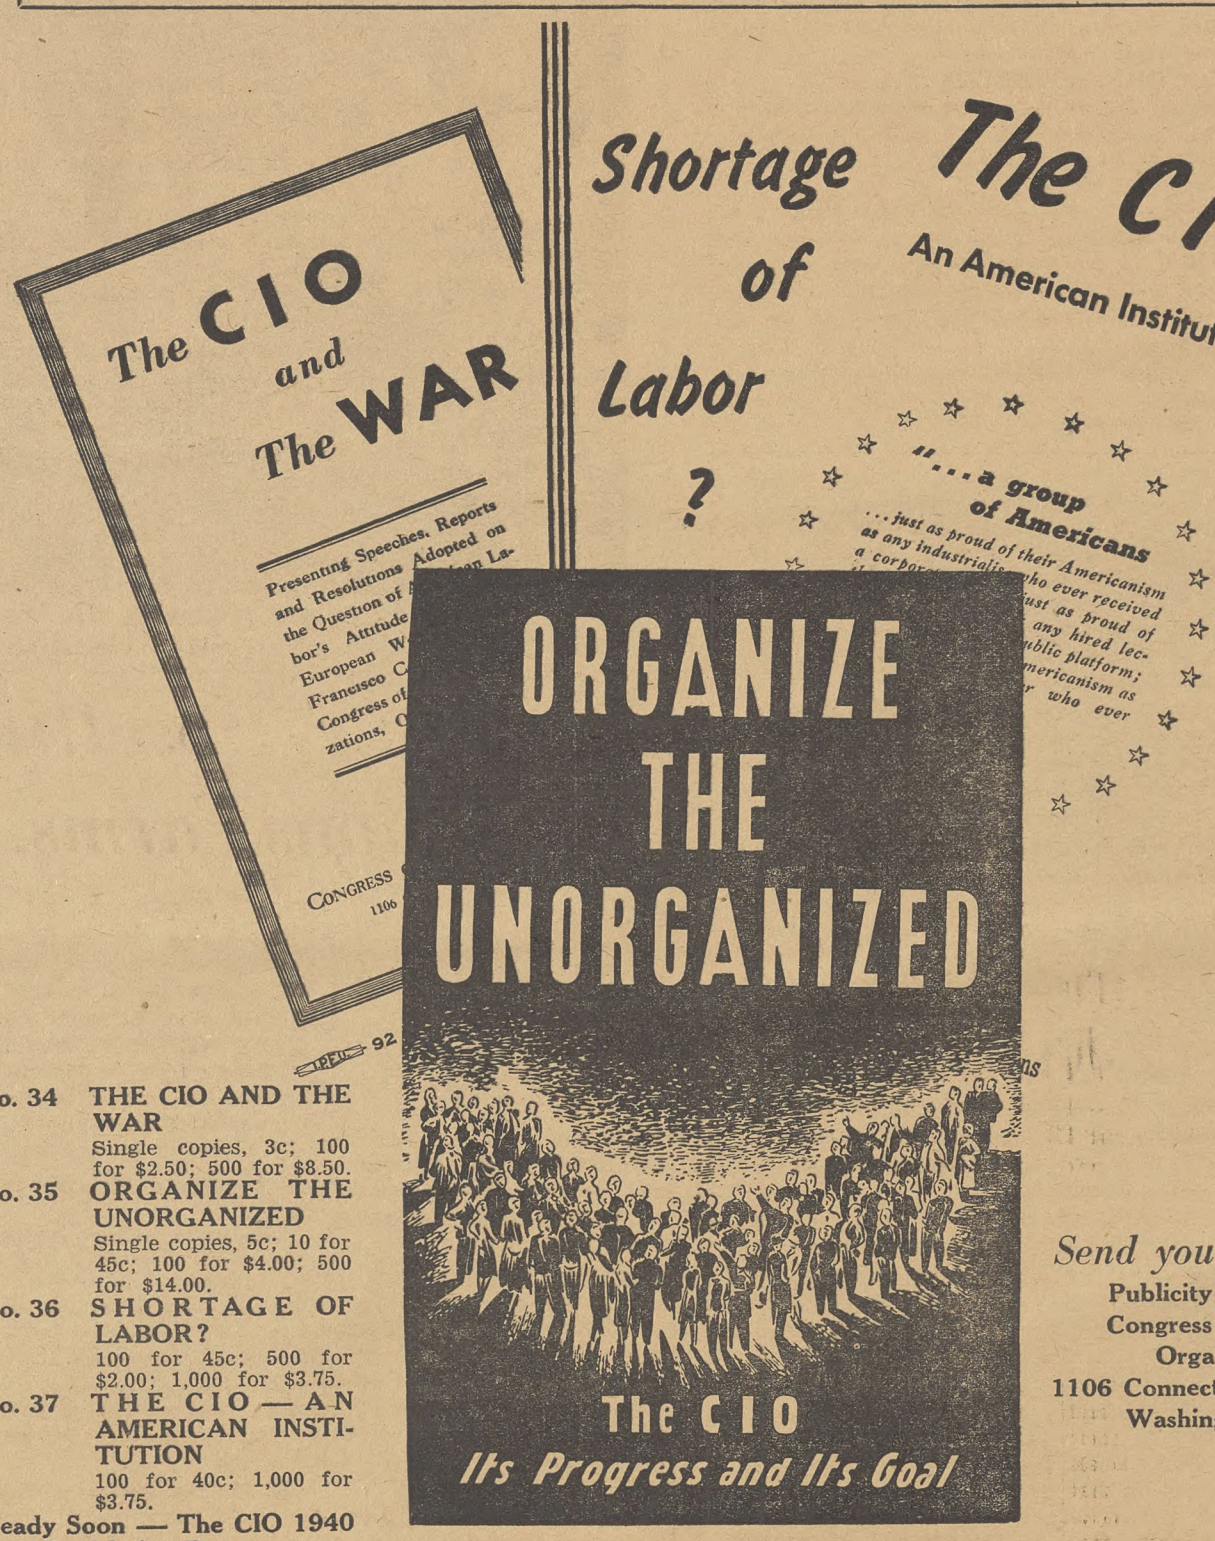
Natl. Maritime Union signs new contract with shipowners.

Flint Bus Drivers Win Strike, Raises

FLINT, Mich., Dec. 30.—Flint trolley bus employes won a five-cent-an-hour wage increase, strict seniority rights and other improved working conditions at the culmination of an 11-day strike conducted here by Local 170 of the CIO Transport Workers Union.

Settlement of the strike came within 24 hours after International TWU President Michael J. Quill arrived on the scene to confer with Flint Trolley Coach, Inc. officials and the three-man commission appointed by Gov. Dickinson to settle the strike.

With the new wage increase, Flint transit workers now receive an hourly wage rate of 73 cents, representing an increase of 30 per cent since they joined the Transport Workers Union about two years ago.



The strike was successfully led by William E. Dorland, president of Local 170 and Robert F. Wihler, TWU International representative who came here from Detroit. The closed shop and other beneficial terms attained in the first contract signed in 1937 remain in force.

U. S. Slaps MeatPacking Chiselers

Washington, Dec. 30—Packinghouse employers who hoped to chisel an exemption out of the Wage and Hour Division to allow them to work employes over the hours permitted by the Act were disappointed in the ruling of the Division that such exemptions could not be allowed.

The packers, who have resisted the Wage Hour law and Wagner Act, and who have a long record of fighting organization of their workers, were told that Congress in granting "only partial exemption to handling, slaughtering and dressing operations" clearly meant that "complete exemption was not intended."

The Labor Reader:

The Workers' Press

By C. W. FOWLER

When the CIO started out to modernize the American labor movement, it did more than apply correct industrial policies to the job of organizing the unorganized with new vigor and effectiveness. It brought new life to a venerable and at times somewhat stuffy American institution—the labor press.

Labor leaders of every generation, from pre-Gompers days on, have emphasized the importance of union publications for union readers, but until the men who started the CIO set out to organize mass production industries, little was done to make union papers a living part of the labor movement. With exceptions, they tended to remain a little dull and complacent, resembling the views of self-satisfied craft union officials rather than serving the interests of the workers who were expected to read them.

The advent of the CIO changed this. Today there are more labor papers published in America than at any previous time, with an estimated 700 appearing. A great many of them are modern, up-to-date affairs, presenting organized labor's point of view to its members and to the public efficiently and attractively. They are able to compete, in many cases, with the commercial press in spite of its millions of dollars and its squadrons of expensive talent.

HOW IT CAN BE DONE

How to start, build up and maintain a labor paper as a valuable arm of a union is told in a new booklet just published by the Labor Press Committee of the CIO American Newspaper Guild. The booklet, divided into eight sections, goes into the process of setting up a paper, its function within the organization, its appeal to the general public, editorial content and ways and means generally of making it an editorial and a financial success.

"The labor movement," the Guild pamphlet points out, "lives in a soil . . . still suffering from acid conditions being created for it by many agencies, notably the commercial press, the radio and the schools.

"The most open and effective medium of opposition of the commercial press. The steady warfare which it conducts against the labor movement is too deftly concealed for many people to notice.

"With rare exceptions, however, the papers try, and to a considerable degree succeed, in putting it in an unfavorable light with the public, the still unorganized workers and even, to some degree, with a union's own members."

MEETING THE WORKERS' NEEDS

This steady campaign of hostility from the commercial press can be counteracted, the Guild Press Committee maintains, if the union's publications meet the workers' needs that are not met in the employer-owned dailies.

Coverage of his union is the most important item; this is where the greatest omissions and distortions of the commercial press are made. Next to that comes reliable news and interpretations of economic and social factors affecting the workers' industry, and consequently his standards of living and working.

THE NEED FOR PLANNING

Only the labor movement's own press can give the worker this essential information, since little chance is seen for a commercial press favorable or even consistently fair to labor. To do this, the union paper must be as carefully planned and adequately supported as a modern organizing drive is planned. It must be modern, attractive, financially stable, prepared and put out by experienced workers who know the newspaper trade as well as the industry whose union they serve.

Financial stability does not require huge sums of money; many union publications start and succeed on modest outlays, and advertising can usually be obtained. Many services are available to union papers, such as those offered by the national CIO, by Federated Press, and the like.

But planning, the Guild Press Committee points out, is important. "To groups starting a paper and to groups considering the project, we would say," it concludes, "that the time to make the paper successful is before it starts."

Mid-Continent Strike Passes 12-Month Mark

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 30.—Their ranks still strong and firm, 900 oil workers rounded out 12 months of their strike against the Mid-Continent Oil Co. and a host of allies in the officialdom of local and state governments.

Far from discouraged by the length of their struggle, the workers pledged themselves to continued battle against the oil firm until it bargains with their organization, the CIO Oil Workers Int. Union.

All labor throughout the southwest is watching the strike, and helping the unionists in their struggle, and Oil Workers officials declared, because they realize that failure in this fight will mean continuance of the peonage system now in effect in Oklahoma and the southwest area.

"These strikers do not ask for pity, or sympathy, but they do ask for substantial aid to carry on their battle," a union leader said in appealing for funds for the strikers' families. He also asked for increased consumer action against D-X Gasoline and Diamond 760 Motor Oils, both of which are on the CIO unfair list.

'Trade Union Facts' for '40 Available

New York, Dec. 30 — "Trade Union Facts," pocket sized manual of ready information on the labor movement, has been issued for 1939-40 by the Labor Research Assn.

This year's issue contains 2,100 "labor facts and figures" and gives such information as the number of unions in the U. S., number and extent of strikes, progress of labor legislation, main findings of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee, and the like.

Oregon CIO Meets In February

Portland, Ore., Dec. 30 — The second annual convention of the Oregon CIO Industrial Union Council will be held Feb. 10-11 at the Moose Hall in Eugene.

An official call signed by John Brost, state CIO Council president, and Ralph People, secretary, has been sent to all CIO affiliates in the state.

Warn of Danger In Under-Manned Steam Plants

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. — Undermanning of the Brooklyn Edison Co. power plant, largest steam plant in the world, is so serious that it "must ultimately lead to disaster," the Amalgamated Utility Workers, CIO, have told the N. Y. Public Service Commission here.

Union information, following a similar report on the Manhattan and other units of the company, shows that "the headlong economy drive" has brought the plant to a point where a disastrous breakdown is threatened, the union said.

Reductions in working force have taken place while production of power has increased by more than 25 per cent. As a result, according to the letter of Franklin E. DeLude, union vice-president, the inadequate staff of workers is unable to maintain the plant at the point of efficiency required by safety, continuous operation, and public welfare.

HEALTH MENACE

In addition, the dilapidated state of the plant makes it a community health menace, since its stacks continuously pour out "huge billows of smoke and cinders," day and night, winter and summer. Tuberculosis, pneumonia, rickets and anemia, all promoted by a smoky atmosphere, are high in the plant's area, and household cleanliness is almost impossible.

The union memorandum concluded by urging the Commission, "in the best interests of the general public and on behalf of the employes of the Edison companies" to make an immediate and thorough investigation of the conditions described.

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Washington, Dec. 30.—Mechanization of agriculture and rural unemployment are rapidly changing the pattern of life of farm labor, Dr. W. W. Alexander, Farm Security Administrator, says in his annual report issued this month.

Since 1930, writes Dr. Alexander, "hundreds of thousands of farm families have been pushed off the land" by drought, foreclosure, or mechanization.

"Most of these uprooted families," he adds, "were forced to take to the highways in search of work. Few found work in industry; the cities were already filled with the unemployed. For the most part the jobs they found were seasonal day labor in the only trade they knew, farming.

EMPLOY MIGRATORY WORKERS

"The largest employers of these displaced rural families were the mechanized farms, which have been growing in number and extend for a decade. These farms have eliminated most of the resident labor formerly needed, but they still require large number of workers for short periods to do the hard labor involved in thinning, harvesting or packing processes not yet fully mechanized.

"Although this mechanization has resulted in greater efficiency in as much as less labor is needed, under the present system it means that socially there is no advantage, as few of the seasonally employed workers are able to find other employment between seasons.

SURPLUS OF LABOR

"Moreover," Dr. Alexander points out, "there has been a great surplus of farm labor and consequent unemployment even at peak seasons. The migrant families also must travel continually from one crop area to another, as they follow the harvests."

As solutions for the problem, Dr. Alexander calls for new and more stable employment for the surplus workers, and in decent shelter, steadier employment and schools for the children, for those who must continue to be seasonal migrant workers.

Paper Company Signs Agreement

Richmond, Va., Dec. 30 — A contract between the United Paper Workers Local Industrial Union 1013 and the Bedford Pulp & Paper Company of Big Island, Va., was announced this week by Ray Thomason, CIO regional director.

The agreement provides for a closed shop, check off of dues, time and half for Sunday and holiday work, and no increase in house rents unless jointly agreed to by the union and the company.

Probers Uncover More Anti-Labor Violence

'Associated Farmers' Financing Told To Committee

By DICK HARTFORD
Federated Press

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 30. — The senate civil liberties committee completed the first part of its investigation of west coast terrorism when the story of last fall's cotton strike was told.

Lieut. Col. Charles Henderson, an aide to Gov. Culbert L. Olson, swore that he saw farmer-vigilantes armed with clubs, pick handles, automobile cranks and other weapons when they attacked a group of strikers in Madera City park on Oct. 21. Warren Ocheltree, an official of the Associated Farmers, had previously denied that the attackers were armed.

Elmer Joseph, a Negro cotton picker, testified that vigilantes seized him. "They got out a rope and said they were going to lynch me," he said. "Later they told me, 'If you get out of the county and don't say anything, we'll let you go'."

PAYMENTS TO AF

Subpenaed documents and witnesses revealed the close relationship between ginning companies and Associated Farmers. Evidence showed that the big ginning companies, which control the entire cotton crop from the time it is planted and keep wages low, paid $6,601 to AF in 1937.

(A letter to one of the ginning company officials in regard to this read:

("I suggest that the name of the ginning company not appear on the letter soliciting membership, as the Association (AF) wishes to maintain its status of a 'farmer's' organization." The quotes around 'farmer' were in the original letter.)

The stout denial of California agriculturists that they had advertised outside of the state for farm labor, as described in "The Grapes of Wrath," crumbled when Frank Palomares, manager of the Agricultural Labor Bureau of San Joaquin Valley, took the stand.

EVIDENCE TELLS TALE

"I have never solicited, nor have I been connected in any way with the solicitation of out-of-state labor," Palomares swore. A moment later he turned bright pink when Sen. Robert M. LaFollette produced records of advertisements in Mexican newspapers, telling of a labor "shortage" in San Joaquin Valley.

San Joaquin county paid $2,175 for munitions to break the cannery strike of 1937, the committee was told. The money was spent for 446 pick handles, 11 shotguns, 12 rifles, 1 long range teargas gun, 144 teargas shells, and about 2,400 rounds of ammunition for the rifles and shotguns.

PROVOKED VIOLENCE

The vigilantes in Stockton were mobilized and unleashed against the cannery workers despite a peace guarantee made by J. W. Southwick of the Stockton Central Labor Council, it was revealed.

Southwick said that on the morning of April 23, 1937, he had told Sheriff Harvey Odell that if the strikers "are not met with vigilantes armed with clubs and shotguns, the workers will open the canneries peacefully."

Odell denied remembering the conversation. Finally he seemed to recollect it, hazily. Said LaFollette: "In the face of this you took no steps to stop the posse from forming?"

"They were already on their way. I couldn't reach them."

"You could have prevented them from forming."

"I thought it was best to let them form and see what happened!"

What happened was that workers were attacked with teargas. Pictures were introduced showing Charles O. Cline, 82-year-old watchman, being slugged by three deputies.

Food Store Signs First Agreement

Hazelton, Pa., Dec. 30 — A CIO campaign to bring to workers in unorganized chain food stores the benefits of union conditions marked up its first victory this week with the signing of a contract with the Giant Market here.

The agreement which recognizes Local 246, United Retail & Wholesale Employes, as sole bargaining agency grants wage increases ranging from 10 per cent for workers getting under $20 a week to five per cent for those making over $20.

Union Gains At Congress Library

Washington, Dec. 30 — Four union victories marked the first contact of CIO United Federal Workers Local 28 with the new Librarian at the Library of Congress, the union said.

These included promotions from within the Library, no discrimination on racial grounds, in-service training and union bulletin boards. The new librarian is Archibald MacLeish, liberal writer recently appointed by President Roosevelt.

'Outside Interests' Aid Bata's Law Evading, Shoe Union Charges

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Following strenuous protests by the CIO United Shoe Workers, the U. S. Labor Dept. ordered cancellation of immigration permits for some 50 Czech "instructors" at the German-owned Bata shoe plant in Belcamp, Md.

Leo Goodman, USWA research director, had previously pointed out that the immigration service sent the report to Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins on December 9 but that nothing further had been made public by the Dept. of Labor.

The Bata outfit, world's largest shoe firm, established a firm in Belcamp recently and obtained permission to import the Czech workers to teach Americans the Bata production systems. Goodman charged that these instructors have been in the country for several months, although the instruction requires only a week.

WARN LOCALS

Officers of the USWA, in letters sent to locals throughout the nation, called on shoe workers to interview their local Congressmen before they leave for the next session in Washington.

"The activities of our union in an attempt to make the Bata Shoe Co. obey American laws is being stymied by the Secretary of Labor, who refuses us an opportunity to present the facts relating to the Bata Shoe violations. She has repeatedly refused to see officials of our union.

ACTION IMPORTANT

"If we are to prevent this company from completely ruining the shoe industry and cutting wages down to the minimum, it is important that you take action at once."

The Bata company finally agreed only this week to pay $7,000 in back wages to office and warehouse employes in its Chicago plant. Complaint of violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act was filed with the U. S. Wage-Hour Division by the USWA. A decree covering the restitution was signed by Federal Judge Igoe a day after the complaint was made.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round column has charged that interests closely tied with Sen. Millard Tydings of Maryland, reactionary Democrat, have been protecting the company's operations in Maryland.

To Poll Pittsburgh Boatmen

Pittsburgh, Dec. 30—(FP)—The Inland Boatmen's Division of the National Maritime Union, CIO, will go before the Natl. Labor Relations Board in January to request a collective bargaining election among the nearly 3,000 boatmen in this region.

This move will follow a membership drive on Pittsburgh's three river fronts in which the union won permission from Lt.-Col. W. E. R. Covell, U. S. District engineer, to distribute literature on government property for two months.

"Our ultimate goal," declared Michael Luchinski, union organizer, "is to cut working hours from 12 to eight daily.

Deny Miller's Statements At Hearing

Washington, Dec. 30 — Statements by Joseph Miller, former Labor Relations Board regional director, before the Smith investigating committee that "the Board was going to reverse itself on the question of deducting WPA wages" in ordering back pay to CIO steel workers were emphatically denied by CIO Assistant Counsel Anthony Wayne Smith here.

Miller's statement, Smith said, was "wholly and I fear deliberately false." He asked the Smith Committee "as a matter of simple decency and reasonable due process" to include his denial in its record.

U. S. BUDGET SLASHES WPA, UPS ARMS COSTS

Deep Cuts in Federal Aid to Jobless, Social Agencies Revealed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6. — Announcement of President Roosevelt's budget message to Congress showed Federal plans to put through deep slashes in relief, public works and social services and agencies, while adding huge sums to arms expenditures.

WPA rolls will be reduced from already low levels to 1,350,000 in the coming fiscal year, study of the message revealed. A sum of but one billion dollars is earmarked for WPA, though unemployment remains at close to 10,000,000.

SOCIAL AGENCIES HIT

Administration of vital social legislation such as Wages and Hours will also be cut down, as the budget gives only 6,000,000 to enforce a law affecting millions of workers.

The President's annual message to Congress on its reopening January 3 foreshadowed deep cuts when he promised budget increases only for arms, cuts in all other fields of government activity.

Interest payments to holders of government securities on national debt were left untouched. Modest increases in taxes were announced to create a small cut in annual deficit.

West Coast Building Local Wins

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 6— One of the first contracts to be negotiated by the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee here on the West Coast has been completed by UCWOC Local No. 66 and the Sacramento Low Cost Housing Builders.

The agreement provides that all men hired shall be union members, and receive the prevailing wage scale, subject to future increases.

Many other contractors have inquired into the possibilities of getting CIO union labor as a result of the agreement.

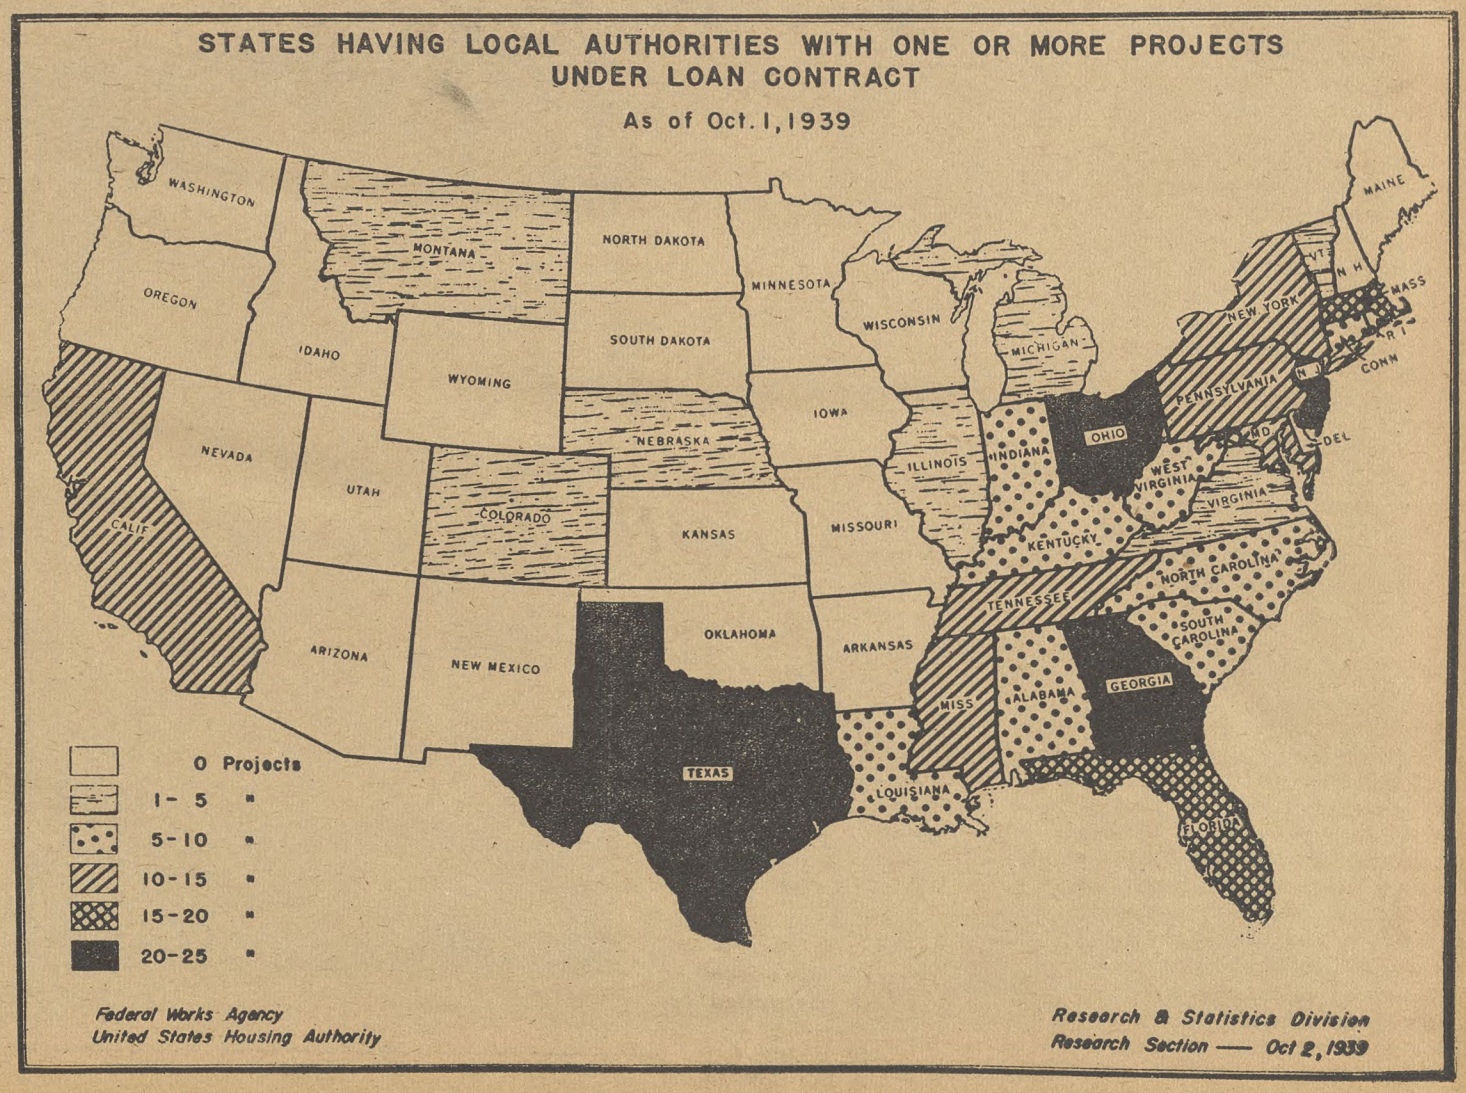
WIN AGREEMENT

Newark, N. J., Jan. 6—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, won wage increases and the union shop for its members in an agreement signed here between Lodge 2014 of SWOC and the Central Foundry Co., Essex Division. The company had never before been under union contract.

Court Upholds Girdler Order

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6. Tom Girdler was at the receiving end of another legal poke in the law when the third federal circuit court of appeals approved a Labor Board decision ordering reinstatement and back pay to 6,000 men fired by Republic Steel during the "Little Steel" strike.

The suit was started by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee which is asking $7,500,000 back pay for the workers involved.



Die Casters To Meet

Toledo, O., Jan. 6. — The National Assn. of Die Casting Workers has sent out a call to its Sixth Annual Convention, to be held in Washington, D. C., May 2, 1940.

Connecticut Cuts Strikers' Compensation

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 6 —Workers who go out on strike are not eligible for state unemployment benefits, the State of Connecticut ruled, because they disqualify themselves by taking part in a labor dispute in which their own interests are involved. Unemployment Compensation Commissioner Frank R. Odlum delivered that ruling in a test case filed by two members of Local 63, Textile Workers Union, CIO. They went on strike in July, 1939, at the Cheney Bros. Co. plant in Manchester, Conn.

AFL Intra-Union Strike Truce Flops, Says Lewis

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON.—A new outbreak of jurisdictional strikes among the craft unions of the building trades gave impetus this week to CIO progress in organizing construction workers on an industrial union basis.

A. D. Lewis, chairman of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, CIO affiliate, cited current jurisdictional tieups in Washington and other recent similar disputes as proof that the outworn craft setup is powerless to stabilize the industry.

"Every independent authority who has studied the subject knows," Lewis said, "that industrial unions are the only answer to the plague of jurisdictional disputes in the construction industry.

"The AFL early last summer announced it had a plan to end these costly strikes, yet since then they have continued just the same. There was a city-wide tie-up in Philadelphia within two weeks after their plan was announced. Then came strikes in Ohio and in Washington that delayed important federal projects.

"Now the eternal squabbling between AFL craft unions has resulted in another major strike in Washington and is delaying work on the new RFC building. Time after time over a period of years the craft unions have shown their inability to meet this problem. The answer is the modern form of industrial union offered by the CIO."

AT RFC BUILDING

The current Washington dispute has resulted in a walkout of AFL laborers on the 12-story RFC structure because they were denied the right to handle rods between unloading and installation. The most recent jurisdictional strike here which tied up several big federal projects was caused by a row between teamsters and engineers over who should drive cement mixer trucks.

Several indictments of AFL officials are pending in Washington as a result of jurisdictional disputes and Justice Department agents are reported investigating the current tieup. The Department's theory is that these disputes are in restraint of trade and hence illegal under the anti-trust statutes.

Government officials have recently recognized jurisdictional strikes and craft union restrictions as a major factor in retarding the construction industry. Witnesses before the anti-monoply Committee have offered sensational testimony showing the extent of craft union abuses in this industry. A recent report of the National Resources Committee, White House agency, pointed to "vertical integration of the industry" as the answer to its problems.

NEED FOR CIO UNIONISM

The nation's outstanding scholar in this field, Dr. William Haber, now engaged on a study for the 20th Century Fund, after an exhaustive review of futile AFL efforts to end jurisdictional disputes, came to the conclusion that some form of industrial union is the only way out. Dr. Haber who wrote "Industrial Relations in the Building Industry", said:

"All efforts discussed thus far to solve jurisdictional disputes overlook a fundamental difficulty. Jurisdictional disputes occur because more than one union claims control over a particular type of work. The obvious remedy is to have one union inclusive enough to control all the work in its trade.

"Fewer unions in the industry would prevent overlapping of trades. The method of achieving it is amalgamation, first of related trades, and then on a wider basis leading to some form of industrial union."

This was written prior to establishment last summer of the UCWOC which has now offered for the first time the "obvious remedy" that Dr. Haber and other authorities have long advocated. Employers in the industry, Dr. Haber said, themselves would welcome this type of union.

CIO Tailors Celebrate Anniversary

Columbus, O., Jan. 6.—Members of Local 27, Journeymen's Tailors Union, an affiliate of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will celebrate the golden anniversary of the local Jan. 19 with a banquet to be attended by many of the ACW's outstanding leaders.

M. J. Sillins, president of the Ohio tailors division of the ACW, announced that Sidney Hillman, national president, was invited to the golden jubilee.

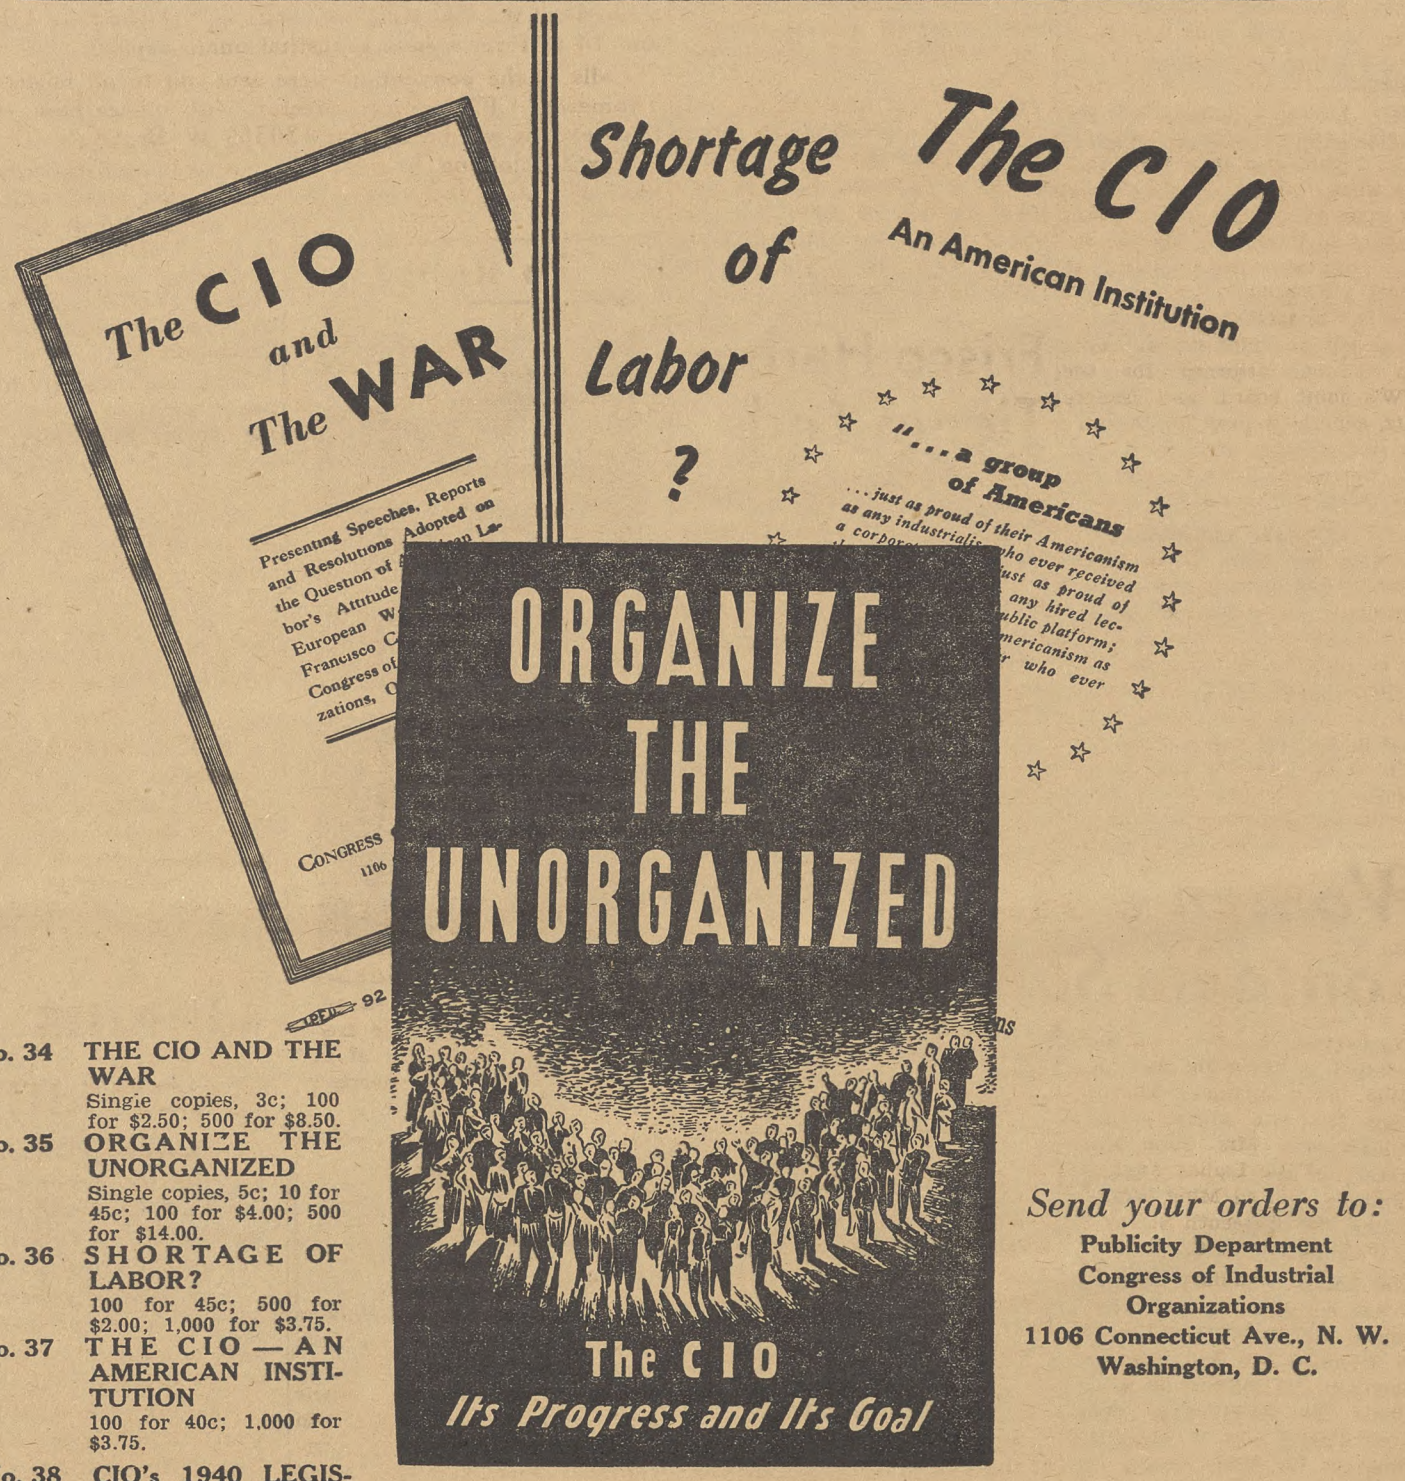
The affair will be held at CIO headquarters in this city.

Named to Staff Of UCWOC

Naming a former Department of Justice attache as a staff member of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee was announced this week by Chairman A. D. Lewis.

Russell Turner, Sr., who has had extensive experience in the construction industry, joined the UCWOC staff as a special organizer. For the past year Mr. Turner has been on the staff of the Justice Department where he took part in anti-trust law inquiries into the building trades.

Earlier the new UCWOC official was associated with prominent contracting firms in New York City and vicinity. His wide contacts in the industry are regarded as a decided asset to the UCWOC.



Cotton Workers To Meet

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 6—Problems of southern cotton workers will be brought sharply to the attention of government officials and to the public, following a decision of the newly organized CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers Southern States Council to send 28 delegates to Washington January 18 and 19.

Delegates will demand, among other points, that the current wave of mass evictions of sharecroppers and tenants be stopped, that a share of Federal benefit checks be guaranteed to the workers, and that adequate relief and decent housing be provided for poverty-stricken cotton areas.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 6. — The American Newspaper Guild is going to hold its next annual convention in Memphis, even if Boss Edward H. Crump, political czar of the city, doesn't like it.

Crump, elected mayor for a few hours in a comic opera bit of politics, took time out from his short reign to cancel an invitation to the Guild made by Watkins Overton, his predecessor in office for the past 12 years.

The "cancellation" took place as Crump stood on the back observation platform of a train bound for a New Orleans football game. "I am opposed to the CIO," he said.

In New York, Milton Kaufman, executive vice-president for the ANG, declared, "The Guild is meeting there at the invitation of working newspapermen who live there. These men are members of a CIO union which is promoting and defending democracy in America. Perhaps this explains Crump's attitude."

Crump was elected mayor as a substitute candidate for Rep. Walter Chandler who, because of a local law, could not run for the office while he held his congressional seat. Upon assuming office and delivering his diatribe against the CIO, Crump promptly resigned, and the city council shortly afterwards elected Chandler mayor.

Budget Proposals Slash WPA Program, Lift Funds For Arms

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6. — Deep cuts in average WPA employment to 1,350,000 jobs for the 10,000,000 unemployed, together with sharp cuts in appropriations for other relief agencies and social services such as Farm Security, Natl. Youth Administration, Civilian Conservation Corps, Wages and Hours Administration and the like marked President Roosevelt's budget presented to Congress the day after its reopening here for the regular session.

While the appropriation for WPA was not directly specified, the number of workers to be carried represented a drop of 650,000 from the curtailed figures of the present fiscal year, and an estimated total of one billion dollars outlay.

Appropriations for operating various government agencies also received cuts in the estimates. Wages and Hours Division of the Labor Dept. was cut from a requested $10,000,000 to a little over six million. "Where legislation has added new activities" to those of the regular departments, the President said; "I have offset the cost by reductions in old activities."

INCREASES IN ARMS

Arms expenses are estimated in the budget message at close to two billion dollars for the coming fiscal year, which will be half a billion more than the sum spent for total work relief. This sum, set at 1.8 billion dollars, topped all previous peace time expenditures, in effect taking half a billion from relief and applying it to munitions for war.

Release of the CIO Economic Outlook, new monthly CIO service described on another page of this issue of THE CIO NEWS, showed that cuts in funds going directly to consumers such as those contemplated in the new budget would inevitably result in reduced mass purchasing power and increased unemployment.

These slashes were foreshadowed in the President's message to Congress delivered the previous day, when he announced that he intended to cut all but expenses for national defense. Deep cuts in other social services such as health and the like were also indicated in the message.

"The only important increase in any part of the budget is the estimate for national defense," he wrote in his message. "Practically all the other items show a reduction." An increase in taxes was also asked for the purpose of paying for part of the arms increases.

"PERHAPS TOO LARGE"

The budget message, while setting the sum for work relief at one and a third billion, said; "This sum, itself covering the activities of the Works Progress Administration, the Natl. Youth Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps, and grants to the Farm Security Administration represents a large—perhaps too large—reduction of current expenditures."

Public works estimates were also deeply cut in the President's budget proposals which are scheduled for quick Congressional action, with a slash from close to six and a half million in the current year to less than five million.

It means that no new projects will be started and current undertakings will be sharply curtailed. "To obtain this relatively low figure," the President said, "the starting of important new projects has had to be postponed and the purchase of additional land has had rigidly to be limited."

Summing up, the President's budget message calls for large increases in arms expenses, deep cuts in work relief for the unemployed, in social services and public works, including the administration of social legislation.

The budget message called for no cuts in payment of interest on the national debt. Total expenses estimated amounted to 8.4 billions, the deficit mounting to 2.1 billions. This last figure, the President said, would be cut to 1.7 billions if tax recommendations were carried out.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6. — Smarting under the enactment of a 1½% tax on wages sponsored by the city's reactionary Republican administration, organized labor struck back Dec. 28 with the filing of a suit in equity court by a 50-year-old widow, Mrs. Jenny Doyle. She seeks to restrain the city from collection and enforcement of the ordinance.

Mrs. Doyle, a member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, is employed in a shirt factory where, because of short time, she earns about $500 a year. From incomes such as hers, the Republican administration expects to collect $18,000,000 a year to balance the budget.

The bill was filed through Gilbert Kraus, attorney for the ACW's joint board, and Isadore Katz, general counsel for the textile and hosiery workers unions. The Philadelphia CIO council is supporting the moves.

DISCRIMINATORY

"This tax takes bread from workers and permits well-heeled gamblers, stock market speculators and rich coupon-clippers to go unmolested," the two attorneys declared in a joint statement. "Even Uncle Sam sees that he gets his share of the fat rolls of the gambler and speculator.

"We are attacking the measure on several general grounds as inequitable and discriminatory."

The law, it was pointed out, "permits the employer to collect the tax from the workers' daily, weekly or monthly wage. It contains nothing to force the employer to pay the collected taxes to the city. He might use the funds for his business."

Frisco Harbor Tie-up Ends

San Francisco, Jan. 6. — San Francisco's waterfront, tied up for 54 days by refusal of employers to negotiate CIO ship clerks' demands, came to an end with new efforts to reach an agreement around the conference table.

During the long walkout, officials of the maritime unions charged that employers had shut the port down in restraint of trade, and demanded that the Department of Justice investigate the situation.

Virginia CIO To Establish State Council

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 6.—Representatives of CIO unions throughout the Old Dominion state will gather here January 13 and 14 to form a state industrial union council.

Calls to the convention were sent out to all locals by Ray Thomason, CIO regional director, with offices here. Convention sessions will be held at 1203½ W. Broad Street.

Textile, clothing, hosiery, mine, tobacco and maritime unions have considerable strength throughout the state, and will be well represented at the conclave. In recent months organization has sped ahead in this area, with a number of new contracts being negotiated through the office of Thomason.

Prominent national CIO officials are expected to attend the meeting, among them Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, who will address the delegates.

Formation of the Virginia council, and of a parent body for CIO unions in the Carolinas — which will take place early next month— will nearly complete a chain of CIO state organizations up and down the Atlantic seaboard.

BACK PAY AWARD

Chicago — (FP) — The largest payment in back wages for a single company since enactment of the wage-hour law will be made by the Hump Hairpin Co., which has agreed to pay $100,000 to some 300 employes.

Women's Auxiliary Contacts Sought

Washington, Jan. 6 — All those interested in assisting and promoting ladies auxiliary activities in the CIO are urged to communicate with Mrs. Julia Katz, secretary of the Ladies Auxiliary Committee, United Mine Workers Building, 900 Fifteenth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

The Ladies Auxiliary Committee was set up informally by a group of women active in the CIO who attended the San Francisco convention. Its purpose is to coordinate the activities of existing auxiliaries and to formulate a program for work among women.

Miss Kathryn Lewis is chairman of the Committee, and the other members include Mrs. Mary Santo, Mrs. J. Emspak, Mrs. O. M. Orton, Mrs. P. W. Fuller and Mrs. P. Connelly.

DECENTRALIZATION

Washington — (FP) — Further decentralization of the wage-hour division to make possible more vigorous enforcement of the wage-hour law was announced by Philip Fleming, head of the division.

TVA PROFITS

Washington — Power operations of the TVA in the 12 months ending June 30 produced a net income of $1,479,000, the authority's annual report declared.

Work in CIO Bribes Don't Elections

Camden, N. J., Jan. 6—Workers at the Continental Can Co. here didn't let a $5.00 increase in Christmas bonus change their minds, because they voted 176 to 121 for the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers (CIO) as their bargaining agency on the very day the bonus was paid.

'Unions Aid Nation's Economy'—Hopkins

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Labor unions are strictly necessary for the nation's economic welfare.

This is the stand taken by Sec. of Commerce Harry Hopkins in his first annual report submitted through Pres. Roosevelt to Congress.

"The federal government has in recent years taken steps of historic importance to prevent the exploitation of labor and to strengthen the economy by putting a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours," he said.

"Labor is now able to bargain with industry on more nearly equal terms. An enlightened democracy will never permit the abandonment of these advances."

Hopkins pointed out that if wage payments are low, "the basic demand for the products of the farm and factory is necessarily limited."

No Time To Slash Relief

The cheers which rang from the tory benches of Congress when President Roosevelt promised to slash appropriations for unemployment relief and all other than war purposes, will have a bitter echo in millions of Americans' homes in the coming year.

The budget presented to Congress the next day proposes drastic cuts for public works and other essential social services to make more money available for armaments.

Although there are between nine and ten million unemployed, with poor prospects of reduced unemployment in the near future and although the present WPA program falls far short of providing enough jobs, the budget would cut the WPA appropriation in such a way as to wipe out about 650,000 more jobs. The quarter million jobs provided by PWA are cut out entirely.

Sharp reductions are also proposed in the appropriations for the Farm Security Administration, the National Youth Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps; and the appropriation for the Wage-Hour Administration falls millions of dollars short of estimated needs for proper enforcement.

Altogether about half a billion dollars is to be taken away from the unemployed and from farm and youth relief; and $300,000,000 is added to the estimates for war purposes.

The budget gives cause for deep alarm to labor and all others who are concerned with meeting the unemployment problem, giving some measure of security to the millions of needy, and promoting economic recovery.

The CIO has pointed out that a considerable expansion of public works and an extension of social services generally is necessary to meet present minimum needs. It calls for advance, and not retreat, in the field of social legislation.

But the budget proposal to leave so many of the unemployed stranded, by slashing public works funds before private jobs are available, represents a deplorable retreat before the demands of the hard-faced tories for false economy at the public's expense. So to do the proposed reductions for farm and youth relief and for enforcement of the Wage-Hour Law.

The CIO will continue to call for more not less public works, until all the jobless have work at decent wages; for more adequate social and security services; and for advance and not retreat in legislation increasing government's responsibility and effectiveness in promoting the public welfare.

The Economic Outlook

In the new bulletin entitled, "The Economic Outlook," prepared by the Unemployment Division of the CIO, facts and figures are presented in support of the following sobering conclusions:

(1) That there is likely to be a substantial recession in business in the first quarter of 1940, with little prospect of any business increase soon.

(2) That unemployment has not been reduced proportionately to the recent business rise and will increase in the next three months.

(3) That the Federal Government offers only armaments as a stimulus to business, while in matters such as public works, social security and taxes, it aggravates unhealthy trends.

The present Congress has the power to remedy this situation, but only if it adopts such a program as the CIO has advanced.

This calls for such measures as employment for at least three million on public works; a work program to give all unemployed young people public employment; increase in old age pensions to $60 a month at 60; increase in unemployment compensation benefits; a widespread health program for low income groups; expansion of the housing program from 50,000 to 300,000 homes a year; stimulation of private residential construction; and revision of the tax structure to reduce the burden on consumer groups and wage earners.

This is the only serious program that has been advanced to provide immediate relief where it is most needed and to get the Country out of its present economic doldrums. Every member of Congress should be urged to work for its adoption.

Little Men, What Next?

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Three Mosquitoes

THE CIO is happy to count among its enemies such individuals as James C. Petrillo, one of Chicago's AFL czars, Mayor-for-a-Day Crump of Memphis, and the one-and-only John P. Frey.

For one thing, if a man is known by the enemies he makes, it's nice to have people like this on the other side. For another thing, they hate us so much that they help us.

Frey is one of those who thinks he can talk the CIO to death. Petrillo thinks he can ignore it to death. And Boss Crump has the idea we'll burst into tears because he says he doesn't like the CIO and won't invite it to Memphis.

Hoist With His Own Petrillo

Petrillo is a sensitive soul, it seems, who cannot bear to hear the name of John L. Lewis mentioned within his jurisdiction. So, as boss of an AFL musicians' union, he appointed himself censor of Chicago theatrical fare and ordered three shows to cut out any mention of Lewis and the CIO, even in the form of wisecracks.

If his purpose was to deprive the CIO of publicity, his ukase had the very opposite effect. Hardly a paper in the country failed to pan the would-be censor, and Lewis and the CIO came in for more favorable mention than in a long time.

The general conclusion in Chicago seemed to be that if Petrillo didn't like Lewis, that in itself was good grounds for the CIO leader's popularity.

A Crumpet For Crump

Crump has done a similar job of publicizing and popularizing the CIO in the South.

The American Newspaper Guild of the CIO was invited by Crump's predecessor in office to hold its next convention in Memphis.

So Crump used his one day in office as mayor to show his bad manners, his worse judgment and his general dictatorial tendencies, by declaring he didn't like the CIO and was rescinding the city's invitation to the Newspaper Guild.

Crump, as it happens, does not own the city of Memphis; he only thinks he does. He cannot keep the CIO out of Memphis, because the Guild and a number of other CIO unions are already well organized there. So the only CIO reaction to his tantrum has been an indifferent "So what?"

But the general reaction in the country has been much favorable publicity for the CIO, and a general panning of political bosses who think they can abrogate at their whim the rights of American workers to assemble and organize in unions of their choosing.

Horse-and-Chariot Frey

John P. Frey has made more, longer and less-listened-to speeches than almost anyone else in the AFL. So pontifical are his pronouncements that when he testified recently before the Smith committee investigating the Wagner act, he was mistaken for a Doctor of Philosophy.

He finally protested at being addressed as "Doctor," however, saying that such an attribution of intellectuality was a base slander started by John L. Lewis to "smear my reputation as a practical man."

Following his usual practice of starting his speeches in ancient times and never getting within a century of being up-to-date, Frey on this occasion endeavored to trace the history of craft unionism back to King Solomon's days.

The congressman interrupted and protested in vain that such testimony would lead to charges they were basing their findings on "horse and chariot" days. Frey continued on, century after century, and may be still continuing for all we know, as we lost track when he was still around about 600 B. C.

Solomon and the AFL

For Solomon was famous for dividing his sweet patooties into a limited number of highly skilled Class A wives, who paid exorbitant initiation fees in the form of dowry; and a larger group of Class B concubines with voice but no vote.

King Solomon also originated another AFL tradition when two women disputed jurisdiction over the same baby. He first ordered the baby cut in half, with all the impartiality of an AFL executive council dividing up a body of workers, and then awarded jurisdiction to the lady who h[illegible] the loudest.

So maybe craft unionism did meet some of the problems of King Solomon's times. But the CIO form of industrial unionism was started to meet the problems of modern industrial workers in this day and age, who are not content to potter around with antiquarian Frey among the mummified survival of horse and chariot days.

Boatmen To Ask Election

Pittsburgh, Jan. 6 — Following a membership drive on Pittsburgh's three river fronts the Inland Boatmen's Division of the National Maritime Union will request a Labor Board election to determine the bargaining agency for 3,000 river boatmen in this area. The union has been giving out literature on government property after it won permission to do so from the U. S. District Engineer.

WIN BACK PAY

New York, Jan. 6 — Laundry workers in Local 327, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, had a merrier Christmas when union business agents succeeded in collecting for unpaid overtime and back pay due workers employed in three laundries.

Your WPA Job:

U. S. Budget a Blow At Aid To Jobless

By RALPH HETZEL, Jr.
CIO Unemployment Director

A very serious slash in the number of WPA jobs is the most striking item in the President's Budget recommendation to Congress. If Congress should pass such an appropriation it would mean a cut of 650,000 jobs below last year's average.

The PWA, which has been providing about one-quarter of a million jobs, is cut out entirely. NYA is cut from 100 million dollars to 85.

The 1941 budget cuts one-half billion dollars from work relief and added $300,000,000 to the armaments outlay.

In short, this budget is a terrible blow to the hope that the Government would meet the problem of unemployment adequately. It is a further announcement that the federal government is not going to assume that most important commitment—to give work to the employable unemployed.

3,000,000 MINIMUM NEEDED

The CIO has pointed out that the minimum number of WPA jobs necessary to meet the current situation would be 3,000,000. This budget recommendation is not one-half enough.

There has been a lot of talk around Washington that a great deal more needs to be done for young people. The representatives of business joined with the representatives of labor in asking that all unemployed young people be given jobs. The only answer given by the President's budget is a slash of 15 million dollars below last year's meager appropriation for the NYA.

A similar answer to hard-pressed farmers appears in the budget with the Farm Security Administration cut about 15 per cent.

HOPES FOR BUSINESS RISE

The President's message indicated that the drastic cuts in provision for the unemployed were based upon the hope that private employment would increase substantially during the next year. The President said; "This sum (for work relief) represents a large—perhaps too large—reduction of current expenditures."

His message admitted that "the first effects of increased business activity have not resulted in a proportionate reduction in relief needs . . . But there is reason to hope that a continued expansion of business would diminish relief requirements substantially." He said, however, that "If conditions fails to meet our hopes, additional funds may be necessary."

The prospect of any substantial increase in employment over past levels during the next year seems very poor at this writing. Even if total unemployment were to be cut one-half, a WPA level of 1,350,000 would not be enough.

The President's message pointed out, ". . . Employment still lags considerably below the levels of 1929. Many of our younger workers have not found employment, and many others have been displaced by the machine. We must not only guard the gains we have made, but we must press on to attain full emtloyment for those who have been displaced by machines as well as for the 5,000,000 net addition to the labor force since 1929. We must, therefore, avoid the danger of too drastic or too sudden a curtailment of Government support."

"The recession (of 1937-8)," said the President, "was due to a variety of causes starting in the main from over-optimism which led the Government to curtail its net expenditures too abruptly, and business to expand production and raise prices too sharply for consumers' purchasing power to keep pace."

The economic analysis made by the Unemployment Division agrees substantially with such a position. But the figures in the budget do not seem to fulfill the requirements of such a position.

Murray To Broadcast On Unemploymen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 — Philip Murray, vice president of the CIO and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, will speak on America's No. 1 problem, "Unemployment, and What Can Be Done About It," over the Blue network of the National Broadcasting Company on Monday, January 15 from 9:30 to 9:45 P. M., Eastern Standard Time.

Everyone who wishes to hear this important CIO message should tune in on the nearest NBC Blue Network Station at this time. Murray's speech will be available for the following list of stations, and inquiries should be made in advance of the local station managers, to make sure that they will carry the program.

WIN CONTRACT

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6—Many improvements in working conditions, together with hourly wage increases, two weeks' vacation with pay and the check-off were included in the new contract signed by Schwitzer-Cummins Co. and Steel Workers Organizing Committee Lodge 1148. The agreement was announced by James Robb, SWOC director here.

CIO Broadcasts Jobs, Security, Peace Program

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Timed to coincide with the opening of Congress here Wednesday, the CIO went on the air over a coast-to-coast Columbia Broadcasting System radio network with a speech by Lee Pressman, general counsel, explaining and urging passage of the CIO legislative program for jobs, security, peace.

"There are two main ideas embodied in the legislative program of the CIO as announced by President John L. Lewis," Pressman said. "The first is that nothing must be done that will in any way lead to involvement of the United States in the European war; and that Congress must on the contrary devote its attention to the interests and needs of the American people at home, not allowing foreign affairs to divert its attention from these pressing problems.

"The second main idea behind the CIO legislative program is that the gains made in recent years in the way of social and labor legislation must be preserved against the assaults of reaction; that there must be no retreat before these assaults, but on the contrary a steady forward march to extend the social and economic program of the nation."

Declaring that the CIO is emphatically opposed to U. S. involvement in war, Pressman pointed out that "labor has the least to gain and the most to lose from war. All who want to see peace preserved in the U. S. should welcome the growth of a strong and progressive labor movement such as the CIO, because they can be assured that American working people when they become organized and articulate will be the strongest influence in the country on the side of peace."

DOMESTIC NEGLECT

Too much of "the time and energy of our own government representatives during the past few months have been devoted almost exclusively to international affairs at the expense of the interests and needs of the American people," Pressman said, quoting from the CIO program.

"There are certainly no grounds for complacency in regard to the economic conditions of the great majority of the American people," he continued.

"Most of our population, even when they are employed, exist under conditions of poverty and insecurity which are a disgrace to our so-called civilization. Payroll reports by employers for the Federal Old Age Benefits Tax show that in 1937 the wages of almost 40 per cent of the workers were less than $500 during the year. The wages of almost two-thirds of the workers were under $1,000, and the wages of 80 per cent were less than $1,500 a year.

NO. 1 PROBLEM

"To meet such conditions, it is clearly necessary to expand the program of legislation for social security and for the relief of unemployment; and to assure the rights of working people to help themselves by organizing freely in labor unions to better their conditions through collective bargaining.

"The CIO regards unemployment as America's No. 1 problem, pointing out that there cannot be any permanent prosperity or industrial peace in this nation as long as we have staring us in the face the misery and suffering of nine and one-half million people."

Recent Labor Board Orders Reflect CIO Organizing Gains

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Progress of CIO unions throughout the country is reflected in recent orders by the National Labor Relations Board.

In Fort Worth, Texas, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers was certified as sole collective bargaining agency at the Dickson-Jenkins Manufacturing Co., following victory in a recent election by a 228-63 majority. The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, which won hands down in an election contest with the AFL's electrical union at the RCA Manufacturing Co. in Camden, N. J., also won formal NLRB certification.

The voting, held on Nov. 14 and 15, produced 6,294 votes for the UERMW, while the AFL outfit could muster only 1,035.

The Board certification overruled objections filed by the AFL, declaring the protests "were without merit."

STEEL FIRM ORDER

Meanwhile, the Alloy Cast Steel Co. in Marion, Ohio, was ordered by the NLRB to bargain on request with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee as sole collective bargaining agency for the workers. The firm has in the past refused to take such action.

An aircraft local of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, won a substantial victory when the NLRB announced an agreement under which the Kirkham Engineering & Manufacturing Co. at Farmingdale, N. Y., will stop discouraging employes joining the union. Three employes received over $500 in back pay as a result of the stipulation.

Marine engineers employed by the Isthmian Steamship Co., working out of New York City, will vote under a Board order whether they wish to be represented by the National Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, CIO, or an AFL union.

Vernon, Calif. — Workers at the General Metals Corp. here will have a chance to vote whether they wish to be represented by the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Spies, Labor-Haters Set Back by Ruling In Bridges Case

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Harry Bridges, CIO leader in California, is not a Communist and cannot be deported, James M. Landis, U. S. Government trial examiner, has ruled. All the witnesses who said he is are unreliable and wholly incredible, the government official stated.

The findings, made public in a 152-page report issued here, put the U. S. Government on record as ending a campaign to deport Bridges that began five years ago when he emerged as a militant west coast labor leader, and reached its height coincident with the growth of the Intl. Longshoremen and other CIO unions in the area.

Commenting on the case, Bridges said in San Francisco: "It should now be clear that there was nothing personal in the case. I was on trial, but labor was the defendant. Labor fought the case and won. To the thousands of union men and women who gave their aid in time and money, I can best express appreciation by saying: 'It is your victory.'"

FALSE TESTIMONY

Reading of the report, whose author is also Dean of the Harvard University Law School and former head of the Securities Exchange Commission, shows that Landis acquired little respect for the parade of witnesses brought up to testify against Bridges. The Dean found that their testimony was unbelievable, inaccurate, contradictory, or smelling strongly of perjury.

Of John Leech, who got himself involved in a long tirade about Bridges as a Communist, Landis wrote: "Leach was afflicted with verbal haemophilia.

"It seemed impossible for him to answer a straightforward question simply. Much of this was equivocation following upon Leech's being caught in earlier misstatements; much of it flowed from a curious pretense to knowledge about wholly irrelevant matters; much of it, however, sprang merely from a habit of using 10 words where one would have sufficed."

Of Major Milner of the Oregon Natl. Guard, he wrote that his testimony was "deserving of little, if any credence."

Of Harper Knowles, self-appointed snooper for the American Legion, the Dean said: "He was neither a candid nor a forthright witness. His memory tended too frequently to become beclouded when answers might have proven to be too revealing."

CRUDENESS BY THE COPS

Capt. Keegan of the Portland, Ore., police, made testimony that was "far from reliable. As will be seen, not only was Keegan's respect for an oath negligible, but he was again and again faced with testimony so variant from that which he had given that he was forced either to alter his original story or to make its hollowness patent by the crudeness of his subsequent explanations."

U. S. Immigration officials did not escape Landis' analysis of the case. Bonham, official in charge of the anti-Bridges drive, is sharply condemned in the report for trying to secure a statement from Earl King and Ernest Ramsay, labor prisoners, is accused of "devious and unusual conduct," his acts described as "not very creditable to the Government."

And so on. Aaron Sapiro, AFL lawyer, who testified at great length on Bridges' supposed association with Communist leaders, needed "something more than the word of a disbarred and repudiated attorney" to prove his assertions. One Humphreys got himself into "a mass of prevarication."

BRIDGES TESTIMONY

Testimony of Bridges at the hearing, however, made a sharply different impression on Dean Landis. He found that Bridges was a militant unionist, holding opinions that he "forcibly and volubly expatiated upon." Chief among these, the Examiner found, was Bridges' conviction that protection of labors rights to organize and bargain collectively were basic to any democratic system.

"Bridges held the opinion," Landis wrote, "that groups of people in the country were organized to suppress the interests of labor as he saw them. That organization he stated was frequently on a national scale as in the case of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, the Associated Farmers, and others.

Bridges also believed that anti-union employers should have legal penalties applied to them for illegal acts, that the national wealth should be more fairly distributed, that unionism was the "democratic mechanism" for attaining these and other objectives.

"The evidence therefore establishes neither that Harry R. Bridges is a member of nor affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States of America," Landis wrote in his conclusion.

BRIDGES' STATEMENT

"Dean Landis has supported, through his analysis of the evidence, our constant declaration that redbaiting is the method of reaction, used either economically or politically to attack the fundamentals of American democracy," Bridges commented.

"Their real motives are to depress wages, lengthen hours of work, and to place their tools in public office so that, on every front, they may obtain greater profit and privilege."

LaFollette Probe Moves to L. A.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 6 (FP)—After hearings in San Francisco devoted mainly to an expose of the Associated Farmers, big business tory outfit, the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee will open an investigation in Los Angeles early in January.

The committee is expected to probe into activities of open shop employer associations in this area in addition to continuing its study of the Associated Farmers. Chief among the employer groups due to appear before the committee are Southern Californians, Inc., a heavy contributor to AF; the Merchant & Manufacturers Assn. of Los Angeles, and the Neutral Thousands.

INVESTIGATE TORY OUTFITS

The Southern Californians, composed of the largest industrial interests in this area, has functioned chiefly as a propaganda bureau for big business. An affiliate of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers, the Southern Californians is currently carrying on a large scale advertising campaign along general NAM lines.

The Neutral Thousands (TNT) is something of an innovation. A women's organization, it has been active in the formation of company unions and in the broadcasting of anti-labor propaganda. Facts adduced at a current labor hearing before the Natl. Labor Relations Board show it to be wholly financed by Southern Californians, Inc.

Facts uncovered by LaFollette committee investigators have been closely guarded. Observers forecast a thorough airing of efforts by Los Angeles employers to block AFL and CIO organizing in what business likes to think of as America's most open shop city.

Baltimore Pickets Defy Weather

Frank Bender, local CIO director, said the union, Local 1018, United Recreation Workers Union, has more than 90 per cent of the workers enrolled as members. CIO and AFL unions are cooperating with the strikers, refusing to pass the picket lines.

KELLOGG, Ida., Jan. 6.—An outright admission that the Sunshine Mining Co. is guilty of violating the National Labor Relations Act, the Wage-Hour Law and other U. S. statutes was made here by the company in its attempt to use the Christmas bonus as a bribe to get the workers to waive their legal claims under these laws.

Exactly like a shyster claim agent trying to get an injured man to sign a waiver of damage claims for a dollar or two, the Sunshine Co. offered the customary bonus of five per cent of the year's earnings to any employe who would sign an agreement waiving all past claims and damages due from the company. These claims, when paid, will amount to far more than the pitiful bonus offered as a bribe.

At the same time, informed that the union was pressing for payment of back wages due under the Wage-Hour Act, the Sunshine Co. filed a suit to the federal courts, seeking to have itself excluded from jurisdiction of the Wage-Hour Act. The company's employes have four hours pay a week due them under this act for the period before Oct. 24, 1939.

MESS OF POTTAGE

Immediately after the posting of this bonus bribe offer by the company, Wallace Local 14 and Kellogg Local 18 of the CIO Mine Mill & Smelter Workers circularized their members and other employes of the company urging them not to accept the bonus checks. They reminded the workers of the old Bible saying: "He sold his birthright for a mess of pottage."

Significantly, the company refused to tell the local newspapers how many men had accepted the Christmas bonus bribe, saying only that 600 of the checks were "ready for delivery."

A few members of the union accepted their checks but placed them in safe keeping with the union instead of cashing them.

BEATS AL CAPONE

It was immediately noted that the waiver was so broad as to exempt the Sunshine Co. from responsibility for all kinds of law-breaking "known or unknown" and that it would exempt the company not only from claims the workers already have made, but from any claims they might make in the future.

As one union leader put it: "Al Capone never tried all the low-down tricks this company has." Certainly the "agreement," as phrased by the company, was conclusive evidence of a guilty conscience.

Unions Win Precedent In Bankruptcy Case

Brooklyn, N. Y. (FP)—An important precedent for labor unions under contract with bankrupt employers was set here on Dec. 27 when a federal referee ordered the Brooklyn Eagle to carry out its contract with the New York Newspaper Guild.

Point at issue was the requirement in the Guild contract of last January that all eligible workers in the business and editorial departments apply for membership by Dec. 27, on penalty of dismissal.

Subsequently the paper went into bankruptcy. Trustee Charles Green said he doubted whether he had any authority to order the 150 workers involved to join the union, which already numbered about 300 in the Eagle plant.

Accompanied by a guild committee, the trustee went to Referee Wilmot Morehouse of the U. S. district court. Morehouse ordered "that the trustee comply with the provisions of the agreement" between the Eagle and the Guild.

Morehouse's order destroys the argument or bankrupt employers that union contracts are no longer valid, it was pointed out by labor lawyers here.

Brophy At Meeting in Connecticut

New Britain, Conn., Jan. 6 — Connecticut CIO officials held a big mass meeting here yesterday to give added impetus to the big organization drive which has already enlisted thousands of new recruits in the area.

Principal speaker was John Brophy, CIO director of local industrial unions.

Labor And The Law:

High Court Checks AFL Heads, Employers

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

The three recent decisions of the Supreme Court affecting the Labor Board represent victories for the CIO. In these decisions the Supreme Court sustained the position of the Labor Board with respect to three cases. Two of these cases were attempts by the AFL unions to upset certifications by the Labor Board, and the third case was brought by an employer trying to prevent the Labor Board from keeping company unions off ballots.

CIO LONGSHOREMEN

The West Coast Longshore Case. This case involved the certification by the Labor Board of the CIO Longshoremen's Union as the representative of the longshoremen on the entire West Coast. This certification was based upon the fact that all of the employers on the West Coast were in a single association.

Moreover, the history of collective bargaining on the West Coast showed that the maritime unions had long struggled for coast-wide bargaining.

The AFL claimed that this certification was arbitrary and unreasonable and sought to have the certification set aside by bringing proceedings in the Court of Appeals, just as employers do in seeking to set aside orders of the Labor Board.

The Supreme Court, however, ruled that certifications by the Labor Board could not be subjected to the same kind of judicial review, as is provided for by the National Labor Relations Act, in the case of unfair labor practice orders.

This certification by the Board has been one of the chief objects of attack by the AFL and reactionary groups against the Board. These people have claimed that the Board's determination was conclusive proof of its biased administration of the law in favor of the CIO.

The decision of the Supreme Court is a substantial check to the AFL claims. It is a little surprising that the AFL does not now claim that the Supreme Court is also pro-CIO in aiding and abetting the "radical" organizing activities of the CIO leaders on the West Coast.

The AFL has another suit pending in the federal district court in which it is trying to attack the West Coast certification. While the Supreme Court did not pass upon whether this suit could be maintained, its present decision certainly makes it a lot more difficult for the AFL to carry on its unjustifiable attempts to weaken the strong industrial collective bargaining units of the CIO.

CONSUMERS POWER

Consumers Powers Case. The second decision by the Supreme Court is on the same principle as the West Coast case. It involved the action of the Labor Board in directing a run-off election to be held among the employes of the Consumers Power Company.

In the first election the CIO Electrical Workers Union had obtained a plurality of the votes but not a majority. The Board had followed its usual rule of directing a second run-off election in which the union receiving the most votes was to appear on a "yes"-"no" ballot.

The Supreme Court, however, sustained the position of the Labor Board and ruled that the courts could not interfere with the elections conducted by the Board.

Both decisions represent a substantial victory because the Supreme Court recognized the purpose of the law to prevent the courts from holding up elections at the request of disgruntled parties who bring injunction proceedings that delay matters indefinitely.

FALK CASE

The Falk Case. In this case, upon charges filed by the CIO Steel Union, the Board found that the company was guilty of maintaining a company union and ordered it disestablished.

The federal Court of Appeals, although upholding the Board's order against the company union, made the surprising decision that nevertheless the company union was entitled to go on the ballot in any future election which the Board might direct. The Supreme Court reversed this decision. It condemned company unions in the following unequivocal language: "this company-created union could not emancipate itself from habitual subservience to its creator and in order to insure employes that complete freedom of choice guaranteed by Section 7, the Independent (the company union) must be completely disestablished and kept off the ballot."

Novel Courses Offered By Union School

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Unionized technical professionals are lending a helping hand to brother unionists in a project launched by the CIO Federation Technical School.

The School has organized classes in blueprint reading, shop mathematics and shop practice for mechanics who are members of brother CIO unions. The instructors are experienced engineers who teach the courses from a very practical standpoint.

Another course of the same type is that in Efficiency Systems and Labor Incentive Plans. This course is specially designed to equip members of union negotiating committees with a knowledge of speedup schemes and how to conduct them.

Lecturers in the course announced for the spring semester will include many outstanding instructors.

CIO Workers Get Raises At Valve Co.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 6 — Two hundred employes at the William Powell Valve Co. here, won five cent hourly increases in a supplement to the regular contract in effect between the firm and Steel Workers Organizing Committee Lodge 1858. The increase was announced by T. Louis Majors, SWOC sub-regional director, who also revealed that the company will meet with the union to consider a general wage increase for all 700 employes in the near future.

Maritime Contract Outlined

New York, Jan. 6—The National Maritime Union, CIO, today denied newspaper reports that the rotary hiring system had been dropped in the new agreement with the shipowners reached here. Speaking for the union, Joseph Curran, NMU President, said:

"In view of the shipowners' announced intention of destroying union hiring, its retention in the new agreement is a decided victory for us.

"Far from union hiring being dropped in the new agreement, it has actually been strengthened. It is true that the company has the right to reject a man who is deemed, for some legitimate reason, unsatisfactory to the company.

EXPLAINS SYSTEM

"This does not mean that the operators can reject militant union men. That is specifically forbidden in the agreement. The reason for rejection must be legitimate.

"If the union and the company cannot agree on a rejection, the case is referred to a joint conference of union and company officials.

"The rotary system applies only to replacements. It has to do only with union routine for sending men out on jobs. It is absurd for the operators to claim that they have abolished rotary hiring when it is the union alone which can decide that. And rotary hiring, which is fixed in the NMU constitution, is not mentioned in the agreement."

The union won several concessions in the new agreement, Curran said. Overtime will be paid for work in categories not mentioned in the last agreement. Work in port, under certain conditions, is also paid for at the overtime rate, Mr. Curran said. The overtime rate is 70 cents an hour.

NEW MEDICAL CLAUSE

The medical clause has been revised, he added. Whereas the operator formerly had the right to reject an applicant for a job on the advice of the company doctor, the union now has the right to appeal to an outside doctor, whose decision shall be final.

Additional pay for handling penalty cargoes is specified for the deck and engine departments: 70 cents an hour in addition to regular wages in the deck department and $1.05 an hour in addition to regular wages in the engine department.

The union also retained the right to re-open the agreement at the end of six months for the purpose of discussion of wages—only.

Fall in Business Index Predicted In CIO Report

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6. — All signs show that the United States production index will recede sharply in the first three months of 1940, bringing increased unemployment and distress, the CIO declared in the first issue of its new monthly bulletin, "The Economic Outlook."

The business index, the bulletin says, reached "a very high peak in December, 1939, from which it will recede substantially in the first quarter of the new year."

At the same time, while business has been at higher levels, and while employment has approached 1929 levels, unemployment has not decreased, still standing at many times the 1929 figure. This is due to two main factors, the bulletin says: (1) an increase of 6,500,000 workers since 1929, and (2) the disemployment of 1,500,000 by technological change. "In order to counteract these factors," the bulletin points out, "about 8,000,000 more workers would have to be put to work in private industry if unemployment is to drop to the 1929 level of 2,000,000.

The attitude of businessmen and Federal government policies on the problem of spreading purchasing power make for an uncertain outlook for the balance of 1940, the bulletin says. Businessmen "have been taking a very cautious approach to the possibility of expansion," it says, apparently in fear of undue additions to inventories—although as yet "there is no conclusive evidence of excessive inventories."

PURCHASING POWER

In addition, the effect of foreign trade in 1940 is not expected to be "very significant," while building construction is estimated to lag behind last year, or at best only to equal 1939.

Most important factor in the outlook, the CIO declared, is the problem of mass purchasing power. "President Lewis, in his economic report to the CIO convention has pointed out the central significance of the increase in purchasing power as the fundamental factor in establishing a sound economic situation," the bulletin says.

"He pointed out that in those periods when production expands more rapidly than purchasing power, collapse is made inevitable. There are a number of indications that the economy is again approaching such a situation."

A basic factor in maintaining mass purchasing power has been Federal expenditures going directly to consumers, such as those made for WPA, PWA, etc. Each time these expenditures have gone down, an economic reeession set in, the bulletin says, and: "Such a cut is clearly impending." State and local relief, now at an average of $7.54 per head per month is also expected to decline drastically.

Further withdrawals of purchasing power in the form of workers' taxes for Social Security are having a serious effect on the national economy, the bulletin declares. The present practice of placing the tax burden on consumers (over 50 per cent of revenue was raised in this way in 1938) adds to this withdrawal of consumers' funds.

"Unless—and the administration does not seem to be preparing to make such proposals—effective changes are made in our national tax structure," the CIO says, "the tax situation will continue to be a factor aggravating underconsumption."

EMPHASIS ON ARMS

The Federal budget prospect, with the proposed emphasis on arms rather than expenditures for consumption," is probably the most discouraging single factor in the economic outlook," the bulletin says.

In conclusion, the bulletin refers to the CIO legislative program for the coming session of Congress, released December 18, 1939, declaring that it would, if enacted, "put the Federal government in an economically sound position," since its emphasis on labor's rights, jobs for the unemployed and for youth, plus increased Social Security, health and housing programs and tax revision would "place the government in the position of encouraging economic stability."

CIO Steel Local In Contract

Bloomfield, N. J., Jan. 6 — Steel Workers Organizing Committee Lodge 2106 won an outstanding victory through a contract signed here with the Jensen Creamery Machinery Co. A substantial increase in wages for all employes is written into the pact.

The agreement is novel from many angles, and lodge members believe it may stand as a good example to several other SWOC lodges.

Several weeks ago the agreement was signed by both parties, when the company agreed to eliminate all bonus and time-study systems and grant a general wage raise instead.

When the proposal was first advanced by the lodge, Jensen Company balked, claiming that to make such a drastic step would force the plant out of business.

BOTH PARTIES HELPED

A recent check-up in the plant by company officials showed that both employes and employer were benefited under the plan. Tabulated weekly reports of the firm prove that, despite higher hourly wages, costs have been reduced and more and better products result.

The labor relations history of the Jensen Company was typical of anti-union companies before the first SWOC contract was signed in 1938. Speed-up and low wages prevailed in the plant.

The lodge was dissatisfied with the first contract because many grievance cases were pending on low-wage questions. Primary demand of the lodge during negotiations for the new contract was a substantial boost in wages.

To prove its position that wage raises were impossible, the company offered its books for examination by the SWOC.

After a series of conferences between the company and union committee, SWOC representatives convinced Jensen officials to give the proposal a trial. The company finally agreed, and all incentive and speed-up systems were scrapped and employes given a flat wage raise.

Charge FCC 'Bailing Out' Wire Firms

Rathborne Points to Admission That U. S. Body Lacks Facts; Asks Senate Probe of Action

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6. — The Federal Communications Commission, which released a report to the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce recommending legislative action by Congress to permit merger of the two major telegraph companies, Western Union and Postal Telegraph, was charged today with "acting as the hatchet-man in the scheme concocted by the communications moguls to throw thousands of employes out of their jobs and to undermine the public interest in an adequate communications service."

The charge was made by Mervyn Rathborne, president of the American Communications Association, CIO, who urged that Senator Wheeler's committee to investigate the telegraph industry "probe the FCC, the latest spokesman and apologist for the communications companies."

DOESN'T KNOW FACTS

"The outstanding fact revealed in the FCC's report," Rathborne stated, "is its admitted abysmal ignorance of conditions in the industry, conditions which are common knowledge to the average messenger boy.

"In its report the Commission states that, among other things, it is ignorant of the speed of service being furnished the public; it does not have the facts to enable it to determine whether the workers in the industry are subjected to speed-up which results in decreased efficiency; it has no knowledge of the effect of mechanization on employment and telegraphic service; and it has no reliable information on real wages paid to workers in the industry.

"These factors are precisely those which must determine the conditions of merger legislation if the interest of the public is to be safeguarded.

BAILING OUT

"It is apparent that the FCC is intent on bailing out the companies whose bankrupt policies have brought the industry to its present chaotic condition.

"The FCC is the government regulatory agency established to protect the public interest. That the interest of labor is an essential part of the public interest was recently reaffirmed by decision of the Supreme Court.

"The FCC has chosen to ignore its obligation to labor and the public. Instead it has written a weasel-worded apology for which the communications companies, in their desire for merger on their own profitable terms, will be exceedingly grateful."

UAW-CIO Wins At DeVilbiss

TOLEDO, Jan. 6. — The CIO this week won a smashing victory over the AFL and a company union in a National Labor Relations Board election held at the DeVilbiss Co., manfacturer of sprayers.

The United Automobile Workers, Local 12, received 305 of the 587 cast. The other votes went as follows: AFL, 193; Independent (company union) Association, 71, and neither. 18.

The CIO victory was a climax to one of the most bitter contests here with the AFL. The UAW officials immediately announced that the union would begin a campaign to enroll every worker in the plant.

Urges Old Age Benefit Applications

Washington, Jan. 6 — Joseph Kovner, CIO Social Security Secretary, advised workers 65 years or more that they can now file applications for their federal old age insurance benefits, even though they are still working.

While a worker who has a job that pays him more than $15 a month cannot accept these benefit payments, nevertheless he does not have to choose between his job and the payments until he knows just exactly how much his benefit will be, Kovner explained.

The only way workers over 65 can find out for certain if they are eligible for benefits and how much the benefit will be is to file an application for such payments.

FORMS AVAILABLE

Forms for this application may be secured from the local office of the Social Security Board, or if there is none in your locality, by writing directly to the Social Security Board in Washington, D. C., he added.

Unions are urged to secure a supply of these forms for their members and relatives. Further information can be found in the recent pamphlet issued by the CIO Social Security Committee, entitled "How to Get Your Federal Old Age Insurance Benefits."

HOPE FOR THE FUTURE is portrayed in this prize-winning photograph at recent western picture exhibit. The picture was made at a camp for migratory workers in California.

No Room for Finks In Boston Taxis!

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 6.—Strikebreakers and scabs will have to find some "safer" means of moving about in Boston than taxicabs.

A new closed shop contract just signed and put into effect between Local 182 of the CIO Transport Workers Union and the Independent Taxi Owners Association of Boston prohibits the transportation of professional union-busters. The contract, covering the largest hack operation in the city, states:

"The Association and its member employers agree that no taxicab driver shall be compelled or permitted to transport strike-breakers or scabs.

A similar clause against finks, nobles, etc., will be included in the new agreements being drawn for other cab companies here, John J. Ryan, TWU international representative, announced.

The contract signed with the ITOA ups wages by establishing basic wage commissions of 40 per cent on $5.50 daily bookings and 45 per cent above $5.50; the work week is cut down to six days; firings are barred except with consent of the union and a grievance machinery is established with final decisions left to arbitration by a representative of the Commissioner of Labor and Industries of Massachusetts.

Negotiations for the TWU were carried on by Ryan and Angelo Barbaro, Jacob Silverstein and Louis D. King of Local 182's negotiating committee.

Utility Uuion Asks Early Election In Consumers Power

SAGINAW, Jan. 6.—With victory a certainty, the Utility Workers Organizing Committee is moving for an early date for an election among employes of the Consumers Power Company in the wake of the U. S. Supreme Court decision this week upholding the NLRB ruling last year, President Monroe Causley of the Michigan State Joint Council, UWOC-CIO, said today.

Causley characterized the decision as a "CIO victory of the first magnitude."

After a primary election last winter, in which the CIO won a plurality but not a majority, the NLRB ruled that in the run-off the workers should choose between the UWOC and no union, thereby ruling the AFL International Brotherhood of Electricians off the ballot. The IBEW sought and obtained an injunction restraining the election, giving the company an excuse to refuse to bargain collectively at all with its employes.

DISRUPTERS EXPOSED

It was this evasion by the company that precipitated the Consumers Power strike last October.

"The decision of the Supreme Court lifting the injunction of the Circuit Court and permitting the elections to go forward is a CIO victory of the first magnitude," Causley said. "In one stroke the Supreme Court exposes the disrupting tactics of those who are trying to nullify the National Labor Relations Act by attacking the procedure of the NLRB.

"The disrupting AFL union which secured that injunction is now definitely eliminated and will not appear on the ballot, and those instrumental in securing the injunction have been repudiated.

"Consumers Power workers themselves will now have the chance to further repudiate those who prevented them from enjoying the full benefits of collective bargaining for many months.

EARLY ELECTION

"Arrangements are being made at present to set an early date for the coming election. This election is the chance the Consumers Power workers have been waiting for. They will go to the polls and by a heavy endorsement of the UWOC, they will show their wholehearted support of their brothers who made every sacrifice in the recent strike to win the present interim CIO agreement which is benefitting every employe in the system at the present time.

WAY IS CLEAR

"Consumers Power workers will vote CIO and back up the principle of 'equal pay for equal work,' which the UWOC forced the company to acknowledge in the interim agreement, so that it can never be taken away from them again.

"The issues are clear. The way is now open for Consumers Power workers to score the biggest victory of all with a tremendous vote for the CIO and industrial democracy."

Several CIO leaders pointed out that the newspaper stories had almost completely obscured the fact that the decision was a CIO victory by their interpretations of the political significance of the court's language.

FORCE STRIKE

After the AFL had obtained its injunction last spring and the company had refused to bargain, the UWOC proposed to the IBEW that they get together on an interim agreement which would give both organizations equal privileges until the court's decision cleared the way for an election to determine the sole bargaining agent.

This the AFL refused to do, saying in effect that they were not interested in bargaining for their members—they just didn't want the CIO to be able to do so either.

The AFL attitude and the company position made a strike necessary in order to establish the bargaining rights of the employes.

Throughout the controversy, the AFL received the cooperation of the heads of the former company union, dissolved on an NLRB order, who instructed their ex-members to vote AFL in the primary election.

LEWIS URGES CONGRESS TACKLE MAJOR PROBLEMS

Right to Work?

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 13.—Slavery still exists in parts of the sharecropping South, and some plantation owners aren't ashamed to advertise it, as this North Carolina newspaper ad, unearthed by the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers, shows. The ad reads:

"NOTICE: I forbid anyone to hire or harbor Herman Miles, colored, during the year 1939. A. P. Dobbs, Route 1, Yanceyville."

The notice appeared in the Yanceyville, N. C., "Caswell Messenger," and is apparently not uncommon. According to a local resident, queried on the subject; " . . . such advertisements are still employed to put the fear of God into Negroes and ignorant white folks." In fact, a law permitting such acts still exists, though obviously unconstitutional.

GOOD LAW

"Many of our magistrates still hold it is good law and zealously support its use in upholding contentions of landlords, who resent any dissatisfactions on the part of tenants to whom they have advanced as much as 50 cents for rations," the union's informant adds.

Donald Henderson, president of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, has urged action by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, pointing out that such a notice clearly violates U. S. anti-peonage laws and the Federal constitution.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—A hearing and investigation on determination of union representation in some 67 plants of the General Motors Corporation in 11 states has been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board.

The latest order, which replaces one handed down in September, is based on a petition filed by the United Automobile Workers, CIO, asking for elections in 64 GM plants. The AFL, which keeps up a pretense of having a foothold in the automobile industry in spite of having been snowed under in all the big elections held so far, also filed petitions for elections in a few plants.

CIO WON POLLS

Previous elections held among workers in Packard, Motor Products, Briggs, Chrysler and other auto plants in recent months, resulted in a total of 65,485 votes for the UAW-CIO to 7,994 for the AFL.

In the Packard election, the CIO union won 6,090 to 1,547 for the AFL. The Motor Products poll resulted in an even greater defeat for the AFL, with 2023 for the CIO to 188 for the AFL. A poll conducted among employes of the Briggs Manufacturing Co. gave 13,301 to the CIO to 1,052 for the AFL.

In the largest election ever conducted by the Labor Board, held for employes of the Chrysler Corporation, the UAW-CIO CIO defeated the AFL union ten to one, winning a total of 40,564 votes to 4,673 for the AFL.

Virginia CIO Convention In Richmond

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13—Several score delegates from CIO unions throughout the state gathered here today for a convention to form the Virginia CIO Industrial Union Council.

Call for the convention was sent out by Ray Thomason, CIO regional director. Allan S. Haywood, national director of organization, is scheduled to address the meeting, which will bring together delegates from clothing, textile, coal and marine unions throughout the state.

Asks Support For Program Offered by CIO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 — Warning that failure by the American government to cope with the problems of the people will inevitably lead to the same collapse of democracy that has harried Europe, Pres. John L. Lewis today forwarded the CIO's legislative program to every member of Congress with a request for "approval and support."

Some 10,000,000 Americans face nothing in the future but despair, the CIO leader reminded Congress, adding that continued existence of the unemployed problem will endanger our "basic institutions."

"Our domestic problems must continue to be our primary concern," Lewis said. "Their solution is the surest guarantee which can be offered to our people that this nation will remain out of any foreign wars—a pledge that must always be no less than a firm commitment and never encased in any subtle modifications."

Key problems before Congress, Lewis noted, are unemployment, protection of civil liberties and labor's right to organize, provision for health and hygiene, housing and taxation.

New Jersey Builders Show Interest In CIO Construction Plans

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The CIO drive to organize construction workers got a green light this week from a large section of the industry in the east.

From Building Contractors Association of New Jersey, a state-wide contractors' organization, came a formal invitation to Chairman A. D. Lewis of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee to appear before them and discuss the CIO program.

Widespread advance publicity is being given in the New Jersey area to plans for the meeting at which Lewis will speak. His topic is announced as "Industrial Organization of Construction Workers and Its Relation to the Economic Situation Confronting the Construction Industry."

Between 300 and 400 New Jersey contractors, handling all types of construction jobs in all parts of the State, are expected to be at the meeting in Elizabeth on Jan. 19. These contractors are eager to hear of the CIO program since they have suffered for years from craft union abuses.

CRAFT UNION ABUSES

An example of what the eastern contractors have been up against is offered in a current industry periodical which lists a large number of jurisdictional disputes among craft unions. Many of these concern petty questions yet of great complexity. Their solution results in rulings burdensome to the industry.

Many of the disputes listed have been heard and reheard time after time over a period of years, yet they still continue to plague the industry. Existence of this situation is one of the major reasons why contractors are asking in large numbers for information about the UCWOC and its industrial union policy.

Another indication of why the industry welcomes the UCWOC came from the National Association of Real Estate Boards, many of whose members favor the industrial union, in its 34th semi-annual survey of the real estate market.

The survey showed a shortage of single-family dwellings more prevalent now than at any time since new homebuilding got into stride. Shortages were reported in 45 per cent of the cities, as against 34 per cent a year ago, and only 3 per cent now show oversupply. Rents are upward bound though interest rates for the first time in real estate history are below 6 per cent for first mortgages on new moderately priced houses.

FORM CONFERENCE

Seventy-five delegates from six New York City locals of the UCWOC formed the New York Construction Workers District Conference as one of the first major moves in the 1940 organizing program. Chairman Lewis was the chief speaker while Louis E. Rode, regional UCWOC director, presided at the meeting.

"We are growing fast," Lewis told the New York Conference. "Already, since organizing was started last October, we have 80 locals chartered in more than 20 States, many with closed shop and check-off provisions."

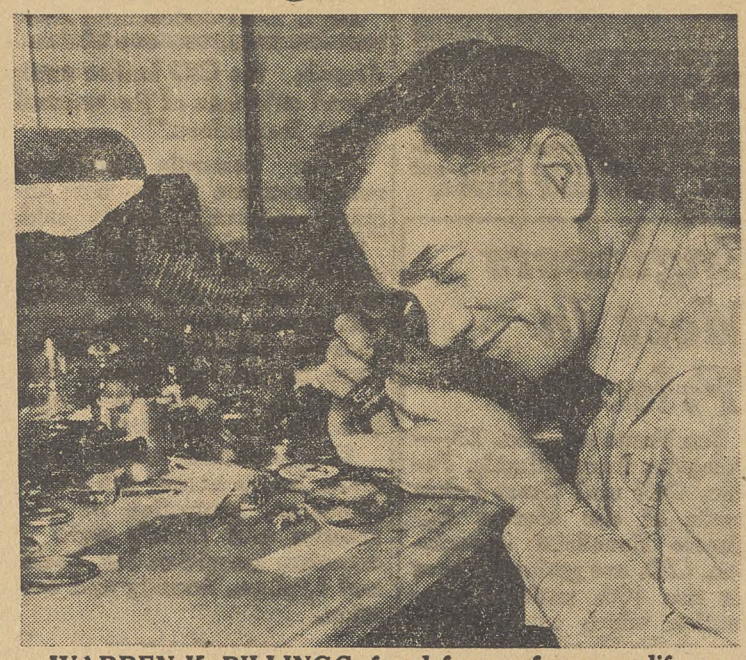
RESOLUTION

Significant was adoption of a resolution offered by George Affee, president of Local 56, which read:

"We pledge our best efforts to be ever mindful of our responsibility to the people of the United States; we shall not tolerate monopolistic tendencies of any kind or nature within the construction field; and we firmly believe the time is now at hand when the home building industry has become a large scale industry whose resources must be marshalled to provide adequate homes for all our fellow citizens; to which we will contribute our full share of honest labor, cheaper costs, and better building."

Lorillard Still Unfair

Middletown, Ohio, Jan. 13—The fight for union recognition still continues at the local plant of P. Lorillard & Co., manufacturers of Old Golds and other tobacco products, according to officials of the Pioneer Tobacco Workers Local Industrial Union, CIO affiliate.



The firm's products are on the CIO's national "unfair to labor" list.

Ship Graveyard Searched For Scrap Metal!

Fairbanks, Ala., Jan. 13—Alaska's graveyard of ships is going to be invaded by ghouls of the sea, reports Fairbanks progressive weekly, Lively Times. A company has been formed in Seattle to salvage abandoned hulks in Alaska waters and sell them to warring nations as scrap iron for bullets.

Captain Axel Olson, who has been sailing Alaska waters since 1881, says that among the sunken vessels which might be salvaged for scrap iron are the Golden Forest, wrecked in September 1929; the Shinkoku Maru wrecked off Montague Island in February 1930 and the Alloway, wrecked in February 1929.

Labor Board Ponders Appealing Inland Case

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Officials of the National Labor Relations Board were deliberating today whether to appeal the Inland Steel decision to the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Chicago circuit court, in a long-awaited decision handed down January 9, asserted that the Board erred in ordering the big steel firm to sign a written contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO affiliate.

Overshadowed by the publicity of the Inland case, however, were circuit court proceedings in New York City in a case involving the Art Metals Co. Judge Learned Hand of the federal circuit court appeared to give sympathetic treatment to the Board's arguments, which in this case, too, called for reaching a written agreement with the union.

FOUR VICTORIES

NLRB chances before the U. S. Supreme Court should be better than even if either or both these cases go up to the high tribunal. The Board has won four cases in the Supreme Court this season, and hasn't lost a decision before the high court since the Fansteel and Columbia Stamping rulings early in 1939.

Cases won so far this season are the Newport News decision, upholding the Board's right to disestablish a company union; the west coast longshoremen's decision, freeing the Board's unit-fixing power from court meddling; the Consumers Power ruling, which further guaranteed Board freedom of action in holding elections; and the Falk case, which backed up NLRB contentions that company unions may not appear on election ballots.

Labor Board Ruling:

John Hancock Must Put 'John Hancock' To Pact

BOSTON, Jan. 13—Setting a new precedent in this state, the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission ordered the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. to bargain collectively with Local 41 of The United Office & Professional Workers.

The union was named representative of industrial insurance agents in 12 of the company's offices in an election during October 1938, but the firm refused to bargain on grounds that the state labor board held no jurisdiction over insurance companies.

John Hancock, it is expected, will take the case to the state's highest court, where Atty. Samuel Angoff predicted the court will follow the opinion of New York state courts and uphold the UOPWA.

Gerald Connor, local president of the union, expressed hope that the state labor relations commission order before it, "the company will bargain with the union without court action in accordance with a statement made by Pres. Cox (of the company) that 'the company will in future obey in spirit as well as in deed all the laws of the United States of America and the laws of the several states thereof.'"

Phony AFL 'Drive' In Coal Gets Upset

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—A sniping campaign started some months ago in the anthracite coal area against the United Mine Workers by the Progressive Miners of America, chartered by the AFL in a feeble attempt to wreck the powerful UMW, was given a severe setback this week when the National Labor Relations Board dismissed a petition of the PMA for certification as sole union representative for employes of the Stevens and the Alden coal companies.

In rejecting the AFL union's contention that workers in each mine in the anthracite region constituted an appropriate bargaining unit, the Board pointed out that the United Mine Workers had been the region-wide bargaining unit for some 40 years.

Tracing the early history of collective bargaining in the area the Board found that the UMW succeeded in 1900 in organizing the entire field and declared a strike to which about two-thirds of the miners in the region responded. "In 1902 the United called another strike which closed practically all the mines in the region," the Board stated.

COMMISSION AWARD

"The strike lasted over five months and was called off only after intervention by President Theodore Roosevelt and the appointment by him of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission. The Commission in 1903 made a final report and award, which was accepted by the operators and the miners."

This is the famous award which is still referred to in collective bargaining negotiations in the anthracite area.

In 1906, John Mitchell, UMW president, negotiated a contract with the operators, adopting and continuing the provisions of the 1903 award. Other contracts were negotiated on a region-wide basis in 1909 and subsequent years, each adopting the 1903 award.

UPHOLD UMW CLAIM

Since collective bargaining procedure from the early days, years of the 1900's down to the present had been found to be on with the coal operators on a region-wide basis, the Board upheld the UMW's contention for the appropriateness of a region-wide bargaining unit.

It concluded that the anthracite operators, including the Stevens Coal Company and the Alden Coal Company, acting together through their conferences and committees "constituted an employer" within the meaning of the Labor Relations Act.

Navy Dept. Will Bargain, Union Is Told

Washington, Jan. 13—The present "limited national emergency" will not in any way alter the attitude of the U. S. Navy Dept. towards unions of civilian employes, Sec. of the Navy Charles Edison told a CIO delegation today.

Conferring with Edison on union proposals for personnel policy inside the Department were Allan S. Haywood, CIO national director of organization; Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director and Lewis Allan Berne, president of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians.

Nova Scotia Steel Firm Enters Pact

Trenton, Nova Scotia, Jan. 13—Increased wages and improved condition have been won for employes of the Dominion Wheel Foundry in negotiations conducted by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Announcement of the successful conclusion of parleys carried on with company officials headed by T. C. Clough, travelling manager, was made by the executive of Local 1231, SWOC.

The negotiations, it was said, were carried on with Mr. Clough in a fine spirit of co-operation.

In return for concessions granted them the men have agreed to work on Saturdays, previously a strong bone of contention, and to fill orders for maintenance wheels. These orders otherwise would be lost.

Lewis Asks Congress Help CIO's Legislative Program

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Solution of U. S. domestic problems is "the surest guarantee which can be offered to our people that this nation will remain out of any foreign wars," Pres. John L. Lewis wrote to all Congressmen and Senators in urging their "approval and support" of the CIO 1940 legislative program.

Lewis warned that the American people "are looking toward Congress for concrete meas-ures" to satisfy their hunger and bring them a measure of security, saying that they would not be satisfied with "the expression of mere pious hopes."

Jobs are still the main concern of 10,000,000 unemployed Americans, he declared, and remain the "first charge on our national leadership." If our elected leaders continue to ignore this responsibility," he said, "our own basic institutions are endangered."

FIRM PLEDGE

Lewis also warned that any pledge to keep America out of war must be a firm one, not "encased in any subtle modifications." America's "forward march for social and economic progress" must be continued, he added, pointing out that it could not be accomplished "by emasculating the social and labor program enacted during the past few years."

TEXT OF MESSAGE

"A very grave responsibility rests upon the elected representatives of Congress during the present session.

"Failure of the leaders of foreign nations to give heed to the problems of unemployment and the actual needs of human beings, gave rise to the very forces which eventually destroyed the democratic institutions of those countries and resulted in the present international wars.

SOCIAL INSECURITY

"The average American today is still confronted with all the devastating impact of social and economic insecurity. To approximately ten million of our fellow Americans, nothing remains for them or their children but stark despair, arising out of unemployment caused through no fault of their own.

"If our elected representatives and responsible leaders in government and industry continue to ignore this problem, our own basic institutions are endangered. The return to work of those Americans who are unemployed and the provision of public work for them until they can find jobs in private industry is the first

Crawford To Head News Guild

Washington, Jan. 13.—Kenneth Crawford, Washington correspondent for the New York Post and the weekly Nation magazine, today was the American Newspaper Guild's chosen successor to the late Heywood Broun.

Nominated by the Washington Guild, Crawford won quick support from other newsmen's locals throughout the country. As all other candidates for the Guild presidency dropped out of the running, he automatically became future head of the international union.

The ANG executive board is expected to declare Crawford formally elected when it meets Feb. 3.

PART-TIME JOB

Crawford will continue his newspaper work while serving as Guild president. The office is a non-paying, part-time job.

In a statement issued after his election became certain, Crawford pointed out that "Heywood Broun's place in the Newspaper Guild cannot be filled. I accepted the nomination of the Washington Guild fully realizing that his shoes were too big for any of us, certainly for me."

The new president dedicated himself to working for the day "when all publishers will deal with us as readily as they now deal with the mechanical unions. That day is not yet. Until it comes, we shall have to fight for our

Expect 2,000 At Miners' Convention

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 13. — A half century of growth and ever-increasing service to all American workers will pass in review when some 2,000 delegates, headed by Pres. John L. Lewis, flock into this city January 23 for the Golden Jubilee Convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

For it was in Columbus on January 25, 1890, that the United Mine Workers came into existence. At a history-making conference, two rival national miners' unions—the National Trades Assembly 135, Knights of Labor, and the National Progressive Union—buried their past differences to form a united organization.

Through good years and bad—and there have been all too many of the latter for the coal industry — the United Mine Workers worked ceaselessly towards its goal of industrial democracy.

BIG GROWTH

In the first year of its existence, the union had 20,000 members, in 216 locals. Today it has 600,000 members, in 4,000 active locals throughout the United States. In addition, through District 50, it has made considerable progress towards organizing workers in coal derivative industries.

For many years after its inception, the United Mine Workers maintained headquarters in Columbus. Later these were shifted to Indianapolis, and in 1934 the union moved once again to the nation's capital, where it is now housed in a magnificent six-story building.

HELPED CIO

Since formation of the CIO in 1935, the UMW has taken an even greater part in spreading the power of union organization throughout the nation in all the mass production industries.

Led by Pres. Lewis, the union gave generously of its officers and funds to the lusty CIO movement, well knowing that future security of the mine union's progress lies in the existence of powerful industrial unions in others of the nation's key occupations.

Work Out Sharecropper Relief Plan

St. Louis, Jan. 13—A five-point program for solution of problems of evicted sharecroppers has been worked out here by a State committee appointed recently by Governor Lloyd C. Starke of Missouri.

The committee has two sharecropper representatives on it, Owen H. Whitfield and C. E. Underhill, both members of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers.

The program, already endorsed by Governor Starke, includes: registration of tenants for new allotments, securing of farm land from the Farm Security Administration and expansion of its rehabilitation loan program, assurance of seasonal wage work for at least 120 days per year to sharecroppers and postponement of further evictions.

The committee is the first example of landlord-union co-operation in facing problems of evicted and starving sharecroppers, Donald Henderson, Cannery and Agricultural union president, said.

CIO Legislative Program Winning Big Reception

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Favorable comment from all parts of the country on the CIO Legislative Program is pouring in on CIO headquarters here in the form of big orders for the pamphlet containing the program, letters asking for CIO Counsel Lee Pressman's recent coast-to-coast radio speech, and suggestions from hundreds of CIO friends and listeners for popularizing it.

One CIO organization in the midwest ordered 20,000 copies of the pamphlet. The first printing of 30,000 was used up in a week, and orders on hand will as quickly use up another 30,000.

ALL SECTIONS

All sections of the country are writing in for copies of the radio speech outlining the program, most of them congratulating the CIO and wishing it good luck in getting the program through Congress. An AFL railway worker writes from St. Louis: "We are for the enactment of said proposals 100 per cent."

A professor writes: "I have been a strong advocate of your organization ever since its beginning," in spite of strong opposition.

A San Francisco worker notes that the CIO program is "timely and to the point."

From Los Angeles an AFL retail clerk writes: "My sympathies are with the constructive objectives of such legislation as your great organization endorses."

Plan Campaign

Demands for adequate health facilities will be coupled with wage-hour platforms in future union negotiations, the meeting decided after speakers had pointed to state statistics revealing widespread silicosis among workers in the industry.

Hillman Reports:

1939 A '$1,000,000 Year' For Clothing Workers

NEW YORK, Jan. 13—Employes in the clothing industry benefited to the tune of $1,250,000 by wage-raising actions of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Pres. Sidney Hillman said today in a resume of union activities during the past 12 months.

The more than million dollar pay rise resulted not only from the ACWA's wage demands, he added, but from the stabilization program which eliminated cut-throat competition between "manufacturer and manufacturer, market and market, contractor and contractor, and often between contractors engaged by the same manufacturer."

Hillman's discussion of the state of the union took place at the Rand School here, and was the first in a forum series being sponsored by the New York Clothing Joint Board.

The stabilization program, now in effect for two grades of clothing, covers Greater New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, with plans for its extension to Cleveland and Richmond, Va.

Effect of the program, Hillman said, has been to stop completely the migration of shops from New York to runaway havens. With labor costs thus equalized on a national basis, he pointed out, no manufacturer can hope to gain an advantage by moving from established clothing center.

Discussing prospects for the nation and for the union during 1940, the Amalgamated leader warned that America's democratic processes can best be preserved only by improvement of the people's economic status. In that way, we can avoid the dispair which paved the way in European nations for totalitarian dictatorships and war, he said.

Hillman called for extension of New Deal legislative gains which have "balanced the scales" for all sections of the people. Though unemployment has diminished considerably under the New Deal, he pointed out that gainful employment for millions of idle Americans is still the No. 1 problem confronting the American people.

Connecticut CIO Raps Budget Cuts

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 13 — Charging that the proposed budget for 1940 marks "abandonment of social expenditures in favor of huge armaments," the Connecticut CIO's executive board called for popular support for the CIO legislative program announced three weeks ago.

The budget forfeits labor support, the CIO council group declared, "because of its serious inadequacies and omissions and proposed drastic slashes in relief, WPA, NYA, agricultural benefit and other socially necessary expenditures. . . ."

"We call upon Congressmen," the resolution continued, "to support the CIO legislative program in the best interest of the nation and that we launch a movement in all affiliated locals to secure public support for it and recognition by our Congressmen that they will support this program."

Poverty, Plenty and the CIO

These are curious times in which we live. The production of goods is at a higher level today than even in the boom year of 1929—in fact, it is at the highest level in American history.

So you might think that with America's marvelous industrial plants and machinery producing more than ever before, everything should be hunky-dory.

This should mean that every American worker has employment at decent wages. It should mean that everyone in the country is adequately supplied with the necessities, and some of the luxuries, of life.

But it doesn't.

We have a paradox of poverty in the midst of potential plenty that is even more startling today than in the worst of the depression years.

Then plants were closed down that might have supplied the people with jobs and goods. Today many of these plants are opening up, and production and profits are booming, but still millions lack jobs and the bare necessities of life.

* * * * *

There are several main reasons for this condition.

For one thing, the working population of the United States has increased since 1929. So that a production level was nearly adequate to supply the country with needed goods then is grossly inadequate now.

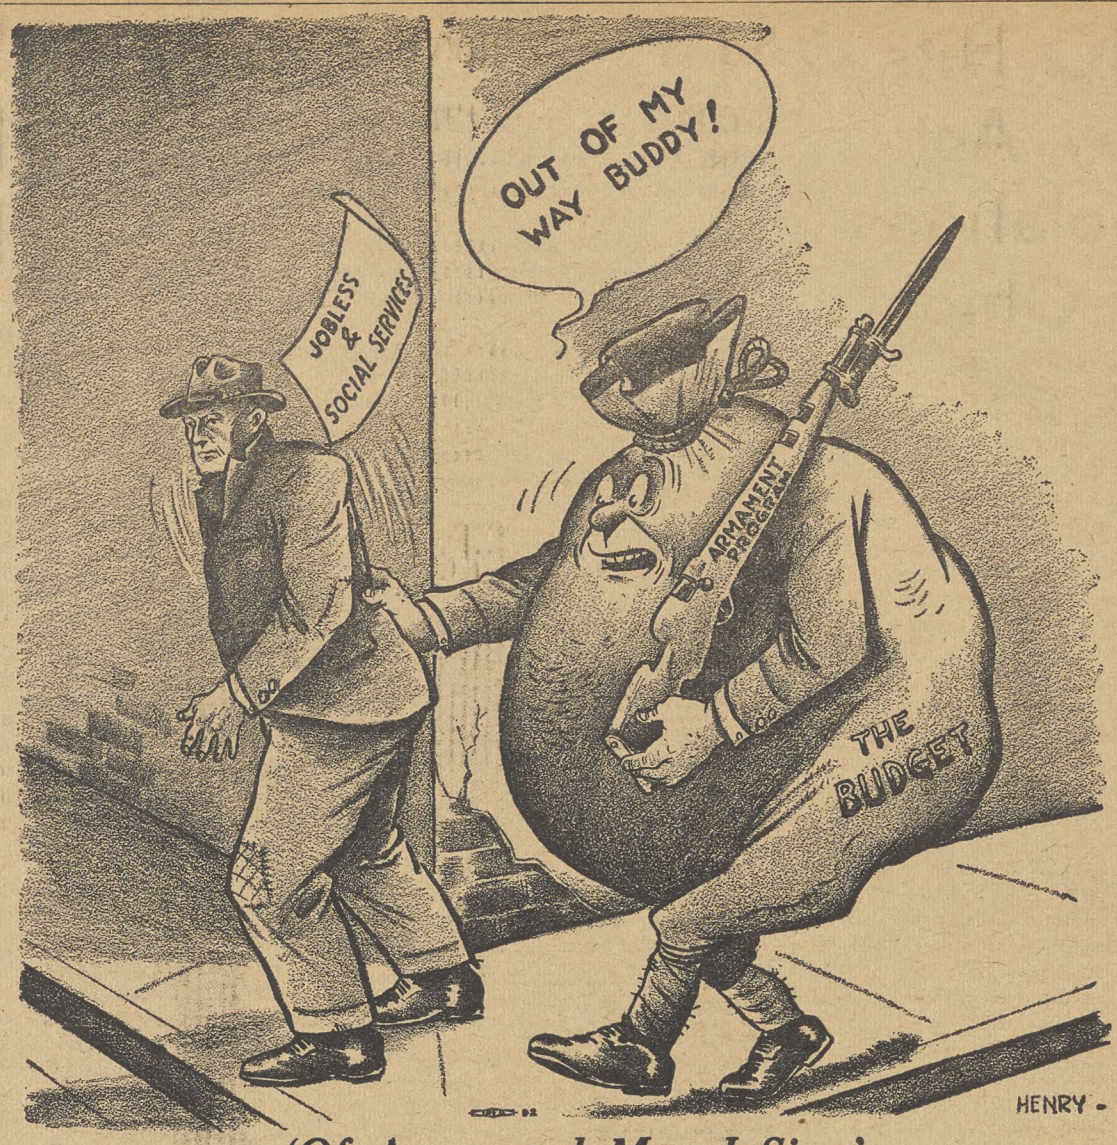
Secondly, the present increase in production is not so much in consumers' goods and services to supply the American people's needs, as in war industries directed to producing implements of destruction.

Thirdly, the modernization of industrial plants and machinery has made it possible for one man to produce as much as ten, twenty or even a hundred did before. So that production can boom, while thousands wait in vain outside the factory gates for jobs.

Finally, the rewards of industrial progress are unevenly divided. Labor still lacks sufficient organized power to reduce working hours and increase wages enough, so that improved machinery may mean greater leisure and a better income for more workers, instead of merely higher profits and fewer jobs.

* * * * *

So production is higher today in the United States than ever before. Wealth accumulates, but men decay. Between nine and ten million are unemployed. One-third of the population are ill-clothed, ill-housed, ill-fed, while the great majority live under conditions of discomfort and insecurity that should be totally unnecessary in a country of the great wealth, resources and industrial equipment which the United States enjoys.



* * * * *

The CIO, representing industrial workers who bear the brunt of these inequalities and insecurities, has a program to meet this situation.

This program calls for organizing the unorganized workers, so that an expanded and stronger labor movement may distribute more fairly the rewards of increased productivity—in the form of shorter hours, more jobs and greater purchasing power for the workers.

The CIO program calls for government, industry, agriculture and labor to confer together, under government auspices, until some constructive solution is worked out for the present paradox of unemployment and mass misery in the midst of plenty.

Meanwhile, the CIO demands that the government make adequate provision for needy Americans, so that the unemployed may be given jobs at decent wages on socially useful public works; so that the excesses of exploitation may be checked by wage-hour and similar legislation; and so that adequate pensions, unemployment compensation and other social security benefits may drive the wolf of hunger and insecurity from the door of every resident of this great and wealthy country.

'Of Arms and Men I Sing'

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

The CIO Legislative Program

THE old saying that "one half of the world does not know how the other half lives" is somewhat off in its percentages. In the United States, for instance, it would be a little more correct to say that about five per cent of the population don't know how the other 95 per cent live.

Income figures show that one-third of the country's families and single individuals had an average annual income of $450 in 1935-36; that two-thirds had average incomes of less than $1070; and that only 11 per cent had incomes of more than $2500, and only 3 per cent incomes of more than $5000.

Or take the actual annual wages of American workers as shown by employers' payroll reports for the Federal Old Age Benefits Tax. These reveal that in 1937 the wages of almost 40 per cent of the workers were less than $500 during the year; that two-thirds received less than $1,000; and that the wages of 80 per cent were less than $1,500 a year.

A breakdown of farm incomes would show a similar picture—a substantial proportion at the poverty and near-starvation level, a big majority in the barely-keep-the-wolf-from-the-door class, and only a tiny minority in the comfortable and wealthy class.

Bridging the Gap

But it so happens that the tiny minority who are comfortably or more-than-comfortably off include all the politicians, newspaper owners, radio broadcasters, movie producers and others who have a monopoly on expressing, and reflecting—not to mention creating—public opinion.

That is one reason why there is often a big gap between the needs of the majority of the population, on the one hand, and the programs and policies that are advanced by their supposed political representatives and the press, on the other.

That, too, is why a legislative program like that of the CIO meets such an instantaneous response when it can be brought to the ears of the people—even at a time when press and politicians give the impression that foreign affairs, budget economies and the like are most on people's minds.

It Hits the Spot

The CIO legislative program has "hit the spot" to a remarkable degree.

The CIO owns no chain of daily papers which can keep plugging this program day after day. The well-to-do minority who control the opinion-forming and opinion-expressing business do not consider that this program is what is most on the country's mind.

But back in the sticks, among the worse-off 95 per cent of the population, the response to the CIO program has been an electric one, whenever it has been brought directly home to the people, through news items, an occasional radio broadcast or the other limited publicity facilities available to the CIO.

The broadcast about the CIO program on the opening day of Congress, for instance, resulted in hundreds of enthusiastic letters from people in all walks of life and in all parts of the country.

Budget Marks a Retreat

The CIO legislative program, representing the expressed convention wishes of a movement of four million American workers, revolves around certain keynote ideas that have a direct appeal to at least 95 per cent of the population.

Among these are determined opposition to any involvement of the United States in war; demand that first attention be devoted to a solution of pressing domestic problems of unemployment and insecurity; and demand for advance, and not retreat, in matters of progressive social legislation.

This program is in sharp contrast to the administration's budget and to much of the political discussion that has marked the opening of Congress.

In spite of all professions to the contrary, foreign affairs have hogged most of the attention, to the disregard and detriment of domestic issues.

The budget not only reflects this trend, but also represents a definite retreat in the sphere of social legislation.

Between nine and ten million Americans remain unemployed, with little prospect of re-employment. Security, wage-hour, housing and other progressive social legislation represent but a small beginning to meet the needs of the American people. Yet the budget proposes to take half a billion dollars away from public works, unemployment relief and other social services, in order to make an additional $300,000,000 available for armaments.

Majority Rights

The less than 5 per cent of the population who think they know what is best for the other 95 per cent, debate how much they should economize at the expense of the unemployed and of social services, and some even think that the budget does not go far enough.

As for the 95 per cent, their attention is supposed to be diverted elsewhere, while economies are made at their expense.

But fortunately for the 95 per cent, while they do not control the channels of information and the purse strings of political parties, they do at least have the right to organize and most of them, where poll taxes do not prevail, the right to vote.

So it comes that millions of workers can present their own CIO program, and that politicians will have to respect it, if it is brought to their attention with sufficient organization and determination behind it.

CIO Hits Pay Act Violations In Ohio

Washington, Jan. 13—In a documented list of charges personally filed with Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt today, the Ohio CIO Council charged H. C. Atkinson, administrator of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation of Ohio with violations of the Federal Social Security Act and the Ohio law.

The charges were signed and presented to McNutt by John Owens, Cambridge, Ohio, president; Ted F. Silvey, Columbus, Ohio, Secty-treas.; and William V. Lavelle, Warren, Ohio, counsel of the Ohio labor organization.

Five main charges were listed—that Administrator Atkinson has (1) denied unemployed workers full benefits and deprived them of fair hearings on appeal, (2) denied the great majority of partially unemployed workers all their benefits; (3) unnecessarily increased administrative expenses; (4) campaigned to change the existing administrative rule when he should have been enforcing it, and (5) acted in a manner that accrued advantages to employers at the expense of unemployed workers.

CIO STATEMENT

The statement of the Ohio CIO Council spokesmen reads in part:

"Ohio unemployed workers lost $14,250,000 in 1939 to which they were entitled and which they would have received if the Administrator had followed the Ohio law and the operating rule.

"Benefits paid in 1939 to unemployed workers totalled only $23,750,000. If benefits had been paid on the full-time week, as they should have been, the unemployed workers would have received $38,000,000.

"There has been ample money available, as income of the Ohio fund this past year has totalled 58 million dollars.

RESERVE INCREASING

"Administrator Atkinson's policy has been to keep benefit payments as low as possible. While the total benefit payments to Ohio unemployed workers are decreasing each month, Ohio's reserve fund is continually increasing.

"To what end is Mr. Atkinson building up the fund? Might it be to give credence to employers' wishes that their payments be reduced before the full social and economic advantages of unemployment compensation are obtained?

"Under Atkinson's administration the State of Ohio paid out less benefits per dollar collected for the purpose than any of its neighboring States.

"While Michigan benefits were nearly 83 cents of every dollar received, Pennsylvania 73 cents of every dollar, Indiana 53 cents of every dollar, Ohio has paid out benefits of less than 42 cents of every dollar collected for unemployment compensation."

So It's Pensions You Want? Look at Armour's Plan!

CHICAGO, Jan. 13 — R. H. Cabell, former president of Armour & Co., is certainly in no position to fight old age pensions for workers.

Let out in an intra-management shakeup last summer, Cabell was given the following reimbursement from the company, which only now after long years of opposition, is bargaining collectively with its workers:

For 1939: $70,000 salary and $30,000 bonus.
From 1940 to 1945: $20,000 a year.
From 1945 to 1950: $15,000 a year.
After 1950: $10,000 a year until death.

For the average worker, pensions under the federal old age assistance program will be about $350 a year.

Los Angeles CIO Plans 'Union Label Fair'

Los Angeles, Jan. 13—A "Union Label Fair," at which CIO-made products will be exhibited, promises to be a smashing success. Pres. Mary F. Wood of the Los Angeles CIO Auxiliary Council announced today.

The fair, to be held in the Currier Building here, will open Feb. 15 and run through March 7. Everything from divans to stockings will be displayed.

"The Council," Pres. Wood declared, "has constantly striven during its year of existence to teach the women of the CIO not to buy CIO-made products.

"There are official unfair lists, but none for 'fair' products. A Union Label Fair seemed to answer this problem."

Every effort is being made to attract large crowds to the exhibit. Musical programs are being arranged, and showings of union movies will be made nightly.

Wyoming Council Reports Big Gains By CIO Unions

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Jan. 13.—Strides made by CIO unions throughout the state in the mining, timber, oil and other industries, despite bitter opposition from anti-labor employing interests, were described in the officers' report to the second biennial convention of the Wyoming Industrial Union Council here.

President Ray Maki in his speech the first day of the convention stressed the importance of active political action on the part of unions to defeat anti-labor legislation.

Attacking the Tory stockmen and well-to-do ranchers who make up the largest single group in the state legislature, Maki said that "labor bills introduced by a minority group of progressive legislators were discarded with reckless abandon, little consideration being given to the merits of the bills or to the needs of the workers in Wyoming.'

REPORT CITES PROGRESS

Outstanding gains made by the CIO in the state as summarized in the officers' report included:

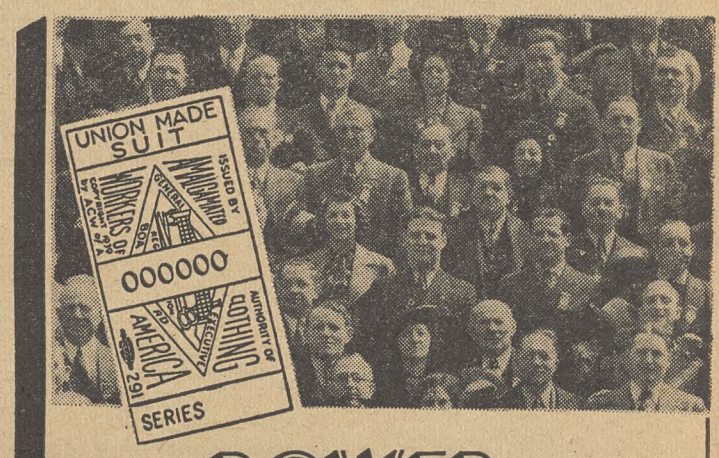
Formation of a local affiliated to District 50, United Mine Workers of America in the creosoting plant of the Forest Park Treating Co. of Laramie and the signing of a contract providing wage increases, check-off, job security and seniority rights.

Organization of the employes of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. mine in Sunrise as a local of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers. The local brought charges against the company before the NLRB and were upheld in an intermediate report made by the Board's trial examiner.

Workers on federal reclamation projects in the Casper region were organized as Local 131, United Federal Workers and were successful in improving working conditions.

Warehouse workers in Rock Springs, chartered as United Warehouse Employes Local Industrial Union 747, are preparing to negotiate an agreement with their employers.

Retail clerks in Rock Springs, Reliance and Winton, chartered by the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, won an agreement with the Rock Springs Merchants Association giving wage increases, closed shop, check-off, paid vacations and other benefits.



The URWE also obtained an agreement with the J. C. Penney Co., covering the local store, and after a seven months' struggle with Montgomery Ward & Co., won another contract with wage increases. Negotiations with merchants in Superior are expected to result soon in an agreement there.

In the timber industry, the Intl. Woodworkers of America organized workers of the R. R. Crow Co. in Ryan Park, and won a contract granting a closed shop, check-off, seniority rights and time and a half pay for overtime work. IWA locals were also formed and contracts signed in the Elk Mountain region, in Fox Park and other areas.

OIL UNION FILES CHARGES

The Oil Workers International Union through Representative F. T. Frisbey, went to bat against notorious anti-union corporations operating within the petroleum industry, filing charges with the Labor Board against the Continental Oil, and jointly against the Standard Oil of Indiana and Stanolind Oil & Gas Co.

After prolonged hearings the union won a complete victory in the Continental case. Decision on the Standard-Stanolind case is still pending.

What Happens When Jobs Evaporate?

In Textile

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—What happens when a big business closes its doors, throws thousands out of their jobs?

That was the question a lot of people have been asking, and part of the answer, at least, is contained in a study just issued by WPA's National Research Project.

Tracing the 105-year history of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. in Manchester, N. H., whose mills were considered the largest in the world, WPA studied the fortunes of 11,000 textile workers who lost their jobs when the mill went out of operation in 1935.

FEW FOUND WORK

A year later, the study found almost one out of every four workers involved had left the city. Of those who stayed, only two out of five men and one out of five women had been able to get work. During 1936, 29 per cent of the city's families were receiving public assistance or WPA work.

The situation improved a bit when general community effort brought a number of new concerns to the vacant mill buildings during 1937. By July of that year, some 3,500 people had been reemployed, but this number fell to 1,600 by September of 1938.

RELIEF ROLLS HIGH

During 1937 and 1938, Manchester had a larger share of its families receiving public assistance than any one of 23 New England cities for which figures are available, Corrington Gill, WPA assistant commissioner in charge of research, reported.

"Thus Manchester, once a prosperous manufacturing city, was left stranded when its largest company closed its mills after a long period of gradual liquidation.

"The loss of employment opportunity in 1935 for more than 11,000 workers raised social and economic problems for the entire population which are still unresolved, and which only local and Federal relief and the Works Program have been able to mitigate."

Crawford To Head News Guild

place in the sun as other young unions have fought before us.

"Our job of building will be finished when our roof covers all now unorganized newspaper workers."

OUTLINES TASKS

What would have happened to wages in the newspaper industry during the present period of mergers and unemployment without the work of the Guild, "one can only guess," Crawford continued.

Of his idea of the Guild's future tasks, the new president said:

"Stated generally, it is my opinion that the Guild's function is to protect and improve the wages, hours and working condition of newspaper people; that this objective should be pursued by trade union methods in co-operation with the CIO and the rest of the labor movement; that it is not the Guild's business to reform the world or the world's newspapers."

An early member of the Guild, Crawford was active in the affairs of its Washington local.

In Steel

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The ghosts of economic despair are haunting a score of steel mill towns, bringing fears of unemployment, poverty and uncertainty into the homes of thousands of workers.

This is the picture, drawn in the midst of the current—and probably short-lived—"boom" in steel, by two CIO officials writing in the January issue of Harper's Magazine.

The authors of the piece—"War and the Steel Ghost Towns'—are Harold and Stanley Ruttenberg. Harold Ruttenberg is research director for the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee; his brother does research work in the CIO national office here.

Both well familiar with the problems of the steel industry, they analyze for Harpers' readers brief respite from economic death of New Castle, Pa., site of an old U. S. Steel hand mill, and warn that current orders have postponed, but not averted, disaster for New Castle and many other steel communities around Pittsburgh.

NEW DEVELOPMENT

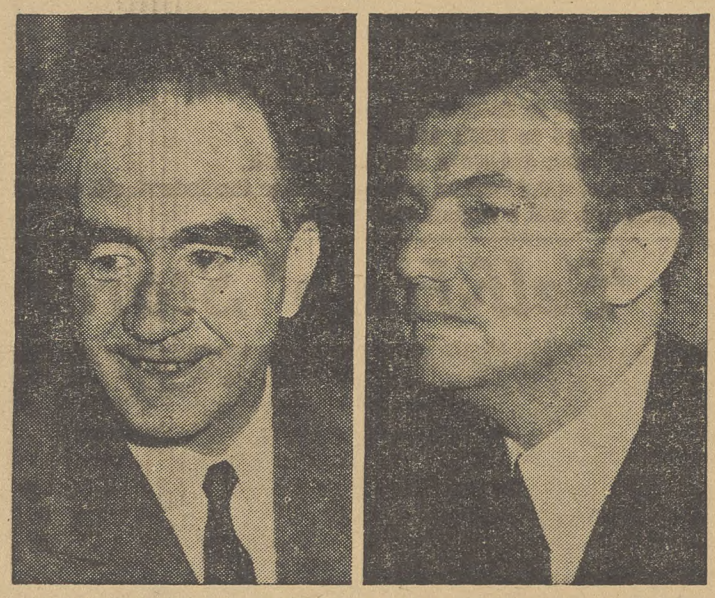
"'Ghost' towns in coal have been chronic since the end of World War I, but in steel they are something new," the authors write. "In the past two years the steel strip mills, 'a moving picture director's dream of the future of technology,' have displaced 25,000 hand-mill workers and turned more than a dozen thriving communities into 'ghost' steel towns."

"When the extraordinary tinplate and other steel demands cease, the skilled hand-mill workers will be through, this time for good. Revived steel towns will revert to ghost towns."

BOOM POSTPONES SHOWDOWN

The war boom, they continue, will only postpone the day when the nation must come to grips with economic ills—in the case of the steel towns, with the "technological unemployment" which has reduced them to "economic ruin."

"Throughout the nation," the authors point out, "there are scores of industrial towns dominated by one industry or large corporation, that are now prosperous but doomed to economic destruction by the same forces that have razed the economic life of New Castle.



"These forces, like mass unemployment and the country's other more obvious economic ills, will be more ugly and difficult of solution when the boom and the allaying effects are over."

Los Angeles Anti-Picket Law Dead

Los Angeles, Jan. 13—(FP)—The vicious Los Angeles anti-picketing ordinance received its final death blow when the Superior Court's Appellate Division unanimously ruled that its remaining sections are unconstitutional.

The present decision, resulting from an appeal by CIO longshoremen and warehousemen, limits the distances to be maintained by pickets, prohibiting pickets from speaking to anyone and regulating inscriptions on signs. Last July two other sections of the act had been similarly voided.

charge upon our national leadership.

"Our domestic problems must continue to be our primary concern. Their solution is the surest guarantee which can be offered to our people that this nation will remain out of any foreign wars—a pledge that must always be no less than a firm commitment and never encased in any subtle modifications.

BASIC NEEDS

"The problem of unemployment, protection of labor's right to organize and civil liberties, extension of social security, provision for health and industrial hygiene, housing and taxation are but a few of the basic needs to which Congress must give attention at this session.

"We must continue our forward march for social and economic progress. This cannot be accomplished either by emasculating the social and labor program enacted during the past few years or through the expression of mere pious hopes. The people of the nation are looking toward Congress for concrete measures which will actually satisfy their hunger and establish a degree of future economic and social security.

"On behalf of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, I am transmitting to you a copy of our legislative program which we believe, should receive the approval and support of each member of Congress.

"Very truly yours,

Murray on NBC, Jan. 15

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Attention of all CIO affiliates was called to the national radio speech of Philip Murray, CIO vice-president, scheduled for the Natl. Broadcasting Co's Blue Network Monday, Jan. 15, in a circular letter sent out from CIO headquarters here.

The letter, signed by Len De Caux, CIO publicity director, asked affiliates to get in touch with local NBC stations on which the broadcast was available to find out if they were planning to carry it.

Murray's subject, "America's No. 1 Problem, Unemployment," was set for discussion at 9.30 p. m., Eastern Standard time.

HCL Makes QSL NSG:

Ask End to Deductions In U. S. Pay Checks

Washington, Jan. 13—From the pockets of workers who can least afford it will come $7,400,000 in salary deductions to help operate the hospitals and other facilities of the Veterans Administration during the next U. S. fiscal year.

This was the charge laid before a House Appropriations Sub-committee today by Pres. Jacob Baker of the CIO United Federal Workers in a plea for changing the government agency's procedures.

The deductions for services known as QSL — "Quarters, Service and Laundry"—amount to $33 a month and cut monthly income of many Veterans Administration employes down to $52.

"It is a frequently expressed opinion on the part of these employes that with the government establishing decent conditions of employment for workers in industry, the Government should itself set decent standards in its own institutions," Baker declared.

In the early days of the Veterans Administration, the UFW head explained, most of the agency's employes were returned soldiers, glad to have the government furnish them with domestic services at cost.

"But," he continued, "The working force has changed. The man who was 28 twenty years ago is now 48; then unmarried, he has, if he is a typical American citizen, decided he wanted to be married and to have a family. A great number of these workers have married and have families.

NOT OWN CHOICE

"They live at their own homes and do not use the rooms nor eat the meals. This is not wholly from choice, as the families are not permitted to live on the grounds in the quarters furnished by the government.

CIO War Stand Now In Book

New York, Jan. 13.—Quotations from Pres. John L. Lewis' speech at San Francisco on the CIO policy toward the present European war feature the latest book released this week by Hastings House, publishers, under the title "Common Sense Neutrality."

The book is a compilation of the views of 25 political, business, educational, religious and other civic leaders, all of whom are agreed on the fundamental proposition that America must stay out of the struggle now going on in the old world.

"PROFOUNDLY CONCERNED"

"Labor, our entire nation and the peoples of all civilized countries are profoundly concerned with the war in Europe," Pres. Lewis said in the quotations put into the book. "In many respects this war possesses potentialities that are the most menacing with which modern culture and civilization have ever been confronted.

"Without question, organized labor and all other Americans are fundamentally and overwhelmingly opposed to any participation in this war on the part of our Government or its military establishment.

"Labor has a major stake in this problem. In war labor must perform most of the work and do most of the dying. Upon labor always is inflicted most of the agony and tragedy of war."

Answer to the problem of war involvement, Lewis declared in his San Francisco speech, is to organize the unorganized, to " . . . build up a modern labor movement here in America to such proportions that its voice may never be ignored in our homeland. . . ."

Union Leaders Ask U. S. 'Stay Out' Of European War

Pittsburgh, Jan. 13—Upwards of a hundred union leaders in this area have signed a petition asking Pres. Roosevelt and Congress to exert their influence for keeping the United States out of war.

Pointing out that we must choose "either peace or profits," the statement declares "we choose peace."

Labor and the Law:

The Mine Workers Score A Victory

One of the most sweeping victories ever achieved in a Labor Board decision has just been won by the United Mine Workers in the case of Stevens and Alden Coal Companies, involving the appropriate bargaining unit for the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania.

The opinion strengthens previous decisions of the Board which held that where collective bargaining has been carried on customarily between a union and an association representing a number of employers, the appropriate unit may consist of the employes of all the employers.

In the spring of 1939 the dual Progressive Mine Workers of America filed a dozen or more petitions asserting that it represented a majority of the employes at each of a number of operations in the anthracite region. Most of these petitions were dismissed out of hand by the Board, because no showing of substantial membership had been made. In the case of the Stevens and Alden companies, however, a hearing was ordered.

UPHOLDS UMW ARGUMENT

The Progressives asserted that the appropriate bargaining unit in each case was one mine or one washery. The United Mine Workers of America, to which practically all of the 115,000 miners in the area belong, asserted on the contrary that bargaining had been conducted on a region-wide basis for some 40 years, and that the appropriate unit was the entire region. The Board has now held for the United Mine Workers, and has dismissed the petitions filed by the Progressives.

One of the important legal problems involved had to do with the Board's power to find that a bargaining unit consisting of the employes of a large number of employers, taken together, was appropriate. The law gives the Board authority to find the employer unit appropriate, but does not specifically mention any unit larger than this.

On the other hand, it defines an employer as any person acting in the interest of an employer, and defines "person" to include an association of employers. Since it was obviously not the intention of Congress to break down established units consisting of the employes of all the companies in such an association, the Board has properly held several times that such workers comprise a single unit under the law.

CASE WAS COMPLICATED

In the present instance the case was complicated, partly because there was no formal employers' association. Since 1902, however, when the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission was set up by President Theodore Roosevelt, bargaining in the industry has been on the basis of the regional unit. The award handed down by that Commission put a floor under wages and a roof on hours, and established grievance machinery which has been in existence ever since.

Subsequent agreements between the United Mine Workers and the anthracite operators, all on a regional basis, have perpetuated and elaborated this machinery, and have steadily increased wages, shortened hours, and improved working conditions generally.

Throughout these developments the operators have acted as a single body, maintaining standing committees to represent them in dealings with the union, selecting special committees for the periodic negotiation of new contracts, and levying dues and assessments for these purposes. While they have had no formal employers' association, they have acted for all intents and purposes as if they did. Together, so the Board found, they have constituted and still constitute one employer under the law.

BURDEN OF PROOF ON EMPLOYER

A legal point of importance is the Board's ruling that in a case like this, where all employers in a region have accepted and gone along with the contracts negotiated by the group over a period of many years, it is to be presumed that each employer belongs to the group.

It is not necessary in such a case to prove that any particular employer consented to go along with the others. Instead, the burden is on the employer, or upon any employe or union that claims that his workers should be in a separate unit, because the employe has bargained separately, to prove that he has expressly renounced the authority of the group to bargain on his behalf.

A presumption has arisen that the employer is a member of the general association and governed by its acts.

This last point means that a unit consisting not only of all employers in an association, but presumptively of all employers in the anthracite region, is the appropriate unit in the industry.

This is in line with the true history of labor relations in the hard coal fields. As a matter of actual fact, each employer in that region is presumed to go along with the others. Each employer for years has assumed that he was controlled by the acts of the group as a whole, and has abided by them. The legal presumption laid down by the Board has firm foundation and justification in a presumption of fact.

Modify 'Sedition' Charges In Canadian CIO Case

Timmins, Ontario, Jan. 13 — "Sedition" charges against C. H. Millard, Canadian CIO leader, were modified and his trial set over to Jan. 16 when he appeared in court here to answer an indictment under the Defense of Canada Regulations, gag laws passed at the outbreak of the present European war.

Millard was arrested some weeks ago for a speech he made at a CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers meeting in this town, heart of the Northern Ontario gold country, in which he called for democracy in Canada and criticized war profiteering.

LONG MONTHS OF NEGOTIATIONS came to an end when the National Maritime Union and the American Merchant Marine Institute initialed a new agreement. Union and employers look forward to better relations during coming year. Shown as agreement was approved are (seated) Frank Taylor, head of the institute, and Pres. Joseph Curran of the NMU. Standing: Frank Walker, employers' counsel; Howard McKenzie, chairman of the NMU negotiating committee, and William Standard, NMU attorney.

WATERFRONT WORKERS await assignments from the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's dispatcher following a truce in the 54-day dispute between the ship clerks and employers. Harbor activity resumed as negotiators got to work.

Employers Must Give Receipts For Pension Payments

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Employers henceforth must give workers receipts for all money deducted from their pay checks for federal old age insurance, the Social Security Board announced today.

The move is in line with demands by organized labor from the time the Social Security Act was first passed.

Under the change in the Security Act, employers are forced to furnish a receipt at least once a year, but they may do it more frequently — quarterly, once a month or once a week, as they see fit.

However, the employer must furnish a receipt within two months of the end of the pay period, and in any case when the employe leaves his job.

Each receipt must carry the name of the employer and the worker, the pay period covered, the amount of wages paid and the amount of social security tax deducted.

Willful violation of the law can bring a $5 fine.

CIO WELCOMES CHANGE

Joseph Kovner, executive secretary of the CIO Social Security Committee, welcomed the new procedure as a further step in helping workers know just how their social security accounts line up.

Kovner suggested, however, that unions might be able to make arrangements with their employers for distribution of receipts more frequently than the yearly minimum required by law.

To ascertain the amount in one's social security account for 1937 form cards are available at local Social Security Board offices. Other information about social security problems may be obtained by writing directly to the CIO Social Security Committee, 1106 Connecticut Avenue N. W., Washington, D. C.

Seek Better Maritime Relations

New York, Jan. 13—Something new in maritime labor relations was announced by the Natl. Maritime Union, CIO, in making public a supplementary "general welfare" section of the contract with the shipowners recently renewed.

The section will be submitted to the members of the union along with the rest of the contract, Pres. Curran of the NMU said.

The new wrinkle in union-employer relations involves a pledge that both sides will "furnish each other the co-operation and mutual assistance necessary to further the American Merchant Marine for the benefit of the industry, labor and the American public generally."

JOINT COMMITTEE

A joint committee made up of the officers of the NMU, the head of the Merchant Marine Institute and five shipowners will carry out the clause, whose concrete purpose will be, according to Curran, "to provide machinery for quick adjudication of disputes or other matters relating to the industry not covered in the contract."

Hospital Pact Wins 8-Hour Day

Pittsburgh, Jan. 13 — Several hundred hospital workers at the Mayview City Home and Hospital, near here, will work eight hours a day in the future instead of the 12 they have been working. The eight hour day has just been secured for them by Local 72 of the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers.

Speed Wage-Hour Law Enforcement

Report Shows Big Benefits

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

Washington, Jan. 13.—Marshalling an impressive array of facts and figures, the Wage-Hour Division's first annual report today indicated the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act had brought benefits to several million workers, but that funds considerably higher than the 1940 budget proposal would be necessary for "an effective enforcement job."

The Wage-Hour Division expects to have 700 inspectors in the field by the end of June, Col. Philip Fleming, acting director, reported, sufficient to enforce the law. But, he pointed out, on an annual basis this would require an appropriation of about $7,700,000.

The division asked for ten million, and in the budget recommendations submitted to Congress by Pres. Roosevelt was alloted only $6,148,000. This figure, however, is considerably more than the amount voted by Congress for the present fiscal year.

ASKS NO AMENDMENTS

Fleming indicated he had no recommendations for amendment to the Act at this time, though some 42 bills to weaken the law are now in the Congressional hopper.

First full year's operation of the government's efforts to place a ceiling over hours and a floor under wages included four tests of the Fair Labor Standards Act constitutionality, all of them won by the government.

All 37 criminal actions against violators have been successful, as have been all but two of 137 civil law cases handled by the Division and the Department of Justice.

BASE PAY VARIES

Minimum wage rates under the law now vary from the general 30c basic pay rate set last October under terms of the statute. Under the industry-committee method of determining pay rates, the hosiery industry has set up 40c and 32½c scales and the textile industry, with its 650,000 workers, established a 32½c minimum.

Recommendations for minimum rates have also come from committees in six other industries, which, if accepted, will spell wage increases for over 350,000 employes.

Appointment of committees to consider the basic wage structure in the leather, paper, carpet and rug industries is under consideration, Col. Fleming declared.

"Two considerations limit the number of industries to be dealt with," he added. "The first is the number of wage studies available that have been made in industries. The second is the amount of money available to make additional wage studies."

SHOWS UP CONTRAST

The director's report called public attention to the apparent ease with which American business took the lifting of minimum pay rates from 25c to 30c an hour.

In 1938, he pointed out, "certain operations closed down with a protest that the rate made continuation an economic impossibility. It was discovered later that most of these occurrences were fall seasonal shutdowns which, in 1938, had been arranged to coincide with the inauguration of the minimum wage."

A Year of Wage-Hour Act

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Highlights in the report of the U. S. Wage-Hour Division, showing progress towards enforcement of the Fair Labor Standards Act:

1. The Act has been held constitutional in separate actions by four federal judges.

2. The Wage-Hour Division will have 700 inspectors in the field by the end of June, sufficient for "an effective enforcement job." On an annual basis this would require an appropriation of about $7,700,000.

139 LEGAL ACTIONS

3. In 139 legal actions begun by the Division and by the Department of Justice, enforcement of the Wage and Hour law has encountered only two setbacks in court.

4. In every one of the Department of Justice's 37 criminal actions which have been completed, the prosecution has been successful. In each instance the defendants have pleaded guilty.

5. Fines totaled $247,850. Payment of $132,350 of this was suspended, conditional on full restitution by the employers to employes of wages illegally withheld.

MILLION IN BACK PAY

6. More than $1,000,000 in back payments has been agreed upon for more than 18,000 employes. Of this more than $250,000 already has been paid.

7. More than 1000 complaints a week are currently being received by Wage-Hour officers, a greater volume than the previous high when the Act first went into effect.

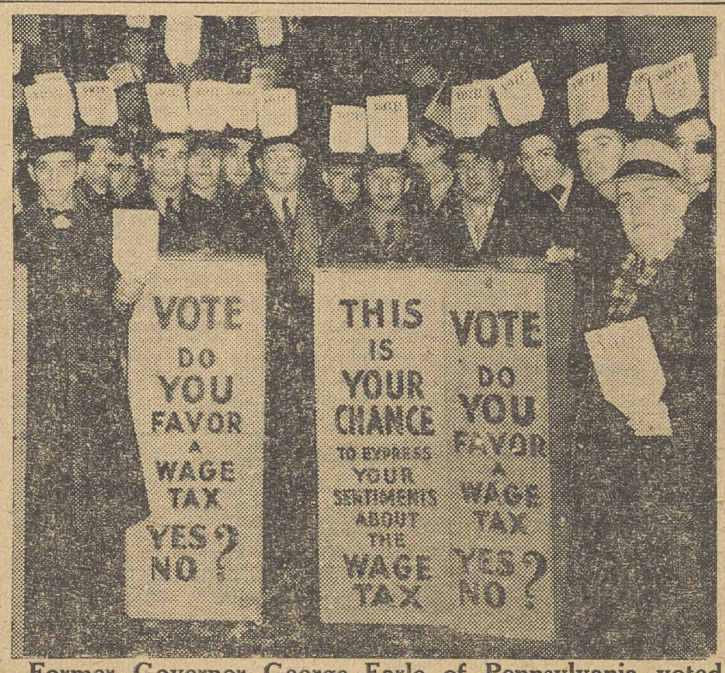
8. Slightly more than half the complaints are regarding overtime rather than minimum wages.

9. More than 650,000 workers in the continental United States presumably have been given wage rate increases to comply with the 30-cent minimum which went into effect October 24 last without any noticeable dislocation of employment. Nearly 2,400,000 wage earners had their workweek shortened to 42 hours, unless given time-and-a-half for overtime.

10. Additional wage rate increases will come to an estimated 526,500 employes if minimum wage recommendations by industry committees pending are given Administrative approval.

Labor Dept. Accepts Landis Report, Drops Case Against Bridges

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—The U. S. Labor Department today, at long last, washed its hands of the attempted deportation frameup of Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union and California CIO director.



In a formal statement, Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins revealed that she was accepting the recommendations of the Department's special trial examiner—Dean James Landis of Harvard Law School—that the case against Bridges be dropped.

"I find no error in the findings and conclusions of the trial examiner and therefore approve his report. The warrant of arrest is cancelled accordingly," Miss Perkins said.

152-PAGE REPORT

Landis, in a 152-page report which reviewed and summarized some 8000 pages of testimony taken at last summer's San Francisco hearings, ruled that Bridges is not a member or affiliated with the Communist party, and recommended that deportation proceedings be dropped.

Landis' report tore gaping holes in the "case" built up by spies and stoolpigeons against the union leader, and was sharply critical of the conduct of a U. S. immigration official who offered freedom to prisoners if they would testify against Bridges.

Former Governor George Earle of Pennsylvania voted 'NO' this week on the question of favoring the wage tax at a poll in downtown Philadelphia, conducted by the Hotel, Restaurant Workers Industrial Union Local 356 (CIO).

Charges Frame-up Murder

Dick Law (left), Aberdeen, Wash., official of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, whose pretty wife (shown above) was brutally murdered in their home while he was attending a union meeting. Law claims the crime was committed by enemies of labor who hope to pin the blame on him. Vigilante activity in the Aberdeen area has been high during recent months.

Court Order, Freeing Of Bridges Halted Attack On Unions

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13. — Abandoning the die-hard attitude which had tied up the port of San Francisco since November 10, the Waterfront Employers Association here finally agreed to the 20th proposal for settling the dispute with the Ship Clerks' Association, and ended the lockout against the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union. The Clerks are an affiliate of the ILWU.

Union spokesmen here say that the employers' change in front was undoubtedly brought on by two recent events which set back their plans for a war to the death against the ILWU. One was the cancellation of the deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, ILWU president, following the favorable report on Bridges made by Dean Landis.

The other was the U. S. Supreme Court's decision upholding the National Labor Relations Board's certification of the ILWU as sole collective bargaining agency for the whole West Coast.

ASSN. BACKED DOWN

The Employers' Association held out stubbornly week after week, turning down 19 proposals made by Federal, state and local agencies for settling the dispute. Terms of the settlement finally accepted by the employers were a compromise, but in view of the previous attitude of the Association, it was declared at least a partial victory by the union.

In commenting on the settlement, the union negotiating committee stated: "The return to work proposal accepted by the union, although a long way from a complete victory for the union, is nevertheless one that embodies many clauses beneficial to the union.

"Under the proposal the union is assured of a final settlement of their grievances, many of which have existed for several years."

SETTLEMENT PLAN

The proposal accepted by both sides, under which the clerks returned to work January 3, provided that negotiations for a new contract are to continue for ten days, subject to extension by mutual agreement. In the meantime the same wages, hours and working rules in effect when the strike was called November 10, will apply.

Push Transit Campaign

Washington, Jan. 13.—CIO national forces are aiding the Transport Workers Union, CIO affiliate, in a drive to organize transit workers in streetcars, buses, taxicabs, etc., throughout the country. Allan S. Haywood, national CIO director of organization, announced here.

Preliminary to the drive is a questionnaire sent out by Haywood asking CIO National and International Unions, Regional Directors and Industrial Union Councils to make a survey of the field in their areas and urging their cooperation in the campaign. The questionnaire and letter to Regional Directors suggests that they assign an organizer to the tasks of making the survey as soon as possible.

Utility Workers Honor Haywood

New York City, Jan. 13—A picture of Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, was hung at the head of the table in the meeting room of the executive board of the Amalgamated Utility Workers, at the last meeting, Paul Schuler, AUW organizational director said today. The picture was taken at the first meeting of the Amalgamated steering committee.

In a letter to Haywood, Schuler said, "it seems especially fitting that this picture, taken the first night of our joint meeting, should now remain at the head of our Board table." Haywood is chairman of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee to which the AUW is affiliated.

Biggest Union Meet Opens At Columbus

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 22.—Led by Pres. John L. Lewis, 2,500 delegates are converging on the Ohio state capital today for the Golden Jubilee Convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which opens here Jan. 23.

It was at a meeting in Columbus on Jan. 25, 1890 that two mine workers' groups unified, to form an organization with but 20,000 members. Today, its membership higher than 600,000 and its agreements providing for the union shop in coal fields throughout the nation, the United Mine Workers is easily the most powerful union in the western hemisphere.

Plans to celebrate the union's 50th birthday are being worked out by convention officials, but the delegates will devote a considerable portion of the convention to developing plans for bringing even greater protection to the nation's coal miners.

Invited by Pres. Lewis to address the convention are Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, and Miss Josephine Roche, head of the U. S. interdepartmental committee on health problems.

Other features planned for the sessions include presentation of gold medals to surviving UMWA charter members, and banquet for all the delegates and convention guests.

Hosiery Union Wins 3-1 In South

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C., Jan. 20.—Ignoring a campaign of vilification conducted against their union in the local paper here, workers of the Elizabeth City Hosiery Mill cast a landslide vote for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, in a poll held by the Natl. Labor Relations Board. The vote was 208 in favor of the AFHW and 83 for no union.

For several weeks before the election, the Elizabeth City Independent attacked the AFWH and all organized labor in both its news columns and in editorials. One issue printed an appeal for mob action against John W. Seltzer, AFHW representative, suggesting he be riddent out of town on a rail.

AT FUNERAL OF SLAYING VICTIM: Thousands of CIO unionists, who came in auto caravans from major state of Washington cities, attended funeral services for Mrs. Dick Law at Aberdeen. Wife of woodworkers' union official, she was killed in her home, allegedly by vigilantes seeking papers in her husband's possession. SEE STORY PAGE 8.

Steel Union Leads In Four Elections

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 20.—Four recent elections won by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee brings the total number of Labor Board polls won by the SWOC to 95. More than 57,500 workers voted for the CIO union at these elections.

The four elections held recently and the votes cast are:

Goldsmith Brothers, Chicago, SWOC 97, 15 against.

Up to the middle of last month the SWOC took part in 137 elections, 92 of which were won by the SWOC. Total number of votes cast in the 137 elections was 88,436, of which the SWOC won 56,264.

Order Poll At Shipyard

New Orleans, La., Jan. 20. — Nearly two years after a petition was first filed by the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, the National Labor Relations Board has ordered an election to be held among the employes of the Todd-Johnson Drydock here.

The Board's decision calls for an election to be held on a plant-wide basis within 30 days after December 29.

Clothing Workers Get Pay Raise

Galion, Ohio, Jan. 20—Wage increases amounting to about $25,000 a year went into effect here for production employes of the Stratbury Manufacturing Co., Local 325, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, announced this week.

The pay raise came after a series of conferences between union and company officials. Negotiations were carried on for the union by Beryl Peppercorn, Cleveland Joint Board manager, and Joseph Zucker, local president. Joseph Cohen, factory superintendent, represented the firm.

Both union and company officials expressed satisfaction at the successful conclusion of negotiations.

CIO Unions Form Council In Virginia

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 20.—The Virginia Industrial Union Council was formed at a convention there last week and attended by 145 delegates from CIO unions throughout the state. It immediately launched a campaign to kill a proposed state anti-strike bill.

The anti-labor bill, proposed by a special state legislative committee came under instant attack as threatening to "tie the hands of labor, taking away the right to organize and strike."

The council said it would call on all Virginia unions to fight the measure, while convention leaders pointed out that "labor was not fairly represented on the commission" which drew up the proposed law.

THOMASON ELECTED

Ray Thomason, CIO regional director in Richmond, was elected president of the council. Joseph Whitley of Richmond was named secretary-treasurer, and six vice presidents were chosen.

Among the bigger unions represented at the convention were the United Mine Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Textile Workers Union, Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, and steel, tobacco and paper workers.

President John L. Lewis of the CIO wired "warm fraternal greetings", declaring that "the CIO has confidence your new council will strengthen the bonds of industrial unionism in Virginia".

NATIONAL SPEAKERS

National CIO speakers addressing the convention included Allan S. Haywood, director of organization; John Brophy, director of Local Industrial Unions; Len De Caux, editor of The CIO News; and Gardner Wales, comptroller of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee. State officials and local ministers joined in greeting the convention and Congressman J. W. Flannagan, Jr. addressed the CIO mass meeting in the evening.

Haywood declared that the CIO is "definitely an American institution, growing out of American traditions and out to organize working men and women in the American way."

The importance of industrial union councils as part of the CIO organizational structure was emphasized by Brophy, who congratulated Virginia unions on their growing strength as reflected in the convention.

Wales declared that "the reorganization of the construction industry on an industrial union basis is the major object of the CIO construction union, which definitely wishes lower construction costs and will do all in its power to cooperate with the industry to bring this about".

He denounced the old system that tolerated such abuses as collective bidding among contractors, racketeering, jurisdictional strikes, refusal to use new materials, and all those things that "have kept prices up in the sky."

BETTER WAGE STANDARDS

One of the major resolutions passed by the delegates charged that the present Federal Fair Labor Standards Act does not "provide a national basic wage structure guaranteeing a minimum standard of living" and demanded that more industry committees be put in operation to help lift the wage standards.

Criminal penalties for violators of the Wagner Act, in order to give further strength to the workers' right of collective bargaining were demanded in another resolution.

MINE RESOLUTIONS

Three resolutions pertaining to the mine industry also won convention approval. They called for more adequate mine safety legislation, support for the state department of labor's "efforts to procure safety for the working people of Virginia", and for immediate payment of social security benefits to miners who are barred from work by the time they have reached the age of 50.

HIT BOAT SWAPPING

Action of certain American steamship lines in selling or transferring vessels to foreign flags was strongly condemned, a resolution charging that such action is "scuttling our national defense and causing widespread unemployment to American seamen."

Backs CIO Demand:

New York Official Asks Wagner Act Be Strengthened

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Criminal penalties for violators of the Wagner Labor Relations Act were urged today by Newbold Morris, president of the New York City Council.

The high city official, speaking at a forum under auspices of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, backed up CIO contentions that labor's "bill of rights" should be strengthened, not weakened.

Because of the act's great popularity among American workers, Morris predicted that no candidate, either Republican or Democrat, would be able to campaign for outright repeal of the law, but instead would seek to cut out some of its most beneficial sections.

Demand Jobs In Housing For CIO

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 20—CIO construction workers today demanded they be given equal job status with AFL building trades unionists on Bridgeport's new $6,500,000 slum clearance housing program.

The proposal was transmitted to city housing authority officials by Clifford Unger, head of Local 79 of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, new CIO affiliate which is waging a big drive throughout the country.

Unger said that to give the AFL craft unions exclusive control of the work would be "discrimination" and violation of housing authority specifications.

Mayo Named By Governor In Rhode Island

Providence, R. I., Jan. 20. — Joseph Mayo, CIO regional director in Rhode Island, has been appointed by Governor William H. Vanderbilt to represent labor on a Citizens Committee formed to make a survey of the employment situation in the state.

In his letter the Governor said many manufacturing concerns are going outside the state for semi-skilled and skilled labor, while there are many thousands of unemployed workers in Rhode Island.

"It is our hope," he wrote, "that with the help of some form of training, many of our unemployed may be made available for the positions now opening up in various industries due to the increase in business."

Shipyard Leader Raps AFL, Joins CIO

Camden, N. J., Jan. 20. — AFL craft union bosses received a big setback here when James J. Breslin, president for the past two years of the AFL Navy Yard Metal Trades Council, resigned from office and shifted to the CIO.

Leader of the AFL organization at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, Breslin said that "in joining the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers of America, CIO, I felt this organization would better serve the needs of those who work for the government.

"The constant bickering and jurisdictional friction between the various crafts certainly has prevented amicable solutions to the problems and grievances of the Navy Yard workers."

CIO UNIONISM BEST

In a letter of resignation to the AFL's national metal trades council, which is headed by red-baiting John P. Frey, Breslin wrote:

"My action is due to my personal conviction that the industrial type of union will serve the needs of Navy Yard workers better than the craft union organization."

Breslin's action is expected to give strong impetus to the organizing drive of the CIO union, which has already signed up more than 1,000 workers at the Navy Yard here.

Schedule Hearings On GM Poll Plan

Washington, Jan. 20 — Hearings on the calling of collective bargaining elections in 67 plants of the General Motors Corporation will open in Detroit, Michigan, January 30, the National Labor Relations Board announced this week. Some 250,000 employes in GM plants in 11 states will be eligible to vote on the question of union representation.

The United Automobile Workers, CIO, which petitioned for elections in GM plants, is asking the Board to determine the bargaining unit on a corporation-wide basis. The AFL union in the auto industry contends that separate bargaining units should be set up in each plant.

AFL SPLITTERS BUSY

Several other AFL craft unions including the patternmakers and the operating engineers, want the Board to set up separate bargaining units in the departments of each shop where they have filed petitions for elections.

Long Strike Won By CIO In Tennessee

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 20 — (FP) — A four-month strike against the Holston Manufacturing Co. was settled Jan. 13 when the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, won a signed contract.

The agreement gives the union exclusive bargaining rights, a seniority system, and arbitration.

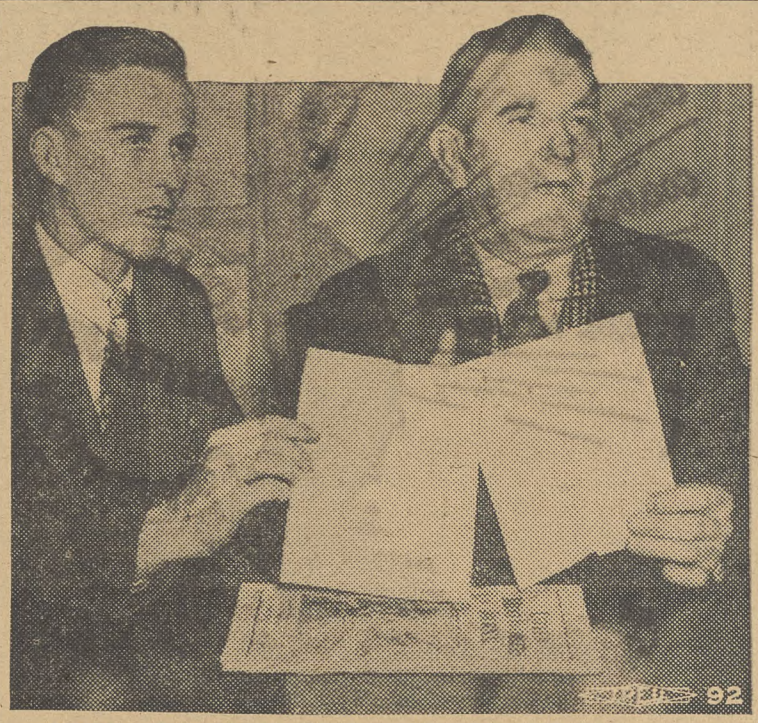
2,500 AT MINE CONVENTION

Plan Meet To Honor Broun

New York, Jan. 20 — Incidents in the life of the late Heywood Broun, president and founder of the American Newspaper Guild, will be told at a memorial meeting set for February 12 in the Manhattan Center here.



Friends of Broun who will take part in the program will include Mayor LaGuardia; Herbert Bayard Swope, Broun's editor on the old N. Y. World; FPA, the columnist; Quentin Reynolds, sports writer, and Rollin Kirby, cartoonist.

The program will recount Broun's career through college, early newspaper work as reporter, sports writer, drama critic and columnist, and in his final phase as a labor leader. The program is being arranged by the Newspaper Guild.

Textile Mill In Contract

East Douglas, Mass., Jan. 20.— The Haywood Schuster Company, long a foe of unionism, has signed its first union agreement with the Textile Workers Union, CIO. The contract covers about 2,000 workers in four plants at East Douglas, Millbury and Manchaug.

The agreement effective for two years, provides for adjustments of hourly and piece work rates by negotiation, check off of union dues, and arbitration of disputes.

Senate Passes Mine Safety Bill as Lewis Urges Quick Action

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — The U. S. Senate today had passed the Neely bill for federal inspection of coal mines, and sent the union-sponsored measure to the House.

Action followed the Bartley, W. Va., mine disaster, as Pres. John L. Lewis of the UMW sent letters to all members of the U. S. Senate asking immediate enactment of the bill, passage of which at the last session of Congress would have saved the lives of many mine workers.

The bill, S. 2420, was introduced in Congress last session by Senator Neely of West Virginia with the strong support of the mine union. In addition to effecting federal inspection of the mines it calls for publication of the health and safety conditions found by the government agents.

SECOND LETTER

In his letter, Lewis pointed out that he had addressed a similar message to the Congressmen on July 18 of last year, immediately following an explosion fatal to 28 miners at the Duvin Mine in Providence, Kentucky.

"Unfortunately, Congress saw fit to take no action on the bill," the mine leader wrote. "As a result, many mine workers have died whose lives could have been saved by the enactment of this legislation. On January 10th, ninety-one coal miners were killed in the disaster which occurred at Bartley, W. Va.

"Do not these facts now warrant the attention of the Senators and the immediate consideration by the Senate of S.2420? This bill merely provides for a limited federal inspection of coal mines and publication of findings. Surely, this is not too much for the workers in the coal mining industry, who are daily being killed and maimed, to ask from their representatives in Congress."

EYE-WITNESS ACCOUNTS

Earlier this week Lewis had discussed the West Virginia explosion with Alva Arp and Oliver Holland, UMW members there. Holland escaped death by only ten minutes,

Steel Union to Ask Poll At Inland — Murray

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Jan. 20.—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee will seek election immediately at the Inland Steel Co., Indiana Harbor, Ind., Chairman Philip Murray announced at a district convention of SWOC lodges here.

Revelation of SWOC's plan followed a federal circuit court of appeals decision holding the company had not violated the Wagner Act when it refused to sign an agreement in 1937. Labor board attorneys are deciding whether to appeal the case to the U. S. Supreme Court.

"When we have that election," Murray said, "and we will easily win, there is no court in this nation that will say to us that this company is not required to sign an agreement."

DISCUSS CONVENTION

Murray also revealed that discussion was being made of the possibility of a national SWOC convention, "perhaps in May or the early part of June." If the convention is decided upon, he said, it will be for the purpose of "seeing what we can do to make this union a bigger and better union."

Birmingham, Alabama, is being considered as a possible convention site if the plans mature, Murray said. SWOC's first convention was held at Pittsburgh in December. 1937.

PLAN BIG DRIVE

About 40 steel union lodges throughout the Monongahela Valley sent delegates to the district meeting, held in the same town where almost 50 years ago hired Pinkertons launched open warfare on the steel workers, killing and wounding scores.

But, today, Homestead is the center of one of the nation's most heavily unionized areas. SWOC lodges are funtioning in mills of U. S. Steel, Jones & Laughlin, Pittsburgh Steel and numerous other firms with plants in the valley.

STRENGTHEN WAGNER ACT

The delegates called for launching of an immediate drive to complete organization of the mills, and at the same time demanded strengthening of the Wagner Act through provision of criminal penalties for violators of its provisions.

Other resolutions called for the government to withhold contracts from firms violating the Wagner Act and for a provision which will prevent the Labor Board from carving up industrial units established by CIO industrial unions.

The CIO's legislative program won complete endorsement, and the United Mine Workers were given an expression of appreciation for its aid to the steel workers.

Biggest U.S. Union 50 Years Old, Still Growing

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 20—The nation's greatest union convention will get under way here on Jan. 23 when close to 2,500 delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada assemble for the golden jubilee convention of the United Mine Workers of America, CIO.

Celebration of the union's 50th birthday will take place on January 25, with a gala celebration to mark the tremendous growth, during a half-century, of the organization which came into being as a result of the peace settlement between the National Trades Assembly 135, Knights of Labor, and the National Progressive Union.

Pres. John L. Lewis will be able to report that the union now has more than 600,000 members enrolled in 4,000 active locals —a far cry from the United Mine Workers' status in its first year of existence, when it could boast of a mere 20,000 members and 216 locals.

Convention activities will probably be started with a meeting of the union's international executive board just prior to the first session.

Appointment of committees and a reading of the officers' report will mark the first day of the convention, which will be held in Columbus' huge Municipal Auditorium.

TO AWARD MEDALS

One feature of the birthday celebration will be the awarding of gold medals to some 200 charter members of the union.

UMWA officials have been able to get the names and addresses of about that many men who belonged to the union from its first day, and several of them are expected to be present at the convention here. Those who do attend will receive their awards on the convention platform, while those unable to attend will be awarded the momentoes at a later date.

On Monday night, Jan. 29, the union is sponsoring a huge banquet for all the delegates and guests of the convention. It will be held in the Neil House, official convention headquarters, with the overflow crowd assembled in the Deshler Hotel.

Banquet speakers will probably include President Lewis, Vice-Pres. Philip Murray, Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy and other leaders of the mine workers.

WHEELER TO SPEAK

Two speakers have already been invited to address the delegates: Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, and Miss Josephine Roche, famed liberal leader and head of Pres. Roosevelt's interdepartmental committee to draft a national health program.

Pres. Lewis' letter of invitation to Wheeler, made public by the Montana Senator, said that many of the UMWA's members, recognizing you as one of the most eminent of our contemporary statesmen . . . have expressed a wish that you be invited to deliver an address to the convention.

"In recognition of this sentiment, I am therefore formally extending you an invitation to deliver such an address upon such public questions as you may consider germaine.

"I do hope that your public duties will permit your acceptance of this invitation," Pres. Lewis continued, "as I know that among the delegates you will meet many personal friends whose confidence you have retained throughout the years of your public service."

SEN. BURTON K. WHEELER, who has been invited to address the United Mine Workers convention in Columbus, Ohio.

Quarry Pact Aims to Bar Silicosis

Barre, Vt., Jan. 20—Wage increases and installation of equipment to prevent silicosis and other health hazards are provided in a contract signed between the Elberton branches of the Quarry Workers International Union, CIO, and the Coggins Granite & Marble Industries, Inc., Elberton, Georgia, it was announced here today at union headquarters.

The company recognized the union as sole bargaining agency for its employes and granted an increase of three cents an hour, on the basis of a five-day, 40-hour week with time and a half for overtime work and holidays.

Grievance and arbitration machinery was also provided for. The company agreed to work with the union in formulating and carrying out all reasonable provisions to safeguard the healthy and safety of employes, and to provide necessary equipment for eliminating silicosis.

Columbus, Ohio.—National wage agreement conferences between leading flat glass manufacturers and the CIO Federation of Flat Glass Workers were scheduled to open this week.

Hail To The United Mine Workers!

Every union in the Congress of Industrial Organizations will hail the United Mine Workers of America on the occasion of its 50th Anniversary Convention with an enthusiasm that matches that of the UMWA members themselves.

For the coal miners have not lived to themselves alone. They have built their own union to the peak of its strength and effectiveness, in the course of the greatest general labor organizing drive in the world's history. And their contribution to the CIO's campaigns in all industries has been greater than that of any other labor organization.

The UMWA has given to the whole CIO an example and pattern of successful industrial unionism. It has given to the whole movement the leadership of John L. Lewis and other outstanding unionists. It has given the unflagging and enthusiastic support of countless members. In every way it has given generously of its resources, energies and experience to the building of a greater labor movement.

The UMWA itself has reaped many dividends from its investments in the general welfare of labor. Protected on its flanks by the new CIO unions it helped to form in the steel, automobile and other mass-production industries, the UMWA has beaten off all attacks and won the best agreement in its history-extending union shop benefits to more than 600,000 workers.

The prestige and power for good of the United Mine Workers of America are greater today than those of any labor organization in the world's history.

The UMWA has gained this power and this prestige, not at the expense of others, but through its leadership in increasing the strength of the whole labor movement.

No wonder the whole CIO and all friends of labor and social progress acclaim the United Mine Workers of America, and join in the rejoicing of its Golden Anniversary celebration.

Equal Rights Before The Law

One of the biggest frauds perpetrated on a credulous public is the frequently heard propaganda about labor being given more rights than capital enjoys.

If all you know is what you read in the papers, you might get the impression that American employers are an oppressed class, harried, bullied and discriminated against by laws passed in the interests of the bloated working class.

Nor is this line a new one. When laws were first passed limiting the exploitation of children to 12 hours a day, the employers' press cried out in the same kind of anguish as is now voiced against the Wagner act.

When workers first tried to organize in labor unions, the law treated this as a criminal conspiracy involving severe penalties. A strike was treated like an insurrection. And every legal step to give labor even the most modest rights, was denounced as oppression of employers, giving labor superior rights, etc.

Today once more the same cry is heard, CIO Counsel Lee Pressman pointed out in a recent speech on the Wagner and anti-injunction acts. "A sustained campaign on the part of employing groups using every channel of influencing public opinion," he said, "has dinned into the ear of the American people that labor now enjoys not only an equal but, forsooth, a superior status with respect to employers."

Yet labor, in its long struggle for justice and equal treatment, is still miserably far from attaining the barest degree of equality before the law.

Pressman pointed out that even such rights as labor has legally won are as often as not nullified by judicial decisions, state and local anti-labor laws and by the superior power which the employer's economic position confers upon him.

He noted that on the employers' side is a "combination of legal doctrines ignoring labor's interests, of legislative enactments utilized to impose criminal penalties on labor action and the domination of social institutions by the employer group as a class."

"The legal remedies of the employer are numerous, they are swift, immediate and extremely effective," he said. "The legal remedies of the union are few and slow in operation."

If you have tears to shed, don't waste them on the "oppressions" visited upon employers by labor law. Reserve your energies and emotions for the struggle to win for labor the measure of equality which it does not yet enjoy.

Plenty to Celebrate!

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

World's Largest Labor Union

MILLIONS of workers in America's basic industries are beneficiaries of the great labor union that celebrates its 50th anniversary in Columbus, Ohio, this week.

The United Mine Workers of America has earned the title of the "world's greatest labor union" for a dozen different reasons.

With more than 600,000 members, it is the largest union numerically speaking.

With union shop agreements covering almost the entire industry, it is the most solidly organized.

Its long and epic history of militant struggle, bravery, sacrifice and union loyalty, has been crowned with achievements for the miners which are hard to match.

But more than all this, the United Mine Workers of America has been throughout a leader among labor unions.

It has been a pioneer of industrial unionism and a shining example of the success which this type of organization can achieve.

The UMWA has not only carried the union message to the coal miners, it has also spread it to all other workers within its sphere of influence.

This sphere has widened progressively with the years from the mining communities themselves to the whole world of American mass production industry.

The Mine Workers' Contribution

The contribution made by the United Mine Workers to the general labor movement is greater than can ever be measured.

Besides setting the pattern of industrial unionism, it has supplied the leadership, the inspiration, drive experience, money and much of the manpower to organize millions of workers in the unorganized industries.

The part played by the United Mine Workers in forming the CIO is well known, as is the fact that its great strength, numbers and resources make it the backbone of the progressive labor movement.

Well known too is the outstanding leadership of John L. Lewis, who has not only led his own union to the peak of its strength, but has also led the whole CIO in its organization of millions of workers—one of the greatest achievements in labor history.

Other leaders of the United Mine Workers, such as Philip Murray, Thomas Kennedy, Van A. Bittner and dozens more have placed their ability, experience and qualities of leadership at the disposal of the workers in other industries, organizing the campaigns that have brought the benefits of industrial unionism to some of the country's greatest basic industries.

Wherever the labor struggle has been waged in recent years, wherever great organizing campaigns are under way, the influence of the UMWA has been felt, not only through the moral and financial support supplied, not only through gifted leadership, but also through the aid and enthusiasm of countless individual UMWA members.

School for Unionism

The UMWA has been a school for unionism to an extent which is seldom realized.

When unemployment forced many miners out of the industry some years ago, they migrated to steel mills, automobile plants, rubber factories, shipyards and other industrial establishments of all kinds in all parts of the country.

So it came about that when the CIO launched its campaigns in the unorganized industries, it found former members of the UMWA in nearly every industrial community.

These men had been quietly spreading the union gospel among their fellow workers, and when the CIO came to their plants they quickly came to the front as leaders of the new unions or active rank-and-filers.

The union lessons learnt in the UMWA, on the conduct of meetings, negotiations and other union business, stood them in good stead and were passed on to the newly organized workers.

There is therefore hardly one of the big new unions of the CIO that does not owe even more than it knows to the United Mine Workers.

School for Democracy

The United Mine Workers has also been a great school for democracy in our country.

If you listen to the debate in miners' local unions or other meetings and conventions, you will find its level unusually high for any deliberative assembly.

Many orators and great leaders have developed from this miners' democracy. But more than that, the general rank and file have had years of experience in the orderly, intelligent and democratic conduct of their own affairs.

Because the miners have thus been rendered articulate through organization, they have long been leading sponsors and promoters of everything in the industrial, legislative and political fields that is progressive in character and in the interests of American working people generally.

Labor Demands Equal Rights Under Law, Pressman Tells Lawyers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Labor law means more than the statutes on federal government books, Lee Pressman, CIO counsel, told the weekend conference of the Natl. Lawyers Guild here. It means, he said, not only the U. S. laws but the host of judicial decisions and state, county and local statutes affecting labor's rights to organize, to bargain collectively, to enjoy freedom of assembly and speech.

"Anti-picketing laws of counties, cities, towns, boroughs and villages, the use of charges of breach of peace, disorderly conduct, unlawful assembly, riot and criminal sedition and anarchy and the decrees of local and state authorities authorizing the use of the Natl. Guard to smash strikes with police clubs, tear gas, bayonets and machine guns," were listed as restrictions aimed solely at labor in Pressman's speech to the conference.

RIGHTS VS. PRIVILEGES

Pressman attacked the judicial theory that while labor has "privileges," which can be curtailed by any judge or magistrate who feels like curtailing them, employers have "rights" that must not be infringed by anyone—the basic one being the right to run his business in whatever way he sees fit.

"Remedies of the employer are numerous, swift and extremely effective, while the legal remedies of the union are few and slow," Pressman said, citing the extremes of legal frustration the CIO met during the Little Steel strike.

He urged establishment of the doctrine that "labor is entitled to the full enjoyment of the Bill of Rights and the full enforcement of the federal civil rights statute against lawless public officials and private individuals" to bring about the equality under law that all Americans are constitutionally supposed to enjoy.

The Natl. Lawyers Guild conference was attended by about 150 lawyers interested in problems of labor and social legislation.

Program for National Defense:

U. S. Must Take Care Of 10,000,000 Jobless, Murray Demands

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 20.—No better national defense can be built than one that will take care of the 10,000,000 men and women able and willing to work who cannot find jobs, Philip Murray, CIO vice president, told a nationwide radio audience in his Natl. Broadcasting Co. speech delivered here.

"Unemployment is the root of America's basic economic ills," he said. "The problem of taxation and the unbalanced budget cannot be solved until the basic problem of unemployment is corrected.

"There cannot be any permanent prosperity or industrial peace in this nation as long as we have staring us in the face the misery and suffering of some 10,000,000 unemployed people."

MONEY FOR ARMS

Murray criticized the U. S. budget for its "inadequate provisions to give work to the unemployed on public works." The absolute minimum, he said, was 3,000,000 jobs to be created from Federal funds, yet the budget for this year cuts out 650,000 WPA jobs, wipes out PWA and reduces aid to youth and the Civilian Conservation corps by 15 per cent.

"Yet national defense for the current fiscal year is increased by one-third of a billion dollars," he said. "While we have no criticism to make of a sizable appropriation by the Federal Congress for defense purposes, yet we do believe the primary interest of the nation itself should be centered upon the most important national defense program — and that is the solution of the unemployment question."

URGES PARLEY

Murray called for a national conference of leaders of government, labor, industry and agriculture who "should be commandeered by the government to work at this problem until some concrete plans have been formulated to solve America's problem No. 1." This call, first made by Murray at the San Francisco convention of the CIO, is repeated in the CIO Legislative Program for 1940, with the demand for a minimum of 3,000,000 public works jobs at decent wages and standard working conditions.

Murray cited recent examples in Pittsburgh, where, he pointed out, production has already reached and surpassed 1929 levels without any lessening of the huge number of unemployed. In Pittsburgh and throughout Pennsylvania, he said, one-fifth of the population is without work. Of these, only one-third receives government aid.

Displacement of men by machines is responsible for a large part of this, Murray explained, citing "ghost towns" in the steel districts where new processes have taken livelihood away from whole communities.

It is an illusion, he pointed out, to believe that jobs in new industries are being found for these displaced workers—"and it is reasonable to raise the question of whether they ever will be recalled."

Lehman Appoints N. Y. CIO Head

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 20. — The CIO won representation for the first time on New York State's Unemployment Insurance Advisory Council today when Gov. Lehman named Pres. Gustave Strebel of the New York Industrial Union Council to fill a vacancy.

Strebel is a long time official of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The council to which he was named consists of nine members, three from labor, three from employers and three from the public. In the past all the union representatives have been AFL officials.

Eagle Pencils Are 'Fair'; Haywood Lauds Policies

Washington, Jan. 20—The Eagle Pencil Co., manufacturers of Eagle pencils and other writing products, is fair to labor and working in complete harmony with a CIO local industrial union, according to Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization.

The firm was involved in a strike more than a year ago, but since the signing of a CIO agreement, working conditions and relations between the management and workers are exceptionally smooth.

Haywood cited the case to demonstrate the fact that when a concern is willing to meet labor half way, it will benefit from the relationship.

Mine Union Rounds Out Half-Century Of Service To Nation's Workers

Pres. Lewis Leads UMW To Greatest Heights

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Delegates arriving at Columbus for the Golden Jubilee convention of the United Mine Workers will be able to look back at a half-century of progress, climaxed by gains in the past two years which have lifted the union to new peak strength.

Without question the nation's strongest labor union, the UMWA, under the leadership of Pres. John L. Lewis, has negotiated since its last biennial convention here in 1938 the coal industry's first nationwide union shop agreements.

"We celebrate our Golden Anniversary," says the United Mine Workers Journal, "at a time when our union is at the very peak of its power, prestige and influence, and in the strongest position numerically and financially.

"With our membership roll over the 600,000 mark, we have practically 100 per cent of the nation's coal mine workers in our organization. The seven-hour day five-day week is universally observed in the coal fields; the yellow-dog contract, injunctions, forcible mass evictions, armed company thugs, spies and stockades—instruments of a beaten industrial feudalism—no longer harass us."

ALWAYS A LEADER

Always a leader in the fight for extension of industrial unionism, and always cognizant of the fact that interests of workers in all industries are closely linked, the United Mine Workers has campaigned not alone for improvements in the coal mines, but for greater democracy throughout all American industry.

Thus, while bringing security to its own organization and benefits to its own members, the UMW played a leading part in the formation and subsequent activities of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Having raised the miners' pay scale from $1.90 for an eight-hour day in 1898 to $6 for the seven-hour day, it has helped workers in other fields to win comparable increases in living standards.

Originally the United Mine Workers was an organization merely of soft coal miners. But in the historic strikes of 1900 and 1902 under the direction of Pres. John Mitchell, anthracite mine workers were added to the rolls. During its first decade, charters were granted to Canadian miners, thereby making the union truly international.

CONSTANT STRUGGLE

The long path through the years from Jan. 25, 1890—when members of the National Trades Assembly 135, Knights of Labor, and the National Progressive Union pooled forces to form the UMW—has not been easy. Strikes, lockouts, suspensions on national, state and local fields of action were almost continuous for most of the union's first 50 years.

Most recent of these great struggles was the seven-week lockout in 1939. Failing to break the union's ranks, the coal operators were finally compelled to grant the UMW union shop demands, skillfully negotiated during the seven-week period by Pres. Lewis and Vice-Pres. Murray—and for the anthracite miners by Sec-Treas. Thomas Kennedy.

Broadscale collective bargaining, increasingly the pattern in American industrial relations, is an old story for the UMW. Its 1898 wage contract with operators in Ohio, western Pennsylvania, Illinois and Indiana, comprising the so-called Central Competitive Field, is considered by many economists as one of the key labor contracts in American history.

As the competitive structure in the bituminous coal fields changed through the years, the Central Competitive Field died, but in its place came the Appalachian joint wage conference, in which is now represented more than 70 per cent of the industry's annual tonnage production.

FOR LIBERAL LAWS

While pressing forward in its collective bargaining demands, the UMW was constantly in the center of the legislative arena, its program calling for government aid of all types for the workers. Dozens of state laws regulating mine practices and labor protection in general stand as monuments to UMW activity, while much of the New Deal labor legislation owed its existence in no small measure to the activities of the miners.

HELPED THE CIO

As the western hemisphere's largest union—no other labor organization approaches its 600,000 membership level—the United Mine Workers have been a bulwark of strength to the CIO. But the CIO has benefitted not solely because of the UMW's size; it has lent freely of its officials to help the cause of all labor.

The aid of Pres. John L. Lewis, who heads both organizations has been invaluable to the CIO. Vice-Pres. Murray heads the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which in three short years has won 638 contracts with almost all the nation's steel producers. Sec-Treas. Thomas Kennedy is closely identified with a number of CIO affiliates. Van A. Bittner, president of the UMW's big West Virginia district, serves not only as mid-west regional director for the steel union, but in addition is chairman of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee.

Many CIO regional directors were recruited from the ranks of the mine union and scores of instances could be cited where help from UMW officials has been instrumental in bringing about union victories.

AIDED STRIKERS

In Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for example, the organized support of the miners helped members of the American Newspaper Guild continue a long strike against the city's newspapers, and aid from Pres. Lewis in the final negotiations helped effect a victorious settlement.

In West Virginia, the organized mine workers aided retail employes, bakers, bus drivers and laundry workers win their first union contracts. Aluminum workers and steel workers around Pittsburgh can tell at first hand of the assistance the mine union has given them.

Truly, as Pres. Lewis said in his greetings to the union on its anniversary, the United Mine Workers "today stands as a monument to the superb loyalty of its members.

"It has become the greatest single organization of labor ever formed by the workers in any civilized country. . . .

"With a magnificent organizational personnel, with great financial reserves, with collective bargaining established, it is a pattern for the workers in all other industries to follow. It should be the proclaimed obligation of every member and each officer to see that no enemy within or without the union shall undo the work which has been done, nor tear asunder the fabric of fraternity, mutual confidence and co-operation which in truth and in fact, is the spirit and the soul of the United Mine Workers of America."

WON—THE UNION SHOP: While Labor Department Conciliator John Steelman looks on, Pres. Lewis signs his name to the 1939 contract which brought the mine union a long-sought goal, the union shop throughout the coal industry.

The Labor Reader:

Fifty Years Of The United Mine Workers

By C. W. FOWLER

Fifty years ago, this month, the largest and most powerful labor union in America was founded. The union, the United Mine Workers of America, has had a long and eventful history that encompasses the whole story of labor's struggles in America.

That history is told by David J. McDonald and Edward A. Lynch in their book "Coal and Unionism," released this week in time for the 50th anniversary convention of the United Mine Workers.

The coal industry came to America early in the 19th century. The miners who brought it here—Irishmen, Welshmen, English, Scotch—had struggled to escape exploitation in Britain through unity, and they set out to find the same escape here.

How well the miners did "rally around the standard of union" is told in this book, as the authors, both workers in the labor movement, outline the history of the UMW through their struggles for the eight-hour day, for a living wage, for recognition of the right to organize and bargain collectively, down to the achievements of the CIO the miners did so much to build.

In 1898 the eight-hour day was won. By the next year the union had close to 100,000 members.

"The lowly 'coal crackers' had been lifted to a status of importance in American life which befitted their contribution to the general economy. Their union was the instrumentality which had abolished their miserable serfdom, and they used their new freedom by actively participating in the campaigns of organized labor to raise American standards of living to the highest in the world."

The UMW, as Lynch and McDonald point out, expanded at a tremendous pace during the first world war. Membership, contracts, wages grew. But when the war boom collapsed, the union came to hard times. Contracts were violated by dozens of employers.

Coal markets vanished—even during the "prosperity" of the late twenties the miners suffered. It took all the skill and leadership of the new President, John L. Lewis and his associates, to hold the organization together.

ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED

The miners never stopped fighting; through depression, through lockouts, strikes, internal dissension, the UMW stayed alive and vital. When federal statute after 1933 made collective bargaining the law of the land, the miners were ready to come back.

By 1934 the organization had regained its strength. By 1935 the UMW was ready to make its greatest contribution to the welfare of the American people. In that year, headed by President Lewis, the UMW took the job of organizing the unorganized out of the craft union era of the AFL top leaders into the modern day of the CIO.

The miners were always industrial-union minded, and it was natural, with their progressive policies and their great strength, that they should give the impetus in organizing steel, automobiles, rubber, and the dozens of powerful industrial unions that make up the modern American labor movement today.

And, as the authors conclude their history: "The United Mine Workers of America, as it is now constituted, is prepared to meet the changing challenges of time."

Hoffman, Foe Of Labor, Gets Labor Post!

Washington, Jan. 20—Republican Rep. Clare Hoffman, a constant if not correct foe of organized labor, has been named to a position on the House of Representatives Labor Committee.

Elected to the job by the House Ways & Means Committee, Hoffman will be in an even better spot to continue his sniping campaign against the CIO, the Wagner Act, the wage-hour law and practically all other social legislation.

100 PER CENT TORY

The list of liberal and labor bills which Hoffman voted against in the 1935-40 period reads like a roster of progressive legislation. Among them are the 1935 work relief bill, the bituminous coal regulation act, the soil conservation plan, the 1936 relief bill, the social security law, the 1937 relief bill, the low rent public housing bill, and the second deficiency relief appropriation of 1939 — which most Republicans supported.

Hoffman was listed as "pained against" the present wage-hour act. He voted for the House investigation of the Labor Board, sponsored by Rep. Howard Smith of Virginia, who also has a 100 per cent anti-labor record.

'Slavery' Status Told By Tenant Farm Group

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Washington government officials —and the White House—heard a story this week of conditions in the sharecropping country that might have reminded them of pre-emancipation days from the 24 delegates of the National Cotton Conference, brought here by the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers to seek federal help.

The delegates, Negro and white croppers from six cotton states, told official Washington about 60 cents daily wages, mass evictions, denial of schooling, malnutrition, disease, housing unfit for animals—the social misery that comes from the plantation system in the cotton growing South.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt heard their story in the White House, where three delegates, headed by the Reverend Owen H. Whitfield, Conference chairman, went on invitation. "We found her very sympathetic," Whitfield reported. "She was deeply interested in our educational situation and the trouble we have getting schooling for our children."

BENEFITS DENIED

At the AAA, the delegates told officials of landlord practice of simply pocketing the share of the government's benefit checks supposed to go to the cropper. They suggested changes in procedure whereby local administration would be taken away from the landlord's monopoly that now controls it. They proposed federal wage boards such as exist in sugar to work out a living wage higher than the current 60 cents a day.

Rural housing projects were proposed to the U. S. Housing Administration to end conditions unequalled in any city slum. WPA officials were told of the need for immediate federal relief work to prevent mass death by starvation. Farm Security was urged to start a wide plan of homestead and work projects to provide homes and income for thousands now being evicted from squalid plantation cabins.

Throughout the conference, the delegates insisted that croppers and tenant farmers have representation on the boards and county committees that today control — and exploit — the U. S. government's farm program.

At the present time these are entirely run by the landlords, cotton ginners and merchants, whose exploitation of the cotton workers has brought conditions to the lowest point in generations.

Times Change

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Jan. 20 — Times have certainly changed. Fred Fudge, organizer for the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, and a representative of the Natl. Maritime Union, were arrested here for distributing handbills at the gates of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., largest shipyard in the country. The case against him was dismissed the next day after his attorney cited the Supreme Court decision upholding the right to hand out leaflets.

Form Optical Workers Committee

Washington, Jan. 20—Establishment of the Optical Workers Coordinating Committee, to combine the activities of the CIO Local Industrial Unions in this field and to push an aggressive organizing drive among optical workers, was announced today by John Brophy, Director of Local Industrial Unions.

Thomas E. Andert of LIU 678 in St. Louis was appointed chairman of the new Committee, and Sebastian Rebaldo of LIU 208 in New York secretary.

The Committee, in addition to the two officers, is to be composed of two representatives from each Local Industrial Union in the optical industry.

Los Angeles Subsidized Open Shoppers

LaFollette Hearing Bares Details Of Anti-Unionism

By KARL BARRON
(Federated Press)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20.—Los Angeles taxpayers had to foot the bill for local chamber of commerce and Merchants & Manufacturers Assn. efforts to smash unions and keep this city on its notorious open-shop basis.

As the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, investigating west coast violations of civil rights, opened hearings in this city, Sen. Robert LaFollette drew this admission from reluctant witnesses:

That the Los Angeles Board of Supervisors in 1938 and 1939 turned over $470,250 to the Chamber of Commerce in support of its activities.

Fred Fysh, general manager of the Merchants and Manufacturers Assn., told the committee that the purpose of his organization was to "maintain the open shop in Los Angeles." That, he added, has been "its sole aim and purpose since it was founded in 1896!"

COP SHOWS TIE-UP

William F. "Red" Haynes, chief of the city's red squad until he was swept from office by Mayor Bowron's labor-supported reform administration, described his activities on the San Pedro waterfront during the 1934 strike and the 1936 lockout.

"The city of Los Angeles returned to the Waterfront Employers' Assn. $30,000 of the total of $145,000 paid for police protection," he said.

"Now I've always thought that this was a bad practice, because suspicious persons might misinterpret it."

Sen. LaFollette upset Hynes when he produced a check to the former cop for $769.50, signed by Nelson Wolfe of the local garment manufacturers' association. Both claimed the money was to provide "lunches and dinners" for the "red squad," with Wolfe admitting:

"We thought we might stand in their good graces a little bit more."

SUPPLIED FINKS

How strikebreakers were supplied to the waterfront employers by the N. & M. A. during the 1934 strike was shown by Fysh and by George H. Hippard, also a big business organization representative. They said the organization maintained an office called the Free Employment Bureau, which supplied scab labor for the docks and other strikes.

A tale of businessmen ganging up on Frank Wheat, furniture manufacturer, who refused to operate on an open shop basis, was described by another witness, Carl Kegley, of the Cabinet and Store Fixtures Assn.

Kegley admitted he approached the Security First National Bank, to which Wheat owed $24,000, and tried to persuade the bank to "get tough" with Wheat. When the bank refused, Kegley turned for assistance to Harry Chandler, militant open shopper and publisher of the Los Angeles Times.

$6,752 FOR RATS

LaFollette introduced subpoenaed records showing that the Cabinet and Store Fixtures Assn. spent $6,752 for strikebreaking purposes in two months of 1936. Of that sum, $573 went to undercover operators "in the union and in the picket lines," and $6,179 went to "guards."

115 Office Workers On Strike

New York, Jan. 20 — The largest strike of white collar office workers was under way today as 115 employes of the Credit Clearing House were called out to back demands that the firm sign a contract with Local 16, United Office & Professional Workers.

Conferences between management representatives and the union, which represents 95% of the office employes, broke down at offices of the state mediation board. Union officials said the company refused to maintain existing contract relations by granting increases above 70c a week for workers earning $14 after years of service.

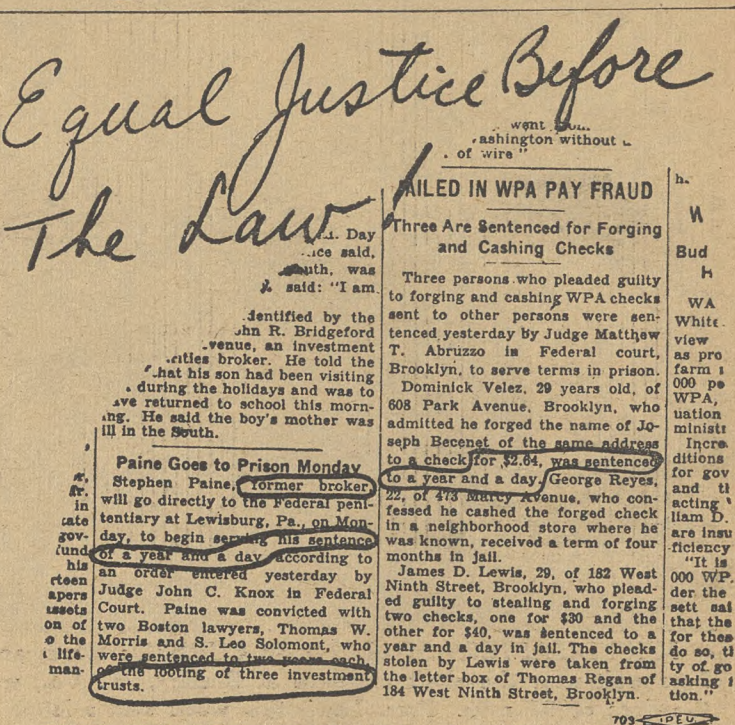
Credit Clearing House specilizes in providing credit information to the garment industry, and ranks only behind Dun & Bradstreet in size.

'Union-Made Cars Will Be Better'

DETROIT, Jan. 20—Leaders of the CIO United Automobile Workers took note of the big celebration over production of the 25 millionth car.

In a wire to Pres. Knudsen of General Motors, the union's Pres. R. J. Thomas and GM Director Walter Reuther declared:

"The UAW-CIO, representing the overwhelming majority of General Motors employes is glad to join in celebrating the completion of the 25 millionth car.



"Let us assure you that when the UAW-CIO achieves corporation-wide sole bargaining in the forthcoming Labor Board elections, General Motors products will be still better, because American union men and women under union conditions are the finest workmen in the world."

Paper Company Signs With CIO

Cincinnati, Jan. 20. — The Oxford Miami Paper Co. has reached a signed agreement with the Paper Workers Local Industrial Union, Paul Fuller, CIO regional director, announced today.

Four hundred and fifty workers won the 40-hour week with the same pay formerly received for 48 hours, seniority, rehiring of six men with back wages, and sole bargaining rights for the union.

JAILED IN WPA PAY FRAUD

Three Are Sentenced for Forging and Cashing Checks

Three persons who pleaded guilty to forging and cashing WPA checks sent to other persons were sentenced yesterday by Judge Matthew T. Abruzzo in Federal court, Brooklyn, to serve terms in prison.

Dominick Velez, 29 years old, of 608 Park Avenue, Brooklyn, who admitted he forged the name of Joseph Becenet of the same address to a check for $2.64, was sentenced to a year and a day. George Reyes, 22, of 473 Marcy Avenue, who confessed he cashed the forged check in a neighborhood store where he was known, received a term of four months in jail.

James D. Lewis, 29, of 182 West Ninth Street, Brooklyn, who pleaded guilty to stealing and forging two checks, one for $30 and the other for $40, was sentenced to a year and a day in jail. The checks stolen by Lewis were taken from the letter box of Thomas Regan of 184 West Ninth Street, Brooklyn.

Indict AFL Building Bosses In Louisiana For Anti-CIO Plot

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 20. — The AFL Building and Construction Trades Council, 21 of its affiliated locals and 22 union business agents have been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury here for conspiracy to restrain interstate commerce by obstructing delivery of building materials in New Orleans.

The indictment grows out of a campaign started by AFL officials to boycott all building material handled by CIO men. Following an election won by a CIO union among employes of trucking companies of the New Orleans Trucking Association.

The CIO was certified in March, 1939, by the National Labor Relations Board as the qualified bargaining agency and subsequently the trucking association signed a contract with the union, the indictment points out in reviewing the background of the case. On May 17, 1939, the AFL Council passed a resolution instructing all AFL members to refuse to receive deliveries made by CIO truckmen.

The sole purpose of the alleged obstruction of deliveries, the indictment declares, was to cause the New Orleans Trucking Association, Inc., to violate its contract with the CIO local industrial union.

Furthermore the indictment sets forth, the refusals and threats of refusal "have had no purpose intent or effect in the aid of higher wages, shorter hours, better working conditions or any other legitimate object of a labor union."

Thousands Honor Mrs. Law, Brutally Slain by Vigilantes; CIO Unions Demand Action

ABERDEEN, Wash., Jan. 20.—Mill workers and loggers in heavy boots, weeping housewives and grave-faced union officials were among the thousands that gathered about the grave of Mrs. Dick Law, 26-year-old murdered wife of a member of the executive board of the International Woodworkers of America, at the funeral ceremony held in the rain-drenched cemetery on the edge of a fir forest here.

Mrs. Law was slain January 5 while her husband was away attending a union meeting and her small son slept in an adjoining room. The young wife and mother was stabbed seven times in the left breast with an ice pick or stilletto and her skull was crushed by five heavy blows.

The house was ransacked with papers strewn all over, in what was apparently a search for letters or evidence of some sort.

Union officials believe the killer or killers were looking for papers connecting the vigilantes who have been terrorizing the Grays Harbor area with an organization of anti-union employers.

IWA spokesmen declare that the anti-labor terror campaign which has been raging unrestrained by local law enforcement agencies is the worst outbreak of violence in the lumber industry since the terrible Centralia massacre in 1919.

CARAVANS OF CARS

Caravans of cars poured in from Seattle and other sections of the state to join with thousands from Grays Harbor at the funeral ceremony for Mrs. Law. Six women, union auxiliary sisters of the young murdered wife, bore her coffin, followed by IWA officials as honorary pallbearers.

After the burial, lumber workers turned from the grave and went directly to a meeting of the Grays-Wallapa Harbor district council of the IWA to discuss plans to end the vigilante terror against labor.

ASK FEDERAL PROBE

CIO officials in Grays Harbor and other areas in the state have called for federal aid to restore orderly government in the lumber region, and have elected a committee of five to head the drive for government investigation.

The murder of Mrs. Law was preceded last month by a raid on the Finnish Workers Hall, here, during which the hall was pillaged and thousands of dollars' worth of damage done, while the police were conspicuously absent, although informed of what was happening.

State Senator Frank L. Morgan of Hoquiam, Wash., an attorney and official of the Washington State range, is also said to have aroused the ire of vigilantes when he was retained by the American Civil Liberties Union to defend a CIO unionist recently.

Morgan revealed that the tires on his car were slashed with a razor in invisible cuts, in an attempt to wreck his car. Only the fact that he was driving slowly when the tires blew out, he said, prevented a serious accident.

Who's A Farmer? Connecticut Court To Rule On Issue

Connecticut's Supreme Court of Errors, highest judicial body in the state, will have a chance to answer that question as a result of action taken by state labor officials with the backing of CIO union leaders.

A test case, involving workers at the American Sumatra Co. directly and affecting the welfare of some 5,000 or 6,000 tobacco processing workers, will be made of the state unemployment compensation commission's ruling that the group is exempted from jobless benefit payments.

The state claims that these workers cannot be classified as agricultural workers and that the payments should be given to them.

Six months ago the Duys Co., a smaller firm which raises part of its tobacco but purchases considerably more, was taken into court on a similar issue, with the workers winning classification as non-agricultural.

UMW HEARS LEWIS ON LABOR, POLITICS

Wheeler Addresses Miners

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 26 —Senator Burton K. Wheeler received one of the greatest ovations of the United Mine Workers convention when he addressed it today, calling for a national program to solve America's No. 1 problem, unemployment and other domestic economic problems.

Pledging that he would "never vote to send an American boy across the water to fight on foreign soil," Wheeler called for opposition to all policies that might lead to United States involvement in foreign wars.

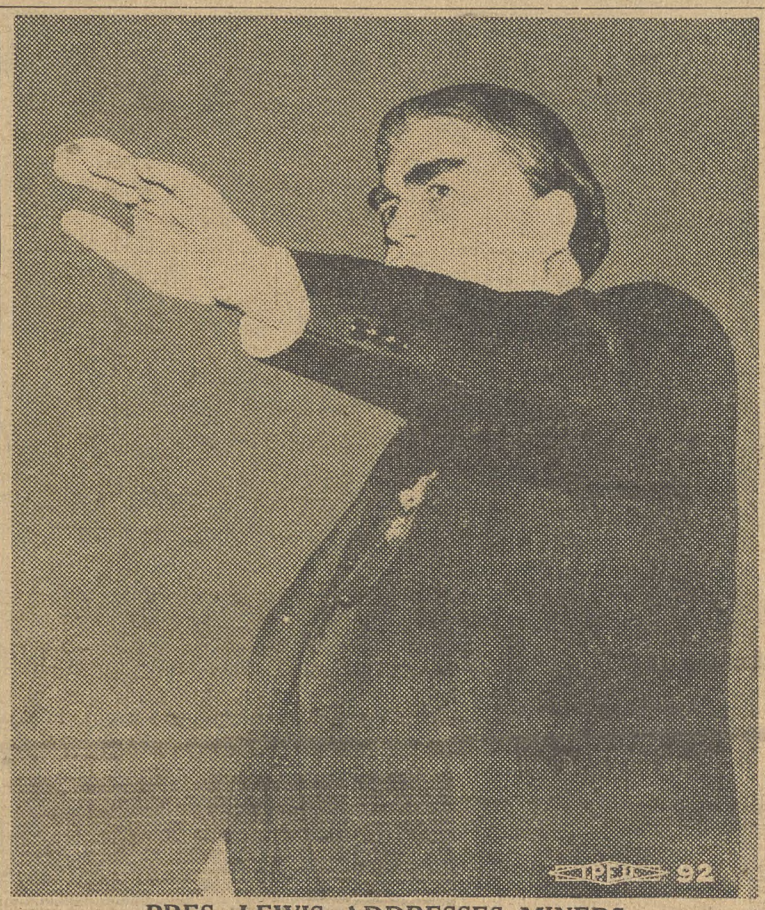
"History tells" he said, "that it has frequently been a convenient device for leaders of nations —when thwarted in their attempts to solve economic problems in their country — to divert the attention of their people toward foreign affairs.

"Let us take this lesson of history to heart. Let us not allow foreign affairs to divert our attention away from what is far more important to us, namely — the solution of our domestic problems."

TRIBUTE TO LEADERS

Wheeler paid a warm tribute to John L. Lewis and the other mine workers' leaders.

No greater tribute, he said, could be paid than that which had been paid to Lewis, that "the word of John L. Lewis, once given, is never broken.



"No greater tribute could be paid any man than to say he has great intelligence, great honesty and is a true friend. All these attributes in John L. Lewis are recognized by friend and foe alike.

"Phil Murray and Tom Kennedy have long been friends of mine. They are true labor statesmen."

UNEMPLOYMENT

"The government must assume the leadership. And to this end the national leaders of industry, agriculture and labor should be called together to meet and confer and recommend a program by which we may achieve industrial democracy and economic and social security."

Big Convention Wins Nation's Attention

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 27 — The attention of the whole political and labor world was centered on Columbus this week, as the convention of the United Mine Workers of America made sensational news.

President John L. Lewis jarred the feelings of many professional politicians and won wide labor acclaim by a frank and vigorous statement on labor's political demands in the coming elections.

He assailed the Democratic party leaders for failing labor and warned that a Republican victory could only be prevented by an accord with labor, adoption of an "intelligent and rational program," and "guarantees of good faith and fulfillment of party promises."

Urging the convention not to endorse any Presidential candidate at this time, Lewis expressed his belief that Pres. Roosevelt would not be a candidate for re-election; and that if the Democratic convention "could be coerced or dragooned into re-nominating him," he would be defeated.

The Presidential aspirations of Paul V. McNutt were given a knockout blow, when the huge convention cheered Lewis' attack on him as a "political adventurer" who had used the troops against labor.

With a record attendance of more than 2,400 delegates, the United Mine Workers Golden Anniversary convention was working its way through a heavy schedule of mine union business, and taking a stand on many important national issues, as its first week drew to a close.

Canadian Miners Win 9% Increase

Glace Bay, N. S., Jan. 27—About 1,000 coal miners in Minto, New Brunswick, have received a nine per cent raise in wages, the district headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America, announces. Six coal companies are involved in the wage boost.

Simultaneously, it was announced that one of the Minto concerns — Weldon and Henderson — had agreed to recognize the UMW and do its collective bargaining through the union.

Minto has been the scene of bitter struggles between the miners and operators in previous years over contractural relations and the present move is welcomed as a step toward 100 per cent union recognition in the coal fields.

District 50 Membership Up 42%

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 27.—Gas, coke and chemical workers from all parts of the country cheered reports of union progress, including a 42% increase in membership and a near doubling of the number of union contracts, at the second convention of District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America.

Reporting that District 50 now has 150 union contracts, as compared with 85 in 1938, President Martin Wagner noted that 68 of these provide for the closed shop and 47 have checkoff provisions.

Vacations with pay, reductions in hours to 40 and 35 a week, overtime pay, seniority rights, sick benefits and more healthful working conditions are among the benefits won by the workers since the CIO campaign began in these fields.

"During 1938 and 1939 our objective was to consolidate our gains, improve our contracts and build up our local organizations," Wagner said. "From this day forward our slogan must be, 'Organize the Unorganized.'"

ASKS 100 PER CENT GAINS

Calling for concentration on gas and coke plants and heavy industrial chemicals, Wagner set as a goal the doubling of membership by the next convention.

Dealing with unemployment and keeping the United States out of war were cited by Wagner as the two gravest problems confronting the country.

"Today, when the chemical industry is reporting the most successful quarter in its gilt-edged history, and when utilities are serving an increasing number of consumers," he said, "there are still between nine and 10 million unemployed.

"What District 50 stands for, what the United Mine Workers stand for, what the CIO stands for, is the organization of the workers of America to achieve the economic victories of peace. If we win in this striving, we will make it impossible for the workers here ever to be organized for the military objectives of war."

MURRAY SPEAKS

Vice President Philip Murray of the UMWA addressed the District convention on its opening day, stressing the Americanism of the CIO and predicting that it would supercede the AFL completely.

E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, told the delegates that the old rule of labor staying out of politics was no longer in force. He urged greater political activity to win improved security, relief and labor legislation.

Ted Silvey, secretary of the Ohio Industrial Union Council, welcomed the convention on behalf of the state CIO.

The musical talents of the District 50 delegates were displayed to advantage at a banquet, when they entertained themselves with harmonica solos, quartets, guitar playing and community singing.

On behalf of the delegation, Samuel Machlis of New York presented Pres. Wagner with a watch; and a brief case was presented to Vice President Charles Fell by Charles Higgins of Boston.

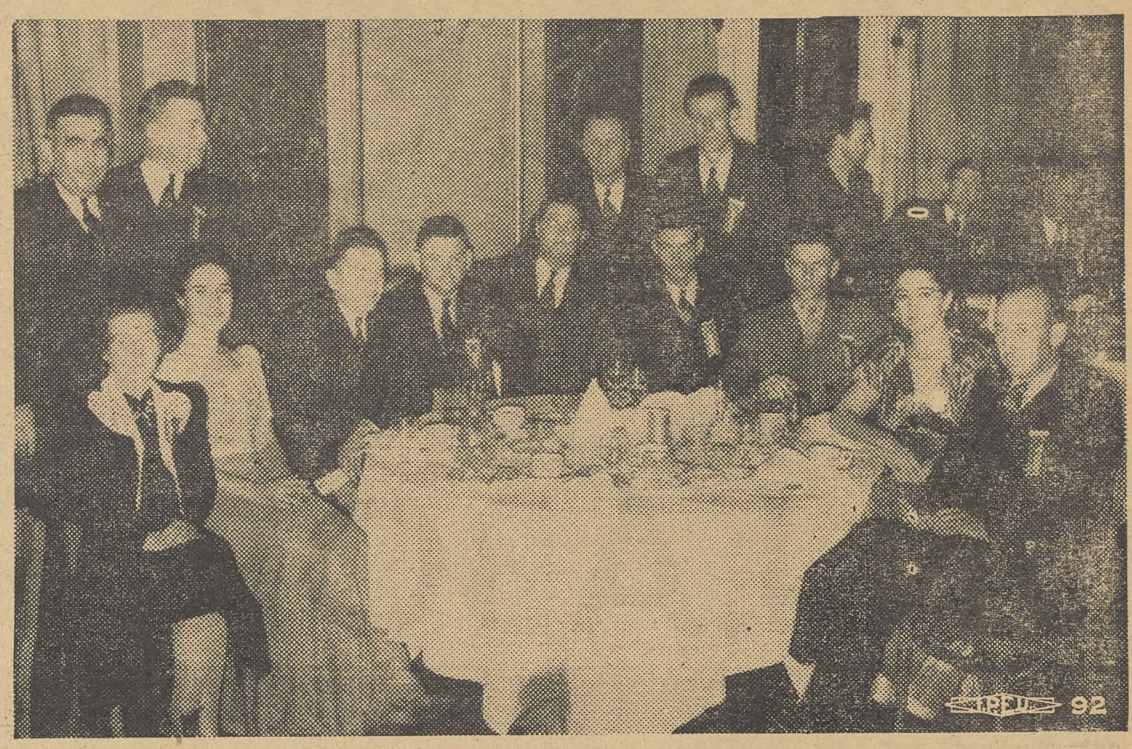
PICKET ALLEYS

Baltimore — Three hundred striking bowling alley pin boys are defying wintry weather to keep up their picket line at the Recreation Centre Bowling Alley here.

Engineers Warned of Spy Hunt

San Francisco, Jan. 27—Delegates to the 64th annual convention of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association here heard Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers warn labor against the "spy hunts" now being conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Robinson, one of the guest speakers at the convention, said that these FBI spy hunts might be turned into "labor hunts" in an anti-union drive, as war propaganda increases.



Herman Stuyvelaar, secretary of the San Francisco Industrial Union Council, officially welcomed the delegates at the opening session of the convention which met at the Hotel Whitcomb. Randolph Merriweather, secretary of MEBA Local 97 here, was active in arranging for the convention.

Tanker Line Finally Signs

New York, Jan. 27—(FP)—The anti-union united front of tanker companies was broken here with the signing of a contract between the Natl. Maritime Union and the C. D. Mallory Co., one of the four firms involved in last spring's tanker strike.

'CIO Will Force Recognition From Chemical Industry'—Lewis

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 27.—Describing the chemical industry as "the industry of the future," Pres. John L. Lewis predicted that District 50 of the United Mine Workers would become "one of the greatest subdivisions of labor in the United States," in the course of a "family talk" to the District convention.

"I am particularly proud of the progress made by District 50," he said. "It has not been spectacular, but it has been constant, and you are holding every inch you have gained.

"I am looking forward to the ultimate complete organization of the chemical industry, the industry of the future. Its potentialities have not been scratched, and it is one of the miracles of modern science."

'ROYAL FAMILY'

Referring to the DuPont family as "the royal family of Delaware," Lewis said that "even the DuPonts are human" and will at last recognize collective bargaining in the chemical industry.

He noted that when the CIO negotiated its contract with General Motors, it found that the DuPonts owned a substantial part of the stock and that a brother-in-law of the DuPonts (Donaldson Brown) was one of the General Motors negotiators.

"So, you see, we are getting closer and closer to the DuPont family," he said.

Lewis spoke at the District 50 convention shortly after he had made his speech to the UMWA international convention on the presidential elections, and he elaborated on his point of view to the District 50 delegates.

LABOR AND POLITICIANS

Reciting some of labor's experiences with "professional politicians" who cease to be "friends of labor" after elections when they deem it politically expedient, he declared:

"Political parties like to take labor's support for granted and to make their decisions without regard to labor.

"My statement this morning was intended to be a distinct jar to the professional politicians in the Democratic and Republican parties.

"Labor's support is not to be taken for granted by any political party.

Metal Miners Win Key Case In Southwest

Bisbee, Ariz., Jan. 27 — Found guilty of interference with union activities and of maintaining an elaborate blacklist to keep union men out of jobs, the Phelps-Dodge Copper Corp. has been ordered by the NLRB to reinstate thirty-nine union men in their former jobs and pay back wages ranging from two months to four and one-half years.

Beneficiaries of the NLRB order which climaxes a case pending since 1937 are 39 members of Bisbee Miners Union 30, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, which called a strike in protest against discriminatory firings in June, 1935 and whose members have been locked-out since that time.

STRIKES HARD BLOW

The decision strikes a hard blow against the bitterly anti-union policies of the corporation —one of the "big three" of U. S. copper producers — and opens up a path to complete organization of the state of Arizona, kingdom of Phelps-Dodge and last haven of the open shop in the metals industry. The history of Phelps-Dodge union-busting goes back to 1917 when the company used deputized vigilantes to round up 1,200 strikers, forced them into cattle cars and haul them 175 miles to a concentration camp at Columbus, N. M.

Immediately effected by the order is Phelps-Dodge Copper Queen Mine at Bisbee. The decision is of untold significance. However, to thousands of workers at P-D's mines and smelters in Ajo, Jerome and Douglas, Arizona; El Paso, Texas, and elsewhere throughout the southwest.

The NLRB decision speaks of "Studied Discrimination Against the Strikers" and declares "We find that the respondent compiled a permanent record of the strike activities of its employes and utilized it as a blacklist in excluding the striker from its employ."

CIO Local Unions Urged to Push Drives

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Only the "strength found in a progressive movement" can translate the CIO program for jobs, security and peace through and organization into effective action for the workers, John Brophy, CIO local industrial union director, wrote to all directly affiliated CIO unions this week.

At the same time, he pointed out, "a more favorable opportunity for organizing the unorganized" exists today to help bring this about. "National unions are adding to their membership and the same is true of many of our Local Industrial Unions," he said. "Each week sees more Local Industrial Union contracts signed which call for sole collective bargaining rights, or union shop recognition, increased wages, better working conditions and numerous other advantages."

CIO PROGRAM

Briefly describing the CIO 1940 program of protection of workers' rights, expansion of social security, job for the unemployed and other benefits to American workers, Brophy warned:

"This program is no easy job to put into action, and it requires a strength found only in a progressive movement. It requires the support of the hundreds of Local Industrial Unions together with our national unions. This is so because the degree of attention Congress will give to legislative demands is dependent upon our combined interest and strength."

Brophy urged all Local Industrial Unions to take full advantage of the CIO national and regional offices, and to comply fully with rules and directions laid down as a guide to building strong CIO affiliates.

Canadian CIO Leader Ill; Postpone Trial

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 27—Trial of C. H. Millard, Canadian secretary of the CIO, on sedition charges, has been postponed indefinitely because of his illness.

Two days before he was to appear for trial at Timmins, Ontario, Millard had to go to St. Mary's hospital for a serious operation. His physician estimates that he will spend at least three weeks in the hospital and will require two more weeks to convalesce.

Millard was arrested on Dec. 6 on charges laid under the Defense of Canada Regulations. The charges were based on his criticism of reaction in Canada.

2,400 Delegates Cheer Gains Made By United Mine Workers

Note Strength Of Labor, Lewis Warns Politicians

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 27.—Declaring that the Democratic party and its leadership, although returned to power by labor support, had not kept faith with labor, Pres. John L. Lewis told the United Mine Workers convention that the resulting possibility of a Republican victory could only be prevented by substantial Democratic guarantees to labor.

He recommended that the convention endorse no candidate for the Presidency, but give the International Executive Board authority to act as circumstances warranted.

Lewis predicted that President Roosevelt would not be a candidate for re-election; and that if he were renominated, "with the conditions now confronting the nation and the dissatisfaction now premeating the minds of the people, his candidacy would result in ignominious defeat."

POLITICAL BOMBSHELL

Lewis' statement was the major political bombshell of the convention. Intended, as he later said, to be "a distinct jar to professional politicians in the Democratic and Republican parties," it served notice on them that labor's support was not to be taken for granted; and that labor would demand a platform satisfactory to the workers and definite guarantees of good faith.

The Mine Workers' president declared that the Democratic party, a minority party, had only come into power in 1932 because of the depression and the "moral and intellectual bankruptcy" of

Carey Speaks On Network Jan. 29

Washington, Jan. 29—James B. Carey, CIO secretary, is on the air tonight on a national hookup to discuss "What the CIO Program Means to Business and Labor." He speaks on the Blue Network of the Natl. Broadcasting Co.

Carey speaks from 9:30 to 9:45 P. M. Eastern Standard Time. Stations listed as available for carrying the program in the Jan. 22 edition of THE CIO NEWS numbered 63. CIO affiliates and members were urged to see that their local station is persuaded to carry the program.

Warning To McNutt: No Labor Support

Columbus, O., Jan. 27. — The presidential aspirations of Paul V. McNutt, federal social security administrator, were dealt a knockout blow when Pres. John L. Lewis denounced him before the Mine Workers convention as a "political adventurer" who had used troops against striking miners.

The 2500 mine union delegates greeted Lewis' remarks with evident approval when, following an account of early brutalities against striking miners, he suddenly launched into his attack on McNutt.

16th CENTURY PRACTICES

When English miners in the 16th century became "angry at the presence of strangers taking their jobs," Lewis said, "the king would send troops to protect the strangers—just like the other day in Harlan county, when the Governor of Kentucky sent troops to protect the strangers from the anger of the displaced mine workers whose children were hungry and whose wives were ill.

"And just like in Indiana a few years back, when the Governor, whose name was McNutt, sent troops to protect the strangers in the coal mines who were taking the jobs of the mine workers in Indiana, whose children were hungry and whose wives were sick—a political adventurer whose name was McNutt, who liked to pretend that he was a soldier, and who was accompanied by a motley crew of

Urge Passage Of Safety Bill; Rap McNutt

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 27.—The greatest convention of "the world's greatest labor union" concluded its first week today, with a record attendance and nationwide attention centered on its decisions.

Celebrating its 50th anniversary, the United Mine Workers of America reported more than 2,400 delegates present and brought thousands of additional visitors to Columbus.

Highlights of the first week's sessions, many of which made front-page news throughout the country, included:

(1) The political sensation caused by the statement of Pres. John L. Lewis calling the Democratic party leadership to task for not keeping faith with labor; predicting defeat for Pres. Roosevelt if he should run for re-election; demanding substantial guarantees for labor, if the Democrats wish to prevent a Republican victory; and serving notice on the political parties and candidates that labor's support cannot be taken for granted unless labor's demands are given full consideration.

(2) Lewis' denunciation of Paul V. McNutt, presidential aspirant, as a "political adventurer" who had used troops against the miners, and of his "motley crew of two per cent bagmen."

(3) A nationwide broadcast in celebration of the union's 50th anniversary, followed by presentation of 50-year gold medal service badges to five miners who were delegates to the founding convention in Columbus in 1890.

(4) Vigorous convention action for passage of the Neely mine safety bill, after delegates had related harrowing experiences in connection with the recent Barkley, W. Va., mine disaster, and Lewis had brought the convention to its feet with his demand that Congress protect the lives of the mine workers.

(5) A moving scene when Lewis acknowledged the tribute paid to him and the United Mine Workers by Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers and Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union, for the assistance rendered to the younger unions and the whole CIO by the Mine Workers.

The convention was welcomed by Pres. John Dunn of the Columbus CIO Council and Pres. John Owens of the Ohio State Industrial Union Council.

Declaring that the history of the UMWA was to a great extent the history of the American labor movement, Owens said: "Through our union those dark, dank Siberias of the coal country have been transformed into American communities where civil liberties prevail."

Lewis, both in his opening speech and later in the convention, dwelt much on the question of mine safety. Speaking on the federal mine inspection bill, he attacked the U. S. Bureau of Mines as having been "anti-United Mine Workers" and demanded that there be some consultation of the union before the Bureau's next director is appointed.

MEN VS. MONEY

Noting coal operator opposition to the mine safety bill, Lewis declared: "We know what the coal operators of this coun-

U. S. Indicts AFL Boss For War Against CIO

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Accusing Pres. Joseph Ryan of the AFL Intl. Longshoremen's Association of illegal coercion against members of a CIO union, a federal grand jury today had brought anti-trust law conspirary indictments against the AFL chieftain, ten of his fellow officials, two of his locals and an AFL building teamsters local.

The grand jury charged Ryan and the other defendants with having attempted to force certain retail lumber dealers to pressure their employes into deserting their own chosen union, Local 104 of the CIO United Retail & Wholesale Employes.

As a part of the conspiracy, the indictment said, the AFL longshoremen leaders prevented employes of the dealers from coming to the docks to get their lumber, thereby tying up on the piers merchandise valued at over $2,000,000.

They are further accused of having instituted illegal boycotts against the retailers, and of issuing blacklists with the names of these dealers in an effort to induce dock workers and trucking companies to refrain from handling their lumber.

If found guilty, the men would be subject to one year jail sentences and fines of $5,000 each.

Ryan, who has long maintained absolute power along the city's docks, has been closely identified with Tammany Hall politics in New York.

A similar indictment naming leaders of the AFL Building and Construction Trades Council in New Orleans, was returned by a grand jury in the southern city last week.

Not To Be Taken For Granted

Some of the political remarks of President John L. Lewis at the Golden Jubilee convention of the United Mine Workers of America came as a distinct shock to the political world.

But they struck an answering chord in the hearts of the mine workers to whom they were addressed, as well as in the hearts of millions of other American workers.

He spoke as leader of a union which has had long and sometimes bitter experience with professional politicians who have ridden to office as "friends of labor", but who later have turned against labor when it seemed to them politically expedient to do so.

Not only the mine workers, however, but all other thinking American workers know that labor has never yet received the full political consideration to which its numbers, and the conditions of its existence, entitle it in a democracy.

They know that the labor vote has been divided and traded about in the past, and that the old labor leadership has been so soft, if not corrupt, that politicians have felt they could pay their obligations to the workers who elected them with a few easy gestures or with letting labor have a few of the crumbs that fall from the rich men's table.

The tendency in the political world has been to take labor support for granted for one political party or one set of politicians, who then concentrate on winning the favors of the wealthier interests.

As a result, the wealth of the country remains concentrated in the hands of a few, while two-thirds of the population do not enjoy an income that provides a decent living standard, and one-third have average annual incomes at the near starvation level of less than $500.

As a further result, between nine and ten million Americans remain unemployed at a time when production levels are at the highest point in our history.

Labor is given no representation in the Cabinet, as Lewis pointed out, nor in the administrative or policy-making agencies of government. Diplomatic jobs, to represent our country in its foreign relations, go only to the rich who finance political parties. And labor is consulted in only the most casual fashion on the major domestic issues, or the issues of war and peace.

When John L. Lewis, therefore, states that this is not good enough; when he demands for labor the full degree of consideration to which it is entitled; when he declares that labor political support is not to be taken for granted for any candidate or any political party that does not guarantee a substantial return to labor—he may shock some politicians, but he rejoices the hearts of millions of American workers who look for militant political as well as industrial leadership to win them their fair share of the country's prosperity.

Labor-Baiters Under Fire As Detroit's New Mayor Cleans Up Police Dept.

DETROIT, Jan. 27. — A long-delayed clean-up of Detroit's police department today had brought retirement or demotions to some of the force's most viciously anti-labor officials.

The shake-up was a direct result of the recent city elections, which brought labor-supporter Mayor Jeffries into office. The city's new chief executive followed through on his pledge to rid the department of Commissioner Pickert, ardent foe of CIO unions.

Frank Eaman, the new commissioner, will continue his probe of underworld tie-ups with the police department, he indicated. Meanwhile Detroit unionists hailed his first activities, among them:

1. The retirement, upon request, of Supt. Fred Frahm, headquarters man who directed police attacks upon union picket lines.
2. Demotion of District Inspector Wendell Lochbiler, who was in charge of police attack on American Brass strike pickets in 1938.
3. Demotion of District Inspector William Rick, who ordered police to violence against a CIO picket line last year.

Too Important A Vote To Neglect

Looking Ahead — By LEN DE CAUX

The Mine Workers Convene

THE Golden Jubilee convention of the United Mine Workers of America was a most impressive occasion.

The thousands of people it brought to Columbus, Ohio, and the national import of its decisions led to newspaper attempts to compare it with the conventions of the big political parties, the American Legion and similar mass gatherings.

But all such comparisons are feeble and misleading. For while the UMWA convention, with some 2,500 delegates and thousands of visitors in addition, compared in size with the biggest assemblies, there was something quite distinct in its impressiveness.

Many conventions depend on the mechanical devices of pageantry and ballyhoo to produce their effects.

Using the old Roman rulers' formula for keeping the mind of the common people from politics, they provide a succession of costly circuses and wholesale whoopee.

Serious issues are submerged in the spree, and most of the delegates don't even realize what business has been transacted at the convention until they read about it in the papers when it is all over.

The UMWA convention was impressively different.

Issues Not Antics

The bright uniforms of the half dozen or more Mine Workers bands lent color to the assembly. Their music livened up the proceedings in the intervals between different orders of business.

But looking over the huge Columbus auditorium each day, the most impressive sight was the delegates themselves. The men selected by 600,000 miners to represent them, took their responsibilities more seriously than any legislative assembly of politicians.

Day after day throughout the whole proceedings, there was hardly a seat vacant on the auditorium floor. The close attention with which business was followed, was evident in the faces of the delegates and in the alertness of their reactions.

While there was good-fellowship in plenty and time for relaxation off the convention floor, all local papers commented on the orderly and self-respecting behavior of the thousands of union visitors to Columbus.

It was issues not antics that made the news—and big national news it was—at the United Mine Workers convention.

Labor Democracy

The UMWA convention was an impressive demonstration of labor democracy in action. The country's greatest industrial union not only gave full attention to the affairs of its own industry, but once more gave a lead to labor and the whole country.

The speeches of John L. Lewis on political issues commanded national attention. They had in them all the qualities of his own eloquence and leadership, but the power that lay behind them was the approval of the thousands of delegates to whom they were addressed and of the hundreds of thousands of miners who had elected them.

The miners gave a lead to labor when they threw the great strength of their organization behind the formation of the CIO, to aid millions of other workers to win their union rights.

The progressive policies laid down at the Columbus convention showed once more the UMWA is in the vanguard of the labor movement.

Grateful for the aid they have received from this pioneer industrial union, millions of workers followed its deliberations and decisions on national issues as something more than the voice of one union.

Just as the UMWA has given to the whole CIO the leadership of John L. Lewis, so it has inspired and permeated the whole labor movement to an unusual degree in many other ways as well.

The Columbus convention was further evidence that this great influence of the UMWA is a vital force for labor progress.

Hosiery Union Buys 40-Acre Farm

Reading, Pa., Jan. 27 — A 40-acre farm near here has been purchased by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers for union educational and recreational activities, AFHW officials announced this week.

The farm which is in Millcreek township, Lebanon county, about 15 miles from Reading, will be used particularly for union activities in the Berks county area, but when equipped will also be used later for training institutes and other projects sponsored by the national union.

TO REMODEL

The union plans to remodel the big barn into a social hall and dormitory to accomodate 60 persons. As soon as weather conditions permit, the Junior union group in Berks will help to get the place in shape.

The farm will be called Camp Goodman, in honor of Clarissa Goodman, a Berkshire striker who died during the 1936 strike.

try want—they want to continue what they consider to be their inalienable right to butcher men in the mining industry, rather than spend the money to make the mines safe."

He expressed the hope that the "House rules committee, under the complete control of the Democratic organization in the House, will not undertake to gag this piece of legislation as they have during the last three years gagged so many bills that had to do with remedial labor legislation."

James B. Carey, R. J. Thomas, Michael Quill and Joseph Curran were among the leaders of other CIO unions who came before the convention during the first week. All of them were enthusiastically received and expressed their appreciation of the aid received by their unions from the UMWA.

LEWIS REPLIES

Quill, Curran and John Santo presented Lewis with a bronze plaque on behalf of the Transport Workers Union and the National Maritime Union. Visibly moved when he replied to their tribute, Lewis declared that the Mine Workers in aiding theirs and other new unions "recognize also that they are aiding themselves."

Telling of the struggles of the UMWA in reaching its present strength despite "every hostile financial and sinister political influence," Lewis said:

"When the day came that the United Mine Workers of America did not have to rise in the morning and buckle on their sword and mace and look about for the enemy that had come during the night, just that day the United Mine Workers of this country began to see what we could do for the transport workers and the maritime workers and the steel workers, the lumber workers and the other unorganized millions of this country.

"As a result there has been created in this country a great, new, modern labor movement that is destined to become the one outstanding labor movement in this country."

Reciprocal trade agreements that work to the disadvantage of the mine workers were criticized in the officers' report, and in a speech by Secretary Thomas Kennedy, in which he objected particularly to the agreements involving imports of Russian anthracite and Venezuelan oil.

DIES COMMITTEE HIT

Among resolutions adopted by the convention was a vigorous attack on the Dies Un-American Committee, which was described as "the greatest achievement" of anti-labor forces that specialize in "skillful propoganda to demoralize and turn the community against organized labor."

With the aid of "a parade of witnesses including jailbirds, professional strikebreakers and mental cases," the resolution stated, the Dies committee had "built up the fantasy that not only labor but the entire federal government has fallen into the clutches of a gang of terrorists. Shirley Temple, Gypsy Rose Lee, the late Christopher Marlowe and even the American Indian were involved in this hideous plot!"

The resolution urged that the Dies committee be discontinued and that appropriations intended for it be given to the LaFollette civil liberties committee instead.

Continuation of the present policy in regard to District autonomy was voted by the convention, after some debate and after Pres. Lewis had described the policy outlined at the last convention as follows:

"That policy is to the effect that every District will be given its autonomy when it is demonstrated that the membership of that District wants autonomy, and when it is demonstrated that the District is able to support itself without becoming a burden upon its membership, without having to have the money paid in by other Districts to support the new autonomy."

Under this policy, the International Executive Board has already granted autonomy to Districts 2 and 6, since the last convention.

FIVE HONORED

The five delegates to the first convention of the United Mine Workers who were honored with 50-year badges and who addressed the Golden Anniversary convention were Thomas Hagerty, John W. Jones, John S. Wilson, Moses Wolford and Chas. L. Kimes.

Percy Tetlow, former UMWA official and U. S. Coal Commissioner and now technical advisor to the Bituminous Coal Division of the U. S. Interior Dept., addressed the convention on coal prices and conditions in the industry; and W. T. Roberts spoke on unemployment compensation.

The Privilege Of Belonging To The AFL!

Newark, N. J., Jan. 27—It costs good money to belong to the AFL — particularly when you're forced into it by your employer—as workers of fruit products plant near here discovered when the company sold out to New York to escape the CIO.

The move cost more than 50 of them, members of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers, wage cuts ranging from $19 to $2.00 per week, when they were forced to take membership in an AFL Union in the new location.

They were also forced to pay extra transportation costs to and from work. On top of that, the AFL union handed out its own private gouge in the shape of double the initiation fees and dues the workers paid in the CIO.

Retract 'Red Label' For CIO Union

Washington, Jan. 27—Charges made in the Dies Un-American Committee that the Nnited Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, was led by "Communists" were retracted and an apology made on the floor of the House here during debate on continuation of the committee for the current session.

The retraction and apology were made by Representative Casey, of Massachusetts, one of the reputed liberals on the committee, who said for the record that he had investigated the charges and found them untrue.

"I apologize to the House for signing that report," Casey said, referring to the Dies Committee report that contained these and other similar charges. Later Representative Noah Mason, Iowa Republican and Representative Voorhis, of California, admitted that the committee had made a mistake in branding the CIO union.

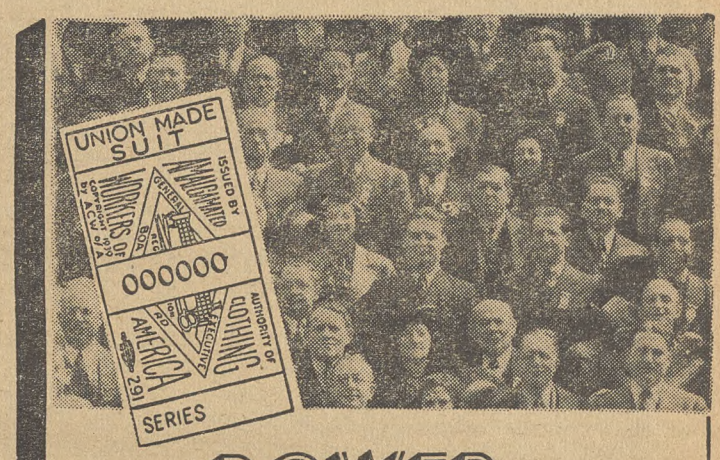
Steel Unionist Elected To City Council



Sydney, N. S., Jan. 27—President Norman MacKenzie of the Sydney steel union local is the latest CIO union official to win public office in Cape Breton provincial and municipal elections.

In civic elections just held in Sydney, MacKenzie was elected to a seat in the city council with a majority of 137 over Dan Gallivan, a former alderman.

Other CIO officials who are holding important public offices in Cape Breton are:

UMW District President D. W. Morrison, mayor of Glace Bay.

Full Text of Pres. Lewis' Warning To Politicians That Labor Will Be Heard

Here is the full text of Pres. Lewis' statement to the United Mine Workers' Convention in regard to labor's attitude towards the political parties and the 1940 election campaign.

IN the nation, the Democratic Party is a minority party. Substantially, the Party defines its own limitations by its sectional prejudices and its free trade fallacies. It comes into office under abnormal circumstances when it receives the support of the national independent vote.

In 1932, this Party was ushered into power. This was not because of the virtues of the Party, nor the talents, nor policy of its leaders. It was an act of a despairing population; a population stricken by an economic depression of the first magnitude; a population sickened by the moral and intellectual bankruptcy of the Republican Party then in control.

The 1936 Coalition

IN 1936, a coaliton was effected between the Democratic party and organized labor. The resources of both interests were pooled — the objective being the return of the Party to power in the election of the same year. Organized labor furnished money, speakers, party workers in every political subdivision and many millions of votes.

It substantially financed the National Committee, various state committees, congressional committees, Labor's Non-Partisan League, the American Labor Party, the Progressive National Committee and the Good Neighbor League. Psychologically and politically, organized labor created the atmosphere of success that returned the Democratic Party to power with an ample margin of safety.

A political coalition, at least, presupposes a post-election good faith between the coalescent interests. The Democratic Party and its leadership have not preserved this faith.

In the last three years, labor has not been given representation in the Cabinet, nor in the administrative or policy-making agencies of Government. The current Administration has not sought nor seriously entertained the advice or views of labor upon the question of national unemployment or lesser questions affecting domestic economy, internal taxation, foreign trade, military and naval expansion, relations with foreign nations or the issues of war or peace.

Labor today has no point of contact with the Democratic Administration in power, except for casual and occasional interviews which are granted its individual leaders. In the Congress, the unrestrained baiting and defaming of labor by the Democratic majority has become a pastime, never subject to rebuke by the titular or actual leaders of the Party.

Democrats In Default

AS the current year opens, the Democratic Party is in default to the American people. After 7 years of power, it finds itself without solution for the major questions of unemployment, low national income, mounting internal debt, increasing direct and consumer taxation and restricted foreign markets. There still exists the same national unhappiness that it faced seven years ago.

Labor and the people are losing confidence. They fear for the future, and rightly so. It is estimated that approximately 25 million men are under arms in Europe and in Asia. Nearly 70 million other men are engaged in servicing these contending armies. When these men are returned to the pursuits of peace, as eventually they must be, the effect upon our nation's remaining foreign trade will be devastating.

Without Program

THE present Congress is without a program, except to enact necessary appropriations in ample time to engage in the national quadrennial political marathon.

I am one who believes that President Roosevelt will not be a candidate for re-election. Conceding that the Democratic National Convention could be coerced or dragooned into re-nominating him, I am convinced that, with the conditions now confronting the nation and the dissatisfaction now permeating the minds of the people, his candidacy would result in ignominious defeat.

It is true that at the present time the states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York are trending toward the Republican column in the campaign year of 1940.

This trend can be corrected, and the Republican Party prevented from winning, only by an accord between the Democratic Party and organized labor, and the adoption of an intelligent and rational program to be written into the platform of the Democratic Party and placed before the American people as the issues of the election. Even then, guarantees of good faith and fulfillmnt of party promises would have to be made to labor and the people by responsible Democratic leaders.

No Endorsement

IN view of these facts and the attendant conditions, it would be unwise, in my judgment, for this convention at this time to bestow its endorsement upon any candidate for the Presidency of the United States. In lieu thereof, I would recommend that the International Executive Board be given authority by the convention to deal with this problem as conditions warrant, and the interests of our members justify.

Labor Demands Recognition From Parties

the Republican party in power.

In 1936, he said, "a coalition was effected between the Democratic party and organized labor." Reciting the financial organizational support and millions of votes which labor gave to the Democrats, he declared:

LABOR BROUGHT SUCCESS

"Psychologically and politically, organized labor created the atmosphere of success that returned the Democratic party to power with an ample margin of safety."

But this political coalition presupposed "a post-election good faith", which the party and its leadership had not kept.

"In the last three years," Lewis said, "labor has not been given representation in the Cabinet, nor in the administrative or policy-making agencies of government.

NOT CONSULTED

"The current administration has not sought nor seriously entertained the advice or views of labor upon the question of national unemployment or lesser questions affecting domestic economy, internal taxation, foreign trade, military and naval expansion, relations with foreign nations or the issues of war or peace.

"Labor today has no point of contact with the Democratic administration in power, except for casual and occasional interviews which are granted its individual leaders.

"In the Congress, the unrestrained baiting and defaming of labor by the Democratic majority has become a pastime, never subject to rebuke by the titular or actual leaders of the party."

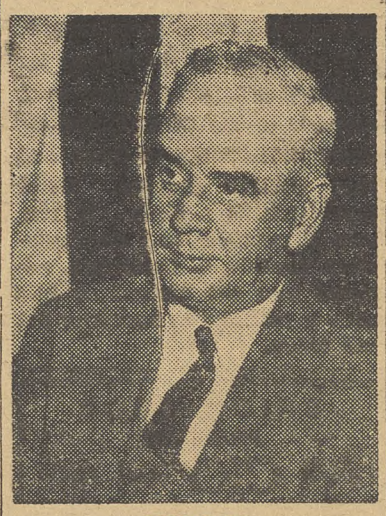
LOSING CONFIDENCE

Pointing to unemployment, low national income, war threats and other evils, Lewis declared that "labor and the people are losing confidence" and that "the present Congress is without a program."

Noting trends to the Republican party in half a dozen states, he said: "This trend can be corrected, and the Republican party prevented from winning, only by an accord between the Democratic party and organized labor, and the adoption of an intelligent and rational program to be written into the platform of the Democratic party and placed before the American people as the issues of the election.

"Even then, guarantees of good faith and fulfillment of party promises would have to be made to labor and the people by responsible Democratic leaders."

Reading Steel Men In Confab



Reading, Pa., Jan. 27—Delegates from half a dozen steel towns near here met for the fifth semi-annual district conference of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee and heard reports of encouraging progress in the drive from 100 per cent organization of the mills.

Sub-regional director George Medrick urged the various lodges to complete their unionization campaigns and win improved working conditions for the men.

Guest speakers at the meeting were SWOC Sec.-Treas. David McDonald and Father Rice, well-known Pittsburgh liberal priest.

Murray Sees CIO As Sole Organization

Columbus, O., Jan. 27—The CIO is "destined to be the one labor organization of the United States in the not very far future," predicted Vice-President Philip Murray of the United Mine Workers, speaking before the convention of District 50, UMW.

MURRAY

He related CIO progress in organizing four million workers since "the AFL in its ancient and bewhiskered wisdom, kicked us out."

"If the CIO was a bad institution, would all these workers have come along in this great crusade," Murray said.

"I live with the CIO—sleep with the CIO—and I know something of its aspirations and objectives.

"We have been reviled as a subversive organization. The CIO, despite these slanders, is definitely committed to protect America and the free institutions of the United States."

LEAGUE MEETING

Cleveland — Leaders of Labor's Non-Partisan League in Cleveland held a convention last week.

General Motors, Armour Sign CIO Contracts

Warren, O., Jan. 27—The CIO has won the first exclusive recognition contract ever signed by General Motors, in an agreement negotiated between the corporation and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, here.

The contract covers 600 men, and was signed after the union had been certified a year ago by the Natl. Labor Relations Board. It includes grievance adjustment machinery, seniority rights, sick leave, the five-day 40-hour week and a base rate of 65 cents per hour.

The contract also makes provisions for modifications of the speedup system, long a major point of difference between unions and management. Commenting on the contract, James J. Matles, UERM director, said:

"We are glad, too, that this contract augurs well for our sister CIO union, the United Automobile Workers, believing that our work will do its share toward the defeat of the AFL and a smashing victory for the UAW in the coming Labor Board elections in 64 GM plants."

Chicago, Jan. 27 — CIO Packinghouse Workers have won two contracts from Armour and Co., chief of the Big Four packers and long an anti-union leader in the industry, it was announced by Art Kampfert, PWOC national director. The two contracts cover a by-product plant here and one at Kansas City. Negotiations for a pact at the main Chicago plant, which employs 7,000, are under way.

Chief benefit in the contract is a revision of seniority rules to prevent loss of seniority unless a worker is laid off for a full year. More than 60 per cent of work in the industry is seasonal, PWOC officials explained, making the point an important one.

"When we complete our big drive in Chicago" said Herb March, PWOC district director, "we will be so powerful that Swift and its $10,500,000 profit, Armour and its $7,000,000 profit and Wilson and its $3,000,000 profit will be forced to yield, granting a substantial wage raise to their organized workers."

Labor Board Again Hits Ford Practices

Washington, Jan. 27 — In a second decision against the Ford Motor Company within a month, the National Labor Relations Board this week ordered the union-hating firm to stop spying on union meetings and interfering in other ways with the collective bargaining rights of its employes at the Somerville, Massachusetts plant.

The Board's investigation disclosed that when employes at the Somerville plant started a movement to form a union under the United Automobile Workers in May 1937, the chief inspector, foremen and other supervisory officials attempted to intimidate the men from belonging. The company also had copies of pamphlets containing excerpts from various statements by Henry Ford attacking labor organizations distributed among the workers.

The Board found that these pamphlets clearly showed the company's open and active hostility to unions and served notice on the employes that the company would "view their membership in the union with disfavor."

Shipyard Union Wins In South

New Orleans, La., Jan. 27—A two-year struggle for recognition as qualified union representative for workers at the Todd - Johnson Drydocks was won this week by Local 29, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, when the CIO union defeated an AFL affiliate 289 to 229, at an election conducted by the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

Union officials hailed the winning of the poll in this key port on the Gulf coast as a tremendous victory for the IUMSW which will have a marked influence on shipyard workers throughout the area.

The CIO union's victory is the culmination of a battle for recognition against the combined forces of corrupt AFL local officials, police violence, delay by the Labor Board, and intimidation by the company which began more than two years ago.

On September 4, 1937, the AFL Metal Trades Council of New Orleans filed a petition for certification as bargaining agency in the Todd-Johnson yards, and 12 days later were granted this by the Labor Board's regional office. The CIO Union charged collusion between the company and the AFL and continued organizing the workers.

Unanimous!

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 — The Laundry Workers joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers today was designated as collective bargaining agent for workers at the Ace Shirt Laundry Co. in Brooklyn. The employes voted unanimously for the ACW, despite AFL efforts to weaken the union ranks during a recent lockout.

Songs and Ballads Of the Mine Patch

By C. W. FOWLER

Ever since work was invented workers have made songs about it — — how hard it is, how well they can do it, heroic feats and disasters, protest against intolerable conditions and struggles to better them.

Most folk music of the kind that sticks in the people's memory, in fact, has to do with work and other basic economic facts of life. This is especially true of places where the job dominates most of social life—in the mine patch, at sea, on the plantation, in the lumber camp, etc.

Many of these have been collected; most, probably, lost. George Korson, researcher in Pennsylvania folklore, has rescued over 100 of the songs, ballads and stories of the mines from early mining days down to the present time, and published them under the title, "Minstrels of the Mine Patch."

The collection, secured from old miners and faded records, comes chiefly from the anthracite, and covers almost every activity the workers knew.

In earlier days, Korson writes, "balladry attained an amazing vogue among the anthracite mine workers. From the end of the Civil War to the first decade of the present century, no patch or town scaped the fever of improvising or composing songs, ballads, ditties, and doggerel on some phase or other of the mining theme. Unlettered mine workers seem to have gone daft thinking, talking, writing .and singing in measured and rhymed sentences."

SONGS ABOUT THE UNION

The miners were singing about the union as far back as 70 years ago, and they have continued to sing about it up to the present time, when the United Mine Workers has been an established force for 50 years. Korson's collection has songs about the Workmen's Benevolent Association, started in 1868; the Knights of Labor, set up in Scranton in 1876; the United Mine Workers, established in 1890, and even a few about the Molly Maguires, who protested the brutal conditions of their time in their own way.

The union songs argue for organization, describe historic strikes, take the hide off the "blacklegs" who scabbed on their fellow workers, praise famous miners' leaders.

Other material in Korson's book deals with songs of homesickness for the patch, ballads of great mine disasters, songs of the good times the workers had on payday, of hard times when the mines shutdown, of the suffering when miners were injured and killed, of the fun they had Saturday nights.

The book includes a section of stories, legends and superstitions as well as songs and ballads—in all, a collection showing the music and the traditional yarns made up by the Welsh, the Irish, the English, Scotch, Slavic workers who came over to mine America's coal.

"Minstrels of the Mine Patch," by George Korson, University of Pennsylvania Press, Philadelphia, Pa., 332 pages, price $3.00.

GM to Discuss Auto Union Demands

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 27. — Negotiations between the United Automobile Workers, CIO, and the General Motors Corporation to discuss the union's demands on seniority, the work-week, lay-off procedure and other matters will open shortly, Walter P. Reuther, GM Director for the UAW announced this week.

Reuther said that the demands had already been submitted to the corporation, and that Floyd O. Tanner, GM vice-president in charge of personnel, had agreed to open discussion on them.

"The demands do not involve basic contract changes," Reuther declared. "Because of the obstruction of the AFL clique changes in the basic contract cannot be discussed at this time. The demands to b negotiated deal with matters that can be handled by clarifying provisions of the present agreement.

TO AWAIT ELECTIONS

"Negotiations for revision of the basic agreement will be opened as soon as the NLRB elections, which are certain to result in a sweeping victory for the UAW-CIO are completed."

The National Labor Relations Board has ordered a hearing to be held in Detroit beginning January 30 on the matter of calling elections in 67 GM plants in 11 states. Reuther this week requested the NLRB regional director in Detroit to call an immediate conference for the purpose of taking stipulations to expedite elections in GM plants.

ACCUSES AFL SPLITTERS

He accused the UAW-AFL of raising the only remaining difficulties to an immediate election. "These obstacles," he said in a letter to the NLRB regional director, "are the inability of the UAW-AFL and the AFL craft unions to agree on how they are going to split up the workers in the GM plants."

Reuther also charged that the AFL was attempting to prevent the 14,000 Buick workers in Flint from being included in the elections.

Catholics Honor Hillman

New York, Jan. 27 — Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has accepted an invitation from Msgr. Joseph M Corrigan, rector of the Catholic University of America at Washington, to serve as a member of the Commission on American Citizenship set up by the American Catholic hierarchy to prepare a program of civic education in response to an appeal by the late Pope Pius XI.

The Commission, Msgr. Corrigan advised Pres. Hillman, will "serve as a rallying point for right-thinking men, irrespective of creed, who desire to perpetuate our American system of government.

"It seems particularly fitting that you, whose life has been devoted to the cause of labor, should be invited to become a member of this commission. We are hopeful therefore, that you will join with us in this undertaking for the common weal of our nation."

Mine Union Leaders Cite Recent Gains In Report, List Problems to Be Solved

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 27—More powerful than ever before in its 50-year history, the United Mine Workers of America is determined to continue its campaign for the rights of the nation's coal miners as well as the workers in all other American industries.

This was the keynote of the 82-page report of the UMW's officers to the Golden Jubilee convention here — a report which dealt at length with all the major problems now confronting millions of workers. It was signed by Pres. John L. Lewis, Vice-Pres. Philip Murray and Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy.

THE WAR

Greatest danger in the immediate future, the report warned, is the possibility of American involvement in the wars of Europe and America, which would lead to a "complete blackout of all democratic American institutions."

Declaring that there is "no justification" for such involvement, the UMW leaders continued:

"The people of this nation are united in their determination that we are not to have any part of the foreign conflicts. Congress must not permit any policy to be adopted which may in any way lead toward the involvement of accompanying unemployment in the United States.

"The only war in which we should participate is the war to destroy and wipe out the causes that lead to unemployment, to sub-standard wages —inadequate purchasing power, the inequitable unjust distribution of national income, all of which adversely affect the principles of economic justice and security under our political democracy."

Fittingly, the report opened with an analysis of the long negotiations leading up to the historic 1939 union shop contract with anthracite and bituminous mine operators.

"It is gratifying," the officers reported, "that after dark days and bright days — days of suspense and terror — days of brilliance and great achievement — through which your Union has passed since its inception in 1890, a lofty pinnacle of success has been reached in establishing a union shop contract for the bituminous coal industry."

But great as that success proved to be, it has nevertheless left many vexing questions still to be solved.

Not least of these is the reduction in coal consumption, with its the mining fields.

"In general," the report declares, "it is not possible to control the depletion of natural energy sources and forestall wanton disemployment in the coal industry without a broad national policy which embraces not merely the coal industry but at the same time also regulates production, transportation, distribution and the pricing of all integrated energy sources of the nation."

The UMW, it points out, will cooperate in such a policy, provided the workers' interests in the coal, gas, electric power and oil industries are protected.

HIT MINE BUREAU

The Bituminous Coal Acts of 1935 and 1937, have helped effectively to stabilize conditions in the industry, it is noted, and the UMW officials will seek an extension of existing coal legislation through 1941. At that time, "further constructive legislation" will be contemplated.

The U. S. Bureau of Mines, however, was subjected to scathing criticism in the officers' statement to the convention, and charged with "a series of bureaucratic regulations. pussyfooting the real issues and tying with red tape" its worthwhile activities.

Having turned aside from its original purpose of protecting the workers by seeking improved health conditions and the prevention of accidents, the Bureau is now primarily concerned with technical questions and the publication of "abstract generalities," the mine union leaders charged.

Hope for improvement in mine working conditions may be expected if the Neely-Keller bill, providing for federal inspection of coal mine properties is passed by Congress (it has already received the Senate's approval.) But even if this bill becomes law, the report emphasizes, its full effects will be realized only if the "Bureau of Mines is organized to "exclude the present evils of incompetence, inexperience and transfer of funds to relatively unimportant functions."

WAGNER ACT

The United Mine Workers will continue its struggle to preserve the Wagner Act from emasculation, the report declared in no uncertain terms, at the same time supporting CIO efforts to strengthen the Act by seeking criminal penalties for violators, withholding of government contracts to violators and preventing the Labor Board from chopping industrial units into small craft segments.

"We have been keenly aware of the perfidious work of the representatives of the AFL and of the activities of many other reactionary enemies of organized labor in the country who would destroy the Natl. Labor Relations Act and the Board for their own selfish purposes, if they could," the UMW officers pointed out.

At the same time they pointed out that Sections 7a and Section 7b of the NRA — out of which the Wagner Act was born — were written into the law through the efforts of the UMW. Green and other AFL leaders knew about the winning of that victory only when so informed by the mine union.

The LaFollette-Thomas oppressive labor practices act received commendation in the report, while the government was urged to push a rural housing program which would improve the living conditions of workers in the coal mine towns and other non-urban areas throughout the country. Support for Labor's Non-Partisan League and its progress in freeing labor from a position of servility in national politics was also voiced.

Link 'Associated Farmers' to Big Business

Huge 'Slush Funds' To Fight Labor Bared by U. S. Probe

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 27. — The tory Associated Farmers outfit is more closely associated with chambers of commerce than with working farmers, it was revealed at Senate civil liberties committee hearings probing the many violations of civil liberties in southern California.

As witness after witness appeared on the stand before Senators Robert LaFollette and Elbert Thomas, it became apparent that the corporation-financed Associated Farmers was directly connected with attacks on migratory agricultural workers, silencing of the press, violation of civil rights and depressing of farm wage standards.

In Los Angeles county, it was revealed, only $2 was donated to the war chest of the Associated Farmers by an individual farmer in 1939. Top contributors to AF funds between the years 1937-39 in southern California were the Crown-Willamette Paper Co., $1,000; and the Southern Californians, Inc., another big business-sponsored open shop organization.

FORMED BY CHAMBER

That the Associated Farmers is the child of the state chamber of commerce agricultural department was established when R. N. Wilson, head of the department, took the stand.

"Did the state chamber of commerce initiate any action to form the AF?" Sen. LaFollette asked.

"Yes," Wilson admitted. "This was done because of the difficult situation which had arisen in the San Joaquin valley."

Wanton killing of two striking farm workers in the rich Imperial Valley during 1934 was described by a representative of the AFL, who described an attack by 179 armed deputies on a picket line.

"The deaths were the results of unrestrained deputizing and arming of strikebreakers," he said.

DESCRIBES VIOLENCE

Another witness was Brig.-Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, onetime head of Washington, D. C. police, who acted as a Labor Dept. conciliator during the Imperial Valley struggle.

Glassford testified that local authorities "did nothing to check the outbreaks of violence", while Associated Farmers detailed stooges to follow him, visit his hotel room and keep track of his phone calls.

Earlier the committee had learned of the outfit's opposition to the wage-hour law and the government's Farm Security relief program, both of which were fought because they improved the status of the farm workers and made them less dependent on Associated Farmers starvation wage rates.

SEEK CONTROL OF RELIEF

The employers want relief returned to the counties, an AF official said, presumably that it may be more closely supervised by the organization.

Henry Strobel, treasurer of AF, outlined his proposals for wage-hour law amendments — to exclude all workers who handle farm products. These, he said, would include pickers, teamsters, packinghouse employes and warehouse workers.

Further light on the real powers behind the Associated Farmers and its anti-labor program was thrown by the committee as it delved into the financing of the California open shop campaign.

HIGHLIGHTS

Highlights of that campaign included:

1. Accumulation of an anti-labor war chest of more than $500,000 by Southern Californians, Inc. in the last two years. About 60% of the money went to The Neutral Thousands, (TNT), an anti-labor outfit; the Associated Farmers, and the Merchants & Manufacturers Assn.

2. A $99,682 subsidy for TNT by the Southern Californians and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

3. Heavy contributions to the Southern Californians by the Chamber of Commerce and the big oil firms ($19,000 from Standard Oil of California alone).

4. Formation of company unions by TNT to break strikes or wreck bona fide unions. TNT, now out of existence, was formed to lessen "industrial strife."

5. Distribution of a blacklist of 81 union sympathizers by the Associated Farmers.

6. Hiring of Beverly Hills police officers during off-hours for duty —in uniform.

Textile Workers Press for Increases

By WALTER F. PETERS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 27.—Emil Rieve, president of the CIO's Textile Workers Union of America, last Sunday announced that the union will negotiate wage increases in those woolen and worsted mills which have not yet taken such action. He declared that peaceful means will be used by the union and strikes will follow only against the worst offenders.

The union chieftain's announcement came after a conference of the union's woolen and worsted division held here last weekend. Nearly 100 delegates from New England states and New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania were in attendance.

The increases granted by the American Woolen Co. — often spoken of as the General Motors of the textile industry—and other woolen and worsted manufacturers range from 7 to 10 per cent and become effective Monday, Feb. 5. It is estimated that some 130,000 workers, representing 75 per cent of the industry, will realize an additional $16,000,000 in their pay envelopes in 1940 as a result of the raise.

PROTECTS FAIR FIRMS

"Those employers who have acceded to our demands for an increase, and who have manifested a reasonable attitude toward their employes, must not be allowed to suffer at the hands of unfair or recalcitrant employers."

The president declared that the newly improved standards of 75 per cent of the industry stands in jeopardy from the intransigeant 25 per cent.

In order to raise the level of the 25 per cent in the industry, the union delegates voted to support the union president's statement of policy.

Should the companies refuse the increase, the organization will offer arbitration to settle the proposal. Strike action will follow against the worst offenders if the proposal for arbitration fails.

Other speakers included George Baldanzi, executive vice-president of the TWUA; who reported great progress being made by the educational department of the union; Thomas McMahon, former president of the Textile Workers of America; Frank Benti, R. I. TWUA director; Joseph A. Salerno, Massachusetts TWUA director; S. Barkin, research director, and I. Katz, attorney for the union.

Industrial Unions Seen Aid to Liberty

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—A strong industrial labor movement, uniting workers of all faiths and national origins, is the best preventive of intolerance, John Brophy, CIO Local Industrial Union Director, told the Institute of Human Relations conference meeting here.

This is possible, he said, because the labor movement reaches the people directly, creating a mass base for democracy and good will that fascist demagogues constantly try to exploit.

Questioned on the work of the CIO during the conference, Brophy pointed out that it has organized millions of workers previously untouched by the American labor movement, bring them into an effective unity of effort that was not possible before the existence of the industrial labor movement.

Brophy attended the conference as designated representative of CIO President John L. Lewis.

Plan CIO Drive In Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Jan. 27—Plans to take advantage of the feeling roused by LaFollette Committee disclosures and the generally heightened interest in labor organization were outlined at an enlarged meeting of the CIO Council here.

A committee headed by Roy M. Donnelly of the CIO regional office and Verne Kennedy of the Utility Workers was elected to proceed with plans for the drive. First step was the division of the Los Angeles area into industrial units for intensive effort.

Keep U. S. Out of War, Seamen Ask

New York, Jan. 27. — Emphasis on keeping America out of war and a determination to get a square social deal for seamen marked the meeting of the National Council of the CIO Nat'l Maritime Union just concluded here.

"'The Yanks are not coming,' should be the slogan of organized labor in relation to the present European war," Joseph Curran, NMU president, said in his report to the Council meeting. Curran also warned against loans and credits to warring countries. "In the last war," he said, "armies followed the loans. We don't want that to happen again.

"Should this country become involved in the war it would mean the destruction of the labor unions we fought so hard to build. It would mean the destruction of our civil liberties."

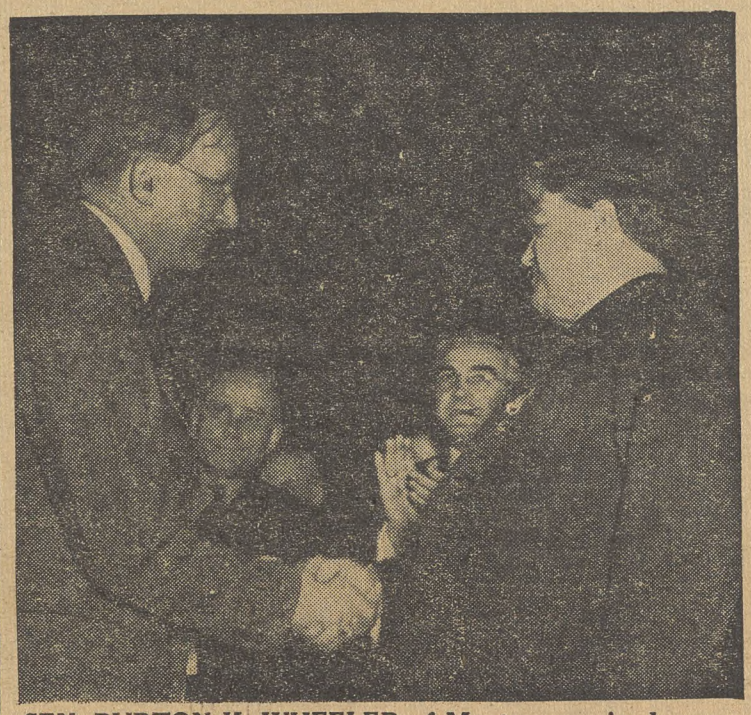
United Mine Workers Ask:

'PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM' AS PRICE OF SUPPORT

CIO Tests Anti-Picket Ordinance

Washington, Feb. 3. — A CIO appeal from a California judicial verdict upholding anti-picket legislation today was awaiting consideration of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Filed by CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman and attorneys for the California Industrial Union Council, the appeal declared:



"The question in this case is whether a county may, consistent with the federal constitution, deny the rights of freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of assembly under the guise of an ordinance prohibiting peaceful picketing."

DENIES RIGHTS

The ordinance in question was adopted in Shasta County, Calif., and upheld by the state courts as an exercise of the police power. But, the CIO brief declared, "the necessary effect of this ordinance on its face and as applied to the facts in this case is to deny fundamental civil liberties.

"The great decisions of this Court (the U. S. Supreme Court) protecting civil liberties have made it clear that in modern times workers engaged in protecting their right to organize in a peaceful and lawful manner, necessarily must exercise these fundamental rights."

Welcome To Wheeler

Contract Lifts Pay

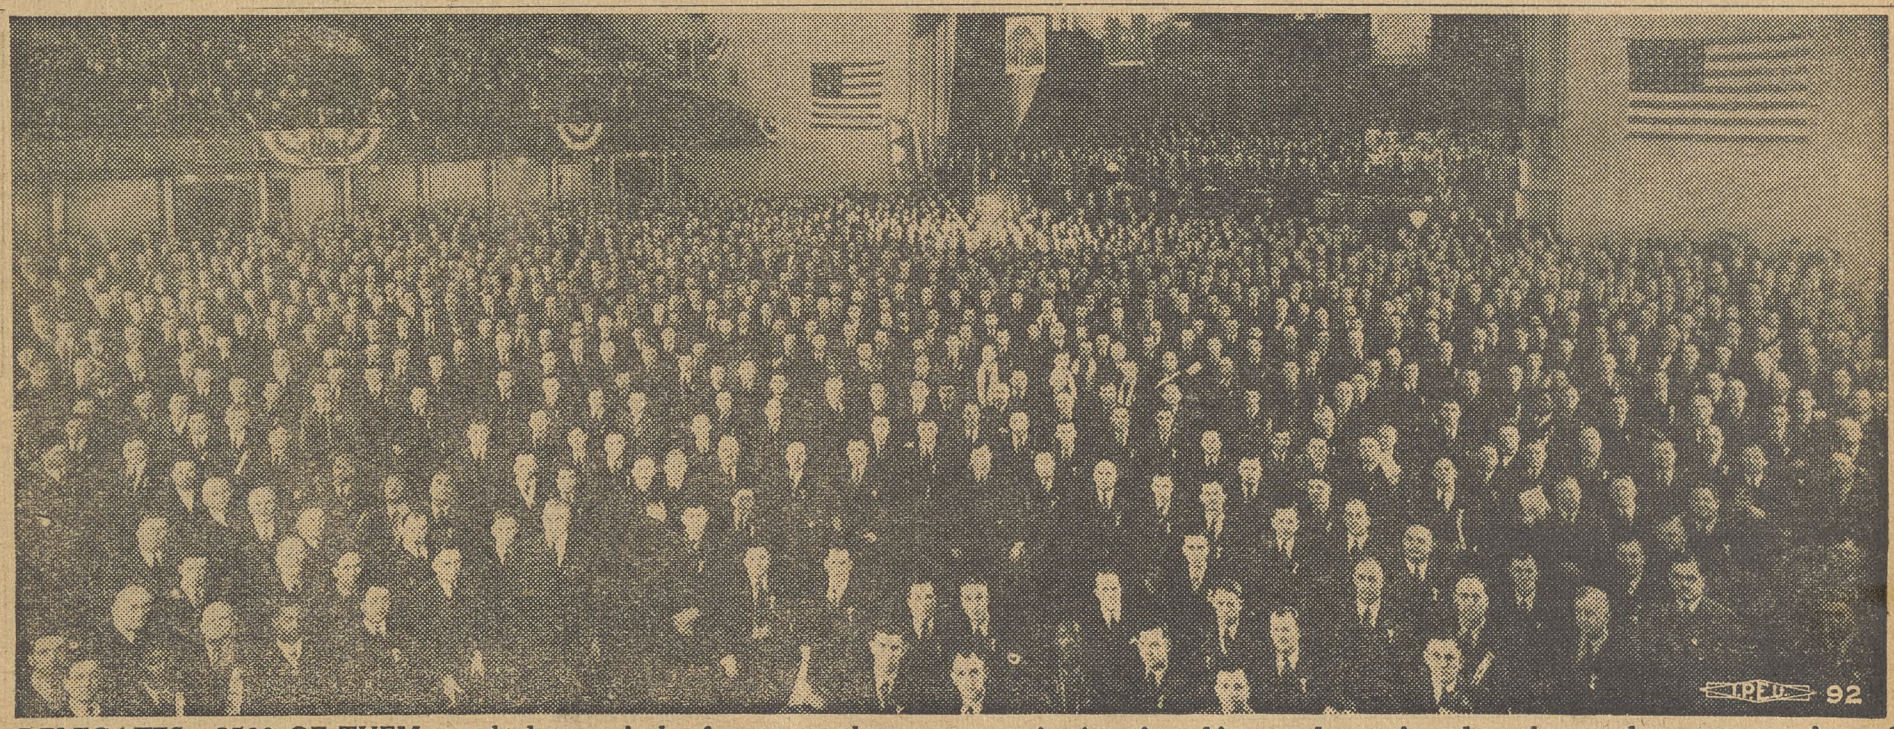
Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 3.—More than 200 employes at the Wood Bros. Manufacturing Co. will return to work with 5c hourly wage increases, the closed shop and the check-off as the result of a contract won by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee.

Production at the plant had been halted for several weeks pending conclusion of an agreement between union and company.

In addition to the wage increases, production at the plant is to be re-arranged so that each worker may expect to lift his earnings as much as 20% higher.

Back Lewis Stand On Politics

(See Stories on Inside Pages)



COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 3.—Adopting the recommendation of Pres. John L. Lewis that no Presidential candidate be endorsed at this time, the greatest convention of the United Mine Workers of America adjourned its two-week sessions.

Holding the national spotlight throughout, the huge gathering of 2,400 delegates, representing 600,000 organized miners, served notice on the country's politicians that labor's support would only be forthcoming for a really progressive program designed to remedy unemployment and other basic evils.

Pointing out that "the New Deal social and economic program of the present Democratic administration has not been consummated," the convention left to the Intl. Executive Board the question of support as the proper time for a liberal program to be worked out in cooperation with Labor's Non-Partisan League.

In its closing days the convention adopted resolutions calling for a national conference on unemployment; denouncing the awarding of government contracts to corporations which violate the Wagner act; criticizing the Smith committee and anti-CIO administrative policies of the Labor Board; and emphatically opposing all policies that might tend to involve the United States in foreign wars.

It heard Lewis, Murray and other union leaders denounce administration and Congressional failures to cope with unemployment and to cease coddling lawbreaking anti-labor corporations.

DELEGATES—2500 OF THEM—packed every inch of space on the floor of the Columbus Municipal Auditorium for the Golden Jubilee Convention of the United Mine Workers. Greatest labor union meeting in American history, the sessions brought together representatives of coal miners in all parts of the United States and Canada. The convention adjourned late last week.

Labor Board Hearings Open CIO Campaign At General Motors

DETROIT, Feb. 3. — The start of NLRB hearings here on January 30 opened a great campaign in which the United Automobile Workers of the CIO expect to establish sole bargaining for the union in the General Motors plants. The preliminary campaign was launched a year ago as soon as the disrupters, now under the wing of the AFL, broke with the CIO.

The UAW-CIO will present an overwhelming array of proof to the Board's trial examiner of its secure position as representative of the auto workers in practically all GM plants. Opposing the union are the remnant of the AFL group, some of whose local leaders are getting ready for a last-minute switchover, and the AFL craft unions, particularly the patternmakers, machinists and operating engineers.

If hearings can be expedited the Board should be able to order an election, it is estimated, by the end of March, before production has materially slumped.

GM IN PARLEYS

An omen of the UAW-CIO position as sole bargaining agent in GM plants was seen last week when the corporation entered negotiations with the union on Jan. 24, on seven important groups of union demands under the existing contract.

These negotiations on immediate demands are proceeding independently of the Labor Board hearings, and are expected to be concluded long before the election date. The negotiators are headed by Walter Reuther, director of the UAW-CIO-GM Dept.

After the UAW-CIO has won the Labor Board election it will lose no time in negotiating a new contract to supplant the defective agreement that is an unwelcome hangover from the preceding administration.

AFL LOCALS MAY SWITCH

The Labor Board election is of special importance because it will afford the first opportunity given to the membership of the few outlying locals still under AFL control to voice their real sentiments on CIO versus AFL.

The UAW-CIO has information from the local leadership of some of these locals that not only the membership but the leaders themselves are ready for the swing to the CIO. They realize that the AFL cannot negotiate grievances for them with General Motors and that even if it could, it would not do so because of the jurisdictional claims by the AFL crafts.

Launch Steel Campaign In Columbus

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 3—An intensive drive to organize between 6,000 and 8,000 workers employed in the steel industry in Columbus will be launched immediately, Ward Calcott, sub-regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said at a mass meeting held here during the United Mine Workers Convention.

Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, and Van A. Bittner, a district president of the UMW, were among the speakers who addressed the rally control of the steel industry by banking interests has been one of the major obstacles faced by the SWOC in its organizing activities, Murray told the meeting. No labor group, he said, had met with more obstacles than the steel workers, because of this.

Pointing to the great benefits labor had won under the CIO, Murray declared that the national workers would have been forced to take widespread wage cuts in the past two years, if it had not been for the CIO and its affiliated unions. As an illustration of what SWOC had done for the steel workers, Murray said that the union's grievance committees had collected a total of $1,762,000 from firms violating wage contracts, and had put many men dismissed from their jobs back to work.

AFL 'Gangster' Tactics Draw Criticism

Cincinnati, Feb. 3 — "Gangster tactics" by a handful of AFL building trades stooges in trying to break up a meeting addressed by Chairman A. D. Lewis of the CIO Construction Workers were vigorously denounced by Paul Fuller, CIO regional director, in a statement issued here.

"Gangster tactics employed by the Building Trades unions of the AFL to control the building industry were demonstrated by a few business agents and their followers who disrupted the meeting sponsored by the CIO Construction Workers here," Fuller said.

"In order to bolster their courage in carrying out their un-American and disgraceful conduct, this drunken mob of AFL representatives not only had absorbed freely of spirits before they arrived but many of them retired to the mens' room and imbibed liquor which was freely distributed to anyone who would partake," Fuller added.

Workers Get Jobless Benefits

Barre, Vt., Feb. 3 — Workers locked out by the General Insulating & Manufacturing Co., Alexandria, Indiana, after a deadlock in negotiations with the CIO Quarry Workers Intl. Union for renewal of a contract are entitled to jobless benefits, the Indiana Unemployment Compensation Commission ruled recently in a reconsidered decision.

A contract between the company and Branch 282 of the Quarry Workers which expired October 25, 1939, was extended pending negotiations for a new agreement with the understanding that it would be terminated by either side.

While conferences were going on, the company suddenly ended the extension, automatically forcing a lockout, a statement issued by the union's international office here declared.

Rap Plan To Tear Down 'El', Kill Jobs

New York, Feb. 3. — Petitions bearing the signatures of one million Elevated passengers protesting against plans of the city administration to demolish the Second and Ninth Avenue Elevated lines were given to Mayor LaGuardia at City Hall last week, the Transport Workers Union announces.

Addressed to the Mayor and the Board of Estimate, the petitions were circulated by veteran "El" workers, whose jobs are threatened by the plan to tear down the elevated lines, and other transit employes.

"The public convenience and necessity demand that the operation of the Second and Ninth Avenue elevated lines be continued," the petitions state, "until adequate substitute facilities are provided and substitute employment is found for the working men now employed on the elevated lines."

CIO Die Casters Sue:

Charge Wage Act Violations, Ask $300,000 in Back Pay

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 3.—Charging flagrant violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act, seven members of the CIO Natl. Association of Die Casting Workers today had filed a suit for $300,000 in back pay against the Stewart Die Casting Co. of this city. The firm is a subsidiary of the Stewart-Warner Corp.

The federal wage-hour law provides for time and a half pay on piece work performed after 42 hours. The seven workers estimate the company has been short-changing workers to a tune of $150,000.

The suit asks for a statutory penalty which allows double the amount deprived the workers — in this case $300,000 — and the payment of all attorney fees and court costs.

The seven men represented in the suit ask the damages not only for themselves but also as representatives of other employes who worked under similar charges. The case is being handled by Atty. Edward Lamb of Toledo, general counsel for the CIO union.

Clothing Workers Win $15,000 Wage Award

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—An award of $15,000 to workers of the Gotham Novelty Company was made by Walter Brower, impartial chairman in the men's clothing industry, because their work was sent to a non-union shop in Bristol, Rhode Island, in violation of an agreement, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, announced this week.

Brower, a special assistant U. S. district attorney, ruled that work sent to Paragon Togs, Bristol, properly belonged to employes of the Gotham Novelty Company which operates a cutting room in Manhattan, a manufacturing plant in Freeport, L. I., and a contracting shop in Garfield, N. J.

A statement issued at ACW headquarters here declared that the decision was unprecedented. The transfer of the work to the non-union Rhode Island plant which shut down the Freeport factory for two months affected 85 employes in the metropolitan district.

Brower found that the work "thus wrongfully performed in the non-union factory in Bristol, R. I., was produced at a total cost of $180,000. Labor costs amount to at least 25 per cent of the total cost.

"The earnings which would have been received upon such work by the union employes in Garfield and Freeport therefore, and of which earnings such workers were wrongfully deprived amounts to $45,000."

Construction Employers Show Interest in CIO

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3. — Favorable reaction to the CIO drive in the construction industry came this week from a wide variety of sources.

Contractors in Pennsylvania and New Jersey called in representatives of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee for information and showed keen interest in the CIO program.

A. D. Lewis, Chairman of the UCWOC, got an enthusiastic reception from more than 300 contractors at a meeting in Elizabeth, N. J. Consensus was that the industrial union form of labor organization is the answer to the industry's greatest problem—jurisdictional disputes among craft unions.

Typical of comment on the UCWOC program was an editorial that appeared in the Newark Star Ledger, a daily newspaper, which read:

CIO'S CHALLENGE

"A significant challenge to the craft unions of the American Federation of Labor is being made in New Jersey by the CIO in sponsoring an industrial union embracing all crafts in the construction industry.

"A. D. Lewis, brother of John L. Lewis, is directing the drive and is appealing directly to employers in the building trades, offering them the prospect of lower costs through increased labor productivity and aggressive cooperation in eliminating wastefulness in building operations.

"The Lewis threat to the building trades unions of the AFL is not an idle one. There is much dissatisfaction among employers and the public with cumbersome rules and jurisdictional fights that tend to increase the cost of housing. President Roosevelt has given voice to this prevalent dissatisfaction. Now, a brother of John L. Lewis comes along and appeals directly to the employers to be receptive to a CIO movement for the purpose of lowering production costs. The appeal is a strong one.

"What does the CIO offer to the workers?

"It holds out the promise of steadier work. AFL leaders may dispute this as a false promise; they may, on the other hand, act to meet criticism by lowering their wage scales, ending their jurisdictional disputes and revising their rules in the interest of greater productivity."

ASSISTANT HOSTESS to the United Mine Workers convention was the little niece of Pres. John Owens of the Ohio district of the UMW. She's pictured here with Miss Kathryn Lewis, executive assistant to her father, head of the mine workers union.

Mine Workers Ask Liberal U. S. Policies, Solution for Unemployment

Demand Planning For Jobs

Columbus, Feb. 3.—Scathing criticism of the failure of industry and government to attempt solution of the ravages of unemployment which are affecting an ever-larger mass of American workers was voiced by leaders of the United Mine Workers convention.

In sober speeches reviewing the national danger inherent in the idleness of millions, Pres. Lewis, Vice-Pres. Murray and District Pres. Van A. Bittner warned that labor will strive unceasingly to force public consideration of unemployment, its causes, its effects on the people and adequate remedies to meet the situation.

DISTRIBUTE COPIES

Following discussion of the problem, the convention voted to send copies of the resolution and the speeches to Pres. Roosevelt and all members of Congress, the Cabinet and governors of the 48 states.

The resolution called upon the President "to convene a conference under governmental auspices of the leaders of labor, business, agriculture and government, whose duty it shall be in the interest of our government and the protection of our democratic institutions, to work diligently in an attempt to effectuate a constructive national program designed to cure the evil of unemployment."

Following are excerpts from the speeches on the subject:

PRES. LEWIS

"There is no question or more profound concern to any man or woman in America or any little child in any home in America that the question of providing work for the American population. Unless this question is solved in America, America as we know it will not endure, our system of government and our institutions as we know them, as we have created them, as we support them, cannot endure the continued shock of a population being progressively dispossessed from participation in the internal economy of the nation."

"The internal market of the United States is being destroyed by destroying the consuming power of its working population."

"With Mr. Murray and your committee, I ask: 'What are they going to do about it?' Is it too much for this convention to ask that they at least talk about it? If they won't think about

Oregon CIO Council Meets Feb. 10

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 3. — CIO unions throughout the state have elected delegates to attend the second convention of the Oregon CIO Industrial Union Council which will open in Eugene February 10, for a two-day session, Ralph People, Council secretary announced today.

'Jobs For The People'

SOLUTION TO THE UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM, so far not accomplished by the present Administration, must be speedily attained, Pres. John L. Lewis told the United Mine Workers convention. Lewis criticized the Administration for failure to act on CIO proposals for a national conference on unemployment.

Smith 'Probe', NLRB Weakening to Tories Rapped by Miners

COLUMBUS, Feb. 3. — In resolutions and speeches the United Mine Workers convention levelled bitter criticism at the National Labor Relations Board for bowing to reactionary pressure against CIO industrial unionism.

At the same time the Smith Committee, appointed by the House of Representatives to "probe" the NLRB was accused of "mischievously, designedly and maliciously . . . undermining the Wagner Act, destroying the Act and destroying your liberties as American working men."

The resolution passed unanimously by the convention, charged the Labor Board with permitting craft unions to "raid established industrial unions," with "breaking down multi-plant employer units" with "preventing the effective elimination of company unions in many obvious cases;" with replacing personnel not biased against the UMW; and with following a "policy of appeasement toward the reactionary AFL bureaucracy and some of the most powerful and dangerous employers in the country."

MURRAY CITES PRACTICES

Vice-Pres. Philip Murray spoke at length on the resolution, recounting some anti-CIO practices of the Labor Board which he has encountered in both the steel and auto industries.

He recalled the fierce attack against the Wagner Act during the past 15 months, admitting that "these insidious influences" have been successful "beyond question" in their efforts.

"It is unfortunate that during this period of crisis in American labor history the NLRB itself should have succumbed to the influences of these evil agencies," he stated.

NLRB SPLIT UNION

Murray pointed to the Chicago Hardware Co. as a prime example of the Labor Board's anti-industrial union bias. There the Steel Workers Organizing Committee organized the workers, won certification, worked out a satisfactory agreement with the company, and

Name Bruce Vice-President Of Oil Union

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 3. —Appointment of R. L. Bruce as vice-president of the Oil Workers Intl. Union, CIO, was approved by the union's executive board here.

Bruce fills a position left vacant since the elevation of J. L. Coulter to the union's presidency.

An international representative for the union for the last few years, Bruce has worked in Texas and the West Coast.

Convention Endorses No Candidate

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 3—Refusing to endorse any Presidential candidate and leaving to the later discretion of the International Executive Board the question of support for a liberal program, the United Mine Workers of America adjourned its 50th Anniversary convention after two weeks packed with important news-making on national issues.

The political resolution, which was adopted by an overwhelming majority, declared that while the administration had made headway from 1933 to 1937, "the New Deal social and economic program of the present Democratic administration has not been consummated."

It declared that a "coalition clique" in Congress since 1937 "put not only a stop to New Deal legislation but weakened and destroyed many of the New Deal legislative acts." WPA slashes and attacks on the Wagner Act were cited, and it was declared that "this campaign is still under way.

"To avoid errors of this description in 1940," the resolution continued, "it is necessary if the welfare of labor and the people are to be considered and if the sincerity of the party is to be true and abiding, that we must have a united party in 1940, united on liberal candidates, on liberal principles and the consummation of New Deal legislative and administrative policies, and united with labor, working in cooperation with labor upon the basis of recognition and proper representation, in order that we can win the election this year."

The Intl. Executive Board was authorized to take "appropriate action" and to render "such reasonable financial support as circumstances may warrant at the proper time in support of the program that may be agreed upon and worked out in cooperation with Labor's Non-Partisan League."

The Board's action, it said, should be predicated on the liberal principles and policies enunciated in the resolution.

HIGHLIGHTS

Among other highlights of the second week's sessions were:

1. The resolution and discussion on unemployment, which brought a detailed indictment by John L. Lewis and other leaders of the administration's failure to cope with the problem.

2. The speech of President Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, in which he pledged his union's support and cooperation to the UMWA and the CIO.

3. Discussion and action on government contracts given to corporations which violate the Wagner Act, marked by speeches of Lewis and Philip Murray denouncing Congressional and administration failure to act in the matter.

4. Speeches of General Hugh S. Johnson and Miss Josephine Roche.

5. Presentation of a plaque by President Sherman H. Dalrymple and the whole executive board of the United Rubber Workers, following earlier presentation of a scroll by President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers.

6. Denunciation of the Smith Committee investigating the Labor Board, in connection with resolution and speeches criticizing unfair administration of the act.

7. The biggest labor banquet ever held, when some 2,500 delegates and guests sat down together to celebrate the union's golden jubilee.

The resolution unanimously adopted on unemployment called upon the President to summon leaders of labor, business, agriculture and government to work out a constructive national program.

Philip Murray, Van A. Bittner and John L. Lewis all called attention to the magnitude and increasing seriousness of the problem. They denounced the failure of Congress and the administration to offer a solution. The budget proposals to slash WPA, the CCC and the Youth Administration were particularly criticized by Murray.

Lewis related that Murray and he, together with some big bankers and industrialists, had gone to the White House two years ago to urge that the President call such a conference as was demanded in the resolution.

"Amid a fanfare of publicity and great headlines in the newspapers throughout the country," he said, "and while the politicians held their breath, we conferred with the President and the President said, 'Very interesting—send

Seamen Back Lewis Stand

New York, Feb. 3. — The National Maritime Union, through a general membership meeting here, was on record today in support of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' stand on the national political situation.

A resolution commenting on Lewis' speech to the United Mine Workers convention, declared:

"We greet and endorse the stand taken by Mr. Lewis that labor's future depends upon their determined effort to rally the American people behind an administration and a program which will meet and provide for their needs."

The Administration was charged in the resolution with having failed to solve labor's grievances and with having permitted the "smearing anti-union campaign of Martin Dies and other shipowner-controlled Congressmen and Senators" to be continued. It also cited decreased WPA appropriations and a lack of determined resistence to scuttling amendments to the Wagner Act.

Vol. III February 5, 1940 No. 6

Number 1 Problem

The United Mine Workers of America, in its convention, did not let the country forget that it, along with the rest of the CIO, considers unemployment America's No. 1 problem.

In speeches, reports, statements and resolutions it made the solution of unemployment one of the major political issues of this election year.

It declared that the necessary steps which have been taken, through WPA, PWA and CCC, to alleviate unemployment, are not enough—as the unemployment of nine to ten million Americans in a period of peak production clearly demonstrates.

It renewed and re-emphasized the CIO demand that the President call a conference of leaders of labor, business, agriculture and government to work out a constructive national program to cure the evil of unemployment.

Outstanding among the convention speeches were those of Philip Murray, Van A. Bittner and John L. Lewis on this subject of unemployment, which lies fully as close to the heart of the miners as of any other section of American labor.

Murray made a more comprehensive analysis of the whole problem than has yet been made by any statesman. Citing numerous incidents from personal experience, giving facts and figures, he drew an unforgettable picture of human tragedy and national emergency. He assailed the budget slashes for WPA, CCC and the Youth Administration.

Bittner joined with Murray in emphasizing the extent of the problem. He declared that failure to settle the unemployment question and other major economic problems carried with it the greatest danger of dragging the United States into war and the greatest danger to its institutions.

Finally, Lewis told how time and again the CIO and its representatives, accompanied on one occasion by big bankers and industrialists, had demanded of the administration and of Congress that constructive action be taken to meet the problem —only to be met with evasion, befuddlement and inaction.

"This convention, when it adopts this resolution," Lewis said, "will again be serving public notice on this country that the workers of America are demanding action on this question. They are demanding the right for their families to live as Americans should."

Let everyone who runs for office in this election year take note that labor support will only be forthcoming for those who pledge themselves to a real program to meet America's No. 1 problem of unemployment.

Public Scandal No. 1

The man who encourages, subsidizes and protects a lawbreaker is morally as guilty as the lawbreaker himself.

Yet behind the worst lawbreaking corporations of the United States stands the federal government itself, encouraging and subsidizing them with fat government contracts.

The United Mine Workers convention, as did the CIO convention before it, again called attention to this public scandal.

It heard from Philip Murray how Republic Steel, although found guilty of the most outrageous violations of the National Labor Relations Act, continues to enjoy government business; how Bethlehem Steel, "the most unfair corporation in America," although it daily violates the law with its company union and other unfair labor practices, enjoys approximately 32 per cent of the national government steel business; and how many other lawbreaking corporations are encouraged to continue their lawbreaking by the very government that is supposed to enforce the law.

John L. Lewis told the convention that legislation to end this scandal had three times been passed by the Senate, only to be strangled three times in the House by the Rules Committee and the majority Democratic leadership.

He pointed out further that, even without legislation, the President has the power to issue an executive order forbidding any department to give government contracts to lawbreaking corporations—but this has not been done, despite repeated requests.

Put this down as another election issue—that labor demands government good faith in enforcing the law protecting collective bargaining as much as in the enforcement of any other law.

"Why Don't You Eat Cake"

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Political Stooging and Political Leadership

IN one respect William Green approaches perfection. He is the almost perfect stooge—even serving the CIO in this capacity, so devoted is he to the profession.

Lest this should seem to imply any CIO responsibility for Green's actions, it should be explained at once that his services to it are strictly voluntary—or involuntary, if you prefer—and that the word stooge is here used in its original and theatrical sense.

The stooge of the theatre is the guy who always provides the chief performer with the openings he wants. He asks just the right questions to bring the answering wise-cracks. His whole existence is devoted to proving or illustratting the points the other fellow wants to make.

Perhaps by way of compensation to the cause he deserted, Green has never been known to fail the CIO in this respect. Whenever a CIO speaker wants an example of how moth-eaten, foolish or reactionary the AFL leadership has become, Green pops off at exactly the right moment to illustrate the point.

One of Green's latest and greatest services as a stooge for the CIO was the way he tripped onto the political stage as a rather overweight and flustered Marie Antoinette, just at the time when John L. Lewis was making a vigorous presentation of labor's political demands.

Bread and Cake

Marie Antoinette, it will be remembered, was the Queen of France who, when the hungry people were demanding bread, wanted to know why they didn't eat cake if they had no bread.

Lewis startled the politicians when he denounced Congress and the administration for their failure to give jobs and bread to some ten million unemployed; and when he declared that no politicians or party could count on labor support unless they presented a real program on behalf of the jobless and low-income groups.

Green chose just that moment to soothe the ruffled feelings of the politicians with a toady act and a somewhat damaged birthday cake—to show that tame labor leaders are satisfied with a few cake crumbs even when the people lack bread.

Two Types

The cake incident illustrated the levity with which national problems are treated, as Lewis pointed out. But more than that, it furnished an apt contrast between two types of labor political leadership.

What has passed for political leadership in the AFL has long been a pretty sorry affair. Personal favors, such as getting a convicted union racketeer out of jail or handing out some jobs to an AFL leader's relations, have passed for political currency.

Alleged labor support could be cheaply bought with these and other similar small favors while the major needs of the country's workers' would be neglected. Fawning or toadying on the powers-that-be became an accepted tactic, and the "labor vote" was usually considered to be "in the bag" for one or other politician or party, so that little concern was shown about it.

No Tail to Anyone's Kite

The growth of the CIO has brought with it a new type of labor political consciousness, greater independence and the kind of leadership which John L. Lewis exemplifies.

The new labor movement is not content to be the tail to any politician's kite. It does not consider itself the poor relation of any political party.

It considers that politicians are the servants of the people, who elect them to office; that they can be held strictly to account on what they do for that great section of the people represented by labor; and that there is no necessity to fawn or toady for small favors.

A Declaration of Independence

Lewis' recent political statements were something like a declaration of independence on the part of the new labor movement.

He declared that labor did not consider it had received a square deal from the administration its votes had elected, so long as there were between nine and ten million unemployed, with no program to put them to work; so long as two-thirds of the workers receive less than $1,000 a year and one-third less than $500; so long as the burden of taxation falls most heavily on labor and consumer groups; and so long as more is not done to remedy existing bad conditions.

Labor's support, Lewis said, cannot be taken for granted for any politicians or political party that do not present a real program to meet labor's needs and the needs of the country.

So if the Democratic party hopes to win in the next elections, it must make an accord with organized labor, he added; must adopt an intelligent and rational program; and must give guarantees of good faith and fulfillment of party promises.

It is a sad commentary on the low esteem to which the Green type of leadership reduced labor politically, that such a statement as Lewis' of the minimum basis on which a self-respecting labor movement can accord its political support, should startle the politicians as much as it did.

Lewis Explains Demands On Politicians

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 3.—Renewing his demand that political leaders advance a real program to cope with unemployment and other basic problems, if they expect to receive labor's support, John L. Lewis elaborated on his earlier political statement at a press conference here.

"The important question," he said, "is not who will be the presidential candidate but what the Democratic party proposes to do for the country.

"Neither the editorial comments nor the public comments of important figures in the Democratic party have in any way denied or explained my statement that after seven years of power the Democratic party finds itself without a solution for the major problems of unemployment, low national income, mounting internal debt and increased direct and consumer taxation.

"No gentleman in the Democratic party has denied the accuracy of the statement. That goes for Secretary Ickes, Miss Perkins, the Mississippi legislature, and the expert opinion that the Washington columnists are always quoting. The question still remains unanswered: 'What are they going to do about it?'

"Out of the great welter of fanfare and excitement, not a single gentleman has arisen to say what he will do about these major problems. Yes, I mean that for the Republicans too."

REPUBLICANS HOSTILE

Lewis declared that "the Republican party makes no claim of serving labor. It does not pretend to serve anyone but the financial interests who control it. In a major sense it is frankly hostile to labor." He said that he centered his attention on the Democratic party because it "pretends to be a friend of labor and to invite its sympathy and support."

"The fatal defect in the strategy and beliefs of the Democratic leaders is the idea that labor has no other place to go and that its support can be taken for granted," he said.

"They think that labor will whine and beat its breast and then take any program or candidate that the Democratic party offers. That fallacy has now been exploded."

'SINCE 1936?'

Lewis stated that what the Democratic party had done for labor was substantially in the first four years of the Roosevelt administration. "What has Roosevelt done for labor since 1936?" he asked.

Lewis referred contemptuously to the action of William Green in "hauling a cake over to the President on a truck while many of our people are crying for bread.

"If the President can eat the cake Mr. Green provides him, I suppose the rest of the country can't be blamed for asking for bread.

"I differ from Mr. Green in this. Rather than spend my time toadying to the President by giving him cake, I am going to spend my time trying to get bread for the people."

When one of the reporters called to his attention that the cake had arrived in a damaged condition, Lewis said: "Any parcel that Green would undertake to deliver would inevitably be damaged before reaching its destination. I say this advisedly, as I have known Mr. Green for a long time."

HITS TORY PRESS

Lewis hit back at press misinterpretations and attacks on his stand. "Of course," he said, "there have been the usual mine run of vicious anti-labor, anti-Lewis statements in the Chicago Tribune, New York Herald Tribune and the Scripps-Howard press — all of which ignore the facts in the statement made by me and resort to vilification. My statement runs to the basic question of the right to live on the part of all Americans — upon which the stability of our government and the protection of our democratic institutions rests."

He warned the Democratic party leadership repeatedly that it cannot expect to return to power without the support of labor, and that to get this support it must give definite guarantees to labor of a constructive program.

STILL ON WARPATH

Washington (FP) — Hardshells in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce are still trying to get the wage-hour law repealed, a report published by the Chamber's committee on manufacturers indicates.

CIO Auto Workers' Leader Hits Attack On Wagner Act

Washington, Feb. 3—AFL-proposed amendments to the Wagner Act would, if passed, destroy collective bargaining in the automobile Workers, R. J. Thomas, UAW president, testified today in hearings before the House Labor Committee now considering changes in the Act.

The act needs strengthening, Thomas declared, that can only be accomplished through passage of the three amendments proposed by the CIO.

"There is no doubt that the Wagner Act has contributed to the well being of American labor," Thomas said, "both materially and in the establishment in industry of the fundamental liberties guaranteed all Americans in the Constitution.

"However, there is no doubt that, in view of experience, the Act can stand strengthening. The auto workers of the nation favor amendments as proposed by the CIO to impose criminal penalties on violators, to preserve industrial unions in bargaining with employers, and to prevent the government from rewarding violators with fat contracts, Thomas explained.

EMPLOYER UNITS

A considerable portion of Thomas' testimony was devoted to analysis of the case for employer-wide and industry-wide collective bargaining units, as already attained by a number of CIO unions and as favored by intelligent employers. Employer and industry-wide units, he said, would contribute not only to the welfare of the workers but to the peace and stability of labor-employer relations and to the welfare of the general public. He urged that the Labor Board be prohibited from carving up industrial unions into craft units as it has been doing for the past several months.

SLAP ON WRIST

Present provisions in the Act hand out no more than a gentle "slap on the wrist" to violators of the act, Thomas said, in urging criminal sanctions to beforce obedience to the laws of the U. S. At the same time, auto workers and workers in other industries are constantly under fire for alleged "unlawful" acts.

"May I submit that it is poor policy to lecture the auto and other workers on law-observance and responsibility, when large corporations which flout the law are handed rich government contracts," he said.

"Then suddenly," he continued, "a small craft union purporting to represent some 40 out of some 3,000 employes at that particular plant filed a complaint and asked for the right to enjoy craft union collective bargaining."

The company preferred an industrial union set-up, desiring to bargain with only one union, "but the National Labor Relations Board, listening to the whines and the mournings of these agencies," permitted a craft unit election, which was followed by a separate contract for 40 out of the 3,000 workers.

MIGHT AFFECT MINERS

"The point I want to make is this," Murray concluded — "If the NLRB exercises the power to set aside an exclusive bargaining contract in the hardware industry and give a small group of craft unionists an individual collective bargaining agreement, they can do it in the mining industry for exactly the same reasons."

The Board's refusal to name the Chrysler Corp. as one employer unit and to certify the CIO auto union as sole bargaining agent also received Murray's criticism. Pointing out that the UAW-CIO received 90% of the workers' votes, he charged the auto workers felt they were entitled to get one contract covering the entire Chrysler system.

Van Bittner, West Virginia district president and midwest director for the steel union, made clear to the delegates that the resolution attacked the Labor Board and not the Wagner Act.

He described NLRB action in the Kelly Creek Colliers Co. case at Ward, W. Va., where the Board "gave a man who had violated every section of the wage agreement the right to set himself alone as a separate bargaining union at that mine."

Bittner also criticized the Smith committee, and its chief counsel, Edmund Toland, who has represented anti-labor corporations and a labor spy agency.

AFL Splitters Crew Busy Once More

Miami, Fla., Feb. 3—The AFL's executive council resumed its standard splitting activities here today, ordering suspension of local units of the Intl. Typographical Union from all AFL city central bodies and state federations of labor.

Basis of the latest action against the ITU was the 84-year-old union's refusal to pay a 1c-a-month per member assessment to provide the AFL big-wigs with additional funds to fight the CIO. The typographical union has refused to follow the council, citing unwillingness to hurt other labor unions and challenging the right of the AFL to levy such a tax on its affiliated unions.

Pres. Green of the AFL hinted that expulsion would be the next step taken by the council if the ITU continues its refusal to line up with the union splitters.

Three Lumber Companies CitedbyNLRB

Washington, Jan. 29 — Three lumber companies in the Pacific Northwest have been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to throw out a company dominated union held to be a revamp of the old Loyal Legion of Loggers & Lumbermen formed 23 years ago as a union-breaking outfit.

Charges against the companies were filed by a group of unions affiliated with the Intl. Woodworkers of America, CIO.

Miners Demand Liberal Policies

me a memorandum'. And we sent him a memorandum and that is all on that subject up to the present day".

Lewis related further how he had but recently sent four ranking officers of the CIO to talk to the Secretary of Labor on unemployment. "They had a conference of two hours and a half or two hours and three-quarters with her," he said, "and she told them in substance that she didn't think there was any particular problem about this unemployment, she thought they were exaggerating it, she thought they were over-drawing the picture, and she said, 'Just give the Democratic party a little time and everything will be all right.'

'WOOZY' IN THE HEAD

"And after two and one-half or three hours of that they went away talking to themselves, woozy in the head, just like the good woman who is Secretary of Labor. She is a nice lady. I like her a lot. I think she would make an excellent housekeeper, but I do not think she knows as much about economics or the problems affecting this country as a Hottentot does about the moral law."

HILLMAN SPEAKS

Sidney Hillman also emphasized the unemployment problem in his speech. Cordially greeted by the convention and introduced by and the hwole executive board of American", Hillman declared:

"There never were major disagreements between the officers of the United Mine Workers of America and the officers of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America in the past, and I am quite confident that there will be no major differences in the future, because our interests, our objectives are the same."

JOHNSON COLORFUL

General Johnson brought odwn the house repeatedly with a lively, colorful speech in which he praised the UMWA and President Lewis for their statesmanship, ridiculed the craft leaders of the AFL for their opposition to industrial unionism, and applauded Lewis' political strategy.

"Labor organizations must take part in politics to the extent of demanding the attention of politicians to their problems," he said. "But no labor can prudently afford to tie his people to the chariot wheel of any political party or leader.

"Organized labor must oppose or support issues rather than persons or parties. The moment it gets sewed up in the bag of any party or politician, it is taken for granted. It loses its bargaining power. It is a stupid sucker.

"In this preconvention period of a presidential year, it is the proper strategical position for any great labor leader to keep both parties guessing—and, boy, how John Lewis has done that since this convention."

JOSEPHINE ROCHE

Miss Roche, chairman of the federal inter-departmental committee on health, spoke on the need for a federal health insurance program, "covering all persons, providing for free medical care for low income groups, cash benefits for temporary disability to workers and the construction of needed hospitals in rural and urban areas throughout the country."

She said that thirteen million boys and girls in the United States are in families either on relief or with incomes of $800 a year or less. "More than one-half of that number have no medical service whatever," she said.

ASK PENALTIES

The convention adopted a resolution calling for the passage of H. R. 3331, establishing guarantees of collective bargaining in government contracts; and calling upon the President to issue immediately an executive order to the same effect. Murray and Lewis denounced the granting of government contracts to corporations like Republic Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Electric Boat Company and Douglas Aircraft Corporation, which are "flagrant violators of the National Labor Relations Act."

Lewis reported that legislation to prevent government business from going to law-breaking corporations had three times passed the Senate, only to be strangled three times in the House Rules Committee, due to the attitude of the majority leadership of the Democratic party.

He said that "a simple executive order" by the President could have the same effect as this legislation and that "every fact presented to this convention has been presented to the President of the United States, but it is just another one of those things that he has not found time to do. He has not found time to sign an executive order that any one of the hundreds of lawyers in the Department of Justice could prepare for him in an hour's time."

RUBBER UNION'S GIFT

President Dalrymple and the whole executive board of the United Rubber Workers appeared on the platform to present a bronze plaque to the United Mine Workers as "a token of our eternal gratitude and esteem for outstanding and devoted assistance rendered our organization."

"The faith, loyalty and sacrifice of the United Mine Workers of America," said the inscription on the plaque, "made possible the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the great institution which has given a new life, a new hope and new inspiration to the working people of our country."

The convention repeatedly expressed its opposition to any involvement of the United States in foreign wars, adopting a resolution on the subject similar to that adopted at the national CIO convention.

In line with this anti-war sentiment, the delegates also adopted a resolution opposing government loans to Finland, although expressing sympathy with that country "and other victims of aggression."

"Congress must not permit any policy to be adopted which may in any way lead towards involving the United States in war," the resolution stated. "The only war in which we should participate is the war to wipe out the causes that lead to unemployment."

It was therefore resolved that "we urge our government to withhold the lending of any money, or the participation directly or indirectly in the wars now going on in Europe and Asia."

Win Poll, 4-1

Gary, Ind., Feb. 3. — The Steel Workers Organizing Committee won a 4-1 victory here in an election sponsored by the National Labor Relations Board.

Workers at the Standard Steel Spring Co., cast 125 ballots for the SWOC and only 28 for the AFL, subdistrict director Frank Grider of the CIO steel union announced.

Hillman Lauds Miners Achievement

Columbus, Feb. 3. — Praise for the accomplishments of the United Mine Workers and confidence that the clothing workers will always work together with the miners was expressed to UMW convention delegates by Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Hillman, a CIO vice-president, was introduced by Pres. John L. Lewis as "a leader of labor, respected and honored . . . a statesman and a great American."

The clothing workers leader described the discouraging early years of his organization, fought by the leadership of the AFL as the Amalgamated sought to lead the industry's workers out of their sweatshop status.

"We wondered whether it was possible to establish a powerful labor organization," he recalled, "and in our times of despair we said: 'If the United Mine Workers of America can do it, we can do it as well.'

"We knew," Hillman continued, "that whenever there was a struggle in mines that more than the future of the UMW was at stake—the future of labor was being decided."

Pointing out that there have never been major disagreements between the UMW and the clothing workers union, Hillman predicted that "there will be no major differences in the future, because our interests, our objectives are the same. Our objective is to give security to the men and women who are unemployed or out of work in the mills, in the mines and in the work shops of the country."

Statistics!

COLUMBUS, Feb. 3.—When 2,500 delegates and guests of the United Mine Workers Golden Jubilee Convention sat down to a banquet at the Neil House, they consumed a powerful amount of food.

2,500 shrimp cocktails
150 gallons of soup
75 pounds of mushrooms
8 crates of lettuce
700 pounds of lettuce
1 ton of filet mignon

Some 22,640 pieces of chinaware and 10,000 pieces of silverware were needed.

it, for God's sake, won't they talk about it?"

"For years we have repeatedly called the attention of our statesmen and of the government to these matters and asked them to at least create a forum here in this country where the ideas of Americans might be thrown into the hopper, in order that out of it all there might be crystallized a common sense policy that would put America back to work.

"That has not been done. Why? Let some one tell me why."

MISS PERKIN'S REPLY

"About two weeks ago I sent four of the ranking officers of the CIO . . . down to see that good woman who is secretary of labor, and they had a conference of 2½ hours with her, and she told them in substance that she didn't think there was any particular problem about this unemployment, she thought they were exaggerating it, she thought they were over-drawing the picture, and she said: 'Just give the Democratic party a little time and everything will be all right.' . . . That does not put America back to work. That does not solve the problem of the national debt."

SERVES WARNING

"I am serving warning upon the political parties in this country that they had better give consideration to the demands of the people — and the people include all the working people of this country, all the professional people of this country, all the business interests of this country, as well as the bankers and the industrialists, and politicians. Something had better be done."

"I am not going to take these things lying down as long as you stand up with me."

VICE-PRES. MURRAY

"Our federal administration in the city of Washington has evidenced no desire to cure this evil."

"I have personally asked the President on two different occasions to convene such a conference (on unemployment). He has been hesitant about doing it, fearful that if he called a meeting of that description disagreement might ensue, that the leaders of business might not be willing to cooperate.

"Who are the leaders of business in America? . . . Are they any better than any other citizen in this country? Are they entitled to special consideration?

"And simply because they refuse to cooperate, should it then be the function of government to say: 'Oh, well, I won't call a conference because I am afraid business will not cooperate'."

WORK NOT BULLETS

"I would rather see the government of the United States expend ten billions of dollars, if need be, in putting these idle men back to work . . . than I would to see them spend $1.00 for an American-made bullet to be used to kill someone."

* * *

"Business people, the leaders of the Natl. Manufacturers Assn., the leaders of the national Chamber of Commerce — have they come forward with any constructive solution to this problem? Oh, no —they introduce the machine into industry."

"I am sick and tired of the nauseating statements by the leaders in the fields of business and politics of this country. Each and every one of them or at least most of them, are dodging the issue, they are running away from it . . ."

DISTRICT PRES. BITTNER

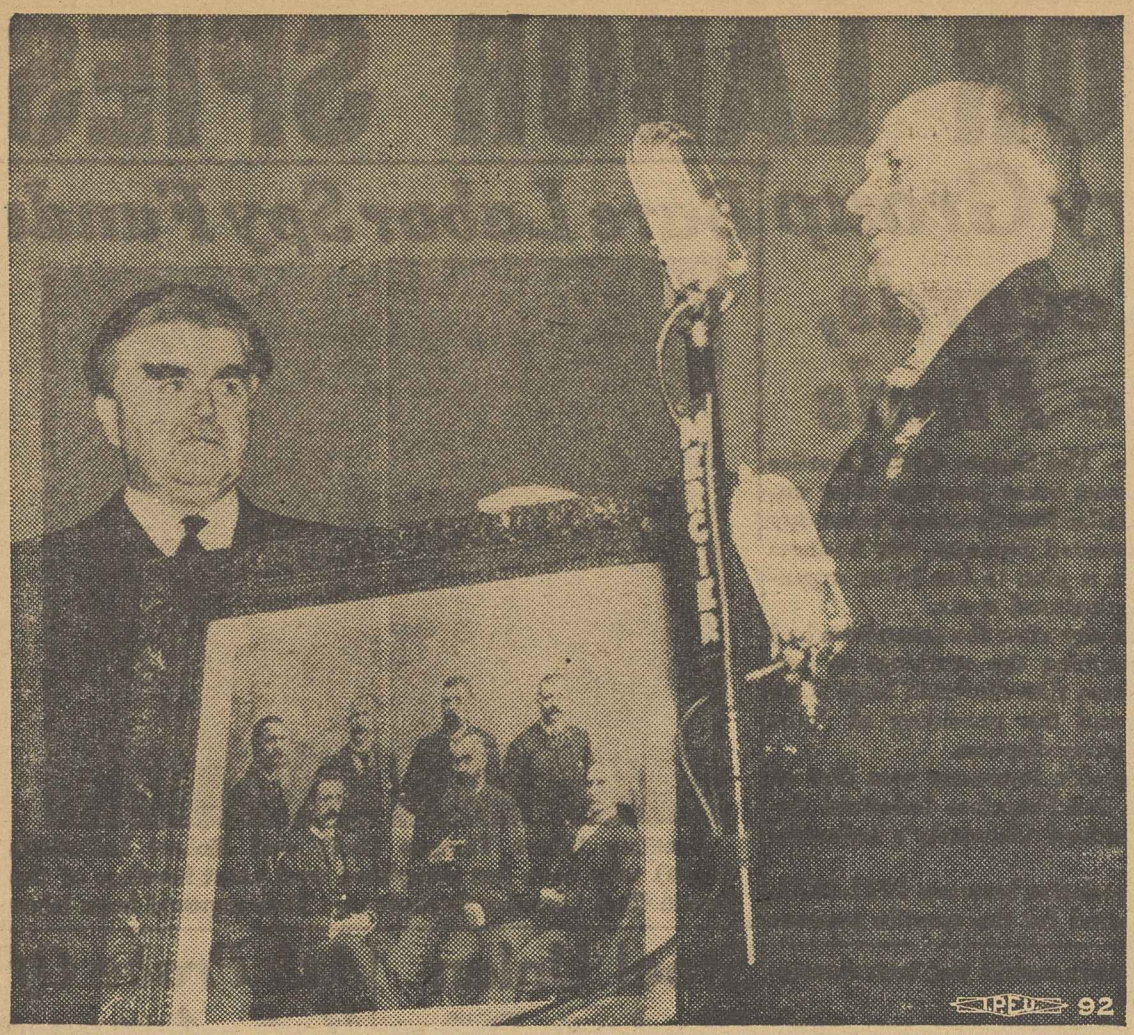
"I am sure that every delegate to this convention recognizes the fact that unemployment is the one question that must be solved in this great country . . . in solving it, we are not only saving the members of our own union and those who labor in this country, but we are saving the nation itself."

* * *

"No Republican need think that he will get any consolation out of this discussion, because in Pennsylvania and Ohio the governments of those states have done no more than anybody else to solve this problem. It is a problem for all the American people, regardless of political affiliation."

Prosperity for Few Not American Way, Carey Tells Nation

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Prosperity is indivisible — "it dies when it is cut into parts"—James Carey, CIO secretary, told a coast to coast radio audience in his speech this week on "The CIO Way to Business Prosperity." Prosperity cannot exist, he said, when it is limited to the few who make inflated profits and denied to the many whose needs for food, clothing and shelter, if satisfied, keep our economic machine going.



Carey spoke as the third of a list of CIO national officials who have broadcast in recent weeks, having been preceded by Philip Murray on unemployment and Lee Pressman, CIO counsel, on the CIO legislative program. Earlier in the week CIO President John L. Lewis broadcast to the nation from the convention floor of the United Mine Workers in Columbus, Ohio.

A BUYING SPELL

"I come in contact with many employers," Carey said, "and I am tell you that by and large most of them are fully agreed that if the people of a nation are well off, then business cannot help being prosperous too.

"A few employers have failed to see this vital point. And whenever one such says to me; 'Don't you think business needs a breathing spell?' I say to him: 'No, I think that what business needs is not so much a breathing spell as it is a buying spell."

No. 1 way to bring about a buying spell, Carey said, was to break the back of the nation's worst problem, unemployment.

Labor and The Law:

A New Attack On Workers' Rights

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

In spite of recent disclosures of the LaFollette Committee revealing a widespread conspiracy by large corporations in California to deprive workers of their right to organize into unions of their own choosing, the drive to destroy the labor movement in California continues unabated.

A new organization, called "Labor Peace for California, Inc.," has brought forth a proposed constitutional amendment on labor relations which is to be submitted as an iniative measure to the voters in November, 1940.

FOLLOWS TORY PATTERN

This measure would create a California Mediation Board. It would forbid employes to engage in certain enumerated unfair labor practices. Similar prohibitions are incorporated in the infamous amendments to the National Labor Relations Act proposed by Senator Burke and which have been denounced by all labor organizations, liberals and progressives who have studied this problem.

The Mediation Board is given no authority to compel employers to refrain from indulging in unfair labor practices. Injunctions against unfair labor practices could be issued only by courts on proceedings instituted by a District Attorney. The long delays inherent in this kind of judicial procedure in effect would mean the complete nullification of any protection for labor against anti-union employers.

The proposed initiative also forbids employers to grant the closed shop or check-off. This would make illegal provisions of many contracts now in full force in California.

COMPULSORY ARBITRATION PROVIDED

A compulsory waiting period of 60 days is established during which workers in a dispute with their employer could not go on strike or take any other concerted action. The California Mediation Board would have the authority to intervene in such a situation during that period for the purpose of mediation. In the event the dispute is not settled by agreement, the Board is directed to make an award which can be enforced in the courts against both parties. The proposal therefore would establish compulsory mediation and compulsory arbitration.

Industrial peace cannot be achieved through the imposition of legislation of the character which has just been described. If employers in California would recognize the right of labor to organize into unions of its own choosing and engage in genuine collective bargaining industrial peace could be established.

Instead, the few leading anti-labor employers who have combined into the Associated Farmers, Inc., continue to drive ahead in their attempt to smash all unions and deprive the workers of their fundamental civil rights. The newly proposed constitutional amendment is merely another effort in this direction.

There is no question, however, but that organized labor with the support of all progressives in California will hand the same overwhelming defeat to this measure as was given to the anti-picketing legislation attempted through the initiative at the last election in California.

Your WPA Job:

The Great Woodrum Disaster of 1939

By RALPH HETZEL
CIO Unemployment Drector

If the Ohio and the Mississippi Rivers were once again rushing over their banks and leaving over a quarter of a million families homeless, the whole nation would be aroused.

The papers would be filled with distress stories. Every government agency, every welfare organization would be utilized to the fullest extent. No effort would be too great if it would ease the sufferings caused by nature.

But last summer a smiliar disaster hit the nation — and not one finger was lifted to help the victims!

The disaster was caused by the firing of 775,000 workers from WPA — mostly heads of families —in accordance with the 18-months provision of the 1939 Relief Act.

Three months later the improvement in general economic conditions was being joyfully hailed on every side. Were these 775,000 workers better off?

MAJORITY WORSE OFF

By the end of November over 200,000 of the 775,000 were back where they had started from—on WPA. They were the lucky ones. The great majority were much worse off than before. Less than a 100,000 were working in private industry, more than half of them at wages far lower than on WPA. Almost 250,000 were on direct relief. About 250,000 — almost exactly the same number of families as had been rendered destitute by the floods of 1937—were without any regular means of support.

Of these, 100,000 families had had no income whatsoever during the two weeks preceding the interview.

Why have we heard so little about this unbelievable national tragedy?

'HUSH-HUSH' CAMPAIGN

Because — unlike the floods or droughts — it cannot be blamed on "the will of God" but is directly traceable to the will of a few men. It was deliberately brought into being.

When the Woodrum Bill, with its vicious provisions and its disastrous cuts, was being debated last summer, the CIO pointed out just what the result of such a course would be. Protests against the bill poured in from the whole country. But Woodrum and his cohorts couldn't be stopped.

Although "economy" and political pressure were the only reasons which were publicly advanced, what they were after was a drastic and nation-wide lowering of the American standard of living. This they accomplished directly by abolishing the prevailing wage principle on the WPA and indirectly by the 18-months layoff provision.

They wanted to make the lives of the unemployed so insecure that they would take any kind of a job at any kind of a wage—and they did.

Of the less than 100,000 of these workers who had been lucky enough to find jobs by the end of November, at least half were earning less than their former WPA project wages—in many instances a great deal less. More than one-fifth were earning less than $10 per week.

When we look at the incomes of all the families who were not back on WPA we find that the averages are much lower: the average for all of them is about $8 a week and there are 10 CITIES IN WHICH THE AVERAGE WAS LESS THAN $5.

This is exactly what the enemies of the WPA wanted. With workers willing to accept even starvation wages, the union wage level — painfully built up through years of struggle — were in danger.

Crucible Steel Signs With CIO

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

Pittsburgh, Feb. 3. — The Steel Workers Organizing Committee has signed a contract with Crucible Steel Company of America covering 12,000 employes in nine eastern plants of that firm.

The agreement went into effect January 26 and will continue until January 26, 1941. Crucible signed a union agreement with the CIO steel union in 1937 but the current contract is the first negotiated since that time.

In 1938 the original agreement was allowed to expire and no new contract was signed.

The pact climaxes a long series of conferences between union and company officials which began in October, last year, in New York. In December Crucible employes were balloted by the SWOC to gain authorization for calling a strike. The new agreement voids the strike action.

FIVE PLANTS

Clinton S. Golden, northeastern regional director of the SWOC, signed the agreement for the union. R. E. Desvernine, Crucible president, signed for the company.

Affected by the agreement are SWOC members in Crucible plants at Syracuse, N. Y.; Pittsburgh and McKees Rocks, Pa., and Jersey City and Harrison, N. J.

PLAN CONVENTION

National SWOC officers are now mapping plans for a national convention of the steel union to be held this spring. Announcement that the convention would definitely be held was made by SWOC Chairman Philip Murray.

"The job of organizing steel has just begun," Murray said in announcing convention plans.

West Coast Peace Plan Offered by Union

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3.—All that is needed to bring permanent peace to the waterfront, Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, said here this week, is a pledge by the waterfront employers that they will stop attacking the fundamental gains the unions have won.

A peace proposal based on such a declaration from the employers was presented to the maritime union here by the ILWU.

"The plan is simply based upon a declaration and pledge to be given by the waterfront employers and their associates in the city of San Francisco," Bridges declared, "that the waterfront unions will not be constantly attacked in attempts to take away fundamental conditions they now enjoy and that have been established over the past few years.

"If these pledges and guarantees can be procured from the employers, there is no doubt," the ILWU President said, "that a satisfactory contract providing for permanent waterfront peace, with negotiation and arbitration of most issues, can be worked out."

ANSWER TO MAYOR

Bridges' peace proposal followed a vicious personal attack made upon him by Mayor Angelo J. Rossi. In answering blast fired at him by the Mayor, Bridges said:

"One of the difficulties that San Francisco labor is beset with is having Mr. Rossi as mayor of the city. Supposed to be mayor of all the people, in reality he is the mouthpiece through which big business speaks."

4-POINT PROGRAM

A statement issued by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, an organization of West Coast unions to which the ILWU is affiliated, declared that stability and peace on the waterfront would be achieved when the employers:

1. Fire the stoolpigeons in the waterfront unions.
2. Stop using provocateurs to stir up trouble.
3. Sincerely attempt to settle existing grievances between the unions and employers.
4. Sign contracts designed not to promote turmoil in the naive belief of bringing back the 'good old days' but contracts designed to promote peaceful industrial relations.

MILLIONS FOR LABOR SPIES

Plan Big Campaign In Frisco

San Francisco, Feb. 3—Leaders of this city's CIO today worked on plans for a giant organizing campaign to fulfill San Francisco's quota under the CIO's "10,000,000 members in five years" plan.

The San Francisco Industrial Union Council met with officials, executive boards and organizing committees of its affiliated unions and discussed methods of speeding the union campaign.

Among those who reported to the council were Harry Bridges, CIO California director; Louis Goldblatt, secretary of the California Industrial Union Council; John Riffe, district director for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and J. Fred Rausch, local director of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

Bridges Seeks Citzenship

San Francisco, Feb. 3.—Freed of deportations proceedings, Pres. Harry Bridges of the CIO Int'l. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union took new steps to gain American citizenship.

The Australian-born maritime leader filed application under the Cable Act, which permits the granting of citizenship to husbands of American citizens 90 days after application. Mrs. Bridges is an American citizen.

Win 2-Month Strike in Illinois

East St. Louis, Ill., Feb. 3.—A two-month strike today had convinced the Lewin Metals Co. of granting wage increases running up to 5c hourly to their employes, members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union.

In addition to the pay improvements, the contract provides for the closed shop and checkoff, seniority, and time and a half for overtime work.

UAW CERTIFIED

Frisco Tory Group Burned Records, LaFollette Finds

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3. — The Senate Civil Liberties Committee today had ended its west coast hearings after uncovering details of a five-million dollar San Francisco labor spy network and cooperation by Associated Farmers, big business front outfit, with county sheriffs in a plan to bar labor organizers from many of California's agricultural areas.

The hearings moved back to this city after the committee had spent more than a fortnight examining the workings of Los Angeles' open shop system—a system that disclosed huge slush funds for undercover operators and the providing of "free lunches" to city cops on duty in labor disputes.

Most sensational of the final week's testimony was that of Paul Eliel, former employe of the San Francisco Industrial Association and now director of Stanford University's industrial relations school.

Of $5,000,000 spent by the Association between 1921-1937, at least half went to labor spies hired for the specific purpose of smashing unions.

The Industrial Association, which was dissolved and reformed as the Employers Council, at all times had a minimum of four or five undercover operators on its payroll, Eliel testified.

Between 1933 and 1939, "special expenses" of the Association came to $582,966, the Senate Committee, headed by Senators Robert LaFollette and Elbert Thomas, discovered. At least $350,000 of that amount was directly spent for anti-union work.

'HIRED TO SELL OUT'

Eliel admitted that the businessmen's agents were hired to "sell out their union brothers." When he denied that armed guards were hired to protect Industrial Association strikebreakers Sen. Thomas read into the record documents in which Association officials admitted to just such practices.

The witness testified, however, that his detectives were "worthless", costing far more than they produced.

"Would you say that a corporation that spends half a million dollars to get undercover reports is just a sucker?" the Senator asked.

"Yes," Eliel replied.

LEADER GETS LECTURE

Another Industrial Associates witness, ex-Pres. John Forbes, was given a hot time on the witness stand by Sen. Thomas when it became known that many of the outfit's records had been destroyed.

"I assume they were burnt," Forbes declared, whereupon Sen. Thomas said, "as a result of the systematic destruction of records by the Industrial Association, it has effectively prevented the committee from carrying out its duties assigned by the Congress of the United States."

UTILITIES PAID BILLS

Though many important documents were thus removed from the Committee's eyes, U. S. investigators were able to piece together summaries indicating the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., Standard Oil and the California Packing Corp. were heavy contributors.

Final day of testimony was devoted to examination of anti-labor ordinances in the state's agricultural counties. Mendocino County, it was shown, passed an ordinance licensing union organizers for 3-month periods. Licenses may be obtained only after hearings before the county supervisors, who, previous testimony had demonstrated, are in many cases completely dominated by the bitterly anti-union Associated Farmers.

LABOR STATEMENT

Seated together in the audience at the final hearings were Harry Bridges, CIO California director; State Senator Jack Shelley and A. Watchman, liberal heads of Frisco's AFL city and building trades councils.

In a short statement to the committee Shelley condemned tory efforts to make San Francisco an open shop town, declaring:

"The cause of organized labor is the cause of democracy and human freedom and of that great hope and dream we call Americanism.

"Labor deserves the support of every thinking person in this country."

LOS ANGELES

Before it concluded hearings in Los Angeles last week, the committee found further evidence proving a businessmen's conspiracy to keep unions out of the city. One restaurant owner, it was revealed, received $50 a day from Southern Californians, Inc., tory group, not to sign a union contract.

A "forward fund" was maintained by the Los Angeles Clearing House, evidence showed, with the city's banks paying contributions through a form of "checkoff". The money thus collected was turned over to the Chamber of Commerce for further distribution to front-rank anti-union organizations.

JERSEY PAYMENTS

Trenton, N. J. (FP)—Benefits paid to unemployed workers in New Jersey in 1939 totaled $14,910,745, reports the State Unemployment Compensation Commission.

Steel Union Pledges Drive At Republic

Cleveland, Feb. 3.—Members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee lodges at Republic Steel Corp. turned out in full force here for a mass meeting addressed by District Director William Donovan and Harry Harper of Chicago, a veteran of the 1937 Memorial Day massacre.

Another speaker, Rev. C. F. MacLennan of Willoughby, Ohio, paid tribute to the SWOC and the CIO Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers. He pointed to the wonderful growth of the steel union organization under the CIO, declaring it has proved beyond any doubt that industrial organization is the only way that workers in mass production industries can be organized.

DESCRIBES GAINS

Harper, who lost the sight of one eye in the 1937 attack on Chicago steel workers, described the growth in unionism around Chicago since that time. While he first wanted physical revenge for the attack, Harper said, "I decided there was a better way, and so, today, I am avenging the wrong by organizing the unorganized."

The meeting concluded with the passage of a resolution pledging loyalty to the SWOC and a continuation of "our drive for 100% membership in all the Republic Steel lodges."

Ask Probe Of U. S. Agency

New York, Feb. 3—An immediate investigation of the conduct of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation to rescue it "from the hands of unscrupulous shipowners," was demanded this week by the National Maritime Union.

In a petition and letter sent to Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, Joseph Curran, NMU president, charged that the Bureau has permitted itself to be "taken over" by the shipowners and is "now a weapon in the hands of the shipowners it is supposed to watch."

"This weapon is used, as far as we are concerned," the letter states, "solely for anti-labor purposes." Responsibility for the situation the better continues, "lies directly at the door of Commander R. S. Field, Director of the Bureau."

FOUGHT UNION

The NMU charged that the Commander "has stepped into legitimate labor disputes and ordered charges filed against striking seamen for the sole purpose of frustrating collective bargaining. He has discriminated between officers and seamen in the conduct of these investigations.

"He has exhibited unaccountable indulgence in remitting fines imposed on shipowners for violation of safety-at-sea legislation."

Detroit Plans CIO Label Exposition in April

DETROIT, Feb. 3.—Plans are well under way here for a mammoth CIO Union Labor Exposition, to be held April 20-28 under auspices of the Wayne County (Detroit) Industrial Union Council.

Fred Parker, chairman of the exposition committee, said the show will be the largest of its kind ever held in the country.

The nine-day exposition is designed to be an exhibit of CIO-made products. Contracts have already been made to take up more than a quarter of the floor-space in the Convention Hall, scene of Detroit's annual automobile show, and a number of other agreements await merely formal approval.

In addition to the exhibits, a vast program of entertainment is being planned. A fashion show and performances by various CIO children's groups have been arranged. The committee expects a minimum daily attendance of 150,000 persons.

Canadian Unions Fight New Anti-Labor Bills

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 3.—Labor, political and trade union groups have launched a campaign for amendment of the Defense of Canada Regulations, passed on the eve of Canada's entry into the war.

Recently the federal cabinet passed two new amendments to the existing laws governing war-time conditions in the dominion which, in the opinion of labor, are anti-democratic and extremely arbitrary.

The new amendments would make every officer of any organization—be it political party, trade union or any other body—personally responsible for the actions of any other officers, and under certain conditions would make it possible for any judge to declare the entire organization illegal and make membership in it or defense of its principles an offense subject to a fine of $5,000 and five years' imprisonment.

WORKERS AROUSED

Labor has been particularly aroused over the new regulations in view of the fact that while in Britain all such measures were submitted to parliament, in Canada the tendency has been to introduce measures of ever-increasing harshness without reference to parliament.

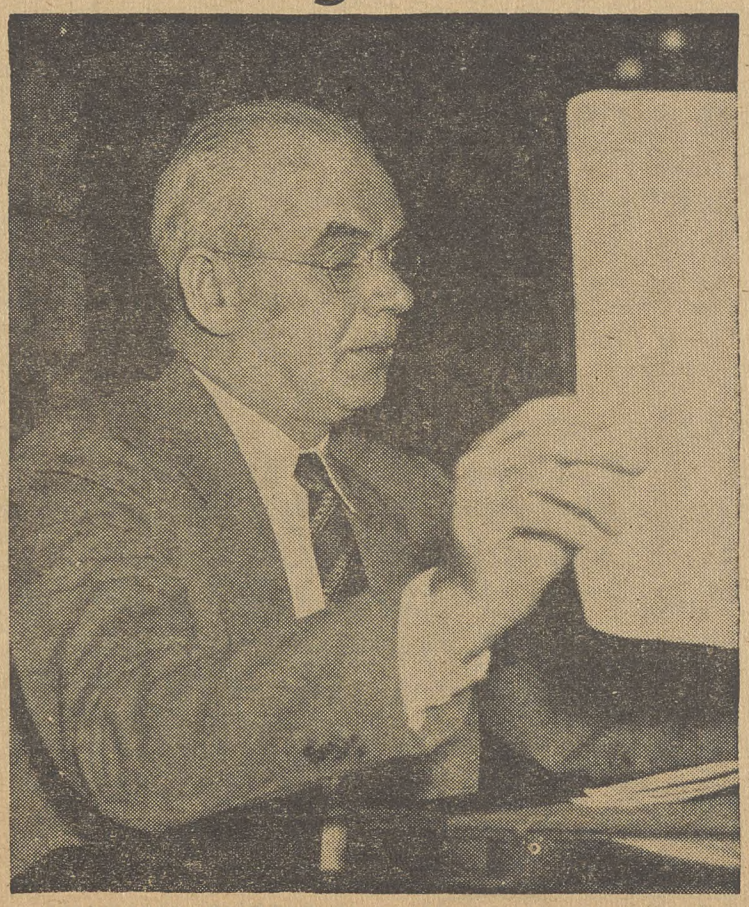
2 AFL Auto Locals Swing to CIO



Detroit, Mich., Feb. 10.—A death blow to the dwindling AFL groups in the automobile industry was struck when the two General Motors locals at Janesville, Wisconsin, voted overwhelmingly to return to the United Automobile Workers, CIO, it was announced here this week at UAW headquarters.

AFL Locals 95 and 121 took action to return to the CIO auto union at membership meetings held recently at which it was also voted to send letters to the few GM locals still remaining in the AFL urging them also to rejoin the UAW-CIO.

MORE EXPECTED

"Growing unrest with the do-nothing policy of the AFL in General Motors make it probable that there will be further returns to the UAW-CIO," a statement issued by the union declared.

Laces Wagner Act Foes

SHARPLY CRITICAL of reactionary attempts to weaken the Wagner Labor Relations Act, Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee appeared before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, to warn of evil effects of tampering. At conclusion of his testimony, Murray placed in the record letters showing close alliance between AFL higher-ups and reactionary corporation lawyers, all bent on tearing the heart out of the Act.

Textile Mill Hired 'Evangelists' To Fight CIO

GAFFNEY, S. C., Feb. 10. — Flagrant violations of the Wagner Act by company-inspired agents to fight the CIO were revealed in a re-hearing on charges filed by the Textile Workers Union of America against the Alma, Limestone and Hamrick Mills here.

Evidence was presented at the hearing showing that company agents had sponsored violence and discrimination against union members, that company-inspired anti-union ministers had preached against the CIO and that "Fellowship" and "Goodwill" clubs had been financed by the company to agitate against the CIO.

Star witness for the union was Clyde Jefferies, former business manager of the three Hamrick Mills company unions, who testified that in organizing the "Fellowship" clubs he had been advised and assisted by Waite C. Hamrick, president of the Hamrick chain of mills, and other mill officials.

$100 FOR CHURCH

He said that the company's campaign against the union was started soon after the TWUA won a Labor Board election at the Gaffney Manufacturing Co., in an effort to prevent the CIO union from winning an election at any of the Hamrick mills.

In this campaign, Jefferies said, he secured the assistance of a preacher, who told him that Hamrick had given him $100 for a church, and that shortly afterward he began preaching against the CIO, calling it the "Mark of the Beast."

He also testified that J. Harold Smith, a radio evangelist, led mass preachings against the CIO, and that workers from the Hamrick mills were transported to these meetings without charge in company trucks.

Senate Hears Story of Fight On Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 — Working furtively through conferences in rich men's clubs and swanky hotels, Wall Street corporation lawyers and the general counsel for the American Federation of Labor plotted methods for robbing labor of the benefits of the Wagner Act.

This was the startling revelation presented to the U. S. Senate this week by CIO Vice-President Philip Murray, acting on behalf of John L. Lewis. Immediate reverberations were expected from AFL rank and file groups throughout the country as they learned details of the way in which Joseph Padway, AFL chief attorney, worked hand in hand with outspoken foes of Labor's Magna Charta while Pres. William Green of the AFL waved approval from the sidelines.

Highlights of the letters, which brought ineffectual denials from Padway and Green last year when CIO Pres. Lewis first hinted at their contents, include these facts:

1. That Padway held "a series of secret conferences with Gilbert Montague, Earl Reed and Ernest Ballard" on proposed amendments to the Wagner Act.

2. That the three corporation lawyers have represented 14 flagrant violators of the Wagner Act before the National Labor Relations Board.

3. That Montague handed to Padway on Nov. 30, 1938 a draft of proposed amendments to the Act, "many provisions" of which "are actually incorporated word for word in the Walsh Bill, S. 1000, which is sponsored by William Green."

4. That Green and several other members of the AFL executive council not only knew of the conferences but were advised of their progress from time to time.

If the parties involved "deny the correctness or contents of any of these letters," the Lewis statement said, "I am prepared to furnish further proof to nullify their denial." In conclusion the CIO president commented that the amendments are now stripped of any "hypocritical propaganda" that they represent the interests of the working people.

Summary of Charges

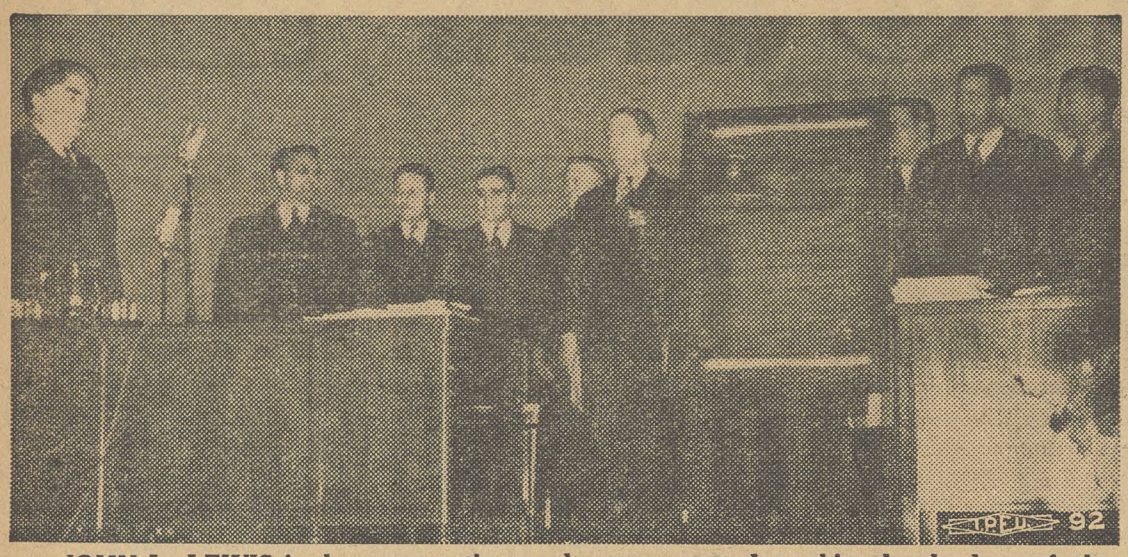
Illinois AFL Head Joins Company Union



CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Faced with loss of his post through AFL's suspension of the International Typographical Union. Reuben Soderstrom, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor had to do a quick hop, skip and jump to stay in an approved AFL affiliate.

He succeeded by joining a company union.

Soderstrom received a membership card in the Chicago Editorial Association, an AFL company union formed for would-be scabs on the Chicago Hearst papers after the CIO Newspaper Guild had applied for a Labor Board election.

Present membership of the AFL outfit is limited entirely to scabs and strikebreakers on the struck Herald-American.

Gift From Rubber Workers

Win 3rd Poll At Same Firm

Pittsburgh, Feb. 10 — For the third time in three years the Steel Workers Organizing Committee defeated a company union in a Labor Board poll at the Intl. Nickel Co. plant in Huntington, W. Va.

Winning by a greater majority than in previous tests, the SWOC received 636 votes to 407 for the company union.

If the firm honors an agreement made before the vote, it will open negotiations for a contract recognizing SWOC as sole collective bargaining agent for the workers.

Last August the company violated its contract with SWOC to such an extent that the union was forced to cancel the past and file charges with the National Labor Relations Board.

At that time SWOC Chairman Philip Murray asserted that the corporation "secretly concluded a more favorable contract with the remnants of a company union, although there was no demand in the mill for such action."

Long Open Shop, Firm Finally Signs

Fall River, Mass., Feb. 10 — A clothing factory which had an open shop for 17 years, ran up a white flag after an intensive four months' union drive here in New Bedford, and signed an agreement with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO.

The Anderson & Little Clothing Company, employing nearly 400 workers, has signed a contract effective for two and a half years granting a union ship, preferential hiring, equal division of work during slack periods and arbitration of disputes. It also agrees not to send any work out of the factory unless all employes are assured of a full season's employment.

SECOND CONTRACT

A second victory for the ACW followed closely on the heels of the Anderson & Little pact, when the New Bedford Clothing Company, manufacturers of boys' and youths' clothing, employing 130 workers, also signed a standard union agreement.

Construction Union Issues 16 Charters

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — Issuance of 16 new charters bringing the total to 95 were announced this week by Chairman A. D. Lewis of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

The new locals are in 11 different states. Reflecting intensive organizing activity in the New York City area, four of the new locals are there. They are in Long Island, Brooklyn, Queens and Upper Manhattan. All these locals are affiliated with the New York Construction Workers District Conference.

California ranks second with three new locals, being located at Pittsburg, Long Beach and Maywood. There are now five locals of the UCWOC in California. One Los Angeles local alone has 1,000 members, the maximum permitted in a single local.

Other locals were chartered in Indiana, Illinois, Colorado, Kentucky, Missouri, Iowa and Maryland.

New contracts being signed with employers included a large brickyard near Philadelphia, a number of Seattle contractors, and builders spotted elsewhere through the nation. Many conferences are in progress looking to more contracts.

Lewis To Honor Broun

New York, Feb. 10—CIO President John L. Lewis will be among the old friends and associates of Heywood Broun who will speak at a memorial meeting in honor of the former president of the American Newspaper Guild which will be held at Manhattan Center here Monday night.

A biographical narration written by Morris Watson, ANG vice president, in living newspaper style, and relating episodes and anecdotes in the life of Broun, will be the feature of the memorial meeting.

President Lewis, Mayor LaGuardia, Kenneth Crawford, ANG president, and a number of writers, actors and other friends of Broun will take part in the narration. Following this program an auction of Broun's paintings, books, and other personal items will be auctioned off to set up a fund for journalism awards.

Among the books to be auctioned, will be first editions by a number of America's outstanding authors autographed in memory of Broun, including John Steinbeck, Ernest Hemingway, Sherwood Anderson, Erskine Caldwell, Eugene O'Neill, Archibald MacLeish, Pearl Buck, Christopher Morley, Edna Ferber and Carl Sandburg.

Admission to the meeting is by invitation and is free of charge.

Carey to Talk On Problems Of Foreign Born

Washington, Feb. 10 — CIO Secretary James B. Carey will address the fourth annual conference of the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born, it was announced today by Ernest Hemingway, noted author who heads the conference committee of 100 sponsors.

E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League will be another labor representative to address the meeting.

The conference, to be held here March 2-3 is aimed at halting the "growth of alien-baiting and its utilization as a part of the attack on the trade unions in the United States."

Social Security Board Asks More Liberal Law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — The U. S. Social Security Board today was on record in support of CIO demands for immediate liberalization of unemployment compensation benefits.

In its annual report to Congress the Board made three major recommendations, all of them in line with the CIO Legislative Program for 1940:

1. That the states give "serious and continued consideration" to the problem of increasing benefit rates, and extending the period of time during which those payments are made.
2. That unemployment compensation be provided for workers idle because of illness or injury.
3. That workers, notably in "agricultural" industries, and seamen be included in the Social Security program.

LARGER PAYMENTS

States which have large accumulations of funds for unemployment benefits were especially urged to liberalize their payments. In Ohio, it is recalled, Pres. John Owens of the state CIO recently charged that less than half of the funds being paid into the compensation fund are being returned to the workers in the form of benefits.

Backing up its plea for payments to sick or injured workers, the Board noted that while workers made idle through layoffs and workers out of employment at the age of 65 are taken care of, there are no provisions for younger workers unable to work because they are sick or disabled, perhaps for life.

The CIO has long agitated for extension of social security benefits to all workers, a point now seconded by the Social Security Board itself. Only this week the National Maritime Union chided Pres. Roosevelt for the absence of Administration action in the present session of Congress to include seamen under the act.

The NMU recalled that the President promised, during the course of a White House conference which followed passage of the Neutrality Act amendments, to put the matter at the head of his Congressional agenda. But as yet, they complained, no signs of action on the issue have been noted.

GM Stubborn, Upsets Auto Poll Plans

DETROIT, Feb. 10.—Labor Board hearings on elections at General Motors were in recess today after GM had thrown a legalistic monkey-wrench into plans for quick action.

After both the United Automobile Workers, CIO, and the AFL outfit had agreed to election procedure, the corporation refused to accept the stipulations the unions had filed with the NLRB.

Hearings will resume Feb. 13. At the last Labor Board session, GM lawyers threatened to consume three months in argument before the Board unless the company was allowed to tell the Board and the unions where to get off in the election procedure.

Apparently fearful of the workers' reaction, however, GM officials had a change of heart, and indicated they may "agree to agree."

GM wants the elections to be held plant by plant, and wants the collective bargaining to be done plant by plant once the workers' representatives are chosen in the poll.

COMPANY WANTS DELAY

Its evident purpose is to prevent negotiation of a strong national contract, and to delay the vote until most of the men are out of the plants during the summer layoffs.

The understanding reached by the UAW-CIO and AFL auto union and AFL patternmakers and machinists provides for plant by plant elections, except that in 13 plants departmental elections for patternmakers and die-sinkers will be held, with the UAW-CIO on the ballot.

The difference comes in the clause that sets up the bargaining units after the elections. Instead of the individual plant units sought by the company, the unions' stipulation calls for a single bargaining unit of all plants won by the UAW-CIO and another unit for all plants won by the AFL.

It is generally conceded that the UAW-CIO will win the great majority of the plants. But if General Motors persists in its sabotage of democratic procedure after the rival unions have sunk their differences in order to hasten an election, the company will be responsible for any worsening of labor relations that may result, union officials point out.

Pension Checks in Mail

BUNDLES OF CHECKS to those persons over 65 who qualified under the federal old age insurance statutes were put into the mail at Washington on Feb. 1.

'Finest Pact' Won by Glass Union Lifts Pay

CLEVELAND, Feb. 10. — The "finest agreement" in the history of the CIO Federation of Flat Glass Workers with the industry's two largest manufacturers today spelled out a $1,200,000 wage increase for 15,000 employes.

Pres. Irwin DeShetler of the FFGW announced the contract would bring 2c-an-hour increases to all workers in Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Libbey-Owens-Ford plants throughout the country.

DeShetler said the raises are retroactive to Feb. 1, and that the new agreement equalizes wage rates between the two companies on identical types of work. All differentials between North and South are eliminated.

"The contract is a much-improved agreement over what we have had in the past three years," De Shetler said. "In fact, it's the finest agreement we have ever had with these two companies."

Sole collective bargaining rights are secured for the first time and the companies agree not to deal with any other organization.

An important concession was secured in regard to the Crystal City, Mo., plant of Pittsburgh Plate Glass, previously uncovered by union agreements. The company agreed that if and when the court decides in the union's favor, or if the union obtains a majority of the workers, the Crystal City plant will be automatically included in the new agreement without further negotiations.

Payment at time and a half on Christmas and July 4 is provided for in continuous process plants. Special premiums are to be worked out to compensate the workers for speeding-up of operations.

Both companies signed identical agreements, with a supplement providing for future joint conferences.

Negotiations for the agreement, which runs for one year, started on Jan. 17.

BOOST FOR CIO

Detroit.—The United Construction Workers Organizing Committee got a big boost here when reactionary Big Bill Hutcheson, chief of the AFL carpenters union, endorsed reactionary Republican Sen. Vandenberg for president.

Sign Closed Shop Pact In Harlan

HARLAN, Ky., Feb. 10—The first closed shop-checkoff contract in Harlan outside the United Mine Workers was signed here by the Benham Laundry & Dry Cleaning Co. of Cumberland.

The contract covers 40 employes who went out on strike in support of six girls who were fired after they joined the CIO union, according to Sec.-Treas. George Titler of UMW District 19.

Members of Local 7425 of the UMW at Lynch were given credit for making the quick victory possible.

Rubber, Steel Union Leaders Attack AFL Amendments

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — The United Rubber Workers of America, CIO, are opposed to all Wagner Act amendments "which tend to undermine and destroy the basic principles" of the act, Sherman Dalrymple, Rubber Workers president, told the House Labor Committee here in testimony on proposed amendments to the act.

The rubber workers, Dalrymple declared, "have not had complete and satisfactory results in all administrative or judicial procedures of the Labor Board," and believe that the "law itself should be strengthened, not weakened. We believe that teeth put into the law will bring satisfactory results."

CIO TEETH

Amendments to put teeth into the Wagner Act were suggested by Dalrymple following those proposed by the CIO in its 1940 legislative program. These included criminal penalties against Wagner Act violators, a clause to prevent the Labor Board from splitting up industrial unions, and an amendment to prevent the U. S. government from awarding fat contracts to persistent violators of the act.

"These amendments will actually protect the present basic policy of the Wagner Act, which is to further collective bargaining through equalizing the economic strength of labor with that of the employers," Dalrymple said.

"Such equality can only be accomplished through the establishment of large, powerful industrial unions. This purpose is negated by decisions of the Board which attempt to carve out craft units within the industrial union organizations.

"I further urge that your committee put solid bedrock under the guarantees of collective bargaining in the present act by providing criminal penalties for violators of the act and by withholding government contracts from them," Dalrymple concluded.

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — Adopt the AFL's Wagner Act amendments and thereby open wide the door to racketeering in the labor unions.

That was the challenge presented to members of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor today by CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray, who in two days of testimony exposed the flaws—and there are plenty of them—in AFL and Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers reasoning on the question of the Wagner Act.

Though sharply critical of many recent Natl. Labor Relations Board decisions, Murray said the CIO would press for no amendments to the Act, but warned if the question of opening up the Act does reach the floor of Congress, the CIO will press vigorously for provisions to strengthen, rather than weaken labor's magna charta.

The chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee devoted most of his time on the stand to throwing a critical spotlight on three favorite AFL amendment proposals—to lift the bars against company interference, to bar the NLRB from killing collusive contracts, and to make establishment of craft bargaining units compulsory for the Board.

In warning of the danger inherent in permitting AFL company unionism to flourish under Wagner Act protection, Murray developed one phase of the situation previously neglected—the close tie-up between AFL company unionism and racketeering.

CITES RECENT CASE

Murray referred to a court case in Pittsburgh in which 57 AFL building trades leaders pleaded guilty to anti-trust act violation and collusive practices with employers.

"There is the union, and there are the contractors, pleading guilty to these collusive agreements, agreements that prevented the ordinary individual electrical worker from even getting a job in the electrical industry unless he

Ford Thumbs Nose Again At Board

Boston, Feb. 10 — (FP) — The National Labor Relations Board will take court action to force the Ford Motor Co. to post notices in its Sommerville, Mass. plant that it will "cease and desist from interference" with union activity, Regional Director A. Howard Myers has announced.

The statement followed Ford's refusal to post such notices as called for in a recent Board order.

Ford Strike In 22nd Month On Coast

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 10 — Local 406 of the CIO United Automobile Workers today is in the midst of the 22nd month of its strike against Henry Ford.

Still maintaining their ranks, the strikers at the Ford assembly plant have pledged their refusal to accept any settlement short of victory. Though the Natl. Labor Relations Board ordered the company on Dec. 8, 1939, to reinstate the strikers and recognize the local, the company has insisted it will flout the NLRB decree.

"Organized labor must realize, that until Henry Ford is organized, no permanent unionization of this country is possible," declared Paul R. Harvey, Local 406 secretary.

"Until this reactionary, labor-hating industrial colossus is forced to recognize the union and bargain collectively with his employes, other manufacturers will follow his example until unionism is a thing of the past."

Miss Lewis, Haywood to Speak On National Radio Hookups

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Two representatives of the CIO will address the nation on coast-to-coast radio hookups within the next 10 days. On February 14, Miss Kathryn Lewis, executive assistant to her father, Pres. John L. Lewis, will speak over the Columbia Broadcasting System on "Labor's Social Outlook". Miss Lewis' speech will be heard from 10:15 to 10:30 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, on the 14th.

A keen student of Latin American affairs, Miss Lewis has attended an international conference on the extension of democracy at Buenos Aires, Argentina, was a member of the U. S. delegation at the Lima, Peru, conference, and recently was a member of the labor delegation to the Intl. Labor Office conference in Havana. She is active in women's trade union work, and has assisted in the development of CIO women's auxiliaries.

HAYWOOD FEB. 19

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, will speak on NBC's Blue Network on Feb. 19 from 9.30 to 9.45 P. M. Eastern Standard Time. Haywood will discuss "CIO Organizing Plans and Their Purpose" during his talk.

Stations which are available for the Haywood address were printed in a recent issue of The CIO NEWS. Those CBS stations which are available for Miss Lewis' address are listed below. In both cases, CIO groups should contact their local station manager to make sure that the speech will be carried.

Gotham CIO Hits Budget Slashes

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 10—Leaders of New York State's powerful CIO movement gathered here today to demand of the state legislature that it leave Gov. Herbert Lehman's budget intact.

Members of the Industrial Union Council's state executive board met prior to a meeting of other delegates from unions anxious to keep the state's social legislation program off the rocks.

"It is felt by the CIO of this state," declared Pres. Gustav Strebel of the council, "that any cut in this budget at this time is most unsound, not in the interests of the people of the state, and may pave the way to the break-down in essential public services, and throw on the municipalities burdens that cannot be borne by them."

First Line of Defense

Criticizing the budget slashes proposed by Pres. Roosevelt for the WPA, the CCC and other forms of youth and unemployment relief, at a time when appropriations for war purposes are being greatly increased, CIO Vice-President Murray recently declared:

"We believe the primary interest of the nation itself should be centered upon the most important national defense problem —and that is the solution of the unemployment question."

Military experts agree that the morale of a country's population is even more important than great armaments when it comes to war.

Unemployment, low wages, insecurity and the discontent such evils breed are more dangerous to the welfare and peace of the United States than any foreign foe.

The CIO yields to none in its patriotism when it insists that first consideration should be given to providing jobs and security to the American people.

The Score Is 65 to 15

The tussle between CIO and AFL to win the workers' confidence is hardly a tussle any more, to judge from the latest score on election results.

In the last three months of 1939 there was a great increase in election activity. More than 156,000 workers cast their ballots in Labor Board elections. The results show that:

CIO unions received 65% of the votes cast;
AFL unions received 15%; and Independent unions, 7%.

The CIO was four-to-one ahead of the AFL in the choice of the workers. More than 101,000 workers voted for CIO unions, as against only some 23,000 votes for unions of the AFL.

Leadership

When the first cave man ventured away from his cave, to improve his lot, many people were shocked. They thought he was going too far.

When Galileo announced that the earth moves around the sun, many people were shocked. He was tortured for going too far.

When Columbus sailed to discover America, many people were shocked. They thought he was going too far.

When the CIO was formed, many people were shocked. They thought that was going too far.

When the auto workers struck for their first big union agreement, many people were shocked. They thought they were going too far.

When John L. Lewis put the finger on John Garner as the big chief of the anti-labor conspiracy in Congress, many people were shocked. The old anvil chorus echoed, "he has gone too far."

And now that Lewis announces labor is not in hock to any politician or party but has demands of its own, many papers register shock and talk about "going too far".

P. S. Any movement is bound to shock, disturb and disconcert inert matter or obstacles in its way. And that certainly applies to the labor movement, when it wants to go places and do things.

"Take An Amendment, Mr. Green"

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

What Goes On?

THE exposure of John L. Lewis of the plot behind the so-called AFL amendments to the Wagner act presents an amazing story of labor betrayal.

How AFL leaders could be led to advance, as their own program, amendments drafted by the most anti-labor corporations, calls for some explanation.

Add to this the recent exposures of widespread racketeering, collusion with employers and criminal activities on the part of some AFL leaders.

Add also the statements adopted by the AFL executive council in Miami about "restoring confidence" to business, which read like the creed of the Chamber of Commerce or the Manufacturers' Association.

It all sums up to a picture of alleged labor leaders whose hearts belong to Daddy Capital. The workers who pay their salaries and the rest of the American people are entitled to know what goes on here anyhow.

The Horse and the Stag

Since the AFL leaders themselves advance no understandable explanation of their curious behavior, perhaps we can help out by revamping Aesop's fable about the horse, the man and the stag.

It seems that a horse, which resembled some of the AFL leaders from a certain point of view, was enraged at a stag.

This stag, which had all the speed of the CIO so that it could run rings around the horse, was eating the pasture which the horse considered within its exclusive jurisdiction.

So the horse looked around for an ally to aid it in punishing the stag. It propositioned a boss-man on the subject, who had the same kind of ideas about his own and everyone else's business as have most American anti-union employers.

This man was quiet agreeable, provided—. All he asked was that the horse should let him sit upon its back and stick a bridle in its mouth.

Like a good AFL leader, the horse considered this a most constructive proposition and a right smart way of getting back at the CIO-like stag.

So the collusion between the NAM (to spell the man's name backward) and the horse began.

The NAM was only too happy to hunt the stag in this fashion. He found riding more comfortable than walking, made the horse into his slave and began to use it for all purposes.

At last writing, the stag was still running both horse and man ragged. And the horse, which in retreat resembled more and more the AFL leadership, was jumping to every touch of the NAM's spurs, whinnying about "business confidence"—and, believe it or not, introducing amendments to the Wagner act dictated by the NAM.

NAM-AFL Amendments

If the above explanation of the AFL leaders' present role seems crude, it still has far to go to match the crudeness of the plot against the Wagner act revealed in the letters and other documents which Lewis submitted to the Senate committee.

His evidence shows that AFL Counsel Joseph Padway, with the full knowledge of AFL President Green, held secret conferences on the Wagner act with corporation lawyers like Gilbert Montague, Earl F. Reed and Ernest S. Ballard, who represent some of the worst violators of the act.

These lawyers, whose firms are high in the councils of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, were able to sell to the AFL leaders, through Padway, Wagner act amendments desired by the NAM.

A complete draft of proposed amendments was prepared by Reed, who besides representing Weirton Steel and other union-fighting corporations was chairman of the American Liberty League's anti-Wagner Act Lawyers' committee.

This draft was presented by Montague to Padway, and many of its provisions were actually incorporated, word for word, in the Walsh bill, which was presented to the country as the program of the AFL.

Racketeering and Graft

As to the racketeering and other criminal activities of which so many AFL leaders are being found guilty, CIO Vice President Murray offered some explanation when he testified before the same Senate committee.

He pointed out that all of these instances of corruption and malpractice arise out of the very collusion between employers and AFL leaders, which the AFL-NAM amendments seek to protect.

Not a single CIO leader has ever been indicted or found guilty of racketeering, graft or other corrupt practices. The CIO union record, unlike that of the AFL, is 100% clean.

This arises from the fact that CIO unions are more democratic than those of the AFL. The CIO has no unions which have had no conventions for decades, like some of the AFL unions, or in which racketeers can muscle in without the membership having any say.

But more than that, CIO unionism is based on the principle of service to only one master, the workers who make up the membership. For once union leaders seek to sit on both sides of the table, once they enter into collusion with employers for special favors, the way is opened wide for all the graft, corruption and double-dealing that now disgrace the AFL.

Lewis Blows Lid Off AFL-NAM Plot To Rob Labor Of Wagner Act

Wall St. Lawyer Helped Draft Amendments

By C. W. FOWLER

Washington, Feb. 10. — John L. Lewis gave full undeniable proof of the tieup between AFL top leaders and the National Association of Manufacturers and 14 leading labor-hating corporations to destroy the Wagner Act in a statement presented to the Senate Labor Committee here.

The testimony, presented in Pres. Lewis' absence by CIO Vice-President Philip Murray, bore out charges he first made last year that AFL Pres. Wm. Green, his chief counsel Joseph Padway, and other top-shot AFL officials plotted with NAM and other tory agents to prepare Wagner Act amendments that were presented to Congress as coming from the AFL.

Lewis proved that the AFL-sponsored amendments were in fact prepared by these employer agents at the urgent request of Padway and that this was known and approved by Green.

Lewis' testimony showed:

Five Main Charges

1. That "a series of secret conferences has been held between Joseph Padway, general counsel of the AFL, Gilbert H. Montague, Earl F. Reed and Ernest S. Ballard. The major order of business at these conferences was the proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act."

2. That "Earl F. Reed, Ernest S. Ballard and Gilbert H. Montague are the attorneys for many corporations which have been the most flagrant and notorious violators of the National Labor Relations Act."

3. That "Colby M. Chester, president of the General Foods Corporation and former president of the National Association of Manufacturers, consulted with and aided Montague in regard to the specific proposed amendmennts that Montague and Reed were drafting for Joseph Padway at his request."

4. That "Gilbert H. Montague presented to Joseph Padway on November 30, 1938, a complete draft of proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act. This draft was prepared by Earl F. Reed, which fact was known to Padway. Many provisions of such draft are actually incorporated word for word, in the Walsh bill, S. 1000, which is sponsored by William Green."

5. That "William Green was cognizant of the conference which Padway has held with the foregoing men and of the fact that such conferences were being held for the purpose of discussing and drafting amendments to the National Labor Relations Act. In addition to William Green, several other members of the Executive Council of the AFL were being advised by Padway of his discussions and conferences with Montague, Reed and Ballard."

Proof of Charges

In presenting the charges and documentary proof, President Lewis said: "On April 29, 1939, I addressed a letter to the members of this Committee in regard to certain amendments to the National Labor Relations Act which have been sponsored by William Green. In this letter I charged that such amendments were prepared with the aid, advice and counsel of representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers, and of several of the most reactionary and anti-union corporations of the country.

"The National Labor Relations Act, because of its protection of fundamental rights, is of vital concern to everyone. For this reason, the people of this country, in considering the merits of any proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, are entitled to know who are the proponents of such amendments and the economic interests they represent."

President Lewis' proof consisted of letters and memoranda between Joseph Padway, general counsel of the AFL, Gilbert H. Montague, Earl F. Reed and Ernest Ballard, counsel for 14 firms which have been involved in National Labor Relations Board cases as violators of the National Labor Relations Act or named by the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee as employing spies, armed guards, tear gas, etc. in union-breaking acts.

These letters show that "a series of secret conferences has been held between Joseph Padway, general counsel of the AFL" and attorneys and agents representing the 14 firms named. "The major order of business at these conferences was the proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act," Lewis said. They show that the proposed amendments backed by the AFL were in fact prepared by the three corporation attorneys involved.

Bares Collusion

CIO Pres. JOHN L. LEWIS

At AFL's Request

The letters further show that these conferences were held and memoranda supplied at the request of Padway. The first one took place before the meeting of the AFL Executive Council of October 5, 1938, when AFL support of amendments to the Act was announced.

They show that Padway engaged in misrepresentation when he said that outside people voluntarily offered their many proposals for amending the acts," and again when he said "he did not actually confer with outsiders in regard to the proposed amendments until after the AFL announced its proposals for amending the Act."

Lewis' testimony listed the 13 firms involved with AFL officials in the conspiracy to secure passage of amendments sponsored by William Green, 10 of which were involved in illegal resistance to collective bargaining by CIO unions, the remainder carrying on illegal struggles against AFL unions, and which "have been the most flagrant and notorious violators of the National Labor Relations Act." These firms are:

Weirton Steel, Columbian Enamelling and Stamping, H. J. Heinz, Pennsylvania Salt Mfg., represented by Earl F. Reed. The first two were involved in cases under the Act with CIO unions, the remainder with AFL affiliates.

Inland Steel, Borg-Warner, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Link Belt, Intl. Harvester, Mid-States Gummed Paper, represented by Ernest Ballard. Of these, Mid-States was involved in a case under the Act with an AFL union.

Teargas Buyers

"The anti-labor activities of many of these corporations have been revealed through the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee which disclosed their widespread industrial espionage and purchase and use of guns and ammunition in industrial disputes," Lewis said.

"These same corporations and their executive heads have also been active members of the National Association of Manufacturers and actively participated in the determination of the policy of the NAM to advise industry generally to deliberately violate the National Labor Relations Act," he testified.

The LaFollette Committee showed, Lewis said, that these companies had paid out a total of more than $150,000 for spies, munitions, etc., and that they were clients of spy agencies such as Railway Audit and Inspection, Pinkerton, and others.

In addition, two of the firms were units of "Little Steel" corporations which engaged in the strike in the summer of 1937 in which 17 workers were killed and murdered, Lewis said.

Lunched at Club

According to the documents given to the Senate Labor Committee by Lewis, the first meeting took place at the Union League Club in New York, July 19, 1938. Robert Maisel, a New York attorney, wrote to Melvin C. Smith of Washington at that time:

"Mr. Gilbert Montague will be the host at a luncheon at the Union League Club at one o'clock on the 19th of July. Besides the presence of the Judge (Padway) and yourself, will be Mr. Gilbert Montague as host, Mr. Earl Reed from Pittsburgh, and Mr. Ballard from Chicago.

"I suggest that you both come to my office and I will escort you to the Union League Club—I suggest that a talk between the Judge, yourself and me would be very helpful."

Following this meeting, Montague wrote to Padway promising "to send you as promised a memo on the clause in NLRA Sec. 10(e), 'The findings of the Board as to the facts, if supported by evidence shall be conclusive.'"

In this memo Montague said he was prepared to show that "it will be necessary to insert the words 'preponderance of' in order to accomplish the objective you had in mind."

AFL Attorney Knew Plan Unpopular

August 3, Montague again wrote to Padway sending the memo and arguing that "all the evidence heard by the administrative body, the Labor Board, should be subject to review and reversal if a court were to find that there was not substantial and credible evidence to support the findings of the Board," Lewis said.

"This amendment, of course, would eliminate any effective administration of the Labor Act which is precisely what Montague intended to accomplish."

Green Approved

This amendment was subsequently endorsed by William Green when he sponsored S. 1000, Senator Walsh's bill to amend the Act.

August 18, Montague again wrote to Padway, regretting that Padway would not be able to confer with him again before the August 20 meeting of the Executive Council of the AFL—disproving Padway's claim that he had conferred with outside interests only after amendments were approved by the Council.

In this letter Montague added: "One point in your draft report to the Council gives me some concern. . . . ." According to Lewis:

"This sentence reveals the fact that Padway had submitted to Montague, who had represented corporations that have viciously combatted labor unions, a copy of Padway's draft report to the Executive Council before it had been actually submitted to the Executive Council.

"When the AFL amendments were introduced in the Senate as S. 1000, we find that the proposed amendment covering this problem contains the following language: 'and the findings of the Board as to the facts, if supported by substantial and credible evidence, shall in like manner be conclusive.'

"Thus we find that Montague has prevailed and that he is the originator and author of this specific amendment now sponsored by William Green."

Pals With AFL Heads

Montague added "personal regards and best wishes" to Padway, "President Green and all my other friends in the Executive Council," to which Lewis comments: "This reference should leave no doubt that William Green and other members of the Executive Council have been participating with Padway in the conferences with Montague."

The next letter cited by Lewis, written to Padway by Earl F. Reed, "reveals the origin of a second amendment incorporated in the bill sponsored by William Green," Lewis said. This amendment deals with the right of employers to subpoena union records.

"From Ernest T. Weir's attorney came the suggestion that the Labor Act be amended giving greater leeway in obtaining subpoenas," Lewis said. "Certainly Weir is not particularly interested in strengthening the Labor Act. Any such proposed amendment was necessarily designed to obtain the books and records of unions for the purpose of smashing of the corporation."

"Padway, however, incorporated in the AFL amendments this suggestion of Earl Reed so that they now include a provision which would permit the court to issue subpoenas for any books and records of unions where the Labor Board may refuse to grant the same at the request

The next letter, by Montague to Padway, dated September 27, 1938, just before the 1938 convention of the AFL, shows, according to Lewis, that "Montague prepared memoranda and material for Padway at Padway's urgent request." September 30 Padway replied to Montague, thanking him for "the valuable information you sent me. . . . It is going to prove more than helpful to me within the next two or three weeks. . . . ."

In return for this, Lewis said, Padway sent copies of the AFL convention proceedings to Montague, as shown in a letter from Padway at Houston, dated October 13.

Montague Happy

In a letter of October 15 to Colby M. Chester, president of the General Foods Corporation, and ex-president of the NAM, Montague boasted:

"During July, August and September I supplied confidentially to Judge Padway (AFL General Counsel) various legal memos and data he requested regarding certain NLRA questions. And during the AFL convention in Houston this month I responded to his hurry calls for additional legal memos and data."

Lewis commented: "This one paragraph summarizes the entire relationship between Padway and Montague. It proves conclusively that Padway was not being deluged with volunteer information as he has attempted to explain, but that he was actually soliciting the material from such persons as Montague in spite of his corporate interests and clients."

In the same letter Montague wrote: "Judge Padway has now asked me confidentially to prepare for him draft amendments of the Act covering the following points, on which he has now received instructions from the AFL Executive Council."

These were court review of Board cases and separation of the Board's administrative and judicial functions. "It should be noted," Lewis said, "that these very two points for which Montague was asked by Padway confidentially to prepare draft amendments were the very two points the AFL Executive Council had refused to approve."

Drafted by Reed

On November 3, a second conference between Padway, Montague, Reed and Ballard was held at the Palmer House in Chicago, Lewis explained. This was concerned, according to a letter of Montague to Chester, with "the above amendments and also amendments on other points in the Act which Judge Padway himself is preparing at the request of the AFL Executive Council."

A draft memo on amendments was prepared at this conference, a copy of which Lewis submitted to the Committee, and of which Montague sent eight copies to Padway for distribution among AFL Executive Counncil members.

"It should be clear from this letter that amendments prepared and drafted by Earl F. Reed with his associations and interests in mind, were actually furnished to Padway for the purpose of submitting them to officers of the AFL," Lewis said.

"Many provisions of such mimeographed copies furnished to Padway are actually incorporated, word for word, in the Walsh bill, S. 1000, sponsored by William Green," Lewis added. Lewis submitted a comparison of the memo and the Walsh bill, showing many identical passages and even identical numbering of the various sections.

Lewis submitted a letter of January 26, 1938, from Montague to Padway, in which Montague congratulates the AFL attorney for "the wonderful job done on the NLRA amendments as reported in the newspapers of last evening and this morning," and hoping that Padway "will try to get a little vacation and change of scene."

Foresaw Attack

On January 31 Padway wrote to Montague: "There is no doubt that there will be presented other amendments from this course, and that ours will be vigorously attacked."

In this connection Lewis cited the protests of President Lynch of the AFL Pattern Makers League to show that the amendments were not submitted to the Executive Council before incorporation in Senator Walsh's bill, S. 1000. Lynch wrote to Green, Lewis said, protesting that: "I cannot bring myself to believe that these proposed amendments were submitted to the officers of the affiliated international unions for consideration."

Green's reply, Lewis said, was to claim that they were drawn up at a meeting with the Building Laborers, and I. M. Ornburn himself, John P. Frey, Herbert Rivers of of the Union Label Department.

"Not a single one of these men actually represented any organization that had any concern with the NLRA," Lewis said.

"William Green thus admitted that the international unions and the Executive Council had not been consulted prior to the introduction of the Walsh Bill. . . . Mr. Green was attempting to carry out the desires and wishes of representatives of the corporations and didn't dare permit the amendments to be scrutinized by the AFL Executive Council before their introduction in the Senate through Senator Walsh."

Following this, Lewis said: "During the following months Montague and Padway remained in constant communication with each other in regard to the pending amendments." In proof of this, he cited a letter of March 27, 1939, from Montague to Padway and another of April 3, concerning meetings of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and data exchanged on Labor Board cases.

Further Proof

In conclusion, Lewis said: "I am deeply conscious of the seriousness of the charges which I have made. It is my opinion that the documentary proof which I have thus offered fully and completely substantiates my charges. The originals of the letters which I have attached as exhibits are, of course, in the possession of the individuals whom I have named.

"If they deny the correctnness or contents of any of these letters, I am prepared to furnish further proof to nullify their denial.

"In light of the documentary proof I do hope that this Committee, in considering the amendments proposed in the Walsh Bill, S. 1000, will give heed to the origin and economic motivation for these amendments.

"In the light of the disclosures they surely cannot be held aloft any longer as an attempt to strengthen the Labor Act or for the protection of the rights of workers. The amendments and their authors are now before the people stripped of any hypocritical propaganda," Lewis said in concluding his testimony.

Ski Pickets Win Strike

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 10 — A one week strike resulted in substantial wage increases for over 300 employes of the Phillips Electrical Works here under a contract negotiated between the company and the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union.

Wages were increased by five cents per hour for male employes and three cents per hour for female workers. Improved seniority provisions were embodied in the renewed agreement including changes in the vacation and overtime pay clauses.

PICKETS ON SKIIS

Intl. Vice-President C. S. Jackson, who led the strike, said the walkout was a great victory not only for the union but labor generally.

The strike was called at the end of January when the company refused to negotiate several new proposals to the contract. The union has had contractual relations with the company for three years.

subscribed to these rules and regulations," Murray said.

"And here we find an amendment being offered by the AFL to the present National Labor Relations Act which could very well give sanction to the maintenance of these practices by the federal government, if such an amendment were passed."

WOULD HURT WORKERS

Refusal to permit the Labor Board to outlaw illegal contracts, he went on, would steal from the workers "the right to choose their own representatives for collective bargaining purposes. It would condone the present practice of the AFL where they walk into a plant that is completely organized, and where the company refused to recognize the union that has organized the plant, and then negotiate a closed shop agreement with the AFL without any membership."

The steel union leader launched an equally telling attack on another AFL sacred cow, the amendment to permit employers to "interfere with" their workers' bargaining choice."

WOULD RUIN LAW

"It is quite obvious," he asserted, "that if the words 'interfere with' are stricken from this part of the Act, employers would return to the status which they enjoyed prior to the passage of the Act."

'FREE SPEECH' ISSUE

Of AFL-sponsored proposals to allow employers "freedom of speech" in addressing workers on bargaining rights, Murray declared:

"If this was a question merely involving the freedom of speech, no sane, right-thinking citizen would oppose it. But when the amendment itself constitutes a threat to the effective operation of this Act, then it isn't freedom of speech they are seeking, it is license to destroy, tear down, and no amount of evidence that they might adduce before me would be sufficient to warrant the belief in my estimation that the amendment was offered merely because they wanted to tell the truth."

Murray concluded his testimony with a discussion of the proposal to make craft bargaining units compulsory in industry. Such a ruling, he warned, would bring endless strife and conflict into industrial relations, overthrow existing harmonious relationships between corporate managements and industrial unions, and deprive workers of their bargaining strength.

Unemployment Up—Welfare Spending Down

while figures at right demonstrate how increasingly government funds have gone to arms, not men. CIO program calls for WPA jobs for at least 3,000,000 unemployed workers.

14 WPA Strikers Get Terms; Drop 125 Cases

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 10. (FP)—Sentences ranging from 60 days to eight months were imposed by U. S. District Court Judge M. M. Joyce on 14 workers who took part in the protest against reduction of prevailing wage scales on WPA. Three others escaped with probation.

Sentences for five who pleaded "nolle contendere" will be handed down at a later date, but no date has been set for the sentencing of 14 women defendants.

Action of U. S. Asst. Atty. General O. John Rogge in moving for dismissal of charges against 125 other defendants was interpreted by leaders of the labor defense committee as recognition of the mass pressure against the entire proceedings.

STRUCK IN JULY

The indictments resulted from a clash outside a struck Minneapolis WPA sewing project last July, during which one picket was killed and a policeman died from a heart attack.

"It was the main contention of the committee and organized labor generally that from the beginning none of the indicted persons was guilty of any conspiracy against the U. S., the committee said, "and this contention has been consistently maintained. In this connection it should be borne in mind that all conspiracy indictments have been dropped, and that the five defendants who are pleading 'nolle contendere' are pleading only one substantive charge."

Arkansas CIO Seeks Aid For Sharecroppers

Paris, Ark., Feb. 10 — Officials of the Arkansas State Industrial Union Council have arranged to hold a conference with Governor Carl E. Bailey to take up the plight of evicted sharecroppers in the eastern section of the state and to discuss the problems concerning relief workers and the aged. A committee will also visit WPA officials.

A mass meeting of all labor organizations in the area was held here last week to start a drive for sufficient appropriations for WPA workers for 1940.

John Day, international representative of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, and James Kendrick, vice president of the Arkansas CIO Council, were the main speakers at the meeting.

Anti-Labor Employers Seen Aiding Political Crackpots, Fakers

BOSTON, Feb. 10.—Crackpots and political demagogues are quick to seize the weapons against labor offered them by inflammatory attacks of anti-union employers, Ewin S. Smith of the National Labor Relations Board declared in a speech given before the Massachusetts Civil Liberties Committee here.

Speaking on "Civil Liberties in the Present Crisis", Smith said that now as a generation ago, "the American people are confronted with the preservation of civil liberties as a major concern in their daily lives. In both periods the influence of war, the great destroyer, invades the citadel of democracy and seeks to establish a reign of intolerance and fear."

LIBERTIES MENACED

Signs are multiplying that the threat to civil liberties in America has become grave, Smith warned, "even in a period where our own state of neutrality, which we fondly hope will be perpetuated. still prevails.

"In other democratic countries, notably England and the Scandinavian countries, the sort of opposition to and fear of the labor movement, which has become a striking phenomenon in our American scene, is now fortunately a thing of the past."

This fear of unions and the refusal to accept them, which results ofen in open attacks and underhanded attempts to destroy union influence, is seized upon and capitalized by fascist-minded agents for their own ends.

"When reputable employers engage in inflamatory assaults upon trade unionism," Smith declared, "it is inevitable that political demagogues and crackpots of various descriptions should take up the hand weapon thus offered and proceed by speeches and in print to belabor American workers as sympathizers with, if not agents of, movements embracing a philosophy of revolutionary change."

Attacks upon the fundamental principles of the National Labor Relations Act, Smith said, "springs from those individuals who fear a growing power in organized labor."

Labor School Opens Spring Courses

Monteagle, Tenn., Feb. 10. — Highlander Folk School, unique labor institution for training southern leaders in the trade union, farm and cooperative movements, will open its six weeks' Spring term March 25, Educational Director Myles Horton announced today.

The school which is now in its ninth year, is located in a rugged setting in southern Tennessee.

Programs at Highlander Director Horton says, are built around a small group of resident students who are given intensive training along trade union lines. At a six weeks' term held last summer, educational and recreational programs were carried on which reached more than 2,000 southern trade union members representing 21 international organizations. Similar programs are planned for the coming Spring term.

CIO LEADERS SPEAK

The regular teaching staff of seven was assisted last summer by visiting union and government officials, including Sherman Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers, CIO.

To insure adequate knowledge of southern labor problems, teachers spend part of the year working with unions. Zilphia Horton, music and dramatics teacher at Highlander is now organizing for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Tennessee, and Mary Lawrence who conducted a series of classes in the county on citizenship is directing an educational program for the Teamsters & Chauffeurs union in Kentucky.

Application for the Spring term which will run from March 25 to May 4, are now being accepted, and are open to southern men and women recommended by unions, cooperatives or farm organizations.

RENEW CONTRACT

Detroit. — Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, has renewed its contract with the Wayne Soap Co.

Budget Slicing Seen As Threat To Recovery

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — Administration appropriation-slashing policies will have the effect of sharply cutting consumer purchasing power, the second issue of the CIO Economic Outlook warned today.

Issued by the Unemployment Division, headed by Ralph Hetzel, the Outlook painted a gloomy picture of future economic conditions unless adequate relief for the unemployed and governmental aid to other population groups are provided.

The Outlook said its analysis "shows very clearly that the current reductions in WPA and those planned for the future are completely out of line with the needs of the unemployed.

"The reductions which have taken place within the last year due to the 1940 appropriation have had no relation to the need and were based upon the presumption of re-employment which was clearly not in the cards.

"Nothing less than a level of employment of 3,000,000 on WPA would begin to meet the needs of the unemployed. It is stupid to say otherwise," the report stated.

FOUR FACTORS

Four economic factors were cited to bear out CIO contentions that the economic future is unpromising:

1. Substantial decline in steel production.
2. Sharp declines in auto production.
3. Continuing decline in orders for basic raw materials.
4. Failure of private investment to pick up.

But the real key to the situation, the Outlook reiterated, is the federal budget for 1940-41.

"The 'economy' budget is part of a political game of tag during an election year," the survey commented.

"If the slashes made in public works expenditures and other public expenditures as indicated in the President's budget are put into effect by Congress — and Congress now seems inclined to cut even further — the net contribution (to consumer purchasing power) of the Federal Government will drop sharply in the last six months of the year."

The Economic Outlook contrasted rising expenditures for armaments with decreasing welfare spending, and warned that "expenditures for arms have a much less healthy effect on the economy, dollar per dollar, than the same amount spent for public works and WPA."

TO ORGANIZE

Port Huron, Mich. — Plans for a CIO organizing campaign in this city have been worked out by local union officials and Gus Scholle, Michigan CIO director.

At Lodge Ceremonies

GOLDEN LODGE of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in Canton, Ohio, held a big mass meeting recently to dedicate a copy of the constitution presented by SWOC Chairman Philip Murray, as well as new American and lodge flags.

Your WPA Job:

Hatchet Men Endanger Stamp Plan

By RALPH HETZEL
CIO Unemployment Director

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation of the Department of Agriculture has been responsible for one of the most successful and popular programs of the New Deal. It has helped the farmers by buying up their surplus crops and has helped the unemployed by distributing these surpluses to them.

In his budget the President asked for $172,678,812 for the program, which represented a cut of $33 million from last year's appropriation.

But this was not enough for the hatchet men in Congress. When the Agriculture Appropriation Bill had passed through the House mangle, the sum had been slashed to a $100 million, a cut of over 40%.

Last spring the agency launched a Food Stamp Plan which added the retailers to its beneficiaries. The plan has been enormously successful wherever it has been tried.

EVERYBODY PLEASED

Families on WPA or on relief are eligible to participate. In some places it has been extended to families of low income who are not dependent on public assistance. These families buy a minimum of $1 worth of orange stamps for each member of the family every week and for each $1 worth of orange stamps they are given 50c worth of blue stamps. The orange stamps can be used to buy their regular food supplies and the blue stamps for foods designated as "surplus" by the Department of Agriculture. All purchases are made through the regular local stores.

Retail groceries have been decidedly pleased with the plan. When there was danger recently in Rochester that the stamp plan might be removed because of local difficulties with the banks, such a storm of protest was raised by the retailers that the banks quickly gave in.

PLAN FOR COTTON

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has just announced that the stamp program will be expanded in about six weeks to include "distributing cotton goods to relief families through the normal channels of trade." Such a cotton stamp plan has been urged on every side. The cotton farmers, mill owners, garment manufacturers, workers, retailers and, last but far from least, the unemployed, will all benefit.

The plan is of exceptional interest to labor. According to the Department of Agriculture: "Considerably more than half of each dollar spent at retail for articles made from cotton goes directly to pay the wages of labor employed in connection with manufacture, transportation, and distribution." It is to be hoped, also, that this plan will be spread in time to low income families in the same way that the Food Stamp Plan has been.

HERE'S THE DANGER

But this plan—and the Food Stamp Plan as well—is in great danger if the Surplus Commodities Corporation is forced to operate next year on less than half the money they have this year.

The cut can still be stopped in the Senate.

It will be stopped more easily if it is made clear that although this appropriation is included in the Agriculture Bill, it affects practically every group in the country.

Scab Gas Workers Held Menace

Toledo, Feb. 10 — Toledo's citizenry is living in constant danger of trouble from its scab-operated gas companies.

This was the charge made today by leaders of Local 12024, District 50 of the United Mine Workers, as the strike at the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and the Northwestern Natural Gas Co. entered its second week.

Though assuring the public that any break in the lines or similar emergency will bring help from the strikers, it was emphasized that presence of scabs and strike-breakers on a number of jobs was not calculated to help the public.

Calling of the strike was an act of last resort for the union, after the company had repeatedly refused to accept proposals for a new contract.

'Were Their Ears Red?'

Telephone Barrage New Strike Strategy

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Picketing by telephone is the strike technique being used by Local 16, United Office and Professional Workers, in its dispute with the Credit Clearing House here.

CIO and AFL unions in the metropolitan area representing nearly a quarter of a million members are actively aiding the UOPW local, according to Peter K. Hawley, Local 16 president. Many of the unions have taken definite periods of time during which their members are urged to make special calls to the Clearing House.

Every minute of the day, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M., Hawley says, has been taken over by one of the unions, swamping the Clearing House switchboard with thousands of calls in protest against the firm's labor policy.

100 ON STRIKE

More than 100 employes, including typists, telephone girls, dictaphone operators, credit men, rating clerks and others went on strike the middle of January in protest against the firm's refusal to discuss wage increases and renewal of a two-year contract. The strikers represent 95% of the employes.

The Credit Clearing House, is the second largest firm of its kind in the country, ranking next to Dun & Bradstreet.

To Appeal Philly's 1½% Wage Tax

Philadelphia, Feb. 10 — (FP) — Although the city's 1½% wage tax was held constitutional by the state supreme court, organized labor is continuing a fight against it. The ruling upheld a lower court, which had dismissed a suit filed by Jennie Dole, a member of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

An appeal to the U. S. supreme court will be made on the ground that the wage tax violates the 14th amendment which prohibits the taking of property "without due process of law," attorneys for Mrs. Dole announced.

Printing Unions Discuss Chicago Hearst Strike

CHICAGO, Feb. 10. — Methods to bring about settlement of the 14-months-old strike against William Randolph Hearst's Chicago Herald-American were discussed here at a meeting of international presidents of the printing trades unions attended by Milton Kaufman, executive vice-president of the CIO American Newspaper Guild.

The Guild has held out against publisher attacks despite a wide variety of pressures attempted by the publishers in their anti-union fight. The strike has won widespread support from AFL unions, though a handful of Chicago AFL officials have allied themselves with the San Simeon publisher throughout the struggle.

The meeting was called here by Pres. Claude M. Baker of the Intl. Typographical Union, which now is nearing final stages of outright expulsion from the AFL because of the union's refusal to pay assessments for an anti-CIO war-chest.

Other unions represented at the parley were stereotypers, pressmen, engravers and mailers, all of them affiliated with the AFL.

Labor League Ready to Go In St. Louis

St. Louis, Feb. 10—Some 300 delegates from St. Louis CIO unions attended a Labor's Non-Partisan League convention here to plan extension of labor's political influence throughout the metropolitan area.

E. L. Oliver, national executive vice-president of the League warned the convention that formation of powerful labor political groups throughout the country is the best insurance for preservation of existing liberal legislation and the enactment of other progressive measures.

Delmond Garst, head of the Missouri CIO Council and international representative for the United Automobile Workers, was elected chairman of the League, and Max Michelson of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers was named first vice-chairman.

Delegates called for enactment of CIO amendments to the Wagner Act and asked that federal, state and local relief appropriations not be cut.

Clothes for Strikers

GIFTS TO HEARST STRIKERS are sorted out at Chicago headquarters of the Newspaper Guild. Suits and coats have been sent from all parts of the country as the newspapermen keep up their 14-month strike against the Windy City Hearst papers.

Ask Anti-Lynch Bill Passage

San Fransisco, Feb. 10 — The CIO Marine Cooks' & Stewards' Assn. today demanded Senate passage of the federal anti-Lynch bill.

A resolution sent to members of the Senate Judiciary Committee charged that opposition to the measure comes from tory elements which are interested in keeping the Negro people "in a state of perpetual subjugation that was supposed to have been abolished at the close of the Civil War."

Lewis Puts Unity Issue Up To AFL

Declaring that the "way to have peace is to have peace" Lewis proposed, during a speech to the American Youth Congress here, that AFL and CIO call joint conventions to meet at Constitution Hall in Washington to act on a resolution calling for immediate chartering by the AFL of all CIO unions. Once the labor movement is united, Lewis said, all further questions can be worked out inside the new united organization.

As proof of his sincerity, Lewis said he would seek no office in the unified labor movement.

The CIO leader read to the Youth Congress meeting a letter he had written to President Roosevelt last Oct. 15 in reply to the message sent by the President to the CIO convention on the subject of labor peace. Pres. Roosevelt had previously charged that Lewis failed to reply to his letter. After Lewis asserted the White House press bureau must have been in error the President admitted he had received Lewis' letter.

Text of Speech

A nearly complete text of Pres. Lewis' speech to the American Youth Congress appears on Pages 5 and 6 of this issue of The CIO NEWS.

Hail Expose Of Bata Tricks

Washington, Feb. 17.—Leaders of the CIO United Shoe Workers hailed a speech by Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts, who assailed methods of the German Bata Shoe Co. and helped expose law evading practices of the corporation.

Mrs. Rogers acused the company of using child labor in its European factories, of trying to sneak 500 workers from Germany into this country in the guise of "instructors and experts," and of helping undermine wage levels set up by the shoe workers' union.

CIO Maritime Group Meets

Members of the CIO Maritime Committee and associates shown February 15 as they began a two-day meeting in Washington.

Seated: (beginning with man nearest the camera and going around the table to the left) Mervyn Rathborne, President, American Communications Association; Samuel J. Hogan, President, Marine Engineers Beneficial Association; J. F. Jurich, Secretary - Treasurer, International Fishermen and Allied Workers of America; Murray Winocur, General Organizer, Marine Division, ACA; M. Hedley Stone, National Maritime Legislative Representative; John Green, President, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America; Harry Bridges, President, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union; Joseph Curran, President, National Maritime Union; Bjorne Halling, Executive Secretary, CIO Maritime Committee; William L. Standard, attorney for the NMU; and Edward Gordon, NMU Representative in Havana, assigned to work with nascent Pan-American Maritime Federation of North, South and Central American Marine Unions.

Standing, Daniel Dreisen, ACA Legislative Representative.

CO-OP BOOMS

Muncie, Ind., Feb. 17.—(FP)—A prosperous cafeteria, cooperatively conducted by Local 459, United Automobile Workers, CIO, is the pride of the employes of the Acme Lee plant here. Starting with $7 in the treasury last May, it paid a Rochadel consumer dividend totaling $400 in November and gave a free Christmas dinner to all patrons on Dec. 22.

Four Glass Firms Increase Wages

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 17.—Four independent glass companies have signed a renewed agreement with the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, CIO, which it is estimated here will mean a $250,000 annual pay boost for the workers in the various plants. The previous contract expired January 31.

The companies involved are the American Window Glass Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Rolland Glass Co., and Adamston Glass Co., Clarksburg, W. Va. and the Harding Glass Co., Fort Smith, Ark.

PROVISIONS

The agreement provides: renewal of the preferential shop; a general hourly wage increase of three cents over and above adjustments, bringing the average pay increase of five cents an hour to all workers; time and a half for all maintenance work on Sundays and holidays, and also for all work done in the continuous processes on Christmas, July 4th, Labor Day and Decoration Day.

The increase brings the minimum rates to 64 cents an hour, the highest so far obtained in the independent window glass plants.

Union spokesmen said that the contract would mean a pay increase of $130,000 yearly for workers in the Arnold plant, and would bring the minimum wage to the highest ever received in the local glass manufacturing industry.

On February 7, the CIO glass union signed a contract with the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and the Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Co., providing for a two cent hourly increase for 15,000 workers.

Packing Union Wins Big Gains

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.— Successful outcome of negotiations for an agreement with Armour and Co. here, just concluded by the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, was announced by Chairman Van A. Bittner.

The agreement covers 7,000 Armour workers, and carries substantial improvement in working conditions, better seniority provisions, adequate grievance machinery, a 32-hour guarantee, and an improved vacation plan.

The PWOC victory was hailed by CIO President John L. Lewis as "a significant step forward in the conditions of workers in the packinghouse industry.

"This victory will give renewed impetus to the vigorous drive now going forward to bring complete industrial organization to the packinghouse workers," Lewis wrote in congratulating Chairman Bittner and other PWOC officials.

Negotiations for the agreement had been in progress since the CIO union easily won a Labor Board election at the Chicago Armour plant several months ago.

'Ghost Town' Fable Gives Up The Ghost

Akron, Feb. 17 — The Akron "ghost town" story took another beating when the B. F. Goodrich Co. announced that it plans construction of a big new factory here.

The new plants, for which bids have been called, will be devoted entirely to the production of Koroseal, Goodrich's new synthetic product.

The company's announcement recalled threats made two years ago that unless the company got a 17½ per cent wage cut it would move 5,000 jobs out of Akron. Local 5, United Rubber Workers, CIO, voted down the proposed cut.

The Goodrich expansion move follows initiation of an extensive modernization campaign in Goodyear's Akron plants, costing $3,000,000.

The Ohio Bell Telephone Co. and Ohio Edison Co. also announced Akron expansion programs costing several million dollars.

Broaden Limits Of Freedom, Nation Urged

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. — Americans must soon decide whether all but a privileged few "shall be lashed to the wheel of the great industrial machine they have created, or whether they shall use that machine to assure themselves better lives."

That is the most important problem facing the nation today, Miss Kathryn Lewis, executive assistant to the president of the United Mine Workers, declared in a radio speech heard over tthe Columbia Broadcasting System's coast-to-coast network on Feb. 14. Her talk was entitled, "Labor's Social Outlook."

Pointing out that only two days previously the country had celebrated the birthday of the man who freed the slaves, Miss Lewis declared:

"Years have passed, and the nation has grown, and the time has come when Americans must test again their conception of human freedom."

$587 INCOME

Quoting Social Security Board statistics to the effect that 80 per cent of American families have an annual income of only $587, she asked:

"How many comforts can a man provide for himself and his family with $580 a year? How well can he educate his children and how much can he give them to eat?"

"These things are dangerous," Miss Lewis continued. "A hungry man may not be very much concerned about his choice of leaders. And a starving man may not be very much concerned about his democratic rights until his stomach is full and he begins to count the cost . . . some day they may begin to follow any man who will promise them bread."

No one man, nor any small group of men, can give an adequate answer to this, the nation's most pressing problem, she warned.

CIO DEMANDS

"That, for example, is the reason why the leaders of the CIO have been asking for several years that a conference be called, of the leaders of industry, of agriculture, of labor, to discuss our major problems of unemployment. The consideration of this problem by those people who have demonstrated their constructive ability should produce some reasonable and practical suggestions."

Pennsy Union Groups Back Lewis Stand

New Kensington, Pa., Feb. 17. Delegates representing more than 67,000 members of trade unions, fraternal societies and other civic organizations in the Allegheny-Kiski Valley, gave a vigorous endorsement to the political stand expressed by CIO President John L. Lewis at the convention of the United Mine Workers last month, at a legislative conference held here.

Voicing their disgust at the professional politicians who have betrayed their promises to labor, the delegates passed a resolution warning office seekers that "those who seek the votes of the workers of America must be prepared to guarantee jobs for all Americans and freedom from all foreign wars."

Rubber Workers Push Campaign On 3 Fronts

AKRON, Feb. 17.—Chartering of three new local unions by the United Rubber Workers of America, CIO, was announced here by Pres. S. H. Dalrymple as the union pushed its organization drive on three fronts.

The new locals are at American Container Co., Rock Island, Ill.; Dayton Rubber Co., Dayton, O.; and Aetna Rubber Co., Cleveland, O.

"Our organization drive is getting results," Dalrymple said. "There is more demand for organization now than for the last couple of years." He outlined the URWA program as follows:

1. An intensive campaign conducted by the International Union. The General Executive Board of the URWA, at its recent session, ordered doubling of the organizing staff to 22, biggest in the union's history. Campaigns have already begun in such open-shop centers as Lee Tire & Rubber, Conshohocken, Pa.; Armstrong Cork, Lancaster, Pa., and Blue Ridge Rubber, Taneytown, Md.

2. Local union cooperation in organizing drives in branches and subsidiaries of organized plants. Four U. S. Rubber locals sent representatives into Providence, R. I., for a month and helped boost membership by 500. Goodrich Local in Akron has had representatives working among Hood Rubber workers in Watertown, Mass., since early December. Cambridge Rubber workers, Cambridge, Mass., have sent a representative to help organize workers in Taneytown, Md.

3. Local unions are actively building their own membership. Firestone Local in Los Angeles reports a rapid jump in membership following approval of discriminatory layoffs and wage reductions by the "independent" union in the plant. Goodyear Local in Akron is building membership following rate chiseling by the company.

"We're out to do a job of organization this year," said Dalrymple. "We're going to allow nothing to stop us. We're going to get the job done."

Frank Grillo, URWA secy-treas., explained that funds for the drive were being raised from the usual union income and from a special Voluntary Organizing Fund Campaign.

"The response of the locals has been very gratifying," he said, pointing out that the Detroit U. S. Rubber local has donated $3,000, the Fisk Rubber local at Chicopee Falls, Mass., $1,500, and the U. S. Rubber local at Mishawaka, Ind., $3,000.

"These are only the biggest contributions," Grillo emphasized. "The small locals have responded in like manner. Our membership is 100 per cent convinced that this campaign must go over the top."

Die Casters Get Increases In New Pact

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 17 — All set to strike for their demands after negotiations dragged on for four weeks, an agreement was finally reached here between the National Association of Die Casting Workers, CIO, and the Central Brass Company.

Providing for wage increases, the union ship, strict job protection through seniority rights and other improvements in working conditions, the agreement was hailed by the union as a big victory.

Under the terms of the agreement, minimum rates for beginners are raised from 35c to 40c an hour, with an increase of 2.5 cents per hour every three months for the next year, bringing the base rate up to 50c within a year.

"Final agreement which terminated the four weeks of negotiations, restored complete understanding between the management and the union," Al Balint, NADCW organizer, said.

"Both have promised complete cooperation in handling employe-employer relations and there is now a basis for such cooperation."

Bay State Council Meets Mar. 2

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 17—The Massachusetts Industrial Union Council will hold its third annual convention here on March 2-3, President Michael Widman, Jr., announced today.

Headquarters for the meeting, which will bring together several hundred delegates from all parts of the state, will be at the Hotel Bancroft, it was announced. A number of prominent speakers will address the meeting.

Widman, formerly CIO regional director for New England, is now CIO assistant director of organization, with headquarters in Washington.

Pickets On Skiis!

NO WAR SCENE but a CIO picket line in action—members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers in Brockville, Ontario, made the best of a snowstorm when they reported for picket line duty on skiis. This patrol kept smiling, even in 15-below-zero weather, won a sizable increase in wages.

Washington Council Backs Lewis

Washington, Feb. 17 — Supporting the stand taken by President John L. Lewis at the golden jubilee convention of the United Mine Workers held recently in Columbus, Ohio, the Washington, D. C. CIO Industrial Union Council passed a resolution at its last meeting here refusing a blanket endorsement to the present Administration.

Speakers favoring the resolution pointed out that the Administration should be informed that CIO support for the Democratic party was not a foregone conclusion, but depended upon the support given to labor's cause.

The motion called upon organized labor to support liberal candidates on a platform pledged to stand for the vital needs of the American people.

The Council also decided in favor of a campaign among unions to popularize the CIO legislative program, and to aid in the distribution of CIO literature.

Pan-American Marine Setup Favored by CIO

Washington, Feb. 17—CIO maritime unions went on record here in favor of setting up a Pan-American Maritime Federation to include representatives from all maritime unions in North, Central and South American countries. The resolution was passed at a meeting of the CIO Maritime Committee, composed of CIO affiliates in the marine industries.

The committee, sharply criticizing the anti-union attitude of the U. S. Maritime Commission, demanded a Federal investigation of that body and urged that it be required to bargain collectively with organized workers on its ships.

Lewis Offers Unions' Aid To Youth, Announces Plan for CIO-AFL Peace

Problems Unsolved, Youth Told

By C. W. FOWLER

Washington, Feb. 17—John L. Lewis invited the youth of America to unite with the labor movement for independent political action against war and unemployment in a fighting one-hour speech at the American Youth Congress session here. "It is time for labor, it is time for the common people, it is time for the youth of America to get together," he said.

The invitation was extended in the name of Labor's Non-Partisan League, and was received with tremendous applause by the more than 3,500 delegates present, representing 4,000,000 organized young people.

Lewis' speech, which bristled with attacks on the failure of the administration to do anything about unemployment and other problems afflicting the nation, was delivered shortly after President Roosevelt had told the youth representatives that their concern over the danger of U. S. involvement in war was "unadulterated twaddle."

JOBS, NOT STATISTICS

He took the President sharply to task for delivering a long series of statistical tables to the Youth Congress after its leaders had asked him for an assurance of jobs, peace and civil rights.

"I am one of those who believe that Americans cannot live on statistics," he said. "I believe that when there are 10-12 million Americans, including 4 million young people without job opportunity, that it does no good to quote statistics."

The President's lecture on "twaddle" had come in connection with a resolution adopted by the New York Council of the Youth Congress protesting loans to Finland. It was delivered while the youth delegates stood on the White House lawn in a cold drenching rain.

"You stood this morning for a half hour in the rain on the White House lawn listening to the President of the United States," Lewis said. "Your spokesman in presenting you to the President said you would like to have some assurances on the question of jobs, on the question of peace, and on the question of civil liberties. What did you get?

"He said by implication that perhaps there is too much furor being raised by young people about jobs, because, 10, or 20 or 30 years ago young people also wanted jobs. Some answer!

"How much did that mean to

Haywood on Air, Feb. 19

Washington, Feb. 17.—Allan S. Haywood, CIO organization director, will speak on "CIO Organizing Plans and their Purpose" over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Co., Monday, February 19, at 9.30 p. m., Eastern Standard Time.

All CIO members and friends of organized labor are urged to listen in on Director Haywood's speech, which will describe the current CIO organizing drive and analyze the aims and achievements of the CIO during its four year history of organizing the unorganized.

Youths, League Agree On Formula

Washington, Feb. 17.—John L. Lewis' bid to the American Youth Congress to join hands with labor for political action on jobs, peace and civil rights brought immediate response when the Congress voted to instruct its Cabinet to prepare a working formula for acceptance of the invitation.

A formula was worked out in conference between Youth delegates and Labor's Non-Partisan League officers here, by which the question will be submitted to the Cabinet and to the full Congress meeting at a later date.

In the meantime, cooperation on immediate common problems of peace, jobs, the American Youth Act and other legislative problems was assured as a result of the meeting between the two groups here.

Demands Poll Tax Be Ended

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Washington, Feb. 17.—Poll taxes in Southern states which are depriving many white and Negro workers of their right to vote offer a job right away to "a brand spanking new Supreme Court", CIO President John L. Lewis told delegates to the American Youth Congress here.

"I am in favor of giving that Supreme Court one particular job right away," he said, referring to the tax, "so that we can find out whether or not we really have as good a Supreme Court as some of us believe."

Declaring that there are at least eight Southern states depriving Americans without money of the right to vote, Lewis condemned the poll tax system which not only requires payment of the tax for the current year as a qualification for voting, but also its payment for back years.

IMPAIR RIGHTS

"There is not any politician in this country, there is not a lawyer or an economist or a sociologist or an ordinary citizen who does not understand that these laws and those poll taxes are levied against the people of those states in order to impair their constitutional rights as native Americans to vote in the political elections," Lewis said.

Win 'Phone' Strike

New York, Feb. 17 — A four-week strike at the Credit Clothing House ended this week when more than 100 office employes returned to work under a contract with the United Office & Professional Workers, CIO.

The agreement provides for pay increases for all employes, a union shop, arbitration of grievances and vacations and sick leave with pay. During the strike, members of the UOPWA local assisted by members of other unions conducted "picketing by telephone" to tie up the Clearing House switchboard in protest against the firm's refusal to settle.

CIO Wins Poll In South, 381–12

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 17—An election held among workers of the McWane Cast Iron Pipe Company here resulted in a victory for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee which polled 381 votes to 12 against it.

For many months representatives of the SWOC have been trying by every legitimate means to induce the company to bargain collectively, CIO Regional Director Yelverton Cowherd said, in commenting on the election victory, and finally were forced to petition for an election to prove that SWOC represented the majority of the workers.

Asks Joint Meeting March 15

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' dramatic proposal for American labor unity appears to have led the AFL top leaders into a spirited search for alibis.

Lewis, in closing his address to the AYC on Feb. 10, assured Green that "as an evidence of my own good faith, I will not be a candidate in that convention for any office in the united organization.

"There is a practical plan in all simplicity, with no sinister attachments and an offer to eliminate Mr. Green's greatest agony, myself."

LEWIS PLAN

The Lewis plan, offered as a "formula that will result in immediate peace and settlement of the controversy in the house of labor," was this:

"I propose that on the 15th day of March, next, a special convention of the CIO and a special convention of the AFL be assembled in Constitution Hall in Washington, D. C.—one convention on each side of the aisle—and that the question to be voted on by that convention on the same day shall be:

"Resolved: That the Congress of Industrial Organizations and all of its membership this day become a part of the American Federation of Labor, and that charters of affiliation be granted by the American Federation of Labor to each unit of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and that further all questions of detail in the relationship of the two organizations hitherto existing shall be taken up for later consideration in such fashion as the joint convention may decide."

The CIO president then continued: "There is a plan to end the labor war and have labor peace in America on the afternoon of March 15.

"The way to have peace is to have peace!

"One roll call by both organizations on that day will eliminate the controversy in the house of labor. All questions of detail or overlapping jurisdiction or points of friction hitherto engendered can be disposed of through machinery set up within the united federation without the public being trou-

Wagner Act Hearings End; Pressman, Carey Ask Law Be Saved

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Senate and House Labor Committees today buckled down to the problem of recommendations on the flock of bills aimed at tearing the heart out of the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Hearings before the Senate Committee came to a conclusion last week with more than 3,000 pages of testimony in the records. This week the House Labor Committee heard the CIO's final witness, General Counsel Lee Pressman warn that the proposed amendments are backed only by outspoken foes of organized labor and a few top officials of the AFL.

Testifying before the same House Committee, James B. Carey, CIO secretary and president of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, warned enemies of the Wagner Act to "think a long, long time" before they "cast down the gauntlet of warfare to organized labor, and before destroying the legal mechanisms by which orderly adjustment of differences is now a practical thing."

"The three amendments asked by the CIO are reasonable, fair amendments," he said. "They are just, and they further the democratic principles on which our nation is based. They make for industrial peace, not industrial discord.

"These things are so, and demonstrably so—and the fact that powerful instruments of propaganda and eloquent spokesmen for enemies of labor are trying to conceal the truth in the situation does not make it any less the truth."

Pressman presented the committee a 200-page statement discussing in detail legal aspects of the CIO's opposition to the amendments and then talked informally about key questions raised during the lengthy hearings.

To strike out the Labor Board's right to stop interference with workers' choice of units, he pointed out, would nullify the Act and make possible the complete domination of labor organizations by employers.

There is no "freedom of speech" issue involved in the ban on inteference with workers' rights, the CIO counsel argued. Where the Labor Board has cracked down on "expression of opinion, it has been part and parcel of a plan to withhold from workers the right to belong to unions of their own choice," he pointed out.

Declaring that we have "carefully followed the course of the hearings," Pressman said that "I personally have never before listened to such a host of deliberate mis-statements and absolute distortions of the record as has been ground out before this Committee day after day by witnesses hostile to the Act who have pretended to deal with the record of Labor Board cases."

Put Up Or Shut Up

The question has once more been put squarely up to the leaders of the American Federation of Labor: "Do you want a unified labor movement, or don't you?"

Four years ago, these same craft leaders did not. They chose to split the labor movement by driving the CIO unions out of the AFL.

A great new labor movement has grown up as a result, outside of the AFL. It already overshadows the older Federation, and in the natural course of events is destined to supplant it.

The CIO has repeatedly offered to re-unite with the AFL, but every offer has been turned down by the AFL leaders to date.

In 1937, the CIO initiated unity negotiations, which broke down because the AFL leaders were more concerned with splitting the CIO than with uniting with it.

In 1938, CIO President John L. Lewis offered to lead the whole CIO into the AFL, if the Federation would charter every CIO union and call a convention to work out further problems. The AFL leaders were not willing.

In 1939, the CIO proposed to join with the AFL in forming one united American Congress of Labor, in which the independent railroad Brotherhoods would hold the balance of power. This proposal too was rejected.

Futile negotiations ensued, and when these broke down, the AFL leaders tried to create the impression that not they but the CIO was blocking unity.

Now, in 1940, the CIO once more gives the lie to this propaganda. Holding that the best way to unity is to unite, and settle minor differences afterward in a united organization, Pres. Lewis has proposed that both organizations meet in the same hall on a definite and early date to vote on one proposition—namely, that the whole CIO become a part of the AFL, with charters granted to all of its units.

In other words, if the AFL leaders want a united labor movement, the CIO is willing to consummate such unity in the quickest and simplest fashion.

If they don't, let them at least have the grace to say so, and stop trying to kid the public.

Let The People Vote

The right to vote is basic to every principle of democracy.

Yet the Congress of the United States has Senators and Congressmen among its members who represent not the majority, but only a small minority of the citizens of their respective states, because a majority of the people there are denied the right to vote.

The right to vote in these states is reserved to higher income groups and denied to the poorer citizens by the so-called poll tax.

This tax not only requires citizens to pay for the privilege of voting, but if they have been too poor to pay for any period, when the time comes that they can pay, they have to pay for all the years they have defaulted before they can vote.

It is hardly a coincidence that the representatives elected from the eight states where poll taxes are in force, are among the most reactionary and anti-labor in Congress. They claim to speak for the people of their respective states, but actually they are elected only by the wealthier minority.

The constitution of the United States is supposed to guarantee democratic procedure, including the right to vote.

That is why CIO President John L. Lewis proposes that an immediate test be made of the constitutionality of denying Americans the right to vote through the poll tax.

"We have a brand spanking new Supreme Court—a 1940 model, streamlined," he said in a recent speech. "I am in favor of giving that Supreme Court this particular job right away."

Lewis urged that the President and the Attorney-General cause proceedings to be started and carried to the Supreme Court "to attack and strike down those damnable provisions inflicted upon those Southern states in these iniquitous poll taxes."

Such a procedure, he said, would be "designed to restore to Americans in the Southern states just the right to vote, and when that is done we can take time out to see who the people of those states would like to vote for in some elections."

The Beacon Light

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Invitation To Youth

IT is no crime to be young. It is no crime to be out of a job. But you get punished just the same.

The young men and women who listened to John L. Lewis at the Youth Congress in Washington had taken a lot of punishment before he stood up to take their part.

They had made the grave mistake — still no crime — of being born just around the end of one world war. As a result they are reaching military age in good time for the next.

A further punishable mistake on the part of these young people is that most of them chose the wrong kind of parents.

The door of opportunity is open wide to the young man who picks his parents with discretion. He can start at the bottom in any industry and rise to the top within a year or less, if his father owns enough of it.

The present generation of youth also shows a very poor sense of timing in starting to look for jobs, trying to enter professions, or even thinking of getting married just now.

When, as at present, there are four million more young Americans looking for jobs than there are jobs to be had, it is obviously better to take up polo than to look for a job.

They Who Get Slapped

But the younger generation is always "miguided." It seldom starves with as much patience as its elders. It lacks the philosophical complacency of those who have attained girth and goodly incomes. It gets ideas that something had to be done.

So some four or five thousand young Americans descended on Washington, with the idea that the government ought to do something to provide more jobs and more opportunity for young Americans, and to register their objection to being shot full of holes in any wars that older heads might have in mind.

With all the perverseness of youth, they had to do this just at the very time when the government was beginning to think it had been doing too much for young people — just when President Roosevelt had recommended a sharp cut in the budget for the Natl. Youth Administration and for the CCC.

They had to register their objections to policies that might lead to war, just at a time when a propaganda campaign was reaching fever heat to enlist American sympathies in Europe and to put across a foreign loan.

These young Americans marched down Pennsylvania Avenue and stood in the rain before the White House until they were soaked to the skin, only to receive a verbal spanking.

They were told that 10, 20 and 30 years ago, there were also young people who wanted jobs. They were scolded for passing resolutions on subjects they didn't understand. And their fears that foreign loans might again lead in the direction of war, as happened last time, were described as "unadulterated twaddle."

Champion of Youth

It is necessary to understand something of this background, to appreciate the full impact of John L. Lewis' speech an hour or two later, when these same young people packed the Labor Dept. auditorium to hear what he had to say.

The CIO leader spoke as a champion of youth's demands. He congratulated them for organizing to make their needs known and their demands heard.

He applauded their alert suspicion of any moves that might lead to war. He told them that older men, as for instance the United Mine Workers of America, had also expressed opposition to loans to Finland and to other European belligerents.

"Those resolutions," he said,—so far from being twaddle, "are symbolic of what is in the hearts, not only of the young men and women of America, but of practically every citizen of our country.

"They represent the constant and the conscious and the subconscious ever-present fear that in some way the politicians and statesmen of this country and the warring world will in some fashion drag our country into that war — and it is a protest, it is a protest!

"After all, who has a greater right to protest against war or any part of war, or the diplomatic intrigues of war, or the subtle politics preceding war, than the young men who in the event of war will become cannon fodder."

Their Place with Labor

Lewis told the youth delegates that the progressive labor movement joins with them in their demand for jobs and an opportunity in life for every young American, as well as in their opposition to policies that may lead to war.

Noting the contempt and condemnation meted out to them by Republican and Democratic leaders, Lewis invited the Youth Congress to join with Labor's Non-Partisan League, "not identified with either the Democratic or the Republican party."

"It is time for labor, for the common people and for the youth of America to get together," he said. "There are problems ahead and everybody can do his part, and it is going to take united effort on the part of those who are the chief sufferers of doing nothing in this country."

Lewis' Speech To Youth Congress

A Blow Against War, A Proposal To The AFL

(The CIO NEWS herewith publishes the major portion of Pres. John L. Lewis' speech to the Citizenship Institute of the American Youth Congress at Washington on February 10. Full text of the speech will soon be available in pamphlet form.)

I AM happy to come here today to address you. I don't want to deal either in generalities or platitudes or statistics. I am one of those who believe that Americans cannot live on statistics. I believe that when there are 10 or 12 million Americans, including 4 million young people without job opportunity, that it does no good to quote statistics.

I come here today as the representative of the CIO and as Chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League in this country to express our pride and satisfaction that the young people of our country are organizing and becoming articulate and are making themselves felt as a force in our country.

The labor movement in America needs the energy, needs the force, needs the imagination of its younger citizens, and I do not believe that the sum total of all wisdom lies in those who happen to be born in a generation preceding your own. If that were true, America today would have no problem such as it now faces. We must remember that America went into an economic tailspin with all of the social and political questions that have followed it, with all the heart-burnings and agonies that have come to the American people in the last 10 years. That came about before most of you were old enough to take the blame for expressing any inexpert opinion.

Speech In The Rain

You stood this morning for a half hour in the rain on the White House Lawn listening to the President of the United States. Your spokesman in presenting you to the President of the United States said that you would like to have some assurances on the question of jobs, on the question of peace and on the question of civil liberties. What did you get?

The President said substantially that under certain conditions and certain forms of government you would not have the opportunity of standing on the lawn, in the rain, to ask for jobs. Well, I think you ought to be glad of that privilege. He said also by implication that perhaps there is too much furore being raised about jobs for young people because 10, 20 and 30 years ago, young people also wanted jobs. Some answer!

How much did that mean to one of you who needs a job, to one of you who has a job for which you are not trained or when you cannot get a job for which you are trained. How much did that mean to those of you who have plans to get married and to live the normal life of Americans to know that after all there is no great question of jobs, and that in the fullness of time perhaps conditions would get better.

How many years, how many years can you stand to be without a job? And how many years of interruption to your normal plans will you endure? How many years can you defer your projected marriage? How many years must you wonder and hope that you will have an opportunity here in your native land, to live the normal life of the normal citizen?

'Twaddle'?

Again you were told this morning that you should not adopt resolutions on questions upon which you are not expert. And that your resolution on Finland was "twaddle". Well, that statement comes to a head-on clash with my concept of the principles of Democracy.

I have been taught to believe that here in our own country, under this Flag, there are free forums which are a natural adjunct to the great forum of public opinion in the United States; that American ideals and American principles and American policies were crystallized in the crucible of public opinion in this country, from ideas thrown into that crucible by its articulate groups of citizens. And when the President of the United States calmly suggests today that the American Youth Congress has no right to say what it thinks about the Finnish question, or the Russian question, or the European question, the peace question, or any other question, I wonder where we are drifting. He says "go back and sin no more."

Miners Oppose Loans

It might interest this audience and the President to know that the recent convention of the United Mine Workers of America with 2,400 delegates in a deliberative convention in Columbus, representing a membership of 600,000 members and more than three million members of their dependent families, that the representatives of those 600,000 men adopted the same kind of a resolution on Finland as the American Youth Congress.

Those delegates were not as young in years as this convention. Many of them were experienced, mature men. At least they were practical men, at least they were honest and honorable men, and they felt that they had a right to say on that question just what they thought, just like any other citizen, no more and no less.

I wonder if the President would call the resolution adopted by the United Mine Workers of America "twaddle"?

Those resolutions are symbolic of what is in the hearts, not only of the young men and women of America, but of practically every citizen of our country. They represent the constant and the conscious and the subconscious ever-present fear that in some way the politicians and statesmen of this country and the warring world will in some fashion drag our country into that war—and it is a protest, it is a protest.

After all, who has a greater right to protest against war or any part of war, or the diplomatic intrigues of war, or the subtle politics preceding war, than the young men who in the event of war will become cannon fodder?

I am against war. I am willing to fight for the protection of our homeland against invasion of any foreign foe, but I am not willing to raise my voice and influence my son, or influence any other father's son in favor of going to war to suit the policies and requirements of imperialistic world governments or the despairing situation that affects world politicians.

I am perfectly conscious of the widespread propaganda going on in this country now, promoted by certain countries in Europe to inspire Americans with a sense of greater obligation on the Allies side in the European War. These things are being done, words are being spoken, printed word is being circulated, speeches are being made.

Workers Don't Profit

A great bishop in the Church of England the other day in a public address in England said that he thought Americans would be ashamed to take the profits of war purchases here in America and not side with Britain and France in the European conflict. Well, may I say to the good Bishop of the Church of England, that the American people as such are not getting the profits of that war. There are a few corporations and a few families making war munitions that are getting all the advantages of their sales of goods to the belligerent countries.

The average American is not getting any of that profit. And from 10 to 12 million Americans are walking the streets looking for jobs while relief is being cut in appropriations in Congress, and while they look forward to tomorrow with increasing despair. In any event Americans want to profit from war. America did not start this war. And every American dreams of keeping out of this war, and Americans as I understand them will hold to strict accountability any politician or any statesman who undertakes to involve this country in a war in Europe or a war in the Pacific.

So I hope that you will adopt resolutions when you think it is time to adopt resolutions on the question of peace or war, of jobs or civil liberties or any other question which concerns you as citizens and as Americans. Why, I think the President would understand that if he applied that same rule to the professional politicians in the Democratic Party, that they could not talk about anything that they did not understand, that he would lose the next election. And I am not sure that the President himself, if he applied the rule to himself, would not find his efficiency impaired.

CIO Has Program

I come today representing an organization which is the only great instrumentality in this country that does have a program for America and for Americans. The CIO has a legislative program. It runs to the questions in which you and every American are interested. Unfortunately, Congress in this session is not taking very much notice of it, or anything else. But one of the first of the subjects covered in that program is that the number one problem of America is still the problem of 9 to 10 million men and women who are still without jobs in private industry. In spite of the most intensive acceleration of business activity during the past few months, the huge number of unemployed remains undiminished.

For three years the CIO through its leaders has been petitioning the Administration here in Washington, including the President of the United States to call a national conference on the question of employment for Americans. Not a huge town meeting or a great convention but a conference of the distinguished leaders of industry, finance, agriculture, labor, government and any other cross-section of the population, to hold a clinic on this subject and to recommend to the government and to the American people a sensible course of procedure to be followed and a sensible approach to the question of alleviating unemployment and putting Americans to work.

Unemployment Confab

That conference has not been called. I do not know why. I am weary of asking. The United Mine Workers of America in their great convention two weeks ago again adopted a resolution asking the President of the United States if he would not convene such a conference and pave the way for a study of this problem.

No one else can convene a conference of sufficient importance to deal with this question because it would be a self-constituted conference, and as a result would not receive public support to the degree that it should. The country looks to its statesmen and to its political leadership to make suggestions and to lead the way and give support to these practical considerations which now press so heavily upon us.

The CIO stands for no involvement in any foreign war. It stands for the protection of the youth of the nation, including the members of your organization. It stands for the preservation of civil liberties. It asks that that protection and those liberties be accorded every citizen born under this flag regardless of his color or his creed or his geographical location.

You know, we have a brand spanking new Supreme Court — a 1940 model — streamlined. I am in favor of giving that Supreme Court one particular job right away, so that we can find out whether or not we really have as good a Supreme Court as some of us believe.

End The Poll Tax

There are at least eight Southern states that deprive Americans without money of the right to vote. They levy poll taxes against the poor Negroes and whites, and they cannot vote in the elections unless they pay their poll tax, and in addition to that, if through a period of years they have been so poor that they could not either pay or vote, whenever the time comes when they can pay, they have to pay for all the defaulting years in order to vote.

There is not any politician in this country, there is not a lawyer or an economist or a sociologist or an ordinary citizen who does not understand that those laws and those poll taxes are levied against the people of those states in order to impair their constitutional rights as native Americans to vote in the political elections.

All right. I think that is just about as cowardly a practice as any politician could ever devise to take away from a free-born American his inalienable rights granted under the constitution and supposed to be protected under that flag.

I am in favor of the President and the Attorney General of United States instructing the Civil Liberties Bureau of the Department of Justice to bring in the Federal Courts in this country a judicial proceeding and carry it to the Supreme Court, a judicial proceeding to attack and strike down those damnable provisions inflicted upon the citizens of those Southern states in these iniquitous poll taxes.

While we are talking about civil liberties here in this country, and the Attorney

General talked to you about them from this platform last night, let him exercise the wits of those hundreds of lawyers that his department employs by putting them to work upon a judicial procedure which is designed to restore to Americans in the Southern states, just the right to vote, and when that is done we can take time out to see whom the people of those states would like to vote for in some elections.

'Affiliate With League'

I do not know what the future of the American Youth Congress may be or what resolutions it may adopt. I wish, however, to give you this message, and I give it to you as Chairman of Labor's National Non-Partisan League, not identified with either the Democratic or the Republican Party, but standing always for the rights and principles of free America, for the support of its meritorious institutions, for the preservation of the flag, and for the protection of the homeland, and for a job and civil liberties.

And while other people may be condemning you, and the Republican Party saying it doesn't want to associate with you, and the Democratic Party through its titular spokesman saying he doubts that you know what you are talking about, as Chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League I issue an invitation to the American Youth Congress to become affiliated or come to a working arrangement with Labor's Non-Partisan League of America.

I want to say this to you also, that if you ever decide to accept that affiliation or come to that working arrangement with the millions of others in this country that you can thus associate yourselves with, we won't be sending any detectives down to your meetings to scrutinize your resolutions to see what you are putting in them.

It is time for labor, it is time for the common people, and it is time for the youth of America to get together. There are problems ahead and everybody can do his part, and it is going to take united effort on the part of those who are the chief sufferers of doing nothing in this country. So we welcome you, whenever you are ready, but don't come unless you are prepared to work and unless you are prepared to fight in this cause for greater opportunities for yourselves.

Surely, I am widely criticized because some people say I am so vigorous in my statements at times and I quite agree that I think pretty strongly on some of these propositions. They run to the question of life and death, and I am prepared at any time to debate the rights of labor, the rights of the youth of America, the right of the common people of America, with any champion in any forensic arena in America, or all of them standing together.

CIO & Labor Peace

One other subject that I want to touch upon before I close. In the newspapers of yesterday and today it seems that President Roosevelt and President Green of the American Federation of Labor have agreed that I am solely responsible for the non-convening of the peace conferences between those two organizations, the AFL and the CIO.

Well, that is a remarkable discovery, because I have been willing to admit it all the time. I have not wished to go into any more peace conferences unless I had some reason to believe they would be fruitful, and the last ones we were in were unfruitful.

I have been perfectly willing at any time if the Secretary of Labor or Mr. Green or anyone else would give me information to the effect that the position of the AFL would be any different if a new conference were called.

I do not quite understand how the White House press bureau permitted to go out the statement in the newspapers today that I had made no answer to the President's communication on the subject of last October. As a matter of fact I wrote the President a letter from San Francisco, California, on October 15, 1939, in answer to his letter of October 6.

That was the formal answer of the CIO to the President on this subject. And may I say that since that time the Secretary of Labor, the President of the United States have never indicated that they possess any information that would lead to the conclusion that the conferences would be fruitful if they reconvened. While I have every desire to negotiate I have no desire to waste my time, nor the time of others.

Proposal To AFL

But if the AFL and the President of the United States are sincere in wanting peace between these great organizations of labor, I offer here this afternoon a formula that will result in immediate peace and settlement of the controversy in the house of labor.

I propose that on the 15th day of March next a special convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and a special convention of the American Federation of Labor be assembled in Constitution Hall in Washington, D. C.—one convention on each side of the aisle—that the question to be voted on by that convention on the same day shall be:

RESOLVED that the Congress of Industrial Organizations and all of its units and all of its membership this day become a part of the American Federation of Labor and that charters of affiliation be granted by the American Federation to each unit of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and that further all questions of detail in the relationship of the two organizations hitherto existing shall be taken up for later consideration in such fashion as the joint convention may decide.

Just that!

There is a plan to end the labor war and have labor peace in American on the afternoon of March 15th.

The way to have peace is to have peace!

And one roll call by both organizations on that day will eliminate the controversy in the house of labor. And all questions of detail or overlapping jurisdiction or points of friction hitherto engendered can be disposed of through machinery set up within the united federation without the public being troubled, or the politicians being driven to distraction, without any American being inconvenienced.

I propose that in all sincerity as a way out. And as an evidence of my own good faith I will assure Mr. William Green that I will not be a candidate in that convention for any office in the united organization. There is a practical plan in all simplicity with no sinister attachments and an offer to eliminate Mr. Green's greatest agony, myself.

Awaits Answer

Now let us see what will happen with that proposition and let us see whether the Executive Council with Mr. Green now in Miami will accept it or whether they will pick flaws in it and say that Mr. Lewis has an ulterior motive. You know that search for ulterior motives is the most futile pursuit in the world. No one ever caught one.

And I wonder if President Roosevelt who is so anxious to give Mr. Green my answer on the other proposal will favor me equally as well now by undertaking to get Mr. Green's answer to my proposal.

one of you who needs a job?" Lewis asked, "to one of you who has a job for which you are not trained? How much did that mean to those of you who have plans to get married and to live the normal life of Americans, to know that after all there is no great question of jobs and in the fullness of time perhaps conditions will get better?"

The President's scolding of the youth organization for adopting a resolution against loans to Finland was answered by Lewis with the statement that "that comes to a head-on clash with my concepts of the principles of democracy.

"I have been taught to believe that here in our country under this flag there are free forums which are a natural adjunct to the great forum of public opinion in the United States . . . and when the President of the United States calmly suggests today that the American Youth Congress has no right to say what it thinks about the Finnish question, or the Russian question, or the European question, the peace question or any other question, I wonder where we are drifting."

Lewis reminded his audience and President Roosevelt that the recent convention of the United Mine Workers in Columbus had adopted "the same kind of resolution on Finland as the Youth Congress."

The reception given to Lewis' speech contrasted sharply with the cold response given to the President a few hours earlier. Delegates rose to their feet as he entered, repeatedly interrupted him by applause and crowded around him by the hundreds as he left the hall.

General Motors Poll Due in April

DETROIT, Feb. 17.—Labor Board hearings this week have given the green light to plans for an NLRB poll of General Motors' 125,000 employes some time in April.

With concessions made by both the CIO United Automobile Workers and the AFL union, the last obstacle to holding the poll before spring seasonal shutdowns apparently had been removed.

Under the agreement the UAW-CIO will bargain after the election for all plants as a unit where it has won a majority and where "issues common to such plants" arise. The union had demanded that all plants won by it be automatically placed in a single bargaining unit. It conceded the same right to the AFL union, if that organization should win any plants in the election.

OPEN TO INTERPRETING

The agreement leaves the issue of bargaining unit somewhat open to interpretation. The union will feel entitled to claim that all issues of wages, working conditions and grievance procedure are common to all the plants, though the corporation may try to argue a different view. The difference, if any, seems too likely to be settled by two factors — the number of plants won by the UAW-CIO and the size of the majority.

If the majority is 90 per cent, as was the case in the Chrysler Michigan plants during last September's NLRB elections, the UAW-CIO is not likely to have much trouble convincing the corporation that almost any issue is common to all the plants.

Maritime Union Hails Supreme Court Ruling

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. — The National Maritime Union today described the U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Waterman Steamship case as "our greatest victory since the 1937 strike."

The court ruling, which had the unanimous endorsement of the eight participating justices, upheld a National Labor Relations Board order while upsetting an adverse decision handed down by the U. S. circuit court in New Orleans.

Read by Justice Hugo Black, the decision leaves judgment of facts in Labor Board cases strictly to the NLRB, a procedure which the high court said was the original intent of Congress in passing the Wagner Act. Tory foes of the Act have been agitating for the very practice which the Supreme Court banned in this decision.

$200,000 BACK PAY

Forty-three seamen will win reinstatement and close to $200,000 in back pay as a result of the high tribunal's action, Pres. Joseph Curran of the NMU estimated.

"This decision settles, once and for all, the question of continuous employment for seamen," Curran said. "The Waterman company and other companies contended that a seamen's employment begins when he signs on and ends when he signs off.

'VITALLY IMPORTANT'

"The National Labor Relations Board upheld us and now the U. S. Supreme Court has upheld us. This decision is vitally important to 110,000 seamen sailing out of Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports and on the Great Lakes."

bled, or the politicians being driven to distraction, without any American being inconvenienced.

"I propose that in all sincerity as a way out."

He opened discussion of the unity problem by pointing to newspaper stories that Pres. Roosevelt and Green "agreed" that the CIO leader was responsible for the two labor groups' peace committees failing to reconvene.

"That is a remarkable discovery," Lewis said, "because I have been willing to admit it all the time."

The reason, he added, is that "I have not wished to go into any more peace conferences unless I had some reason to believe they would be fruitful, and the last ones we were in were unfruitful."

Then, pulling a letter from his pocket, Pres. Lewis flatly contradicted a statement from the White House press bureau that Pres. Roosevelt had received no answer to his letter addressed to the CIO convention in San Francisco last October. He then read his reply, dated Oct. 15, 1939, to Pres. Roosevelt's letter.

In that message Lewis apprised the President of the CIO convention decision authorizing the CIO peace negotiating committee to continue "to exercise discretionary authority in any further consideration of the subject.

Labor and The Law:

Mr. Justice Black -- A True Liberal

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

Two opinions were recently issued by the Supreme Court of the United States, both written by Mr. Justice Hugo Black, which are of far-reaching importance. They both reflect the true humanitarian understanding which Mr. Justice Black has of the problems which confront the common people today.

The first case involved the National Labor Relations Act. The Labor Board had issued an order against the Waterman Steamship Company directing the company to reinstate with back pay two crews of seamen who had been discharged by the company because of their affiliation with the CIO National Maritime Union. The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, to which the order of the Board was taken for enforcement, reversed the order and denied any relief to the discharged seamen.

SLAPS LOWER COURTS

Mr. Justice Black, in his opinion, reviewed the evidence which was presented at the hearings before the Labor Board and came to the conclusion that the Board was justified in holding that the men had been discharged for a single reason, namely, their membership in the CIO union. In reversing the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals Mr. Justice Black held that, since the findings of the Labor Board were supported by a substantial amount of the evidence the findings of the Board must be final.

There is no doubt but that the Supreme Court was addressing itself to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals throughout the country which have, in many jurisdictions in recent months, demonstrated a reluctance to accept the basic principles of the Wagner Act and too frequently have been reversing the orders of the Board even though supported by substantial evidence.

The Supreme Court emphasized the rule that the Circuit Court of Appeals have no right to encroach upon the exclusive power of the Labor Board given to it by Congress to make findings of fact, which if supported by substantial evidence must be accepted as final by the courts. Mr. Justice Black particularly pointed out that this kind of procedure was adopted by Congress in order to meet the very complex administrative problems which arise in the solution of industrial disputes.

It is hoped that this admonition from the Supreme Court of the United States may put a stop to the brazen attempt on the part of several Federal Courts to set aside Labor Board orders merely because the judges differ in their conclusions from the Board in the determination of the facts involved in the controversy.

HELPS COMMON PEOPLE

In the second case, four young Negroes had been convicted for murder in the State of Florida and sentenced to death. Their conviction was based upon confessions which they had given to the police after long questioning and physical mistreatment at the hands of the police. In setting aside their conviction on the ground that it constituted a denial of due process under the Fourteenth Amendment, Mr. Justice Black, in his opinion, summarized the fight of the common people for recognition of their rights under the Federal Constitution as eloquently as it has ever been stated. He said:

". . . this argument flouts the basic principle that all people must stand on an equality before the bar of justice in every American court. Today, as in ages past, we are not without tragic proof that the exalted power of some governments to punish manufactured crime dictatorially is the handmaid of tyranny.

"Under our constitutional system, courts stand against any winds that blow as havens of refuge for those who might otherwise suffer because they are helpless, weak, outnumbered, or because they are non-conforming victims of prejudice and public excitement. Due process of law, preserved for all by our Constitution, commands that no such practice as that disclosed by this record shall send any accused to his death.

"No higher duty, no more solemn responsibility, rests upon this Court, than that of translating into living law and maintaining this constitutional shield deliberately planned and inscribed for the benefit of every human being subject to our Constitution—of whatever race, creed or persuasion."

It is to be hoped that all our judges will take to heart this succinct statement on the part of Mr. Justice Black and really give protection to all the people in the exercise of their fundamental rights granted to them under the Constitution and the laws of our country.

Philly Stores to Feature 'Union Label' Products

Philadelphia, Feb. 17—With labor in this city acutely feeling the need of retail establishments which handle "union label" merchandise exclusively to fill the need created by the increased "union label" consciousness of the population, a number of prominent laborites have succeeded in interesting a group of private persons in opening a series of such stores.

The first of these stores will open this spring in Kensington under the joint sponsorship of a number of trade union committees and the operators of the store. The establishment will operate in closest cooperation with the unions and many incentives will be offered union members to assure them increased value for their buying dollar.

Labor realizes the necessity of guaranteeing work to union factories by buying only union label goods and stores such as these will fill the need by having all union label products conveniently situated under one roof.

Special Alice Mr. Hathaway.
One of them Negro houses up there at the mine tuesday of this week 9th caught fire from that paper lining and burned up and the Negroes babie the woman had to go off after water about 400 yards and before she could get back the wind blowed the paper loose and burned house and baby and every thing they had that why we need the union C.I.O.

THIS LETTER was received by officials of the Quarry Workers Intl. Union from a worker in the chalk quarries at McIntyre, Ga.:

"One of them Negro houses up there at the mine Tuesday of this week—9th—caught fire from that paper lining and burned up, and the Negroes' baby. The woman had to go off after water about 400 yards, and before she could get back the wind blowed the paper loose and burned house and baby and everything they had. That's why we need the union CIO."

Furniture Workers Hold Regional Parley

GARDNER, Mass., Feb. 17. — Delegates from 25 locals of the United Furniture Workers, CIO, in an area extending from Maine to South Carolina attended the second biennial Eastern Seaboard conference of the UFW meeting here in this important furniture center.

Max Perlow, international union vice-president, was elected chairman of the conference. UFW President Morris Muster, in his report to the delegates reviewed the gains won by the CIO furniture union since its national convention held at Rockford, Ill., a year ago. He said that about 7,000 new members have joined the union in the Eastern area, and that 14 new locals have been established.

Attacks in the local press against the UFW, in the form of quotes from Dies Committee statements, were denounced by Muster, who pointed out that Representative Casey from Massachusetts, a member of the committee had already retracted such statements.

Steel Union Parleys Open In Two Cities

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 17 — A district convention of lodges affiliated with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Indianapolis area will open here tomorrow.

James Robb, SWOC regional director, in this area, said that some 400 delegates are expected in addition to many visitors. The sessions will be held at the Amalgamated Auditorium. Speakers will include Van A. Bittner, SWOC Mid-West director, and David J. MacDonald, SWOC secretary-treasurer.

PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 17—The second annual convention of locals of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Philadelphia area opens here today at the Amalgamated Center. Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, and CIO vice-president, is scheduled to address the delegates in his first speech in Philadelphia. Charles Weinstein of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is also scheduled to speak.

About 300 representatives from 29 lodges in the area are in town for the convention. Outstanding business to be taken up by the delegates includes the drafting of a model agreement for all locals in the district, outlining demands for higher wages and better working conditions in negotiations which will be going on in the period from the end of February to June.

Clothing Union Re-Affirms CIO Allegiance

New York, Feb. 17. — The national office of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America said today it has been asked to comment on the story published in the press based on individual expressions in a meeting held by one of the New York Amalgamated locals that the clothing workers had split on affiliation with the CIO.

In the absence of General President Hillman, Assistant President Jacob S. Potofsky stated that "There should be no misunderstanding regarding the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America stand on the CIO. There is no rift between the CIO and the Amalgamated and there will be none."

SUPPORT CIO

Mr. Potofsky further stated "We are 100 per cent behind every effort of the CIO to organize the unorganized and to spread the principles of industrial organization. Our membership from coast to coast has shown that the Amalgamated is overwhelmingly in favor of the CIO of which it is one of the founders.

"A democratic institution such as the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America naturally contains some political differences among its membership, but there are no differences among us on the industrial field."

Spying Charged To Ford

Edgewater, N. J., Feb. 17.—Spying on union activities and firing of union men are charged against the plant of the Ford Motor Company here in a complaint field with the Natl. Labor Relations Board by the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

Six union leaders with a service record at the Edgewater plant ranging from 11 to 22 years have been discharged, the CIO union declared, in an attempt to defeat a renewed union drive launched about a month ago.

Leonard H. Goldsmith, executive secretary of the New Jersey CIO Council, in commenting on the filing of the charges said that the company has violated the Wagner Act by spying on workers, by intimidation, coercion and every other device at its command to prevent the workers from organizing.

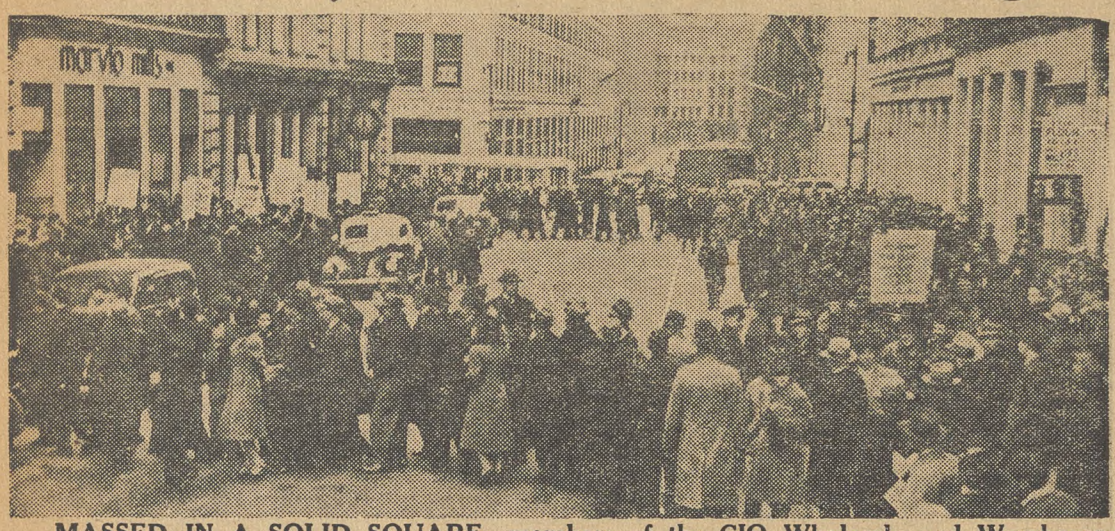
See Danger In Vigilante Activities

Denver, Feb. 17. — A warning that the present vigilante situation in the state of Washington, which has already brought about many anti-union outrages and the death of Mrs. Law, wife of a union organizer, threatened a revival of 1919-1920 terrorism against workers, was sounded here by Reid Robinson, president of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union.

Robinson wrote to Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, urging that the CIO demand a Federal probe of the Law killing and other anti-union acts in Washington.

"The whole thing behind the situation is the fact that the men want to get a $1.00 a day increase in wages because of the better economic conditions in the lumber industry," Robinson wrote.

"There is a possibility of a repetition of the Vigilante action that was rampant in 1919, when Wesley Everett was killed in Centralia by members of the American Legion and stooges for the big lumber companies," he added.



Hapgood To Aid Ship Builders

Camden, N. J., Feb. 17—Powers Hapgood, CIO organizer with a long record of activity in many colorful CIO campaigns, was welcomed here this week by President John Green of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, as a new member of his organizing staff.

Hapgood who is national director for the United Shoe Workers, has been assigned by CIO President John L. Lewis as special organizer to aid the IUMSW in its drive to complete the unionization of the shipbuilding industry.

Past strikes and drives in which Hapgood has aided CIO unions include the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. strike in Akron in 1936 which ended in a victory that established the United Rubber Workers, followed in turn by strikes to which he was assigned by the CIO in the auto, steel and radio industries.

Pamphlet Shows Craft Unions' Failure To Meet New Era

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Backwardness of the construction industry under the craft union setup as contrasted with progress of industries organized by the CIO is stressed in a new pamphlet released by the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

Failure of the outworn craft unions to organize the industry is exposed by the pamphlet, "Program of the UCWOC". It points out that among the nation's major industries construction is one of the most poorly organized. The pamphlet says:

"Of nearly 3,000,000 workers available for employment in construction far less than 1,000,000 are members of unions. If union officials, city employes, maintenance men, and others holding union cards are excluded, it becomes apparent there are less than 500,000 union members actually working at their trades."

CRAFTS' FAILURE

This striking failure of craft unions to do the organizing job in the construction industry contrasts sharply with the high degree of organization in the mass industries where the CIO is dominant.

"Large segments of the construction industry," it goes on, "are almost entirely outside the union fold. Residential construction is done almost entirely by non-union labor, or by union members working at non-union rates.

"Most of the heavy construction, such as roads, dams, railroads, aqueducts, etc., are on an open-shop basis. Were it not for the government building program craft unions would put up but a small fraction of America's buildings."

Earnings of craft union members compare unfavorably with those obtained by CIO members. Yearly incomes of construction workers are "lower than the annual earnings of similarly qualified workers in the manufacturing industries."

Government figures show the annual income of construction workers to be less than $1,000. This in face of the fact that about 80 per cent of these workers are classed as skilled mechanics.

Low annual earnings of construction workers are caused by the widespread unemployment and irregularity of employment. Today, there are more than 1,000,000 unemployed building-trades men. Even those employed actually work but part of the time. Official figures show that more than half the craft union members are either wholly or partially unemployed.

SYMPTOM OF FAILURE

Another symptom of the failure of the craft union system is the fact that proportionately more union men are without jobs in construction than are non-union men.

Says the UCWOC pamphlet:

"Victims of the outworn craft setup are the workers, employers, and the public — everyone concerned with construction. This industry, once the biggest in America, still lags far behind in the recovery parade. Why? Is not the fact that it is the one really major industry still creeping along on the craft union principle of significance?"

Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained by writing the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, United Mine Workers Building, 15th and Eye St., Washington, D. C.

Boatmen Quit AFL, Join CIO In South

Birmingport, Ala., Feb. 17. — Workers at the important Warrier River Terminal today had left an AFL union in a body to join the CIO Inland Boatmen's Union.

The switch occurred after the head of the Alabama AFL federation and an AFL representative adjourned a meeting of the company's employes. After speeches by Rep. Kendrick of the CIO boatmen and CIO Field Representative Youngblood, all those present signed CIO membership cards.

The terminal is a key spot in the transportation of raw materials for the Tennessee Coal & Iron Railroad Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary.

Murray To Speak In Ohio City

Warren, Ohio, Feb. 17—Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee will speak here Feb. 25 under auspices of a lodge named in his honor.

Murray will appear in connection with the inauguration of Philip Murray Lodge of the SWOC, which is planning a big organizational campaign in this area.

Present plans call for the meeting to be held in the High School Auditorium.

Relief Crises Described As 'Plague'

New York, Feb. 17 — Recurring local relief crises are becoming the "plague of the nation" the national executive board of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers charged in a statement released during the board's quarterly meeting here.

Cleveland's recent relief crisis was described as part of the "formula" to cut standards for the unemployed, while the weeding out of professionally trained relief workers and their replacement by "political hacks" who will "carry out the bidding of their political patrons" was described as another aspect of the same drive against the jobless.

Pres. Abram Flaxer of the SCMWA warned board members that the government worker is "caught between the crossfire of economy sniping and a barrage of pro-war propaganda."

CIO Council Plans Oregon Campaign

EUGENE, Ore., Feb. 17.—Resolutions calling for organizing conferences and organizing committees in various sections of the state and sending of organizers into the lumber camps of Southern Oregon were unanimously passed by delegates to the second annual convention of the Oregon State Industrial Union Council held here Feb. 10 and 11.

Main speakers at the two day convention representing 15,000 CIO members, were Richard Francis, CIO director for the state of Washington, and Harold J. Prichett, president of the International Woodworkers of America.

"The best assurance of peace in the labor movement is to organize the unorganized till the CIO becomes the most powerful labor organization in the world," Pritchett told the delegates.

Both Pritchett and Francis expressed approval of the policy of withholding endorsement of presidential candidates at this time.

"We are confronted with America's economic problem No. 1—unemployment. Yet, while the civil budget has been cut in half, expenditures for war purposes have trippled. There is a tendency on a part of the administration leadership to lean on somebody else's war."

Francis told the delegates that "we are going to bargain for labor. You don't endorse policies of the shipowners before you go into negotiations with them. We're not going to be sold down the river again."

The convention hit cuts in the Federal budget for social services; called for strict neutrality in the European war, rapping loans to nations engaged in the war and transfer of ships to foreign registry; asked for labor representation on government boards; hit use of the Sherman anti-trust act against unions.

RESOLUTIONS

In resolutions on civil liberties, the body endorsed the LaFollette Oppressive Labor Practices bill; called for discontinuance of the Dies Committee; asked for a Federal grand jury investigation of the murder of Laura Law in Aberdeen, Wash.; and called for passage of the Marcantonio bill giving Filipinos citizenship.

The incoming officers were instructed to call a legislative conference of state farm and labor organizations.

John Brost, incumbent, was the only nominee for president. Others to be on a referendum election ballot are F. E. Wing and Ben C. Garske, for vice-president; Ralph W. Peoples, incumbent, and J. E. Laux, for secretary-treasurer. All but Brost, who is a member of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's union, are members of the International Woodworkers of America.

Seamen Ask Action Against Skipper Of 'City of Flint'

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The CIO National Maritime Union today accused Capt. Joseph A. Gainard, skipper of the S. S. City of Flint, of neglect of duty, and asked the federal government to revoke his master's license.

The charges were based on affidavits from members of the crew of the ship, which was an object of international attention early this year when it was seized by the German navy. After a stay in Murmansk, Russia, the ship was sailed down the Norwegian coast in possession of a Nazi prize crew. When it put into port at Haugesund, Norway, however, Norwegian officials removed the German crew and restored the ship to the Americans.

Burden of the NMU complaint is that Gainard had several opportunities to get his crew out of the hands of the German prize crew and to get in touch with American authorities. They charged that in each case he refused to do so.

THREATENED CREW

Gainard even threatened to put the entire crew in irons, the complaint charges, when seamen's representatives asked him to allow members of the crew to go ashore while the ship was in German hands at Tromsoe, Norway, to contact the American minister, Mrs. Harriman.

At Murmansk, Soviet Russian authorities took the German sailors off the vessel, turned it back to Capt. Gainard, and told him he was free to sail any time he wished to do so, the complaint said. But, the seamen asserted, he refused to do so, and kept the ship in port until the Soviet government finally put the German crew back on the Flint in order to get it out of the port.

Aluminum Convention April 24

New Kensington, Pa., Feb. 17 —Nick Zonarich, president of the Aluminum Workers of America, issued a call today for the third national convention of the union which will open in Maryville, Tennessee, April 24.

A meeting of AWA Local 2 here has been called for Sunday, Feb. 25, to elect delegates to the convention, and to plan out resolutions and constitutional amendments to be submitted at the national parley.

PUSH NEGOTIATIONS

Meanwhile, negotiations for a general wage increase in at least four plants of the Aluminum Company of America are scheduled to start here soon. The company has suggested February 22 as the opening date of the conferences, in answer to a formal request from the union.

Union representatives from ACA plants in Edgewater, N. J., Alcoa, Tenn., Detroit, Mich., as well as New Kensington will take part in the negotiations.

Union spokesmen in planning demands for a pay increase, are calling attention to the fact that the giant aluminum corporation is reported to have increased earnings for 1939 one hundred per cent over 1938, with an all-time high of some $35,000,000. Last year's earnings were around $15,563,000, or $5.13 a share on common stock.

Pritchett Files Suit For Libel

Portland, Ore., Feb. 17 — A $150,000 libel suit was filed here by Harold Pritchett, president of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, CIO, against C. C. Crowe, editor and publisher of the Pacific Coast Lumber Digest.

Pritchett, recently re-elected president of the IWA and a nationally known labor leader, was attacked by Crowe in the October 15 issue of his magazine as "a known foreign communist."

CHARGES "MALICE"

In his libel suit, Pritchett maintains that he has gained the confidence of labor by dint of honest, faithful effort and that Crowe in his editorials has sought to injure the IWA leader's reputation "wilfully and with malice."

In his attacks on the CIO, Crowe has not confined himself to Pritchett alone, but has included William Dalrymple and Richard Francis, CIO regional directors in Oregon and Washington, in his villifications.

Tory-AFL Tie-up:

Senator Taft Endorses Walsh Amendments

SWARTHMORE, Pa., Feb. 24—The AFL top leadership today had won a new recruit for its campaign to secure passage of the AFL-sponsored Walsh amendments to the Wagner Act—none other than that stalwart reactionary, Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio.

In a speech that makes a Chamber of Commerce statement look like a call to progressivism, the Ohio would-be presidential candidate suggested:

"Modify the wage-hour law . . . . abandon hour regulation, except where it involves injury to health or lack of time for recreation . . . . amend the Natl. Labor Relations Act along the lines recommended by the American Federation of Labor."

CIO PREPARES FOR FOUR BIG ELECTIONS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—CIO unions today were rushing campaign preparations for a series of four National Labor Relations Board elections to be held within the next six weeks.

The elections:

1. General Motors— to be held some time in April, with more than 125,000 workers casting ballots.

2. Consolidated Edison — ordered for early April, with 32,000 workers in New York's biggest utility company eligible to vote.

3. Consumers Power Co.—date not yet set for the election, which was held up for months when an AFL union carried an unsuccessful appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

4. U. S. Rubber Co.—involving several thousand workers in three of the company's eastern plants.

Labor Board election apparatus will be strained in its busiest month, with close to 175,000 workers in all being given the opportunity to name their collective bargaining agency.

The CIO United Automobile Workers, Utility Workers Organizing Committee and United Rubber Workers, involved in the four polls, are planning major drives to insure heavy CIO majorities in the election.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, will cooperate with the union groups in working out the pre-election campaigns. Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to Pres. Lewis, left this week for Jackson, Mich., to assist in the Consumer Power poll, while Haywood and Michael S. Widman, assistant director of organization, will be active in the other localities.

Bay State Council To Hear Noted Speakers At 3rd Convention

WORCESTER, Mass., Feb. 24.—A host of prominent speakers will be on hand to address the 400 delegates attending the third annual convention of the Massachusetts Industrial Union Council, which opens at the Hotel Bancroft here March 1 and continues for the next two days.

The convention will see the retirement of Pres. Michael Widman, former CIO regional director, who is now attached to CIO national headquarters as assistant director of organization.

Gov. Leverett Saltonstall, Senators Walsh and Lodge, and Congressmen Healey, Casey, McCormick, Flaherty and Connery have all accepted invitations to address the convention.

CIO Vice-President Sidney Hillman and Emil Rieve; Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; Sec.-Treas. David MacDonald of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League; Louis Rode New York representative of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee and officials of state and federal labor agencies have been asked to address the meeting.

The convention will open with a mass meeting Friday night, with business sessions planned for the week-end. Saturday night a banquet and ball are scheduled.

CIO Signs Magazine

New York, Feb. 24. — Pay increases ranging from $1 to $4 a week, a $21 weekly minimum and one to three weeks' vacation are granted in a contract signed between the Saturday Review of Literature and the Book & Magazine Guild, an affiliate of the United Office & Professional Workers. CIO.

1,700 Rubber Workers Win 1st Contract

Chicopee, Mass., Feb. 24—A contract providing paid vacations and other benefits for 1,700 workers at the Fisk Tire plant was signed here today by Local 11 of the United Rubber Workers of America and the United States Rubber company, which recently acquired the Fisk Rubber corporation and its assets for $11,000,000.

The agreement recognizes the URWA as sole and exclusive bargaining agent, and includes overtime provisions and adequate grievance machinery as well as the vacation plan, which will mean a one-week holiday for all Fisk workers with one year of service and a two-week holiday for all those with at least five years of service. Vacation pay will be at the rate of two per cent of the employe's annual earnings.

Also included in the contract is a "war clause," which will protect the Fisk worker's seniority rights in the event he enlists or is drafted for service in any war involving the United States.

ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

Detroit — The Detroit Newspaper Guild has formed an organizing committee to complete the job of unionizing papers in the metropolitan area.

Friends Honor Heywood Broun

Longshoremen To Convene April 1

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 24 — The third annual convention of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union will open in North Bend, Oregon, April 1, Matt Meehan, ILWU secretary, announced here today.

In the official call sent out to all ILWU locals in January, it was announced that due to cooperation of the affiliated locals and pre-convention work, it was possible to cut the convention assessment this year from $1 to 60 cents, thus saving the International $8,000, or 40 cents each on approximately 20,000 members.

All locals were asked to elect their delegates and send in their credentials to the district office not later than March 15.

Metal Miners Win Election 186-4

Bisbee, Ariz., Feb. 24—Workers at the Shattuck Denn Mining Co. voted down a company union 186 to 4 in a Labor Board election won by the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers in the face of a threat by the company to close down in case of a CIO victory.

The day before the election at the company the night shift was ordered suddenly to remove 75% of the equipment as though the threat was being carried out.

The anti-labor Phelps Dodge Corporation dominates the region. The Shattuck Denn company union whose career was ended by the results at the poll, was closely associated with a stooge outfit at Phelps Dodge.

Farm Implement Union Calls First Walkout

Rock Island, Ill., Feb. 24 — Workers at the J. I. Case plant here are on strike in protest against the firm's stalling on negotiations for a contract. The strike is the first to be called by the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee, and the first major walk-out in 30 years in this open shop area, the heart of the farm equipment industry.

Union Shop Conditions Cut Tuberculosis Toll

By JAMES PECK

NEW YORK, Feb. 24—(FP)—Establishment of union conditions and elimination of sweatshops have considerably reduced tuberculosis, an x-ray survey among six leading unions revealed today.

The survey, characterized by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia as "the largest mass drive against tuberculosis in history" was conducted by the New York City health department and the WPA in cooperation with the unions. More than 33,000 workers were examined.

Of the 33,303 unionists x-rayed only 0.7% or 233 had tuberculosis requiring further treatment or clinical care. In contrast, a 1933 survey of 2,000 food handlers — both union and non-union — showed tuberculosis rate at 4%.

SHARP DROP

Among garment workers only 0.6% of the workers examined showed t.b. symptoms, a sharp drop from 1915 when the disease was found among 3% of 3,000 people investigated at that time.

The extent of tuberculosis as an occupational disease in the days of the sweatshop was recalled by spokesmen of all six unions which cooperated in the survey. They cited the poor ventilation, unsanitary washrooms, 10- to 16-hour work days, filthy dressing rooms and overcrowded quarters of the open shop years.

BETTER CONDITIONS

A spokesman for the CIO Fur & Leather Workers Union remembered when certain groups of the workers used to work on damp floors all day.

An example of improved shop conditions was given by George Meisler, a shop steward for the United Retail & Wholesale Employes at the Hearn department store.

"The previously filthy washrooms are now regularly cleaned by porters, fans have been put in to improve ventilation, draught doors were set up to eliminate draughts and the office workers previously stationed in the basement have been moved to an upper floor."

Ask U. S. To Probe Silicosis Sore-Spot

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 24.—The United States Senate was asked today to take a look-see at one of the nation's worst industrial sore spots.

In letters to Sen. Robert Wagner of New York and Sen. James Murray of Montana — both outstanding progressives — Pres. Reid Robinson of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers called attention to attrocious health and living conditions in the Tri-State district Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas

Robinson, a CIO vice-president, referred the Senators to an Associated Press story recounting the birth of a baby in a hencoop in the Tri-District area. The father, though an employed miner, was unable to afford better housing on his meager pay check.

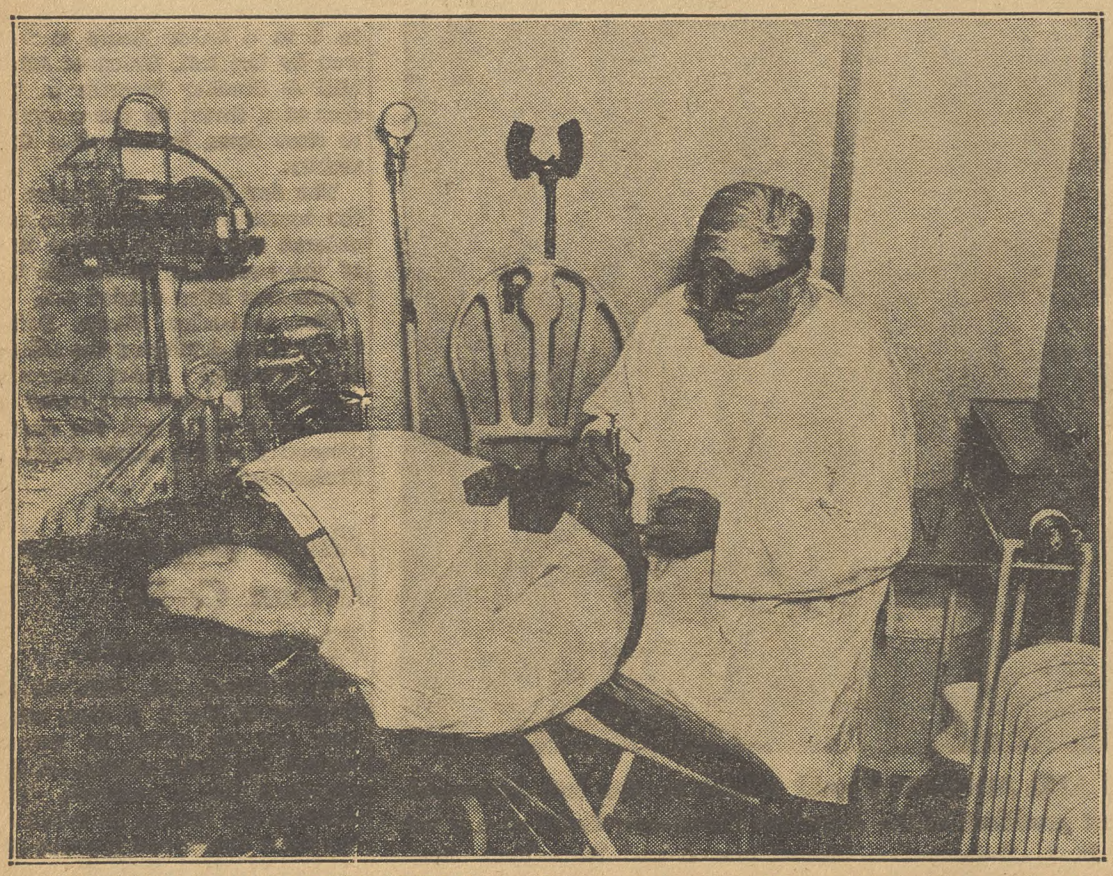
"This area is known as the silicosis belt," Robinson wrote, "and tuberculosis is rampant not only among the men but also the women and children as a result of the silicotic condition of the miners . . .

U. S. MUST HELP

"We have been trying desperately to alleviate these conditions, but find that it is impossible unless the government will take some action. We have asked the Senate of the United States to select a committee to investigate the conditions in this area.

"As long as conditions such as these exist in America, it will be difficult to prove to these people that we are a democracy, and we feel that the Senate should take immediate steps to find out why such conditions exist in one of the most prosperous mining field in America."

Harvester Sees Light; To Bargain



Chicago, Feb. 24 — After employes at the Tractor Works plant of International Harvester voted 3,117 to 348 in favor of empowering the executive board of the local union to call a strike, the company asked for further negotiation of the wage dispute. The local is affiliated with the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee.

Grant Oakes, FEWOC chairman, officially notified the company of the results of the strike vote taken, and declared that the union also wished to negotiate the dispute, but that it would be useless if the company continues to refuse to meet the union's demands.

SANG "NO" SONG

"For three long months we have been spending our time in what the company calls negotiations," Oakes said in commenting on the press account of Harvester's wish to confer further.

TRANSPORT WORKERS UNION members get free medical treatment through the union's health department. Measures like these are helping to lift the health, as well as the living standards, of the workers.

A Day in the Life Of William Green

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Pres. William Green of the AFL, here last week-end, had an exciting time in the big city.

In rapid succession, the Federation leader:

1. Made a tory speech before members of the tory Natl. Republican Club.

2. Received a summons for appearance in a suit brought by an attorney trying to collect $976 in fees from the defunct AFL Intl. Seamen's Union.

3. Found, upon returning to the Hotel Lincoln, that a jurisdictional dispute was raging between two AFL unions. Green had to pass through a picket line of AFL painters to retrieve his baggage.

TURNS DOWN UNITY OFFER

In the light of these proceedings, Green's turn-down of CIO President John L. Lewis' peace offer proved interesting. Green told interviewers that the CIO proposals are "impractical and impossible" since "to charter all his unions would mean dualism in the AFL!"

Green pleased his Republican audience by assailing the CIO program of criminal penalties for Wagner Act violators—a proposal which he professed to see making "Stalin and Hitler . . . envy the Natl. Labor Relations Board."

Oil Workers Protest Anti-Strike Letter

DETROIT, Feb. 24. — New strikebreaking activities by Pres. Green of the AFL today drew angered criticism from the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union local here.

Newest episode in Green's fight against legitimate unionism was a letter to the Wayne County Federation of Labor, AFL local body, labeling the oil workers' heroic strike against the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. in Tulsa, Okla., as a "joke."

Some seven hundred strikers have withstood all types of attacks, including labor spies, police forays and trumped up legal suits, Local 389 of the Oil Workers wrote to the AFL group here.

"Is it a joke when 700 American citizens walk the picket line for more than 14 months in a life and death struggle with one of the South's worst labor-hating corporations, the Mid-Continent?" the oil union asked.

"Is it a joke that all the powers of the city of Tulsa and the state of Oklahoma have been thrown against these people who are fighting for their American right of self-organization?"

The strike has received widespread support from CIO and AFL unions throughout the country, and the company's products have been placed on the CIO unfair list by convention action.

Frisco Unions Rap AFL Splitting Order

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 24—Orders from the AFL executive council to expel delegates from the Intl. Typographical Union to AFL city bodies caused tumultous scenes at the meeting of the San Francisco AFL Labor Council here.

When the ten ITU delegates and two from the mailers' union walked out of the hall, 200 or more delegates from other unions accompanied them in protest, leaving the hall more than half empty.

Attempts were made to adjourn or to table the action for 90 days, whereupon Secretary J. A. O'Connell said: "We must comply with Green's order or cease to be an AFL council."

Refuse To Act

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 24 (FP)—The Jamestown Central Labor Council voted unanimously on Feb. 14 to refuse to unseat delegates from the Intl. Typographical Union and to urge the AFL executive council to reconsider the drastic order.

"The Jamestown council refused to comply with the order because it tended to split the labor movement," Ernest Carlson, president of the council, declared.

500 Workers Quit AFL, Join CIO Furniture Union

Chicago, Feb. 24. — Angered at the suspension of their local officials by the Upholsterers Intl. Union, AFL, all but three of the 500 members of Local 18B present at a meeting held here, voted to affiliate with the United Furniture Workers, CIO.

Union spokesmen said the local officers who were suspended by the AFL International because they were suspected of planning a transfer to the CIO, barricaded themselves in the office to prevent their removal.

The local charges the UIU with failing to give it proper support.

President Morris Muster and Secretary-Treasurer Jack Hochstadt of the CIO furniture workers' national, spoke at the meeting at which the vote to affiliate with the CIO was taken.

Seek Contract In Indiana

LaPorte, Ind., Feb. 24 — Members and officials of the former independent union at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. which voted last week to affiliate with the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee, are now preparing to seek their first CIO contract.

CIO Benefits Entire U. S., Haywood Says

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—"The CIO exerts an influence for good that reaches into nearly every American home," Allan S. Haywood, CIO national director of organization, told an NBC blue network radio audience this week.

The CIO, he recalled, was formed because the American Federation of Labor "did not meet the needs of these millions of unorganized workers in large scale industry.

"An individual worker can't bargain with a big corporation. He just has to take whatever the company offers—or go hungry. So the CIO was formed to meet the needs of the workers in the big modern industries by giving them a modern industrial form of organization."

MODERN ORGANIZATION

The CIO has succeeded, Haywood went on, because "it has applied a modern American form of organization to modern American conditions — because it has applied American efficiency and pep to the work of labor organization."

CIO unions, he recalled, "have won wage increases that have literally put billions of dollars in the pockets of American workers. Since the CIO was formed, vacations with pay have become a common practice for American industrial workers for the first time in our history. The CIO has made life more secure for millions of workers."

But the CIO is far from content to rest on its oars, Haywood declared. It is instituting new organizing drives and has assigned "hundreds of experienced organizers to help unorganized workers of all kinds to organize to improve their conditions."

"Both employers and workers, when they deal with the CIO, are assured of 100% clean and democratic unionism," he said.

"You have all read recently about cases of graft, corruption, racketeering and collusion brought to light in court cases against some of the AFL craft union leaders. I want to call to your attention one most significant fact in this connection. That is, that not a single CIO union leader has been indicted or found guilty of racketeering, graft or other corrupt practices.

"The CIO record is 100% clean. The CIO way, the union way, is the American way.

"My message is organize — and organize right — the CIO way."

Outlined Plans

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO organizing plans in the mass production industries and their benefit to the American public were described by Haywood in a radio speech last week.

Order Vote At Gotham Utility

Washington, Feb. 24—Another big National Labor Relations Board election was in the offing today, as plans were completed for a poll among the 31,250 employes of Consolidated Edison System in New York City.

Employes will vote in 30 polling places on April 4-5 whether they wish to be represented by the CIO Amalgamated Utility Workers, the AFL Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers or a recently-formed "independent union."

During the first day of balloting, Mrs. Elinore Herrick, NLRB regional director anounced, 18,000 production, construction, shop and field workers wil vote, while on the second day, 13,000 clerical, commercial and technical employes will be at the polls.

3-YEAR DISPUTE

Consolidated Edison has been the center of a three-year-old labor dispute. The firm signed a company union contract with the IBEW before that union had any membership at the Edison plants, allegedly to forestall a CIO organizing campaign.

The Labor Board case that followed went up to the U. S. Supreme Court, where the NLRB suffered one of its few defeats, the judges refusing to invalidate the AFL contract.

Texas CIO Parley Apr. 20

Houston, Tex., Feb. 24. — CIO unions in Texas will soon start electing delegates to attend the annual convention of the State Industrial Union Council which will be held in Corpus Christi beginning April 20, it was announced at IUC headquarters here.

Reach Truce In Canadian Steel Strike

Sydney, N. S., Feb. 24 — A strike of 270 coke workers in the Dominion Steel and Coal Company's plant was temporarily settled this week, permitting the return of 1,200 other workers to their jobs, when the company agreed to the demands of the SWOC that three new men hired be discharged. Hiring of the three men while union workers were jobless precipitated the week-old walkout.

Negotiations between the SWOC and the company will begin immediately in an attempt to iron out the dispute. Assurance was given by the company that discrimination will be discontinued, President Norman Mackenzie of local 1064 stated.

The strike was called in the coke ovens department involving 270 workers. Owing to lack of gas supply the company closed other departments employing 1,200 workers.

The minimum rate paid workers at present is 43½ cents an hour. No standard work-day has been in effect as the plant has been operating on shift depending on production ratio.

Utah County Signs CIO Contract

New York, Feb. 24 — The notion that government agencies can't sign union contracts took another body blow here when Local 225 of the State, County & Municipal Workers won a collective bargaining agreement with officials of Carbon County, Utah.

According to national officers of the SCMWA, the contract recognizes the union as sole collective bargaining agency, guarantees the union shop and provides for a dues checkoff by the county.

Abram Flaxer, SCMWA president, called the new contract "an effective answer to the legal nonsense-mongers who argue that collective bargaining between government agencies and their employes destroys the sovereignty of the state."

Ask Defeat Of New Curb On Civil Rights

Stockton, Calif., Feb. 24—The San Joaquin Valley Industrial Union Council today called upon Congress to defeat a bill described as "a thinly disguised attempt to suspend the Bill of Rights in order to secure the deportation of Harry Bridges."

The bill is sponsored by Rep. Leland Ford of California, and would constitute, according to the council, "a menace to the civil liberties now guaranteed by the constitution to aliens and citizens alike."

News Guild Fights Case For Kin of Lincoln

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 24—The American Newspaper Guild today took up cudgels in behalf of a collateral descendant of Pres. Abraham Lincoln.

The Guild moved quickly after a reorganization on two Frank Gannett papers here had resulted in dismissal of Herman Lincoln, country circulation man for the Democrat-Chronicle and Times-Union.

A flood of letters from prominent people in the area followed his discharge after 23 years of unbroken service as newsboy, country agent and tube route man. All cited his faithful service to the management. Gannett, the paper's boss, is a contender for the Republican presidential nomination.

The management's action came after a group of circulation men joined the Newspaper Guild. A meeting of the Guild unit on the two papers charged that Lincoln was a victim of discrimination and set in motion a campaign to win his reinstatement.

Name Swift In Wage-Hour Violations

Describing the case as its most important to date, the government agency filed a petition in U. S. District Court here for an injunction against the firm, which it charges with working employes more than 42 hours weekly without overtime pay.

Basis for the action rests on complaints filed by the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, which brought specific charges against Armour, Cudahy and Wilson as well as Swift.

PWOC FILED CHARGES

Herbert March, PWOC district director, estimated that some $7,000,000 in back wages might be involved, since violations of the law as interpreted by the wage-hour administrator, have been widespread since 1938.

Leaders of the CIO packinghouse workers said they expect the industry's Washington lobbyists will launch a renewed drive to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act out of existence, and warned that such an anti-labor offensive will be quickly combatted by the workers.

The government charges that a large proportion of the 5,000 workers in the firm's Chicago plant worked longer than 42 hours without time and a half pay for the extra hours. A small group of the employes in the handling, slaughtering and dressing departments are exempt from the law's overtime provisions during a 14-week seasonal peak during the year.

Most of the workers involved, the government maintains, are clearly protected by the law. Even in the exempt departments the Swift employes were worked overtime during a longer period than the specified 14 weeks without receiving additional compensation.

WIN DECISION

Washington — The wage-hour division won a major victory today when a Fayetteville, N. C., federal court awarded a back pay judgment to five employes of the Atlantic Coast Line employes. The suit brought out the fact that the railroad was charging maintenance of way employes excessive rents for converted box cars—"many of them non-existent"—in an attempt to get around the wage act's minimum rates.

Col. Philip Fleming, now Wage Hour Administrator in title as well as in fact, warned employers to "put their houses in order" if they wish to avoid similar suits by their workers.

Negroes Told CIO Is Proud Of Democracy

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 24. — Negroes are an important and respected element in the United Mine Workers Union, and the whole CIO movement, John L. Lewis, head of the miners' union and CIO President, said in an interview published here in the Pittsburgh Courier, Negro weekly.

"No group of workers can succeed if it leaves its fellow workers behind," Lewis declared. "We have adopted this uncompromising attitude toward racial discrimination because we know that it is the only way to deal with the problem which concerns us all."

CIO DEMOCRACY

Stressing the fact that the entire CIO supports "a rule of equality, democracy and a full participation of all members," Lewis said that since the formation of the CIO, the Negro workers had made more progress than at any time before.

"This has been because of the uncompromising stand which the CIO has taken against any form of racial prejudice or racial discrimination," he said.

"I am looking forward in the years to come to the extensive growth of unionism in this country and believe that it will spread throughout the entire working group. I am convinced that the Negro will be a part of this great movement and will participate equally in the developing and the strengthening of our democratic institutions."

Lewis Hails Armour Victory

Washington, Feb. 24 — "The agreement covering working conditions for the 7,000 workers in the main Armour plant in Chicago marks a significant step forward in the conditions of the workers in the packinghouse industry."

That was the message sent today by CIO President John L. Lewis to Chairman Van A. Bittner, of the PWOC, which won the agreement after months of negotiations and two Labor Board election victories.

"This victory will give renewed impetus to the vigorous drive now going forward to bring complete industrial organization to the packinghouse workers," Pres. Lewis is continued.

"Chairman Bittner and other officials and members of the PWOC have the heartiest congratulations of the CIO for this great achievement."

TWO MORE AGREEMENTS

Two more agreements, meanwhile, have been concluded by the PWOC with Armour, covering plants in Indianapolis, Ind., and East St. Louis, Ill. Preparations are being made to bring union conditions to all 15 of the corporation's plants in which the CIO now has sole bargaining rights.

The union is already operating under pacts in the company's two Chicago plants, negotiated two weeks ago. Scheduled for negotiations in rapid order are other plants in Kansas City, St. Joseph, Mo., Denver, Los Angeles, Omaha, Sioux City, Ia., Mason City, Ia., Fargo, N. Dak., S. St. Paul, Minn., and Birmingham, Ala.

San Francisco—More vacations were won in a new agreement signed by the CIO Warehousemen's union and the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co.

A Milepost in Labor History

The agreement won by the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee with the biggest meat packer, Armour & Co., in its biggest plant at Chicago, is a milepost in labor history.

Under this agreement, the CIO union is recognized as exclusive bargaining agency. It brings greater job security to the workers, improved seniority rights, a better paid vacation plan, minimum wage guarantees, equal pay for equal work, better machinery for handling of grievances and many other improvements.

The Armour agreement runs up the union banner over the nation's stockyards. It marks the acceptance of collective bargaining by the first of the Big Four companies. The Chicago example has already been followed with union agreements at Armour's Indianapolis and St. Louis plants. The rest of the company's plants will follow suit; and it should not be long before the other big packers join the union line-up.

The CIO has once more done what was said to be impossible. It has organized the country's packinghouse workers solidly for the first time in history. It has established collective bargaining in the very citadel of this once non-union industry.

The congratulations of the whole CIO go to Chairman Van A. Bittner and the other officers and members of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee for this historic achievement in the onward march of the CIO.

Make It a Landslide

Tens of thousands of American workers will have a chance to vote for the union of their choice in four forthcoming Labor Board elections.

The elections in General Motors plants will be the largest ever held, covering some 125,000 workers.

Other important elections are to be held in the plants of the Consumers Power Co. in Michigan, the Consolidated-Edison Co. in New York, and the U. S. Rubber Co. in New England.

In every case, the workers have an opportunity to secure for themselves the most modern and efficient, the cleanest and most democratic form of union organization yet devised, by voting for the CIO.

That they will take full advantage of this chance to win better conditions and more security, is not in doubt. For the trend has been overwhelmingly toward the CIO in all recent elections.

Of 156,000 workers who voted in the last quarter of 1939, as many as 65 per cent voted CIO, as against only 15 per cent for AFL and 7 per cent for independent unions. In the biggest election previously held, at Chrysler plants, the CIO led by ten to one.

The coming elections ought to be a landslide for the CIO.

Upholders of the Constitution

The striking employes of Hearst's Chicago paper are fighting a battle for all of labor, in their long struggle for collective bargaining.

They are also fighting a battle on behalf of the constitutional rights of all Americans.

The right to distribute leaflets is part of the right of free speech and free press, guaranteed by the constitution as repeatedly interpreted by the Supreme Court.

But Judge Lupe has threatened arrest of striking Newspaper Guildsmen for passing out handbills in claimed violation of an injunction he issued a year ago.

In defending their rights to free speech, free press and freedom to organize and bargain collectively, the Chicago Hearst strikers deserve the support of all Americans as true upholders of the constitution.

(News Item: In the last quarter of 1939, 65% of the votes in NLRB elections were for CIO unions, 15% for the AFL, and 7% for independent unions.)

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Be Kind To Burglars Week

LIKE Teeter-Totter Tessie, Bill Green is up in the air again.

It takes a lot of big fat men on the teeter to get him up in the air. But he usually manages to totter down again of his own weight.

The big fat men in this case were the members of the National Republican Club in New York. They got Bill so high when he spoke there, that he yodeled about one of the CIO amendments to the Wagner Act coming from Hitler or Stalin.

What is this proposed amendment? Simply that employers should be punished like common people, when they break the law, with criminal penalties.

If Hitler or Stalin planted this idea, their first missionary work was with the American railroad companies, the rail Brotherhoods, the United States Congress and Green's own AFL.

For all the CIO asks is that the Labor Act should be brought into line with the Railway Labor Act, the Fair Labor Standards (Wage-Hour) Act and other laws that punish, instead of reward, the people who break them.

The CIO bases its proposed amendment on labor laws already passed by Congress and backed by the AFL as well as the Brotherhoods. So if the orders came from Moscow or Berlin, Bill Green himself was one of the secret agents who carried them. Mr. Dies, please note!

Sound Without Sense

Green tottered down to ground again with a bump, when he declared the Wagner act would be "sound" if the Walsh amendments were passed.

These amendments are the bastard offspring of a secret intrigue between anti-union manufacturers and AFL leaders of easy virtue. They have the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers written all over their face — even if John L. Lewis had not presented the Senate with documentary proof of their parentage.

Taft's Dead Fish

If further proof be needed of the anti-labor character of the AFL-sponsored Walsh amendments, Senator Robert Taft of Ohio will gladly oblige.

Taft's idea of campaigning for the presidency is to have his picture taken with dead fish. In the past few days, he shook the clammy fin of William Green seven times running, for seven successive newscamera shots; had a dead sailfish carefully hooked to his line, so he could pull it in for the newsreels; and made a speech calling for enactment of the Green-Walsh-NAM amendments to the Wagner act.

Taft's labor record resembles the newsreel sailfish. It is "putrescent", as one magazine politely expressed it.

Unkind to Criminals

Green's excited objections to enforcement of the Wagner act should qualify him for membership in the Society for the Prevention of Unkindness to Lawbreaking Employers.

This society has many members in Congress and among newspaper publishers. There are even those in the administration who know its passwords.

The society regards it as grossly unkind to call public or private attention to an employer who breaks the law, particularly if the law be the Wagner Act.

It a government official is so unkind, his action, in the order's ritual, is described as "blacklisting."

On the principle that it is unkind to deny a burglar the full proceeds of his swag, the society objects strenuously to any governmental disinclination to reward an employer with the full fruits of his lawbreaking enterprise.

If a government department should be so unkind as to show any reluctance to lend government money to a corporation that breaks the law — if it should hesitate to award the fattest government contracts to corporations which bid low by breaking the law, at labor's expense — this is described as "blackjacking."

Rewards for Lawbreaking

It is a public scandal that the administration is encouraging lawbreaking by granting loans and government contracts to flagrant violators of the Wagner act.

Concerns like Bethlehem Steel not only go unpunished, but are financially rewarded by the government for breaking the law.

Yet the Smith committee and much of the press get indignant about "blacklisting" and "blackjacking", when the Labor Board is supposed to have let it slip out that some lawbreaking corporations were looking for government money to finance them in continuing to break the law.

It is all right to break the law apparently, if you are rich enough and if your purpose is to stamp on labor's face.

In that case, every government official will be told to hush his mouth and look the other way. You will be rewarded with fat government contracts. And William Green will go up in the air if anyone suggests that you be punished.

Ford Bleatings Tug Heartstrings Of 'Liberties' Group

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The nation was presented today with the curious spectacle of Henry Ford, an outstanding violator of civil rights, being defended by the American Civil Liberties Union, an organization presumably dedicated to the protection of the rights of the people.

The ACLU, it was revealed here, will represent Ford in the coming court case in which the motor baron will attempt to wiggle out of a National Labor Relations Board order directing him to cease violations of the Wagner Act.

Ford's case has been based largely on the threadbare theory that his "freedom of speech" was curtailed when the NLRB found printed pamphlets carrying strong advice to Ford's exploited employes to stay out of bona fide labor unions. To workers accustomed to Ford's brutal industrial methods, such advice was more than a gentle hint that firings, discrimination and trouble awaited those who joined the CIO United Automobile Workers.

PART OF PATTERN

The Labor Board, fitting the "advice" in Henry's words of wisdom into his general pattern of open hostility to unions ruled it an unfair labor practice.

In this case, as in a half dozen other similar instances, the Labor Board carefully explained its action, pointing out that to allow Ford's messages and hints to go to his employes unchallenged was to ignore open defiance of the Wagner Act's prohibition of interference with labor's right to choice of bargaining agency.

WORKERS UNDERSTOOD

That explanation was understood by the workers, by the circuit court of appeals which backed up the Labor Board, and by most of the general public.

Only the American Civil Liberties Union and a few tory organizations pledged in advance to hate any constructive action taken by the NLRB took any stock in Henry's bleatings.

Detroit — The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee announced a 3 cents hourly wage raise won at the Hammond & Standish Packing Co.

New CIO Pamphlet On 'Civil Rights, How to Protect Them'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—What to do when workers' rights are violated or threatened is the subject of the newest CIO pamphlet, released here under the title "Your Civil Rights, How to Protect Them."

The pamphlet, prepared by the CIO Legal Department, takes up the workers' fundamental right to freedom of speech, of press and assembly, pointing out recent Supreme Court decisions upholding them, and instructing workers on the legal steps to take when local authorities try to override the constitution of the United States.

U. S. Supreme Court decisions in a number of recent cases, the pamphlet points out, have upheld the right to distribute handbills and leaflets as basic to the Bill of Rights. No local or state or county officers can suppress this right, nor can any limitations such as permits, fees, etc. be employed to inhibit it.

DEMONSTRATIONS

Attempts to stop parades, picket-lines, demonstrations and the like are similarly illegal under Supreme Court decisions, which allow only simple common-sense regulations such as those affecting traffic to be applied.

The section, "What to Do About Violations" contains six basic rules of procedure when workers' rights are attacked, including court action, injunctions against violators, criminal actions, damage suits, etc.

An appendix contains excerpts from the Bill of Rights of the U. S. Constitution and from the Civil Rights Statutes passed in the 1860's and 70's.

Lewis Speech, Charges Soon In Pamphlets

Washington, Feb. 24 — John L. Lewis' historic speech to the American Youth Congress, is being printed in pamphlet form and will be available within a few days.

AFL-TORY COLLUSION

Also in preparation is a pamphlet containing the full proof of charges of collusion between AFL officials and corporation attorneys in drawing up proposed Wagner Act amendments, made by Pres. Lewis in testimony at the Senate Labor Committee.

Prices of both pamphlets in quantity lots can be obtained from the CIO Publicity Dept., 1106 Connecticut Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—The U. S. is headed for a repetition of the shipping scandals uncovered in 1935, when public money was found floating out to the shipowners in a flood-tide of graft, William Standard, attorney for the Natl. Maritime Union reported here to the CIO Maritime Committee.

Standard's report, covering recent anti-labor activities and financial workings of the U. S. Maritime Commission, which controls shipping subsidies and operates government-owned vessels, declared:

"A close analysis of the activities of the U. S. Maritime Commission shows not only a strong, consistent anti-labor policy (contrary to the expressed aims of the New Deal), but a wholesale disregard for the public interest.

"One of its duties is to protect the Federal Treasury from the depredations of unscrupulous shipowners. Yet far from playing the watchdog over these interests, many of which were exposed by the Black Committee in 1935, the Commission shows a complete willingness to serve as their tool."

SUBSIDY RACKET

Standard's report charged that subsidies were being granted not to responsible firms, as required by Congress, but to anyone who had influence enough to get them.

It is said that a report criticizing these and other practices written at the Commission's orders was suppressed, that operators was suppressed in old ships to the Commission and receiving present-day replacement costs as credits in return, and that the Commission's "attitude has been that of the promoter type of businessman" rather than that of public guardians.

He urged a new investigation by Congress in the hope that publicity would uncover, if not prevent conditions that are leading up to a new series of shipping subsidy scandals, and demanded that the Commission's personnel be immediately changed in the interests both of the seamen and of the general public.

ACCEPTED BY COMMITTEE

Standard's report, highlight of the two day CIO Maritime Committee meeting, was unanimously accepted by the delegates representing CIO unions in the various marine industries.

The CIO Committee went on record in opposition to U. S. involvement in the European war, and condemned U. S. loans to all foreign countries as a step leading toward involvement. It condemned the action of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in raiding offices of the Lincoln Brigade in Detroit.

On organization, the Committee voted to "work to bring all seamen into one industrial union," and to "organize all maritime workers into the industrial unions of the CIO."

Action on continuance of the Maritime Labor Board was deferred until the Board report is made public, which is expected in a few weeks.

Hearst Strikers Gird For Civil Rights Test

CHICAGO, Feb. 24—Chicago Newspaper Guildsmen, now in the 15th month of their strike against local Hearst papers, today prepared for a showdown in defense of their constitutional rights.

Endangered by threats from Superior Court Judge Lupe are the strikers' right to free speech, free press and the right to distribute handbills.

The civil rights issue came to the fore as the prime issue in the case when Lupe, at the behest of the Hearst management, threatened to grant body attachments for strikers passing handbills.

The John Doe bench warrants would direct Cook County Sheriff Thomas O'Brien to arrest any and all handbillers and bring them before Judge Lupe for a contempt hearing as violators of an injunction issued by Lupe more than a year ago.

"I proposed to maintain my constitutional rights regardless of any illegal order entered by Judge Lupe with regard to free circulation of literature," was the comment of Harry Read, head of the striking Guild Hearst unit.

The strike committee, carrying out its active campaign among all groups in the community, has issued a pamphlet presenting facts in the case to members of the Chicago Catholic diocese.

CIO Doubts Dept. Of Labor Statistics On Unemployment

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—The CIO, through Unemployment Director Ralph Hetzel, today took sharp issue with a statement by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins that only 150,000 out of three million work relief recipients have been unemployed for more than a year.

In a letter to Miss Perkins, Hetzel referred to WPA statistical studies that 1,500,000—not 150,000—relief workers had been unemployed and on WPA for at least a year, and cited the 775,000 WPA workers dismissed because they had been on WPA for more than 18 months.

"I know that Mr. Lewis would want me to bring to your attention certain matters in your report (the Labor Dept.'s annual report) which cause us great concern," Hetzel wrote.

"The figure of 50,000 in your report is only one-tenth of what was the fact as reported by WPA in 1939," the letter added. "Perhaps a typographical error is responsible for such a figure."

DEEPLY CONCERNED"

Whether it is or not, the CIO is "deeply concerned" by Miss Perkins' estimate that "between four and five million people on any given date represent the normal turnover of industrial employment.

"We do not understand how the 1929 figure of 492,000 unemployed could now be swelled to between four million and five million who would be unemployed due solely to turnover," Hetzel continued.

"Our main concern is that there shall not be spread a misconception about the serious need of the unemployed which might be used as an excuse for failure to provide adequately for them."

CIO estimates for December, 1939, place the number of unemployed at 10,232,000, Miss Perkins was told, and "unemployment is undoubtedly now on the increase."

SECOND DISPUTE

Hetzel's letter marked the second occasion in a month that CIO officials have taken issue with Miss Perkins. Speaking at the United Mine Workers convention in Columbus, President Lewis revealed that a union delegation sent to discuss the unemployment problem with the Secretary of Labor had returned "woozy" after extended conversations with her.

Negro Group Worried By Joblessness

Washington, Feb. 24 — Continued mass unemployment among Negro workers is producing an alarming condition in the ranks of America's colored population, it was declared in a call to the third national Negro Congress sent out this week to several thousand organizations all over the country.

The Congress will be held in the U. S. Department of Labor Auditorium here April 26 to 28.

More than 125,000 Negro WPA workers have been fired in the last 12 months, the call states, and other 75,000 are threatened with loss of jobs in the next few months.

THOUSANDS DESPERATE

"No one knows how many tens of thousands of Negro families have been cut off relief, but there is not a Negro center in America where hundreds of such families have not been dropped from relief, despite the fact that they have no other way to live."

Guild Head Hits Labor Act Change

Washington, Feb. 24 — A proposed Wagner Act amendment to exempt newspaper workers was condemned as discrimination by Kenneth Crawford, American Newspaper Guild president, in testimony at the House Labor Committee hearing here.

The amendment was proposed by one Oliver Holden, head of the American Press Society, self-constituted organization set up to act as a counter to the Guild, only legitimate union of editorial and business workers in the industry.

Crawford characterized Holden's testimony, which leaned entirely on "freedom of the press" as "seeing ghosts under the bed." Newspaper workers do not need to be protected from labor legislation, he said, but on the contrary seek to be treated as equal under the law with all other employes.

"We've been the victims of that cry of 'freedom of the press' ever since NRA days," Crawford said. "It has grown so that it has no meaning, and the argument has become nonsensical."

Holden's organization, it was pointed out, contains perhaps 100 members, including people with hire and fire power. The American Newspaper Guild has close to 20,000 members, with over 200 contracts with newspaper publishers.

Howard Hughes' Firm Gets New Cue From NLRB

Houston, Tex., Feb. 24 — The men who help provide the funds for Howard Hughes, wealthy aviator, sportsman and movie producer, must be granted the right to organize unions and bargain collectively.

This was the recommendation made by Labor Board Trial Examiner William F. Webb today in an intermediate report on the Hughes Tool Co. case.

The report asked the board to ban company contracts with the Employes' Welfare Organization and the Hughes Tool Colored Club, both of them held to be company unions. The recommendations were based on hearings held last summer, which looked into complaints filed by the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Some 3,500 workers are employed by the company, which manufactures oil field equipment. It was founded by the late Howard R. Hughes, father of the motion picture magnate and aviator.

Robinson On NBC March 4

Washington, February 24—"Jobs Made In America" will be the subject of a talk by CIO Vice-Pres. Reid Robinson in an NBC Blue Network program on March 4.

Dalrymple On Mutual Network

Washington, Feb. 24. — CIO Vice-President Sherman Dalrymple will discuss social security problems in a nationwide speech over the Mutual Broadcasting Co.'s nationwide hookup on March 7 at 9 to 9.30 p. m., eastern standard time.

Dalrymple is president of the United Rubber Workers and heads the CIO Social Security Committee. Further details about his speech will appear in next week's CIO NEWS.

FOUND GUILTY

Mullan, Idaho — The Federal Mining & Smelting Co. has been found guilty of violating the Wagner Act, following complaints filed by the CIO Mine Mill & Smelter Workers.

Labor And The Law:

Republicans Show Pleasure With AFL Wagner Act Proposals

By LEE PRESSMAN.
CIO General Counsel

The CIO has charged and has substantiated its charges with documentary proof before the Senate Labor Committee that the amendments sponsored by the AFL Executive Council were drafted with the aid and cooperation of representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers and of several of the most reactionary corporations in the country.

Recent announcements from Republicans who are known to be adverse to the interests of labor have clearly revealed the alliance between the Executive Council of the AFL and the reactionary Republicans.

Senator Robert Taft, a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Presidency of the United States, has publicly criticized and has asked for the serious modification or repeal of practically all the social legislation which has been enacted during the past few years. Recently in demanding certain basic amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, Senator Taft stated that he was of the opinion that the Labor Act should be amended along the lines suggested by the Executive Council of the AFL.

G. O. P. PROGRAM COMMITTEE

The Republican Program Committee, of which Mr. Glenn Frank is the Chairman, reveals the role which the reactionary Republicans intend to have the Executive Council of the AFL perform in the drive to emasculate the National Labor Relations Act.

The Republican Program Committee, after two years of investigation, has issued a report which includes a most vicious attack against the National Labor Relations Act. This report falsifies the basic facts underlying the problems which have been encountered in connection with the administration of the Wagner Labor Act. For instance, the report points to the large number of strikes which occurred during the year 1937 and places the blame for such strikes upon the National Labor Relations Act and its administration.

This charge is made despite the fact, known to all, that before the Supreme Court of the Untied States upheld this Act all of the large corporations of the country, with the advice and urging of a kangaroo court of prominent attorneys, completely disregarded the law on the assumption that the Supreme Court would strike it down. The failure to recognize the Act resulted in the employes resorting to strikes as a last effort to exact recognition of their unions from recalcitrant employers.

SEEK TO DESTROY ACT

This type of attack shows the complete absence of fairness and the real motives of the Committee in suggesting amendments to the National Labor Relations Act. The goal of this Committee, through its report, is to deprive the workers of the protection of the right to organize and bargain collectively which they now enjoy. The aim is to emasculate and destroy the National Labor Relations Act.

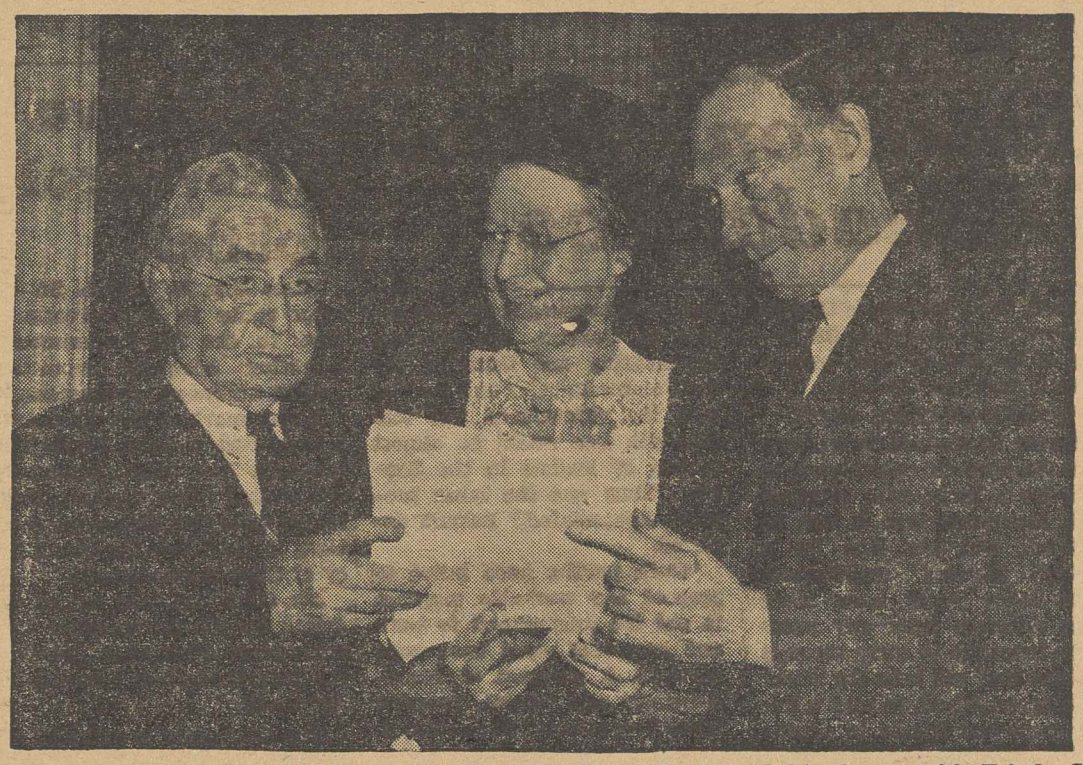
SUPPORT AFL AMENDMENTS

The Republican Program Committee attempts to disguise its real end by introducing all of its proposed amendments with a hypocritical recognition of the need of protecting the workers' rights to organize and bargain collectively. It fails to point out that such a right is meaningless unless fully protected through the National Labor Relations Act.

The amendments recommended in the report of the Republican Program Committee include the major amendments which are sponsored by the Executive Council of the AFL. For instance, the recommendations include amendments regarding:

1. Alleged freedom of expression for employers. The AFL Executive Council has specifically endorsed an amendment which would permit employers to express their opinions to their employes—which any worker knows means a license on the part of the employer to destroy union organization.

2. The power of the Board to invalidate contracts. In other words, both the Republican Program Committee and the AFL favor permission for company unions or AFL unions acting as company unions to enter into collusive contracts with employers where they have absolutely no membership but where they seek to deprive workers of the right to choose their own unions.



WANT EVEN MORE

But even the AFL Executive Council amendments do not satisfy the Republican Program Committee. In addition, the Committee recommends that unfair labor practices on the part of employes should be incorporated in the Act. The Labor Act, which was intended to give equality of bargaining power to employes through their unions, is now sought to be translated into an act of oppression directed against the workers themselves under this proposed amendment.

The Committee recommends further that the judicial and administrative functions of the Board should be separated. This proposal reduces itself to a deceptive attempt to break down the complete administration of the Act. The administrative procedure incorporated in the present Wagner Labor Act is similar to that of all the other administrative tribunals now functioning under federal statutes.

Any attempt to break down this administrative procedure solely in regard to the Labor Act is nothing [illegible] an attempt to destroy the operation of the Act itself.

Amendments to Security Act Filed in Senate; Have CIO Support

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—Amendments to the Social Security Act, embodying changes requested by the CIO, were introduced in Congress today by Sen. James E. Murray of Montana.

The bill, calling for federal standards to liberalize and strengthen unemployment compensation laws, follows out suggestions made both by the CIO Legislative Program and the CIO Social Security Committee.

"The necessity for this measure arises from the fact that there is over a billion dollars collected in reserves for unemployment compensation which has never been paid out," Joseph Kovner, secretary of the CIO committee, declared. "Most states are paying out in benefits approximately only one-half of the funds they are currently collecting in taxes," he said.

BENEFITS INCREASED

The bill provides that benefits payable to unemployed workers shall be increased by extending the period for which they are paid from the present 12-15 weeks to a flat period of 20 weeks. It establishes a scale of benefit payments ranging from a minimum of $7 up to $25 a week.

Compensation for partial unemployment would be required under the terms of Senator Murray's bill, which also eliminates many of the restrictions now present in various state laws.

RAP "MERIT RATING"

As to the various schemes of employer merit or experience rating, the bill inserts the safeguard that any such scheme must at least yield an amount equal to 2.7 per cent of all taxable payrolls. This means that if lower taxes are granted to employers who have less unemployment claims, the deficiency must be made up by imposing a higher tax rate upon other employers.

The bill also extends the coverage of the law and establishes a national equalization fund whereby states suffering severe unemployment will receive assistance from the federal pool to which all the states have contributed.

At the same time Social Security Board Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer declared in an article in the Board's official publication that liberalization of benefits is "first and foremost if the objectives of unemployment compensation are to be achieved."

Altmeyer outlined a six-point program to reduce delays and waiting periods, cut red tape, standardize and raise state law standards, increase benefits, and the like.

Carey, Oliver At Parley For Foreign Born

Washington, Feb. 24 — CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League leaders will join in condemning reactionary attacks on the foreign-born now so fashionable in Congress at the fourth annual conference of the American Committee for Protection of the Foreign Born, which is meeting here March 2 and 3 next.

James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO and president of the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers will be a featured speaker at the first session, scheduled for Saturday. Eli Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, will speak at the session the following day.

CONFERENCE OBJECTS

Objects of the conference will be to counteract anti-foreign born propaganda and so-called anti-alien legislation, to make naturalization easier, to maintain American traditions of freedom for all U. S. residents, prevent destruction of families by deportation, and to promote better understanding between native born and foreign born.

Other speakers include Assistant Labor Secretary Marshall Dimock, Congressional Librarian Archibald MacLeish, Senator James E. Murray.

Alien-Baiting Bills Get CIO Criticism

Washington, Feb. 24 — CIO opposition to alien-baiting bills in Congress was reaffirmed in a letter to members of the Senate subcommittee now considering the Dempsey bill for wholesale deportations now up for consideration. The letter was sent by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, to Senator Hughes, sub-committee chairman.

"On behalf of the CIO," Pressman wrote, "I beg to convey the view of our organization that the bill would strike at any alien who belonged to any organization which believed, for example, that the President of the U. S. should be elected by a direct popular vote rather than by the Electoral College.

VIOLATES FAIR PLAY

"It is quite clear that the bill," in its present form, is inconsistent with our fundamental requirements of fair play and justice. Certainly a similar bill if made applicable on the same basis to citizens of the U. S. would be in violation of our constitutional guarantees of civil rights."

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By CECIL OWEN
Publicity Director
United Construction Workers Organizing Committee

Housing experts are agreed that one of the most effective ways to bring down home-owning costs is to reduce interest rates.

For this reason a series of bills introduced by Senator Warren Barbour (Rep.), N. J., are important. Object of the bills is to slash interest rates on FHA-insured mortgages and also on HOLC loans and Building and Loan Association mortgages under the HOLC program.

Barbour would cut the interest rate on new FHA-insured mortgages from the present 4½ to 4 per cent. The FHA rate actually works out at 5 per cent because there is a half per cent insurance charge. So Barbour's proposal would mean 4 per cent money instead of 5 per cent money.

Even this slight reduction is important to home-owners since it means a cut in monthly fixed charges equal to a 50 per cent cut in labor costs on the construction site. In other words, this interest cut of 1 per cent would save home owners in monthly payments more than a 50 per cent slash in wages of building labor.

The number of Barbour's bill, which also proposes lowering HOLC interest rates, is Senate 3372. It is worthy of support and CIO members desiring low-cost housing are advised to address letters to their Senators and Congressmen in support of this legislation.

FHA JOKERS

There are several big jokers in FHA Title 1 plans for low-cost homes with mortgages of $2,500 or less. This phase of the FHA program has not clicked to date and never will unless sharply revised.

So far FHA admits only 15,000 mortgages have been insured under this title although when amended last year it was ballyhooed as the start of a big drive for low-cost homes. Nearly all houses financed under it to date have been summer cottages.

One reason no city houses with $2,500 mortgages are being built is the proviso that the land must be owned outright before a loan can be made. The one big advantage of Title 1 is that the down payment is only 5 per cent, or $125 for a $2,500 property.

ONE OBSTACLE

But the rub is that it is almost impossible to get a city lot for $125. Prospective home-owners, therefore, really have to put up more than 5 per cent in order to acquire title to the land. On higher-cost homes, financed under Title 2, there is no such requirement of complete land ownership.

Among other factors is the fact that FHA insures only 10 per cent of the mortgages under Title 1 whereas it insures 100 per cent under Title 2. There are also higher interest rates and appraisal fees under Title 1. FHA in addition to these drawbacks has been unwilling to insure Title 1 mortgages except in rural areas.

If FHA is really interested in promoting low-cost housing it will eliminate these differences in the two titles of their act that put the low-cost home buyer at a disadvantage.

NOT IN THE BUDGET

There exists confusion, some of it purposely fostered by enemies of public housing, about the cost of the USHA low-cost housing program.

Much has been made of the fact that this agency seeks another $800,000,000 for its program. The fact is that all the USHA asks of Congress is authority to borrow that amount of money, all of which is to be repaid.

Not a dime of this $800,000,000 will appear in the Budget and the well-known taxpayer about whom the Tories wail will never have to pay a cent of this cost. Tenants of the houses by their rent payments will discharge the major part of the obligation.

The only cost to the government of USHA projects is the annual subsidy which for this year amounts to only $10,000,000. This subsidy is an outright payment by USHA for the purpose of reducing rents to the very lowest income levels. Under the present program it can never amount to more than $28,000,000 a year.

Compare the subsidy for housing, which saves millions in crime, health, sanitation and other costs that mount in slum areas, with the cost of a single battleship—$70,000,000 to $80,000,000!

It is interesting to note that the cost of a single battleship is just about the total amount of annual subsidy which the USHA would have if its proposed program was enacted. For $73,000,000 a year in subsidy USHA could house 500,000 families.

For the price of one battleship, Uncle Sam could rehouse half a million families.

Ask For A Running Board On That New Car

CLEVELAND, Feb. 24.—When you buy a new car, make sure it's a model that has a running board.

This is the plea sent out to prospective auto purchasers today by Local 65, United Automobile Workers, CIO, with a warning that many manufacturers are eliminating the running boards—and with them thousands of jobs—on new car models.

"We who are affected by this, ask you to demand the running boards," the union states. "When you purchase a car today, the running board is optional on some cars. But in the future they may be displaced. Your demand for them today will keep us at work in the future."

Employes of auto plants, steel mills, and coal, iron and other metal mines would be affected if the running boards are eliminated, Local 65 pointed out.

Wagner Files Mediation Measure

Washington, Feb. 24 — Sen. Robert Wagner of New York this week introduced a bill in Congress calling for establishment of a National Mediation Board, which he said was aimed at broadening the scope of the present Conciliation Service of the Department of Labor.

In a statement issued as he filed the bill, Wagner said the measure would call only for voluntary mediation action.

Federal Workers Hit Economy Budget

Ask Human Rights Be Protected

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—Opening gun in the United Federal Workers of America's national "Campaign Against Ruinous Economy," aimed at stopping drastic budget slashes in government social service agencies, was sounded at a huge rally held at the Department of Labor Auditorium in Washington.

Nearly one thousand government workers heard UFWA's National President Jacob Baker, CIO Publicity Director Len De Caux, and UFWA National Organizer Irwin Elber lambast the ruinous economy recommendations made by Congress.

Pointing out that Republican and Democratic Congressmen alike were giving ear, in an election year, to the business interests in their district who shout the loudest, Baker declared that "They are prepared to balance the financial budget of the country while leaving the human budget unbalanced."

TWO ATTITUDES

Branding the economizers as "hard-faced tories" and "reactionary extremists," De Caux told his listeners that although they were using the same statistics, the CIO and the Administration had come to opposite conclusions.

The administration has decided to economize, he said, while the CIO regards the initial social reform steps taken by the New Deal as merely the beginning of a broad social program which should be expanded and consolidated.

WIRE FROM LEWIS

Resolutions were passed deploring the drastic budget cuts and pointing out that the real victims will be the "unemployed, the low-paid industrial and service worker, the farmer, the women and children, the youth and the small business man."

UFWA is launching an organization campaign in an effort to that several other members of CIO unions will seek seats.

Construction Pact Won In Baltimore

Baltimore, Feb. 24 — Forging ahead in its organization campaign, the CIO United Construction Workers Organizing Committee today announced the signing of a closed shop contract with the Mancini Construction Co. here.

The pact provides for the eight-hour day, time and a half for overtime and double pay for holidays, Arthur Pilon, local UCWOC organizer declared. All workers hired by the contractor are covered by the one agreement, he pointed out, thus eliminating jurisdictional disputes that have marred AFL building trades relations where as many as 26 different craft unions are involved on one construction project.

Lewis Statement on Politics Applies in Canada, Too

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 24. — When John L. Lewis told the jubilee convention of the United Mine Workers of America at Columbus, Ohio, that so-called liberal governments will be judged in future by their practical program for the workers in industry and farms and not by their vocal protestations of sympathy for labor, he was only enunciating the feelings of Canadian workers, Silby Barrett, chairman of the Canadian CIO and international board member of the UMW said on his arrival here from the historic convention.

"The statement by John L. Lewis that the New Deal has dropped its policies by the wayside and that the support of labor as a political force is too often taken for granted, has its counterpart in Canada," Barrett declared.

"Politicians of both old-line parties have used labor as a valuable football too long here in Canada. Labor serves notice on both these bankrupts that its support is not as sure as the setting of the sun, as they seem to have thought in the past.

WORKERS' ONLY HOPE

"Labor in Canada is learning that the workers' only hope is to vote for a progressive program with assurance that it will be adopted, and not just for a party," Barrett emphasized. "But labor must have more than promises from any party of its intention to carry through policies that will help the worker to be employed, to earn a living wage and belong to organizations without fear of discrimination.

"What have the old-line parties done for labor in Canada? The present federal administration passed an amendment to the Criminal Code purporting to prevent the discharge of workers who join unions and how effective is it? The lobbyists of the manufacturers declared publicly that they did not oppose it because it had no effect in Ontario, the province representing one third of the Dominion's industry and wealth. And the government was told that the law would be almost useless by leaders in the Senate. Thus was the labor proposal emasculated," Barrett declared.

"Both parties have failed to propose any workable program to put the unemployed to work and now that some have gone overseas, a program of reconstruction and social progress when they return," he continued.

CIVIL RIGHTS WIPED OUT

"Labor's democratic rights have been wiped out by the Defense of Canada regulations, comparable to the degrees of Nazi Germany," Barrett said. "Trade unionists have been arrested for criticizing undemocratic decrees passed by Dominion order-in-council and enforced by Canada's Number One labor-hating administration in Ontario. That is the sorry spectacle confronting the workers of Canada as they begin to select those who will govern us in the critical years ahead.

Your WPA Job:

Auto Union Pushes Lively WPA Campaign

The fine new bulletin of the WPA Welfare Department of the United Automobile Workers of America has many ideas in it which could well be applied elsewhere.

It starts off describing a campaign to "Make Congress Balance the Unemployed Budget First." It outlines the following steps which they are taking to make the campaign a success:

1. A widespread barrage of letters and postcards to Washington.
2. A mass meeting was arranged for February 18th at which prominent union leaders and Detroit public officials spoke.
3. Volunteer speakers being sent to all union meetings to enlist their support for an adequate WPA appropriation. The speakers are furnished with outlines for their speeches and free gasoline.
4. Leaflets are being distributed at the projects so that the workers can follow the progress of the campaign.
5. An intensive drive to build the union on all WPA projects is being launched.

GRIEVANCE COMMITTEE WORK

The bulletin also describes the activities of the Grievance Committee and its efforts to work out satisfactory working relations with the WPA and the Welfare administrations in Detroit.

The Grievance Committee has had several meetings with representatives of the Welfare Administration at which they went into a number of important issues. The question of emergency help for relief applicants was thoroughly discussed and the union was assured that such help would be given.

The union was asked to submit a list of persons who had been refused emergency help and these cases will be investigated and followed up. The union was also assured that WPA workers would be able to get supplementary relief if their monthly security wages were too low for their needs.

At a meeting with the WPA Administration the Grievance Committee took up such important questions as dual classifications, wage rates, requisitions for skilled workers, organization on indoor projects, and so on.

The Grievance Committee has also complained to the WPA Administration about the immunity that supervisors enjoy with regard to the breaking of rules or the infringement of the workers' rights. Since most complaints to the WPA Administration usually end up with a polite warning to the supervisors to "toe the line," this is a most important grievance.

ADVICE TO WORKERS

The Bulletin devotes a great deal of space to detailed directions to the unemployed auto workers on how to get relief, how to get recertified and reassigned to the WPA, how to get warm clothing in order to work on WPA, how to get emergency help. It tells single men exactly what to do in order to get the little bit of relief and food allowance which is given to them.

To those workers already on WPA it gives useful bits of information which will help them to stay on. For example, it describes a suspension slip, Form 418, which has just made its appearance. It tells the workers that they have a right to appeal from any such suspension and urges them to report to the Grievance Committee immediately upon receipt of one.

It also reminds the WPA workers that they are required to register with the Michigan State Employment Service once every sixty days in order to remain eligible for WPA employment.

AFL Leader Joins CIO Union Staff

Washington, Feb. 24 — Another pioneer of the AFL has joined the ranks, it was revealed this week when the United Federal Workers of America, CIO's affiliate in the government service, announced that John Arthur Shaw, first elected national president of the American Federation of Government Employes, AFL, had joined the UFWA organizing staff.

Shaw, a World War veteran, was formerly a national official of the Disabled American Veterans and one-time Director of the Veterans Employment Service of the Department of Labor.

He was originally a leader in the National Federation of Federal Employes which withdrew from the AFL in 1932. He headed a group which sought reaffiliation and when the NFFE elected to stay independent, he helped found the AFGE.

Shaw will be assigned to UFWA's national "Campaign Against Ruinous Economy," Jacob Baker, UFWA national president, declared.

CIO Active In Nova Scotia Politics

Glace Bay, N. S., Feb. 24—CIO labor ranks in Nova Scotia are alive to the full importance of acquiring adequate representation in affairs of government.

Latest move in this direction is a campaign to send Clarie Gillis of Glace Bay, long prominent in the United Mine Workers Union, to the Canadian Commons at Ottawa to represent the constituency of Cape Breton South.

Mr. Gillis has been named candidate for the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation Party in the federal election scheduled for March 26.

The CCF party is affiliated with District 26, UMW, the affiliation having been effected following a resolution asking such a move, which was passed at the last district convention.

One CCF-UMW candidate has already been elected. Douglas McDonald, Sub-District UMW board member, won handily in a recent Cape Breton Centre election and now represents that district in the Nova Scotia legislature.

UMW District President D. W. Morrison is mayor of Glace Bay and Vice-President P. G. Muise is mayor of New Waterford.

In the forthcoming federal election it is planned to place CCF candidates in all Nova Scotia constituencies when it is likely that several other member of CIO union will seek seats.

Chrysler Workers Get $3,000,000

Detroit, Feb. 24 — Chrysler workers locked out last fall by the management's attempted refusal to bargain collectively with the United Automobile Workers, CIO, received a $3,000,000 unemployment compensation award from a referee for the state unemployment compensation commission, in spite of adverse commission findings and opposition by the Chrysler Corporation.

The award will go to about 30,000 workers, and marked an upset for the commission, which had refused to order payment on technical grounds.

The corporation claim that payment of the unemployment compensation due to the workers would amount to state financing of labor disputes, was ignored by the referee, as were the technicalities advanced by the commission.

Take Strike Vote At Tractor Plant

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Labor relations at the Intl. Harvester Co.'s big tractor plant reached the strike vote stage here today as the company turned down for the fifth consecutive time CIO proposals for contract provisions.

Some 6,000 workers are employed at the plant, and Local 101 of the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee is strongly entrenched.

The union pointed out it offered to withdraw wage increase demands for 30 days if the company would restore recent pay cuts which ranged up to $10 a week, and proposed the matter be settled by arbitration.

Grant Oakes, national chairman of the union, pointed out that the FEWOC has been in existence for two years and "has won contracts with all major farm equipment companies without a single strike. Whether or not there will be a strike at the Tractor Works depends on International Harvester Co."

CIO WINS SHIPYARD POLL BY SWEEPING MAJORITY

FCC Plan For Merger Attacked

New York, Mar. 2—Recommendations offered by the Federal Communications Commission for consolidation of all American firms in the international radio and cable industry spell danger for the workers involved, Pres. Mervyn Rathborne of the American Communications Assn. warned.

At a meeting of employes of RCA Communications, one of the firms which would be affected, Rathborne asserted the FCC was continuing "its collusive employer program of merger which result in mass layoffs."

The FCC report on the international telegraph field supplemented earlier recommendations calling for merger of Postal Telegraph and Western Union. At that time the ACA accused the commission of serving "as hatchet man for the communications companies."

NO CONCERN FOR LABOR

Of the new proposal, Rathborne commented, "the FCC indicates its purpose in requesting this extension is to guarantee financial security for the owners of the industry. But in asking for these powers, the FCC shows not the least concern for the security of labor.

"On the contrary, these recommendations indicate a desire on the part of the FCC to exercise control over labor standards, thereby substituting bureaucracy for collective bargaining."

A CIO PICKET LINE swung into action at Russeks', fancy Detroit women's wear store, when the management discharged two veteran employes, on charges which the United Retail & Wholesale Employes said were discriminatory. Arrow points to one of the discharged workers.

Marine Labor Board Backs Bargaining on U. S. Ships

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—Five basic recommendations for a permanent U. S. government policy on maritime labor questions are made in the annual report of the Maritime Labor Board, just released here.

The report calls for collective bargaining on vessels owned or leased by the government, protection of the right to strike while in safe harbor, denial of subsidies to shipowners who violate the Wagner Act, voluntary mediation of labor disputes, and jurisdiction over representation cases by the Board or its successor.

In general, the report urged that the right of collective bargaining for seagoing personnel be maintained, and suggested that restrictions now placed on that right by statute and government policy be removed. In addition, the Board stated its belief that either it or some similar agency should be continued by Congress.

UNSETTLED CONDITIONS

"The Board does believe," the report says, "that present unsettled labor conditions in the maritime industry make it desirable that there should be a specialized federal mediatory agency with functions similar to those of the Maritime Labor Board."

In recommending that the U. S. Maritime Commission be required to engage in collective bargaining on the ships it operates or owns, the Board was taking a mild swing at persistent anti-labor, and especially anti-CIO, policies of the Commission, which is composed of retired Admirals, insurance brokers, and the like.

Slash Wages, NAM Leader Urges

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Mar. 2. — A wealthy corporation executive today offered American workers the choice of being "willing to work or starve—root hog or die—count it a privilege to die, if need be."

The suggestion, which brought immediate protests from mid-west union leaders, was made by B. C. Heacock, head of the Caterpillar Tractor Co. and chairman of the agricultural cooperation committee of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers.

Speaking at a Purdue University farm conference, Heacock presented the unique theory that high wages for the industrial workers would ruin the farmers. The only way to solve the nation's farm problem, he said, is to slash the wages of workers.

"There is nothing sacred or good in high dollar wages," the NAM leader proclaimed. An un-named manufacturer who boasts of high daily wages has done more harm to American industry than any other man, he added.

At Peoria, Ill., leaders of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee warned Caterpillar employes to stand on guard against possible efforts by Heacock to translate his theories into wage cuts.

"Workers know," the statement said, "that mass unemployment, starvation farm prices, low wages and war are brought about the policies of the Heacocks, the hungry Hoovers and the fat Wall Street gang of coupon clippers."

Ask Aid For Farmers

Chicago, Mar. 2.—Packinghouse workers joined with steel unionists today in urging that the federal government abandon plans to cut aid for farmers.

A formal resolution passed at a conference called by Labor's Non-Partisan League in the third Illinois district asserted that workers "recognize that the prosperity and well-being of the urban wroker and the farmer are interdependent, and we wish to extend the hand of fraternal cooperation to the distressed farmer of the country."

The resolution introduced by the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee pointed to the meager appropriation passed by the House of Representatives and "urged the Congress to lift the appropriation for farm purposes to adequate levels suggested by dirt farmers and adopt such legislation that will enable the American farmer to obtain parity prices."

Drives Open For 4 Polls

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2. — The CIO's big drive to sweep forthcoming major Labor Board elections started with a bang this week.

The Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers polled 4,683 votes at the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. plant in Kearny, N. J., thereby swamping an independent union which received only 693 votes.

Officials of the union, hailing the victory as the latest in a series of gains, predicted sole bargaining rights in a forthcoming contract parley.

Active campaigns are under way, meanwhile, for other Labor Board polls.

In Washington the NLRB gave the green light to plans for the election at General Motors, in which 125,000 workers will vote. Responsibility for setting the date, which will probably be in April, now rests with the Board's Detroit regional office.

Leaders of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, are going ahead with plans for a whirlwind campaign to roll up a huge majority for their union. CIO Pres. Lewis and Vice-Presidents Murray and Hillman have been invited to speak in Detroit.

The Utility Workers Organizing Committee is going forward with plans for the election in the state-wide Consumers Power Co. system. The Supreme Court has upheld a Board decision that voters shall be asked if they wish to be represented by the CIO or by no union.

In New York 32,000 workers at the big Consolidated Edison plant will be asked to choose between the CIO Utility Workers and AFL union, an independent organization or no union. In New England and New Jersey, the United Rubber Workers are active in pre-election campaigns at the U. S. Rubber and Hood Rubber plants.

Mill Workers Win Closed Shop

Catlettsburg, Ky., Mar. 2.—Local 970, United Mill Workers of America, has signed a closed shop contract with the R. C. Poage Milling Co. providing for check-off of union dues, according to William Rice, Jr., union secretary.

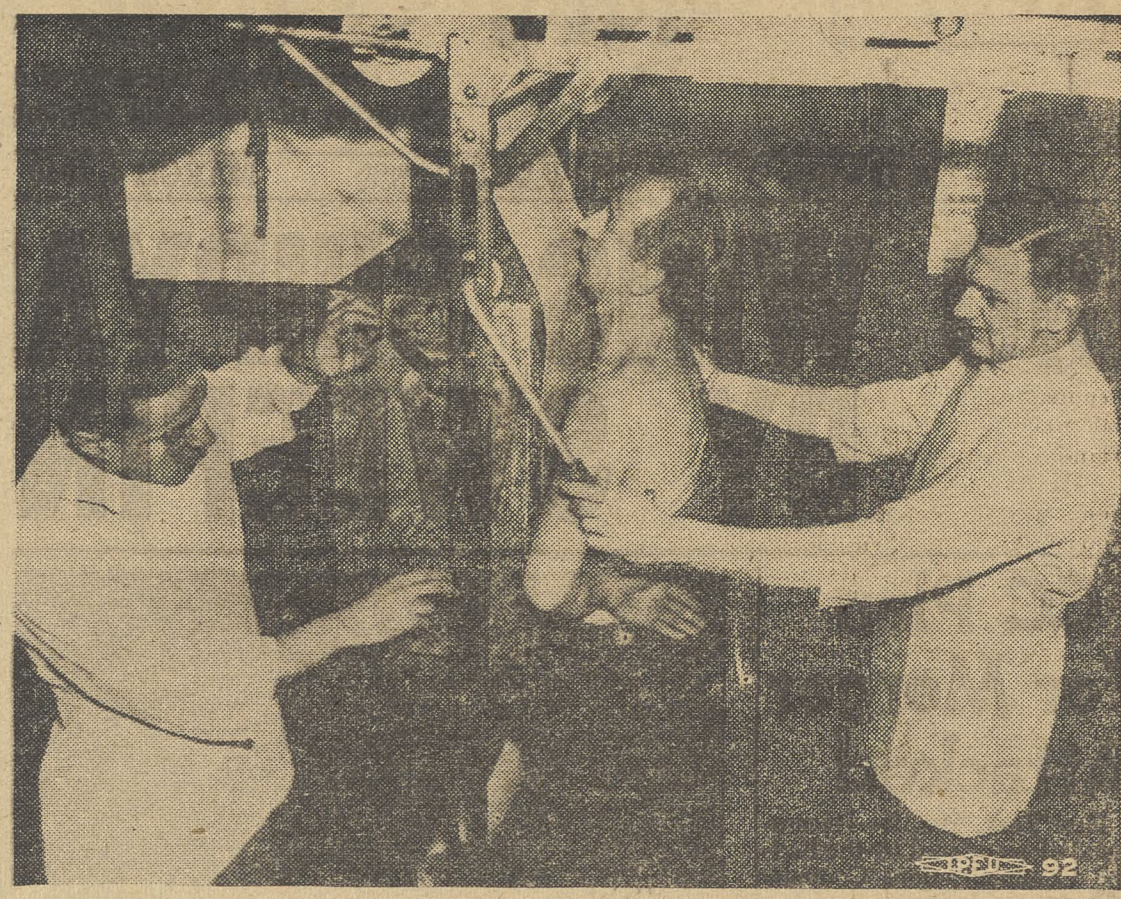
More Violence Traced To Girdler Thugs

BUFFALO, N. Y., Mar. 2. — Slugging, auto wrecking and other acts of violence committed by stooges of the Republic Steel Corp. were highlights of the testimony presented at the hearing being conducted here by the National Labor Relations Board on charges filed by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Star witness in the first week's hearing was Walter R. Goszka, former Republic Steel cop, who gave names, dates and places of beatings, auto wreckings, and other acts of terrorism committed by the company's police force before and during the 1937 strike.

Goszka, the tell-all ex-cop, testified to helping two other company cop beat up Charles Doyle, former SWOC organizer and other unionists. He said he had been ordered to sit in a parked car across from the plant prepared to slug anyone who tried to distribute union literature.

GOONS IN DISGUISE



He also told of being put in charge of a squad of company cops, dressed in overalls and armed with blackjacks, who were ordered to charge on handbill distributors upon a signal from the plant, and of dumping resin in the gas tank of an organizer under orders from his superintendent.

Other cops described to him, Goszka testified, how they had run Norman Ross, organizer, into the curb and "punched him around," and on another occasion a company cop told him he was leaving town after the beating of a union leaflet distributor, until "things cooled off a bit."

Acts of violence perpetrated by agents of the company as revealed by the testimony of other witnesses during the first week of the hearing included:

Inciting unorganized workers to run union leaders out of the mill: forcing employes to give up handbills; smashing automobiles; following union men and organizers with carloads of company cops; spying on union meetings; and waylaying organizers in taverns.

Union Health Program

PREPARING FOR AN EXAM to determine condition of his lungs and chest is Alfred Schwarz, member of the National Maritime Union, which has just launched an extensive tuberculosis examination program in connection with the WPA and New York health authorities. Several thousand members will be examined.

Girdler's Strip-Teasers Do Woo Act for Fake Union

GADSDEN, Ala., Mar. 2.—A performance by six scantily clad showgirls before a company union meeting at the Republic Steel Corporation's YMCA building today was causing corporation big shots more embarrassment than a dozen of Gadsden's stereotyped beatings of union organizers.

The hour-and-a-half party, participated in by more than 200 company unionists, brought forth indignant protests from clergymen and women's leaders in this company-controlled town.

The girls' strip tease show proceeded to the point where they were clad only in shoes and necklaces, it was charged. The girls were introduced to the audience by D. S. Campbell, an employe in Republic's plant office. William Alexander, a Republic special policeman, was present during the entire exhibition but took no action, though the property was inside his jurisdiction, it was charged.

A number of Gadsden ministers said the city commission would be asked to prefer charges against those responsible for the show, and that an appeal would be made to the sheriff if that move failed.

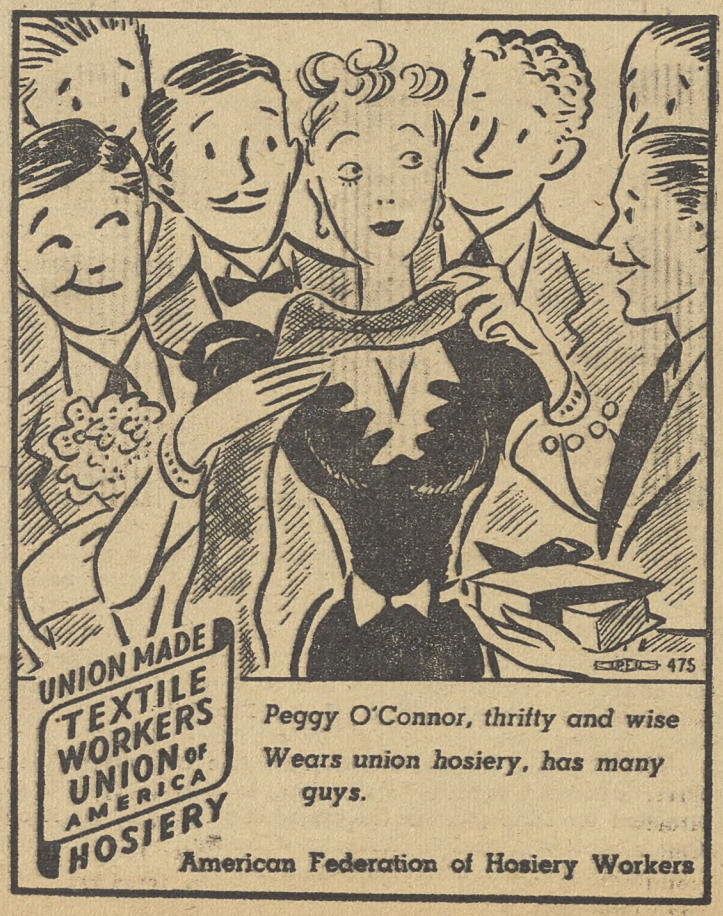
Gadsden is dominated by the Goodyear Rubber Co. and Republic Steel. Through special policeman, an elaborate spy system and control of many parts of the city government, the two corporations have used constant force to prevent CIO organizers from building union locals at the plants.

Four Cops Arraigned On CIO Charges

Providence, R. I., Mar. 2.—Arraignment of four police officers charged with assault on strike pickets coincided here today with the signing of a contract by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the Warwick Fittings Co., thereby ending a strike that has been in effect since last November.

Joseph Mayo, state director of the CIO, said the contract, which provides for a 10 per cent wage increase, the 40-hour week and checkoff of union dues, "is a great victory."

Parleys leading up to the settlement were in progress at the Rhode Island State House for two days, with federal and state conciliation officials in attendance.



Indictment of the four Warwick police officers followed a disturbance at the mill gates last January 23 followed charges by members of SWOC Lodge 2017

Shipyard Union Wins Increases

Baltimore, Md., March 2—Local 31 of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers has signed a new contract with the Maryland Drydock Co. here, establishing among other things, a $1.10 top hourly rate for six classifications of mechanics, the highest rate paid locally.

At the same time the signing of the contract was announced, the company stated that it had secured a $428,000 reconditioning job on the Steamship China Arrow, the largest ever obtained by the firm. It will boost the force of 1,100 workers to 1,500, and will provide about 60,000 man-days of employment, company officials said.

Marine Union Opens Survey Of T. B.

NEW YORK, Mar. 2. — A three-month tuberculosis survey of the National Maritime Union membership was opened this week with ceremonies in the recreation hall at union headquarters. A score of health officials and authorities from the State Department of Labor, the City Health Department and various health and civic organizations attended.

The survey is being conducted by the WPA under the direction of the Health Department with the cooperation of the Bureau of Industrial Hygiene, State Labor Department, the Lower West Side District Health Committee and the NMU Waterfront Research Committee.

PLEDGES AID

Dr. Herbert R. Edwards, director of the Bureau of Tuberculosis, pledged the continued cooperation of his organization to determine the extent of tuberculosis in the shipping industry and in devising ways of fighting it. He promised the "best possible treatment" for those found to have the disease.

Urging every union member to be examined, Dr. Edwards pointed out that complete cures could be effected if discovered in time.

Immediately after the ceremonies, technicians began X-raying members who applied for examination. It was estimated that 500 a day could be examined.

Teachers Join CIO In W. Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., Mar. 2.—Two teachers locals, one in Mingo county, the other in McDowell county, have been chartered by the State, County & Municipal Workers, according to Edward P. Kelly, field representative for the SCMW.

"We expect that the issuance of these charters will mark the beginning of a serious effort on the part of the CIO to organize the teachers of the state of West Virginia effectively," Kelly stated in announcing installation of the charters.

MUST JOIN WITH LABOR

"Teachers must realize that the maintenance and continued improvement of the educational system of our state in all its phases can best be promoted in cooperation with the labor movement. In West Virginia the labor movement is the CIO.

"Labor pays the bill for education. Labor has the greatest stake in seeing that its children get improved educational opportunities.

"Teachers have an obligation to sit in the councils of labor so that labor in turn may devote its energies to seeing that these needs are met."

Oppose Weakening Wage-Hour Act

New York, March 2—Opposition to any changes in Wage-Hour Act interpretations that might exclude newspaper employes from its benefits was voiced in a memorandum submitted today to Administrator Philip Fleming by the American Newspaper Guild.

Five-Year Pacts Signed On Coast

San Francisco, Mar. 2. — Four more five-year pacts were announced here this week by the American Communications Association, CIO. Several weeks ago the ACA signed its first five-year pact with the Coastwise line.

Terms of the new contracts include $25 monthly pay increase, two weeks' paid vacations, complete jurisdiction over ship-shore communication, definite eight-hour day and overtime pay. Wage scales may be revised once a year, but not reduced.

Real Bargaining Leads to Pact, U. S. Court Rules

NEW YORK, Mar. 2. — Genuine collective bargaining requires the reaching of a signed contract, the federal circuit court of appeals decided here in a case that will probably reach the U. S. Supreme Court.

"No one can dispute that a permanent memorial of any negotiation which results in a bargain is not only appropriate but practically necessary to its preservation," Judge Learned Hand wrote in the majority opinion.

"The freedom reserved to the employer is freedom to refuse concessions in working conditions to his employes or to exact concessions from them; it is not the freedom once they have in fact agreed upon these conditions to compromise the whole proceeding and probably make it nugatory."

By its action, the New York circuit court sided with the view of the Pittsburgh circuit court in the Heinz case, and disagreed with a recent Chicago ruling that the Inland Steel Co. was not required to sign a contract with the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Supreme Court Plans Review Of Apex Case

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—The United States Supreme Court today had agreed to a review of the Apex Hosiery case, which involves the use of the Sherman Anti-Trust law against labor unions.

The decision to hear the case followed a petition from attorneys for the Philadelphia firm, which sought an appeal from the federal circuit court order upholding contentions of the CIO American Federation of Hosiery Workers that it should be freed from a $700,000 triple damages award levied by the federal district court.

Isadore Katz, counsel for the hosiery union, said he had no doubt that "the Supreme Court will affirm the judgment and hold, as did the lower court, that there was no violation of the Sherman Act in the Apex strike."

CLARIFIES POINT

At the same time the high tribunal took action to clarify a point in National Labor Relations Board procedure.

It ruled that only the Labor Board may petition a federal circuit court for enforcement of an NLRB order. The decision came in a case involving the CIO Amalgamated Utility Workers, which had applied to the lower court for enforcement of an order against the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York after the NLRB refused to take such action.

Sen. Norris Raps G-Men's Activities

Washington, March 2 — Sharp criticism of J. Edgar Hoover and his Dept. of Justice G-Men reached the floor of the Senate here when Sen. George Norris, veteran Nebraska liberal, called for an investigation of their activities.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been the butt of frequent accusations of anti-unionism since the European war was declared, with many union groups charging Hoover with an unhealthy cooperation with labor spy groups and anti-labor manufacturers.

Norris placed in the record an editorial from the New Republic, progressive weekly magazine, which asserted that the G-men had used illegal tactics in the arrest of 17 people—most of them Detroiters—accused of helping to recruit men for the Spanish loyalist army in 1937.

Norris said the manner of the arrests, which occurred in early morning hours and the subsequent detention of the prisoners, "were, to say the least, rather abhorrent to one who believes in constitutional liberty.

"If these charges are only partially true, it is a matter of taking the law into their own hands and punishing people who are not convicted of a crime, who are not charged with any malicious crime, who are not charged with anything which has attached to any element of criminality."

Ask High Court Bar Anti-Picket Law

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—The U. S. Supreme Court today studied CIO arguments that a Shasta County, Calif., anti-picketing ordinance violates fundamental civil liberties and should be held unconstitutional.

The case involved 30 members of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelting Workers, who were arrested as they picketed the Delta Tunnel Construction Project, 32 miles north of Reading, Calif., early in 1939.

The local court ordered a $25 fine or 12 days in jail, which was upheld by the state superior court.

The brief submitted by CIO General Counsel Pressman and other members of the CIO legal department argued that "peaceful picketing in public streets and places during a labor dispute over terms and conditions of employment and representation for purpose of collecting bargaining is an exercise of fundamental civil liberties protected by the federal constitution. . . .

"The Shasta County anti-picketing ordinance on its face and as construed and applied abridges the exercise of these liberties; and . . . a reversal should be entered declaring the ordinance invalid and reversing the judgment. . . ."

Wine Institute Lifts Pay Scale

San Francisco, March 2. — An agreement reached with the Wine Institute by the Warehousemen's Union and signed by ten wine companies, provides hourly pay increases of five cents for about 200 workers. Contracts with four other wine firms not members of the Institute are expected shortly.

The Warehousemen, affiliated with the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, CIO, are also negotiating for contracts with concerns in the tobacco industry.

Flash Green Light For GM Election

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—Elections among employes in 59 General Motors plants in twelve states were officially ordered by the National Labor Relations Board this week. The Board's order was based upon an agreement reached Feb. 13 between the company, the United Automobile Workers, CIO, and a small group of AFL unions.

No definite date was set by the Board for the polls, but they were directed to be held "as soon as practicable," which probably means they will take place in April.

EXTENSIVE PLANS

Extensive plans for the campaign in General Motors elections are being made by the CIO auto workers. President John L. Lewis has been invited to make two addresses in Michigan, one in Detroit, the other in Flint. Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-presidents, are also scheduled to make speeches in GM centers.

Workers will be divided into three classifications for the purposes of voting, according to the stipulation approved:

1. Production and maintenance employes in 58 plants will vote on representation by the UAW-CIO, the UAW-AFL, or by neither.

2. Die sinkers at the Buick Motor division plant at Flint and the Chevrolet Motor Division Forge plant at Detroit, will choose between the UAW-CIO; Lodge 1411 or Lodge 1217 of the Intl. Assn. of Machinists, AFL; or neither.

3. Pattern makers in 10 separate plants will vote on whether they want to be represented by the UAW-CIO; the Pattern Makers League of North America, AFL, or by neither.

These 10 plants are: Cadillac Motor Car Division, Detroit; Buick Motor Division, Flint; two plants of the Chevrolet Motor Division, Flint and Saginaw; two plants of Fisher Body Division, Detroit; Pontiac Motor Division, Pontiac; Saginaw Malleable Division, Saginaw; Research Laboratories Division, Detroit; and one plant in Ohio, the Cleveland Diesel Engine Division.

SINGLE UNITS

All production and maintenance employes in each individual plant in which a majority chooses the UAW-CIO, or the UAW-AFL, is to constitute a single collective bargaining unit, according to the Board's ruling based on the joint stipulation.

Confident of winning a sweeping victory, the CIO auto union agreed to the stipulation to forestall dragging out the hearings which might have delayed elections beyond the production period.

Shipbuilders Win Election by 6-1

KEARNY, N. J., Mar. 2.—A smashing victory was won by the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers in a Labor Board eelction held among employes of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company plant here.

The CIO union carried the election by a vote of 4,683 to 693 for the Shipyard Employes Association, an independent group, and 263 for no union.

In a separate election, plant guards and watchmen voted 45-3 for the CIO union.

The company is a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corp., now engaged in building several vessels for the U. S. Navy.

Union officials announced that negotiations would start for a renewal of the contract which expires May 29, strengthened by the addition of an exclusive recognition clause.

Pres. John Dempsey of Local 16 said that "this overwhelming victory will clean out once and for all the dissenting group which has caused whatever friction has existed in the yard since our first agreement was signed. We now look forward to a 100% organized and united labor force, and cooperation and harmony in the plant."

5% Raise Won By CIO In Delaware

Wilmington, Del., March 2 — Wage increases averaging five per cent and the first sole bargaining rights granted in this city were won by the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in an agreement with the Pusey-Jones shipyards here.

The pact, which was ratified by a 100 per cent vote of the membership, marks the third year of harmonious relations between the CIO shipyard union and Pusey-Jones. Between 600 and 700 men will be covered by the agreement when work gets under way in a month or so.

The union is now looking forward to negotiating a contract with the Dravo plant here where it has a large membership.

Upholds Union Shop

TESTIFYING BEFORE HOUSE LABOR COMMITTEE, Pres. Kenneth Crawford of the American Newspaper Guild, attacked proposals to ban the Guild shop among newspaper and magazine editorial employes. Crawford declared union conditions a necessity for stabilizing wages, hours and working conditions.

MUST BARGAIN

Washington.—(FP)—The Labor Board has ordered the Lancaster Iron Works, Lancaster, Pa., to disband a company union and bargain collectively with the CIO steel workers union.

Gloom In The AFL

SOUTH BARRE, Mass., March 2—Gloom prevails in AFL official headquarters in this area over the losing of an election at the plant of the South Barre Wool Combing Company to the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO. The TWUA defeated the AFL union, 406 to 241.

In the excitement that prevailed during the week preceding the poll, AFL officials confidently predicted that they would carry the election by not less than 350 votes.

Coming Events...

The more than six-to-one vote for the CIO in the big Labor Board election at the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Kearny, N. J., is much more than a straw that shows which way the wind is blowing. It is more like a landslide that shows the cliffs of anti-unionism are crumbling.

The Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers won a magnificent victory in this election, receiving 4,683 votes, as against 693 for a so-called independent or company union and 263 votes for no union.

This election reveals once more, as have all other recent elections, that the modern, clean, democratic industrial unionism of the CIO is what the workers want, when they have a chance to vote.

In congratulating the Kearny shipyard workers and the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers on this splendid victory, the workers in General Motors, Consolidated Edison, Consumers Power, U. S. Rubber and other plants where elections are soon to be held, will see a foreshadowing of the big CIO victories which they too expect to register when their turn comes.

Pass the Walsh-Healey Amendments

The House of Representatives has an opportunity to end a public scandal by passing the amendments to the Walsh-Healey act which have already been passed by the Senate in S.1032.

One of these amendments would make corporations which have been held by the courts to have violated the Wagner labor relations act, ineligible for government contracts.

The others would expand the scope of the Walsh-Healey act, which at present provides for decent labor standards only on contracts in excess of $10,000.

The government of the United States is supposed to protect the rights of all Americans. The right of collective bargaining, embodied in the Wagner act, is one of the most fundamental of American rights, vitally affecting all working people.

Wtih tremendous sums of money at its disposal for private contract work, the government has a direct means of seeing that collective bargaining rights and decent conditions are accorded at least to the workers who are employed with government money.

Instead, the breaking of the Wagner acts has actually been encouraged by the government through its grants of contracts to concerns which are the most flagrant violators of this act.

Passage of the Walsh - Healey amendments will end this scandal, and all unionists are urged to communicate at once with the House Judiciary Committee to call for a favorable report and their final passage by the House. Address your communications to Congressman Emanuel Celler, chairman of the sub-committee now considering the amendments.

Fair Play for the Foreign-Born

The CIO, at its last convention, emphatically expressed its "opposition to anti-alien bills that are opposed to the basic foundations of our democracy, which would menace not only the civil liberties of aliens, but all of us."

In line with this position, the CIO has registered its opposition to HR 4860, the Dempsey Bill, in a letter to the Senate Immigration Committee which has the bill under consideration.

In a letter to Senator James H. Hughes, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, points out that this bill is so vague and indefinite, in calling for deportation of any alien who advocates changes in our government, that it would "strike at any alien who belonged to any organization which believed, for example, that the President of the United States should be elected by a direct popular vote rather than by the Electoral College."

"Certainly a similar bill if made applicable on the same basis to citizens of the United States would be in violation of our constitutional guarantees of civil rights," he said.

In other words, the CIO calls for fair play and justice for foreign-born as well as native-born, in line with the principles of true Americanism embodied in the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

The Right Hand Knows Not What the Left Hand Does

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

The Cloakroom Boys

A LIBERAL, according to one of Heywood Broun's famous definitions, is the fellow who makes for the cloakroom when a fight starts.

Be that as it may, John L. Lewis' recent utterances have started quite a rush to the cloakroom on the part of the boys who have been saying, "Let's you and him fight!"

While the reactionary press suffers from shell-shock, some of the "liberal" press professes to be morally shocked.

Well, isn't there plenty to be shocked about? There certainly is.

More than ten million Americans are out of a job, and their number is increasing. Neither Democratic or Republican leaders advance any program to give them jobs.

On the contrary, the administration offers a budget to cut 650,000 more off WPA, to curtail public works, and to reduce aid to jobless youth. And the Republicans ask even more "economy."

War Fever

War is raging abroad. All sorts of influences are at work to enlist the United States, first morally, then financially—and then, who knows, actually—in this warfare.

The totalitarian intolerance of war hysteria is gaining ground. Even the right to pass resolutions is questioned, if they express the fear of many that foreign loans and other schemes may lead to war. Sneering and scolding in high places may have their counterpart in mob action. It has happened before.

Concern with foreign affairs so absorbs our national leaders that they advance no program whatever to meet our domestic ills—to bring jobs, security and recovery to the American people.

On the contrary, the budget calls for slashing the social services, cutting relief and hampering enforcement of social legislation by reduced appropriations — to make more money available for armaments.

As for labor, it is little consulted and less represented in the management of national affairs. Fat government contracts are awarded to corporations that break the law which defends labor's rights. The wages of one-third of the workers are less than $500 a year, and two-thirds get less than $1,000.

Yes, there is plenty to be shocked about. But the cloakroom press is not shocked about these things. It is shocked apparently because John L. Lewis calls attention to them, and because he proposes to do something about them.

Fair-Weather Friends

It may seem surprising that all professing liberals should not have greeted Lewis' recent statements with enthusiasm.

After all, he merely gave vigorous and practical expression to ideas to which they themselvevs are wont to pay theoretical tribute —before it looks like a fight.

But back files of the cloakroom liberal publications which registered shock, will reveal that they usually run with the hare only until it is safer to hunt with the hounds.

They are great friends of labor —in fair weather.

But when the sky is darkened with anti-labor propaganda, when the violent chase gets under way, they add their Harvard accents to the hue and cry.

When American steel workers were being beaten, shot at and even massacred in the Little Steel strike—when all the forces of reaction ganged up to lie about and crush the CIO—when a president elected by labor votes called "a plague on both your houses" — these same publications wailed about labor going too far.

Then, too, they were shocked that Lewis should speak up.

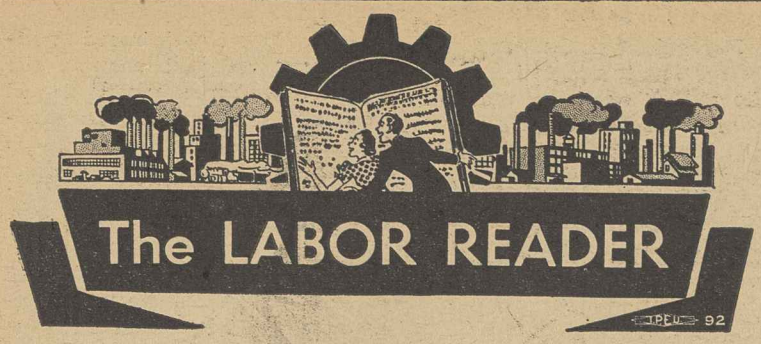
A Real Program

So the cloakroom boys were shocked again at Lewis' Youth Congress speech.

But the CIO leader was less concerned with the tender feelings of labor's fair-weather friends than he was with the crying needs of the workers for whom he spoke.

He emphasized again that labor is not a political chattel of either the Democratic or Republican party leaders; that it demands a real program and proper consideration in return for its support.

Lewis' speech followed the lines of the CIO legislative program. He called for a national conference to work out a coordinated plan to cope with unemployment. He called for expansion of public works meanwhile to provide more jobs; for more aid to youth; for decent pensions for the aged; and in general for advance—not retreat—in carrying through the social and economic program that has been barely begun in recent years.



At the same time he warned against the growing intolerance of near-wartime hysteria; called for protection of democratic rights and civil liberties; and advocated alertness against any schemes and any propaganda that may lead to war involvement.

This is a program that all true liberals should and will support. It is shocking only to the phony liberal—the little man who isn't there when the fighting starts.

Sign Contract

Huntington, W. Va., March 2—The CIO United Insulator Workers LIU 986, today had won a signed contract with the Jeffrey DeWitt Insulator Co. in this city.

The union, one of the youngest in the city, gained the 40-hour week, seniority and time-and-a-half pay for overtime work.

Labor and Production

By C. W. FOWLER

Everybody in the United States recognizes the desirability and the value of collective bargaining in industry. No responsible person, employer or other, who knows what the term means rises up nowadays to deny its virtues—no matter how little he may believe in practicing them.

Most people have a general idea of what collective bargaining means good relations between employer and worker, better working and living conditions, industrial peace, and the like. Fewer people know its full implications, what it can mean and does mean to the welfare and progress of the United States as a whole.

In "Organized Labor and Production," the authors, Philip Murray, vice-president of the CIO and Chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and Morris L. Cooke, consulting engineer, have dealt with collective bargaining and its effects on the whole economy of our country.

THE DEMOCRATIC PROCESS

The authors start with the premise that "envisages unions and managements bound together by collective bargaining," and proceed to discuss the relations brought about by collective bargaining, not only in terms to industrial peace, but in terms of increased production and greater national wealth as well.

The book begins with a brief historical survey of both labor organization and industry, tracing the rise of the union movement and of the great industrial corporations that now dominate the American economic scene. The chapter on "The Estate of Labor" makes a strong plea for the commonsense of cooperation by management with labor's need to organize, saying:

"Under such conditions the transition, for management from arbitrary control, and for men from docile submission, to joint responsibility and cooperation will be much easier and with a minimum of misunderstanding and suspicion. Little of permanent value can be accomplished if labor must be constantly on guard against attack."

PRODUCTION AND LIVING STANDARDS

High productivity and high living standards go hand in hand, the authors declare, and only cooperation between labor and management under conditions of collective bargaining can bring such a desirable condition about. Declining productivity has always brought declining living standards. Technological unemployment, a problem that has long harrassed the labor movement as well as other socially conscious groups and individuals, further complicates the goal of high productivity and high living conditions.

Vice-President Murray and Mr. Cooke have written an exhaustive treatment on a problem that faces all Americans today—the problem of maintaining high levels of production with high levels of human living. Their comment ranges from a history of the labor movement to a consideration of the latest developments in collective bargaining and employer-employe relationships, and they conclude with a "Dialogue Between the Authors" that opens up even further considerations.

And, as Vice-President Murray concludes in the last sentence of the dialogue:

"We are just leaving a period in which collective bargaining was scarcely ever really accepted. Employers dealt with unions only because they had to. If we go back to such conditions now in view of the present world-wide attacks on democracy the outcome may well be a weakening of democratic processes here and a possible setting of the scene for a dictatorship. If American political democracy is to survive, we must succeed. We must have democracy in industry."

Canadian Salt Miners On Strike

Malagash, N. S., March 2—Employes of the Malagash Salt Co. and members of the CIO Salt Workers Federal Union, have refused to return to work until the company agrees to negotiate for wages and working conditions.

The men, on strike in the salt mine for about a week, confronted with a suggestion that they return to work before negotiations would be begun, retorted that they could negotiate just as well while they were on strike as while they were at work.

Seek National Recognition

Denver, Colo., March 2 — Demands for national recognition from the powerful American Smelting & Refining Co. were the major outcome of a two-day conference here of delegates representing CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers locals in the company's plants.

The 11 men, representing 15 AS&R locals, voted to seek management recognition as bargaining representative for the 13 company plants now under contract with the union, and to set as their goal a national agreement covering all the corporation's mine, smelters and refineries.

Five From CIO On Pay-Hour Committees

Washington, March 2—Appointment of CIO representatives on committees to determine minimum wage rates under the Fair Labor Standards Act were announced today by the U. S. Wage-Hour Division.

Five leaders of the Leather Division of the CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union were named to the committee for the leather industry. They are Sec.-Treas. Daniel Boyle of Boston, Joseph Cunningham of Philadelphia, Augustine Tomlinson, Girard, Ohio; James J. Chenery, Boston, and Thomas Galanos, of Newark.

Chairman of the committee, which is composed of 24 members representing workers, employers and the public is Msgr. Francis Haas.

Named to the paper industry committee was Ray Thomason, president of the Virginia CIO Industrial Union Council.

Dalrymple Speaks On Security Mar. 7 Over Mutual Chain

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—"Security for the People" will be the title of an address delivered over the Mutual Broadcasting System network on Thursday, March 7, at 9:15 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, by Vice-President S. H. Dalrymple of the CIO.

Dalrymple, who is president of the United Rubber Workers and chairman of the CIO Social Security Committee, will speak on the CIO demand for $60 at 60 and other aspects of labor's social security program.

Union officials and members were asked this week by Len De Caux, CIO publicity director, to contact their local Mutual radio station and inquire if it will carry the speech. Sufficient interest on the part of union people will ordinarily lead the local station manager to schedule the speech.

If it is impossible for the local station to carry the speech at the time it is delivered, arrangements can frequently be made for the station to make a record transcription which it will re-broadcast later in the evening.

Robinson On Air Mar. 4

Washington, March 2—CIO Vice-President Reid Robinson will discuss "Jobs Made in America" over the NBC's nation-wide network on Monday, March 4, from 9.30 to 9.45 p. m.

Robinson, who heads the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, will speak from Washington.

Haywood Asks Unions Aid Only CIO Tenant Farmers

Washington, Mar. 2. — A call to support the CIO union in the tenant farmer field, the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, and a warning against lending aid of encouragement to an opposition group which is seeking to raise funds through a "National Sharecroppers Week," have been issued by Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, in a letter to all CIO affiliates and representatives.

Director Haywood transmits with his statement a letter from Donald Henderson, president of the UCAPAWA and a statement signed by sharecroppers, tenants and day laborers representing the CIO union's local and state organizations in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri, Texas and Alabama.

"President Henderson points out that the Southern Tenant Farmers Union is fighting the CIO and that this group at one time was affiliated with the CIO but seceded; that according to his statement, and the statement of the groups mentioned above, they represent but a few of the tenant farmers," Haywood declares.

"To permit confusion, and encourage another organization in this field, is only to injure the tenant farmers which the CIO started out to assist.

"It is our duty to support the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, affiliated with the CIO, and we should not give any aid or support to other groups who do not have the support of this international of ours," Haywood stated.

Henderson states that "CIO unions should be informed that this group is attempting to raise money throughout the north for the purpose of fighting and discrediting the CIO agricultural union in the south. Today the only large and effective union of sharecroppers and tenants in the south is the CIO agricultural union."

The statement by the CIO sharecroppers' representative declares that "in the states of Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Missouri and Alabama no other organization or union except affiliates of the CIO has any effective membership or locals composed of sharecroppers.

It declares that the STFU "has no single local or paid-up members in the states of Oklahoma, Texas or Alabama, and no effective organization in the states of Arkansas or Missouri."

AFL Moguls in Panic, Jump From Frying Pan Into Hotter Fires

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2. — Steady advance of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, CIO affiliate for building workers, was marked this week by widespread favorable comment in the industry.

The drive of the UCWOC to enroll construction workers in an industrial union "is going well enough to merit thorough examination by contractors," Business-Week informed its readers. After relating progress to date of the UCWOC, this publication added:

"General opinion in building employers' circles seems to be that the CIO union has a good idea in offering to merge craft lines, end jurisdictional quarrels among construction labor, and reduce daily wage in return for longer jobs and more of them."

The confidential letter of the Dow Service building reports also hailed the UCWOC program and said it had predicted months ago that the craft unions were certain to be challenged if they did not wake up. It told of their failure to organize workers in many fields of the industry and of widespread discontent with their methods where they had gained contracts.

PAMPHLET POPULAR

Scores of orders were received at UCWOC headquarters for its new pamphlet, "The Program of the UCWOC" which told the story of CIO action in this biggest industry in the country. Several more new locals were chartered bringing the total to more than 100 throughout the United States.

Stung out of their torpor by UCWOC activity, the craft union bosses of the building trades showed flickering signs of life for the first time in many a year and with amusing results.

PICKET UNION JOBS

In a futile attempt to halt the swing of the industry toward the industrial union program of the CIO, the craft master minds tried to frighten contractors by putting pickets on CIO jobs. Thus, the AFL in Washington was picketing fair employers and union jobs.

This high-handed attempt to intimidate fair employers got the AFL in bad with public opinion in the nation's Capital to such an extent that every newspaper commented adversely on their dog-in-the-manger tactics. The UCWOC took to the radio and told its story and won wide public acclaim.

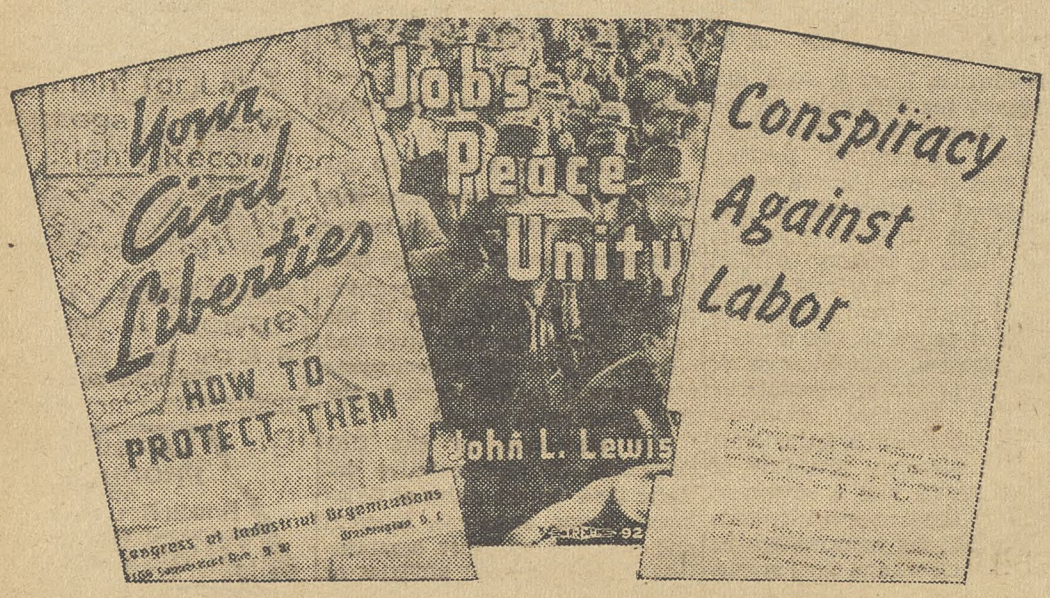
Not only did the craft union bosses fail to respond to the radio station's request that it appear with the UCWOC, but it alienated all public support by demanding that work done under UCWOC union contract be done over by AFL members. Otherwise, it said it would picket "for a year or more."

'EMERGENCY MEETING'

Other signs of panic in AFL craft ranks were the calling of an emergency session of craft moguls in Washington to resist exposure and prosecution of racketeers who have exploited the workers and been a detriment to the industry. One craft union official in Pittsburgh who was fined $7,000 promptly assessed his membership to pay the fine.

In another frantic move to resist progress and change, the painters union executive board proposed a change in its constitution to increase per capita to the national office "to combat the activities of the CIO." It said "a real emergency exists."

FACE CRISIS



On the spot in the court of public opinion, distracted by prosecution of racketeers in their midst, plagued by jurisdictional dsputes they can't control, and alarmed by growth of the UCWOC, the craft moguls are facing the worst crisis of their history.

And their only answer is to go out and further antagonize public, labor, and industry by picketing UCWOC jobs!

Withhold U. S. Contracts From Law Violators, CIO Urges Congress

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—The House of Representatives was urged today to pass liberalizing amendments to the Walsh-Healey Act.

Appearing before the House Judiciary Committee, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, testified in behalf of S. 1032, which would make the Act apply to government contracts of $4,000 or more, extend its coverage to the shipbuilding industry and amend it to prevent contractors found guilty before a "court of final adjudication" of violating the Wagner Act from receiving government contracts.

"There is no reason, short of arbitrary selfishness and disregard of the welfare of the millions of workers in this country, which stands in the way of passage of this legislation at this session of Congress," the CIO official declared.

The bill has already passed the Senate. Under its terms, a company found guilty in the courts of Wagner Act violations would be eligible for government contracts only when it had ceased disregarding the law.

MUST RESPECT LAWS

"This bill rests upon the unanswerable premise that corporations which secure profitable government contracts should comply with the laws of the U. S. The amount of government business is tremendous and increases each year.

"In the approximately three years of the operation of the Public Contracts Act there have been over 14,000 contracts covering practically every type of industrial product manufactured in this country, and amounting to a total sum of one billion dollars," Pressman said.

"The firms which secured these contracts are receiving public funds and the federal government has the right to impose upon them the obligation contained in this bill."

The Senate bill containing this amendment does not "create any new situation," Pressman said in his testimony. "It merely extends the protection of the Walsh-Healey Act to the right of collective bargaining. The Act now protects hours of work, minimum wages, prohibits the use of child labor, and protects the worker against unsafe working conditions.

DESERVES SUPPORT

"Certainly a right as fundamental and as important as the right of collective bargaining should likewise receive the protection of the Federal government in the expenditure of tremendous sums to private contractors."

He cited numerous firms which have "received profitable government contracts, obtaining substantial profits thereby," and which "are among the most notorious of those who deny to their employes their rights to collective bargaining." These firms, such as Bethlehem Steel, Newport News Shipbuilding, etc., are able to underbid firms that do obey the Wagner Act and thus secure a disproportionate share of Federal contracts.

Workers at DuPont Plant Swing to CIO

CAMDEN, N. J., Mar. 2. — An independent union at DuPont's important Paulsboro plant today affiliated with District 50 of the United Mine Workers after having thrown off all traces of company domination.

Members of the organization, with only eight dissenting votes, made application for the CIO charter after hearing addresses by William Carney and Leonard Goldsmith, New Jersey CIO president and secretary; and by Roy Lancaster, District 50 representative.

Washington, March 2 — Pres. Martin Wagner, of District 50, United Mine Workers, today foresaw a mass influx of chemical workers into that union following action by the independent union at the Paulsboro, N. J., plant of duPont in affiliating with District 50.

"The workers in this duPont plant have decided to join the CIO because they have learned from hard experience the need for affiliating with a strong bona fide organization," Wagner said.

"Their action is similar in every respect to that taken by the independent unions in the steel mills at the start of the CIO campaign to organize steel. This is the green light for an intensive drive to bring organization to the workers in the New Jersey plants owned by the royal family of Delaware."

Ask Union Action On Labor Legislation

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—Urgent requests for action by CIO members on two labor measures now up for amendment in Congress were sent out by the CIO legislative committee from national headquarters here.

The two measures, the Wagner Labor Relations Act and the Walsh-Healey Act requiring prevailing wages and other conditions on government contracts, are now being considered by House and Senate committees.

On the Wagner Act, CIO affiliates and members are urged to oppose all amendments offered by the National Association of Manufacturers, the executive council of the AFL, and other sources seeking crippling changes in the act. Letters and wires should be sent to the House and Senate labor committees, and to Congressmen and Senators from the recipient's districts.

On the Walsh-Healey Act, CIO members are urged to write and wire support of three proposed amendments that would lower contract exemptions from the present $10,000 to $4,000, would include shipbuilding, now exempt, and most important of all would withold government contracts from firms found guilty of violating the Wagner Act.

Communications should be sent to the House Judiciary Committee and to the Congressman from CIO affiliates' or members' areas.

Enlist Aid Of Auxiliaries To Protect Living Standards

ALBANY, N. Y., Mar. 2.—Gains in living standards being wos by unionists will be wiped out unless CIO womenfolk take a hand to help prevent increased prices and inequitable taxation.

That was the warning sounded by Mrs. Mary Santo, CIO Ladies' Auxiliaries regional director, at state budget hearings here recently.

The progress made by the CIO, she said, is "daily being threatened and attacked by the rising cost of food and clothing, and through all sorts of legislative propositions made by so-called 'taxpayers' and their financial backers to further burden the average consumer.

TORN BY PROBLEMS

"Today we find the average woman torn by the problems of stretching the dollar to enable her to feed and clothe her family. Today we listened to proposals that these same families be deprived of one American privilege, namely state-subsidized schools, by transferring the burden of the upkeep of these schools, as well as proposals that families in lower income brackets be taxed further.

"May I state that the CIO women auxiliaries will organize against any and all further encroachments on their meager incomes.

"We support Governor Lehman's budget proposals, with a recommendation that last year's budget cuts be restored. We say, full state aid for the schools. We say, further, that the established American custom of taxing those who can pay should be retained."

Philly Coke Strike Won

Philadelphia, Mar. 2.—A three-week strike of CIO coke workers in the Mellon-controlled Koppers Co. ended here in a union victory

District 50, United Mine Workers, announced a contract had been signed bringing wage adjustments for more than 40 workers, and sick benefits which are the best yet gained in the industry.

Union Heads At Baltimore 'News' Rally

Baltimore, Mar. 2 — Heads of two international unions praised the role of the labor press at a benefit rally sponsored by the Baltimore CIO NEWS.

They were Michael Quill, head of the Transport Workers Union, and Kenneth Crawford, president of the American Newspaper Guild; and Len De Caux, national editor of the CIO NEWS. They spoke before an enthusiastic audience that filled every seat in Polish Home Hall.

Declaring that American youth never again should cross the seas to fight Europe's quarrels, Quill said that if a small country like Ireland could stay out of the first World War, surely a large nation like America could stay out of the second.

RENEW CONTRACT

Minneapolis, Minn. — Renewal of an agreement with the United States Air Conditioning Corp., providing a general wage increase has been signed by Local 1139, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO.

Newark, N. J.—The National Association of Die Casting Workers has won a 5 per cent wage increase in negotiations with the Dollins Corp.

Jury Indicts 15 In Kidnaping Case

SAVANNAH, Ga., Mar. 2.—Four officials and 11 employes of the Fitzgerald Cotton Mills were indicted by the grand jury here for their part in the beating and driving out of town of Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, representative of the Textile Workers Union, and for conspiring to deprive certain workers of their rights under the Constitution and the National Labor Relations Act.

The mill officials indicted were James William Cox, president; Jack H. Mayes, vice president and James Clark and J. T. Boyter, foremen. The 11 employes were accused of serving as thugs for the mill officials, to do the dirty work.

The indictment also charges that the mill management purposely discontinued all operations of the plant at Fitzgerald, Ga., in June, 1938, throwing some 300 employes out of work, to break down union organization, after the CIO textile union had won a Labor Board election by a vote of 197 to 22.

The case is being handled by the Department of Justice in Washington, in whose hands it has been since last June. The FBI has been investigating the circumstances involving the kidnaping of Dr Dodge since September.

Dr. Dodge was abducted from the porch of the Lee-Grant hotel in Fitzgerald on the evening of August 8, 1938, while talking with Cox, mill president. He was slugged with a blackjack, severely beaten and thrown in a truck by four men, blindfolded, again struck in the face with a blackjack and terrorized with threats of what was going to happen to him.

The men drove him several miles into the country and released him with warnings to get out of town by morning or he would be shot. Dr. Dodge walked back to Fitzgerald, arriving about midnight. Here Captain Mayes, mill vice-president, told him to get out of town at once.

When Dr. Dodge said he had no means of transportation, Cox and Mayes took him to Abbeville, 22 miles away, to forestall another assault which Mayes said would be made if he did not leave the hotel.

CIO NEWS Wins Award

Mena, Ark., March 2.—Journalism students at Commonwealth College, southern labor school, have chosen THE CIO NEWS as one of the nation's ten best union papers.

One of hundreds of periodicals received at the Library, THE CIO NEWS received 30 points — the maximum possible in a tabulation based upon appearance, handling of union news and national and world affairs.

CIO Appeals Anti-Labor Ruling

Milwaukee, March 2—(FP)—An appeal from anti-labor rulings handed down by the Wisconsin Employment Relations Board last summer during a strike of 600 workers against the Allen-Bradley Co. has been filed by Local 1111 of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Charging that the rulings were in sharp conflict with the National Labor Relations Act, Max Geline, union attorney, said there were "basic objections to the constitutionality of the present state law."

The reactionary board was set up under last year's Republican-enacted state laws to replace the former State Labor Relations Board.

Its rulings banned mass picketing and blocked reinstatement of 14 strike leaders whom the board found guilty of unfair labor practices for ignoring the anti-picketing order. The rulings also prohibited picketing scabs' homes and obstructing entrances to the plant.

Workers, Employers Banquet

Barberton, O., Mar. 2. — Four hundred CIO men and two score employers sat down at a joint banquet here and exchanged ideas on what they felt is needed to make American industry and American labor get along harmoniously.

The management viewpoint was expressed by J. P. Seiberling, head of the rubber company which bears his name. He urged that employers and workers should "work together and trust each other," and praised unions for getting after "the low-wage shops."

"The manufacturer who uses sweatshop labor is a menace to the industry as well as to the worker."

OWENS SPEAKS

John Owens, Ohio CIO president spoke for the unionists when he demanded "that the voice of labor he heard in determining the policies that affect the well-being of millions of persons.

"I don't know an employer who will not admit that these things labor enjoys have been brought about because workers have had the gumption to organize into unions and demand their rights.

"Do you think that the mine inspection and compensation laws have come from the generosity of the employer? Every safety measure on the statute books has been fought by the management of that industry.

"I don't say these things in the spirit of criticism, but so that management here may recognize that men and women employed in industry have the same ambitions for comfortable homes and privileges for their children that they have."

Forrest Malone of District 50, United Mine Workers, was toastmaster of the evening.

Camera Fans

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—Hearings on the constitutionality of the Geyer Bill, which would eliminate the poll tax as a requisite for voting for president and members of Congress, will get under way before a House Judiciary sub-committee on Mar. 6.

Slated as an early witness is Maury Maverick, progressive mayor of San Antonio, who has warred constantly against the poll tax requirements which permit only a small minority of the people in many southern states to enjoy their voting rights.

The poll tax is in effect in eight southern states—Virginia, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Georgia, Arkansas and Texas.

The bill, submitted by Rep. Lee Geyer of California, has won the support of many liberal organizations, not only in the south but throughout the country. Elimination of the tax would be a body blow at the bloc of southern tory congressmen who have fought constantly and often victoriously against progressive legislation.

Georgia CIO Parley Shows Enthusiasm

Workers Ready For Organizing Campaign

ATLANTA, Ga., Mar. 2. — The first state meeting of CIO unions in Georgia, held here upon the invitation of the Atlanta Industrial Union Council, was attended by delegates from unions in all parts of the state.

Michael F. Widman, assistant director of organization of the CIO, made an inspiring and practical address on the CIO, its progress and its constructive program.

"I came South rather pessimistic because of the stories I had heard about the hopelessness of organizing here," he said, "but after a few days in Atlanta and Birmingham, I am enthused and inspired by what I have seen of the spirit and determination of southern workers.

"If Georgia and Alabama are indications of how labor feels towards organizing I know that southern labor wants to be organized and is going to be organized."

LOTS OF SPIRIT

Mr. Widman said that in the last six months there were marked signs of improvement in the organizing drive and that the spirit which animated CIO unions in 1936 and '37 is shown in the rolling up of union numbers recently. As proof of this he pointed to the Labor Relations Board election figures for the last three months of 1939, showing that the CIO had won 65 per cent of all votes cast, the AFL had won 15 per cent, independent unions 7 per cent, making 87 per cent voting for some kind of union, while only 15 per cent did not want to be organized.

Outlining the CIO legislative program, Mr. Widman emphasized its sane and constructive measures and said this program fully justifies the slogan "Make America better for Americans by joining the CIO."

RESOLUTIONS

The conference passed a number of resolutions on topics of great interest to workers and the unemployed.

These included resolutions on the poll tax, on public housing, federal aid to education in the South, relief in Atlanta, raising the benefits in unemployment compensation, the Food and Cotton Stamp Plans for free distribution of surplus commodities, support of the League for Progressive Democracy and the three CIO amendments to the National Labor Relations Act.

POLL TAX

The resolution on the poll tax brought the warmest discussion from the floor, person after person rising to speak of the unfairness and injustice of imposing a poll tax as a prerequisite to exercising citizenship through voting.

Instances were cited where through political favoritism people of means were allowed to vote when poll taxes were in arrears, and where obstacles were raised to make it impossible for workers to vote even if poll taxes were paid up. Evidently this matter of sharing in a democracy through the ballot was of prime importance to the members of the conference and one on which they felt deeply.

WORKERS EDUCATION

Mrs. Carolyn Dillard, Supervisor of Workers Service Projects under the WPA in Georgia and Miss Ernestine Friedman of the Federal Workers Service Projects in Washington, stressed the value of this service of our government to those of its citizens who are workers, and its desire to be of real service to unions. Mrs. Zylphia Horton told of the service to unions being done at Highlander Folk School through classes in those things of special interest to union members.

Warn Against New Anti-Labor Petition

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 2. — Warning that another anti-labor initiative petition is being circulated here, the CIO Industrial Union Council in Los Angeles passed a resolution calling upon its members to refuse to sign the petition and to call attention of the public to its dangers.

The proposal called "California State Labor Relations Act," the Council points out, is in reality more viciously anti-labor than the Proposition No. 1, defeated overwhelmingly in 1938, and would "absolutely prohibit all strikes, thus depriving unions of their major economic weapon."

Urge Workers, Farmers To Present Demands To Party Conventions

WARREN, Ohio, Mar. 2. — Workers and farmers ought to draw up their own plans for solving the national unemployment crisis, and present them to the Republican and Democratic national conventions.

That was the advice given 1,400 local steel workers by Chairman Philip Murray of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and it received an ovation from the crowd.

"Let the working man prepare the platform for the political parties, and when the conventions open, go to the leaders and say, 'Here it is, boys, this is what the people want.'"

G. O. P. BARREN OF IDEAS

It took two years of study and 28,000 words of type for the Republican party to find it had nothing to offer the people "except a recommendation that government expenditures be reduced and the Wagner Labor Act be amended," Murray said.

If the Democrats do nothing—"and so far they have not indicated or revealed any plan to combat unemployment" — then the problem of reaching a solution lies solely with workers and farmers, the SWOC head continued.

The National Farm Institute has pledged co-operation with the CIO in a study of industrial and economic conditions, looking towards a plan to end joblessness, he revealed.

Murray was presented to the audience, which jammed the local high school auditorium, by John Mayo, regional director for the SWOC. Others who spoke were Mayor Roberts of Warren, Mayor Kearney of Niles, State Rep. Howard Williams and Pres. Clinton Carlton of Philip Murray Lodge of the SWOC.

BENEFIT PAYMENTS

Evictions at Mine

OUT INTO THE SNOW, whose depth is hinted by the skis propped up against the building, goes Allex Penman, financial secretary of the striking CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers local at Pioneer, B. C., Canada. He was evicted from the company-owned bunkhouse as the firm tried once again to smash the strike by wholesale evictions.

Fight Blackout Of Civil Rights In Canada

TORONTO, Ont., Mar. 2. — A demand that the federal government take immediate steps to curb Attorney - General Conant's misuse of the Defense of Canada Regulations which "threaten to destroy democracy in Ontario" was contained in a resolution adopted by Lodge 1111, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, at its regular meeting this week.

The resolution referred to the "political agents of big finance who are trying to black-out union activity by their vicious and unrestrained misuse of the regulations." Conant showed anti-union bias in his interpretation of the regulations, the resolution further charged.

The resolution referred to the trial of Charles H. Millard, secretary of the Canadian Committee for Industrial Organization, which will resume soon at Timmins. Millard is charged with making statements "true or false" which are considered prejudicial to recruiting.

From present indications the trial will attract nationwide attention because of its relation to trade union organization and the right of individuals to make true statements concerning the Canadian aspect of the war and workers' living standards.

Already one organization, the Union Defense Committee, has been set in motion to fight the attack on trade unionism and civil liberties represented by Attorney-General Conant's arrest of Millard. The Committee is asking all trade unions and progressive organizations to make contributions to aid the defense of Millard and meet any other attacks which may be directed against officers of trade unions.

The chairman of the Union Defence Committee is C. S. Jackson, international vice-president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers' Union, R. K. Steele, of SWOC is secretary and H. W. Rowe, secretary of the Toronto Newspaper Guild, is treasurer.

AFL Carpenters' Boss Indicted for 3rd Time

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Mar. 2.—For the third time, William Hutcheson, president of the AFL Carpenters' Union has been indicted here along with 49 other defendants of a conspiracy to interstate commerce in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Previous indictments were returned against him in Chicago and New Orleans, in the course of the federal nationwide investigation of building costs.

The defendants here were charged with conspiring for three years to prevent millwork products debing shipped into Pittsburgh from other states.

In addition to Allegheny county lumber dealers and trade association officials, 18 AFL union officers and two union organizations were indicted, including the entire general executive board of the Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners and the Carpenters District Council of Pittsburgh and vicinity.

The AFL carpenters' officials are accused of withholding the union label from out-of-state millwork manufacturers, regardless of whether they held contracts with the Brotherhood.

The indictment charged that previous to the conspiracy 90 per cent of all stock millwork used to come from factories in other states.

Announce Progressive Magazine

New York, Mar. 2.—"Friday", a new progressive weekly magazine featuring cartoons, photos and articles, will be on sale at newsstands March 8, its publishers announced today.

While the contents will include fiction, sports, movie and general articles, it will stress exposure of the type made famous by the old "muckraking" magazines, Daniel Gillmore, its publisher, declared.

Editor of the magazine is Cameron McKenzie, former head of People's Press.

L. A. Hospital Signs Union Shop Pact

Los Angeles, March 2 — That rare bird, a union shop contract with a private charitable institution, has just been captured by Local 230 of the State, County & Municipal Workers of America. The institution is the home operated by the Jewish Consumptive and Ex-Patients' Relief Association, with 100 employes.

Provisions of the contract include recognition as sole bargaining agency, preferential hiring through the union, the union shop, eight-hour day, time and a half for overtime, paid vacations and sick leave, minimum wages for various categories of workers, no dismissals except for stated cause, and arbitration of disputes and grievances by a board on which union and management have equal representation.

Jurisdiction over private hospitals and institutions was granted the SCMWA by the last convention of the CIO, which recognized that working conditions in that field are among the worst to be found anywhere.

BALLOTS IN MAIL

LABOR PREPARES TO FIGHT NEW ATTACK ON WAGNER ACT

Migrants Suffer in Flood

TWO DEATHS and thousands left homeless were the result of heavy floods which swept through California's agricultural valley, bringing terror to migratory workers living in shack colonies. Shown here are a group of the workers receiving help at a U. S. camp after they had been marooned on a roof top for 24 hours.

Halt Flouting Of Wagner Act—Murray

Washington, Mar. 9 — Violations of the Wagner Act by corporations that get rich profits from government contracts raise not only ethical questions but points of business competition as well, Philip Murray, CIO vice-president and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, told a House Judiciary sub-committee here.

Murray, testifying together with CIO Vice-President Reid Robinson, John Green of the Shipbuilding Workers, appeared in support of S. 1032, a bill to amend the Public Contracts Act in a way to exclude Wagner Act violators from Federal contracts. The bill has already passed the Senate twice, and awaits House action for final passage. All sections of the labor movement, and particularly the CIO, have gone on record in favor of it.

TRACES VIOLATIONS

Murray traced the anti-union history of two corporations, Bethlehem and Republic Steel, that have brutally and consistently fought unionism and flouted the Wagner Act. These violations have gone on for a long time, he pointed out, and yet such corporations enjoy an unfair competitive advantage in bidding on U. S. contracts.

No Toothbrushes Allowed:

California Relief Law Spells Trouble Ahead

WASHINGTON, Mar. 9. — An expert straight from the Grapes of Wrath country today minced no words in telling federal officials about relief conditions on the West Coast.

The expert was Carey McWilliams, California's liberal commissioner of immigration and housing, and he left this warning with heads of the government's relief program:

"Hell is going to start popping before long in California unless solutions of the relief and migratory labor problems are found."

McWilliams denounced a new California relief law as "cockeyed," and predicted it would force 100,000 migrant farm workers off the relief rolls.

Since the law requires that all relief funds must be spent only for food, shelter, clothing and utilities, a man may be removed from the relief rolls for buying a toothbrush, McWilliams said.

"They're not going to take it lying down," he said.

FORCED BY TORIES

The law, the California official said, "was forced upon the state by the same old reactionary 'gang' that has been running California for 15 or 20 years. That gang now is working through the Associated Farmers, an organization of large landowners in California."

Residence in the state of three years as a requirement for relief was incorporated in the new law. It rquires aliens to prove legal residence, places restrictions on the spending of relief money, and fixes a maximum payment of $55 a month per family.

Organize CIO At Mooney's Old Plant

Holyoke, Mass., Mar. 9 — A new local of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers was organized here today at the plant where Tom Mooney served his apprenticeship as a moulder back in the early days of the century.

The plant is that of the Worthington Pump and Machinery corporation, which was known as the Dean Steam Pump Company in the days when the celebrated West Coast labor leader, who grew up in Holyoke, was learning his trade there.

Smith Proposals Seek to Check Unions' Gains

WASHINGTON, Mar. 9—A three-man majority of the Smith Committee today awaited action on their "ripper bill" amendments aimed at tearing every shred of effectiveness out of the National Labor Relations Act, while workers throughout the nation rushed to defend Labor's Magna Carta.

The committee's liberal minority—composed of Representatives Murdock and Healey—refused to go along with the majority report.

"We believe that the proposed amendments, agreed upon by the majority of the committee, are in fact emasculatory, and threaten the principles, purposes and objectives of the Act," their statement declared.

The Smith amendments go now to the House Labor Committee, where, tory Democrats hungry for the slaughter of the labor law said they would tolerate no delay.

The Smith committee—its chairman is a Virginia reactionary who has never voted for a single labor bill—practically rewrote the Wagner Act in their amendments.

They proposed to eliminate statements that U. S. policy calls for collective bargaining, and that refusal by employers to bargain or permit workers to organize leads to strikes.

The committee proposed a drastic overhauling of present Wagner Act administration, with the setting up of a new Board of three men whose powers would be strictly limited; and an Administrator to take over the prosecution and enforcement powers under the Act. It calls for full court review of the facts in Labor Board cases, a policy affecting no other government administrative agency.

It would give the Administrator power to subpena union records, and to decide if enforcement cases should be appealed to the courts.

Freedom of employers to interfere with their workers' bargaining choice is slipped into the amendments under a clause purporting to deal with "freedom of speech," while a "statute of limitations" would sharply cut into workers' rights to back pay and to file charges with the Administrator.

Scattered throughout the entire amendments are weasel-word clauses which would effectively hamper administration of the act in behalf of the workers.

Steel Convention To Open May 14

PITTSBURGH, Mar. 9—The second international convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee will open in Chicago on May 14, Chairman Philip Murray announced today.

Hundreds of delegates from SWOC lodges throughout the United States and Canada will be present when the meeting opens. They will represent the 600,000 steel workers who have been organized by the CIO since its first epoch-making organization drive got under way in June, 1936. At present only five major corporations in the Little Steel group have failed to sign union contracts, and in all these plants the SWOC has large and active local groups functioning.

The SWOC's first convention was held in Pittsburgh during December, 1937.

Murray's announcement of the coming conclave was made at a district convention of 31 lodges from the Lawrenceville-North Side area of this city.

Abe Vales, SWOC director who presided over the meeting of 400 representatives, said that union agreements are now in force with 24 mills in the district, and negotiations are under way with three others.

Labor Spying Seen as Klan's New Hobby

WASHINGTON, Mar. 9. — Dept. of Justice officials are studying a secret report concerning the Ku Klux Klan's rebirth as a strikebreaking, labor spy agency, the Philadelphia Record revealed today.

The Record's story said that the Klan's new activities are being studied by the Justice Dept.'s criminal division, but that doubts have been expressed that Klansmen can be prosecuted under federal laws for their anti-labor vigilanteism.

"Investigation reveals that outbreaks of terrorism have been most frequent in recent months in the Piedmont district of South Carolina," the Record story declared. "That area now is a chief textile center and the object of an organizational drive by both the AFL and the CIO.

RAIDED NYA CAMP

"In that territory a National Youth Administration camp for Negro boys was raided at night and its occupants ordered to return to the cotton fields. About the same time a 27-year-old white mechanic was flogged because he spoke favorably of union activity."

The story said that state officials in South Carolina have obtained documents revealing that "the Klan planned to organize a systematic labor espionage service for the benefit of employers."

CIO unionists have been quick to meet the new attack, the newspaper said, asserting that "in many areas the power of the Klan would be much greater, but for an ingenious counter-campaign by the unionists.

"Acting in self-defense, union members have joined local Klan groups, sometimes in sufficient numbers to capture important units.

"Whenever the genuine Klansmen in such groups suggest a sheet-and-pickhandle visit to union headquarters, they are baffled to find their once-popular proposals summarily vetoed."

Rap Cuts In Youth Program

Washington, Mar. 9—Administration cuts in funds for the Natl. Youth Administration have "absolutely no justification," Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, told the House Appropriations sub-Committee in testimony on Capitol Hill here.

"Such a cut is directly opposed to the interests of young American people and the nation itself," he said. "The CIO calls on Congress to rectify this mistake. We are convinced that Congress, if it examines the figures carefully, will conclude that failure to increase provisions for young people this year would be a tragic blunder."

BILLION NEEDED

Hetzel called attention to the report of a Committee called together by the Federal Security Administration which said that "it would be impossible to meet the urgent needs of unemployed young people without the expenditure of larger sums of public money than are now devoted to the solution of the unemployment problems of youth."

This committee, Hetzel said, was composed "overwhelmingly of businessmen," yet it declared that at least one billion dollars a year was needed to carry out "a reasonably complete program" of youth aid. The committee, of which Hetzel was a member, recommended an immediate appropriation of $200,000,000.

Present standards, even without proposed cuts in NYA funds, are "woefully inadequate," Hetzel said. Of more than 4,000,000 jobless youth, only 20 per cent receive help.

Guild Appeals $5,000 Fine For 'Contempt'

Chicago, Mar. 9—CIO Newspaper Guild officials are sure that higher courts will reject the $5,000 fine imposed here by Judge Lupe for alleged violations of an injunction against the Hearst strikers, who have been fighting for their union's existence for 15 months.

"We are not surprised by Judge Lupe's decision, nor by the amount of the fine," ANG Representative Seller said. "Only recently Judge Lupe from the bench suggested that the Hearst management seek body attachments—John Doe warrants—for the arrest of our strikers while distributing handbills.

"The Supreme Court of the U. S. has upheld the legality of handbill distribution. We are certain that the higher courts of Illinois will not countenance the efforts of Judge Lupe to set aside the constitutional right of the Guild strikers to freedom of speech and press—through injunctions, fines or the archaic use of body attachments.

"Meanwhile the Guild will continue to place its reliance on the U. S. Constitution and the Supreme Court and will continue its legal activities."

Glass Firm Forced To Obey Pay Law

Pittsburgh, Mar. 9—The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., one of the largest manufacturers of window glass in the country, was permanently prohibited from violating the wage-hour law and directed to pay back wages to its workers for unpaid overtime as the result of an injunction filed here by the federal government.

The injunction, consented to by the corporation, was hailed by officials of the division as marking an important step in the enforcement of the act because it was directed against a corporation with one of the largest wholesale establishments in the country, and was based solely on the failure of the company to pay time and a half for overtime.

Dies Knows All Seven Propaganda Tricks, Institute Finds

WASHINGTON, Mar. 9.— Seven basic principles of propaganda, as set down by the Institute for Propaganda Analysis and applied to Martin L. Dies of the much publicized un-American Committee, show the Texas red-hunter as a master of smear technique comparable to Adolf Hitler and other maestros, the Institute implies in a recent bulletin.

The seven principles, set down by the group of nationally-known educators who head the Institute, are as follows:

X) "Name-calling, glittering generality, transfer" (applying emotions of praise or hatred aroused by something else to another subject under consideration), "testimonial" (praise or condemnation by some hated or respected individual), "card-stacking," (selecting only the evidence that suits your purpose), "band-wagon" (all good people back your point of view) and the "plain-folks angle," so familiar to members of the Demagogues club that Dies founded in Congress.

ALL USED BY DIES

All these seven principles have been put to expert use by Martin Dies in his campaigns against the labor movement, the consumer movement, against liberal and progressive groups, and against people who followed the objectives of the New Deal, the Institute points out. The majority of the commercial press of the country has cooperated fully, to the point where the man-in-the-street;

" . . . has seen only the charges, day after day; and, inevitably, some of them begin to sink in. Adolf Hitler understands this well, this power of repetition; lies will become accepted truths if repeated often enough, he wrote in Mein Kampf. As the old saying goes: 'Sling enough mud, and some is sure to stick.' "

Best trick that Dies uses, the Institute points out, is its choice of witnesses for the thousands of pages of testimony that have poured out in condemnation of labor and progressive leaders and organizations.

"Applying this yardstick to Dies Committee testimony," it says, "one is struck immediately by the fact that few of the witnesses could be considered impartial, and that many of them had an obvious stake in smearing those whom they charged with being Communists. Mr. John P. Frey could hardly be expected to speak without prejudice about the CIO . . . Harper

Baldwin Locomotive Told to End Fake Union

Washington, Mar. 9. — Weakened by the inroads made by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee on the anti-union fortress maintained for many years at the old historic Baldwin Locomotive Works at Eddystone, Pennsylvania, another company union went down with a crash this week.

Attorney for the corporation during the hearings was Gilbert Montague, who collaborated with Joseph Padway, AFL general counsel, in drafting the federation-supported Walsh amendments to the Wagner Act.

The National Labor Relations Board ordered the company to throw out the Federation of Baldwin Employes as collective bargaining agency and to reinstate with back pay five employes found to have been fired for union activity.

The hearing on which the Board's decision is based, held on a complaint filed by the SWOC, lasted from January to May, 1939, and was one of the stormiest ever conducted by the NLRB. Evidence given at the hearing revealed that the company had conducted a vicious campaign against the CIO.

CIO Local Wins Order

Washington, Mar. 9—A Labor Board order to stop discouraging membership in the United Paper Workers, CIO Local Industrial Union 292, and to discard a company - dominated group has been directed against the Quality Art Novelty Co. of Long Island City.

The Board also ordered the company to reinstate five employes with back pay, overruling the firm's contention that since four of them were hired after the hearing, they should not be included, and to stop giving effect to a preferential contract signed with the Quality Art Shop union.

Maverick Opens Attack On Poll Tax Evil

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11. — Hearings of the Geyer bill, which would abolish the southern poll tax so far as federal elections are concerned, got under way here after mounting public pressure forced the House Judiciary Committee to give full hearings on the measure.

Originally determined to limit testimony to a discussion of the bill's constitutionality, Rep. Walters, Pennsylvania Democrat who heads the Judiciary Sub-committee, agreed that important background data on the need for the bill, would be allowed into the committee record.

MAVERICK ON STAND

First witness before the committee was Maury Maverick, former leader of the House liberal bloc and now mayor of San Antonio, Tex.

A veteran of half a dozen skirmishes with southern machine control of the poll tax, Maverick was well able to tell of the "fraud and corruption" which the tax helps to produce.

The poll tax, still in effect in eight states throughout the south, is a qualification for voting that keeps all but the well-to-do and the wealthy from enjoying the constitutional right to vote.

Maverick pointed out that a tax of $1.50 on a man enjoying the not untypical southern income of $100 to $400 a year, looms as high as a $400 tax would to Congressmen receiving $10,000.

FRACTIONAL DEMOCRACY

Because of this "fractional democracy" which leads to representation of, by and for the conservative elements, in the population, the south is "getting beat" in national legislation, Maverick charged, and the "big shots in Chicago and New York" who control the state of Texas and other parts of the south, are able to keep the southern states under their thumb.

"There are thousands of urban workers and sharecroppers who just can't vote," Maverick said.

Minority Report Blasts Smith Group's Efforts to Rob Labor of Wagner Ac.

Majority Takes Line From NAM

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 9. — Three members of the Smith Committee proposed today that the Wagner Act be scuttled.

With a minority of its two liberal members dissenting bitterly, the committee assembled the worst features of proposals suggested by the National Association of Manufacturers and the top leadership of the American Federation of Labor into a new bill which left intact scarcely a line of the present Wagner Act.

As rewritten, the Act was stripped of practically every feature benefiting labor, while new clauses inserted would pave the way for a rebirth of company unionism and an end to collective bargaining.

The bill now goes to the standing House Labor Committee, where it is expected to provoke a battle.

Meanwhile Rep. Howard Smith, Virginia tory Democrat who headed the committee which allegedly "investigated" the Labor Board, said he would tolerate no delay in consideration of his recommendations. Smith hinted every parliamentary trick will be used to blast the bill out of the Labor Committee with a minimum of delay.

MAJOR PROPOSALS

So badly mangled is the Wagner Act under the Smith Committee majority's report that selection of its worst features is difficult. But these fundamental proposals to weaken the Act stand out:

1. The policy of the United States would no longer be to encourage collective bargaining.

2. The National Labor Relations Board would be ripped in two, with an Administrator having all power to take over the present Board's "prosecution" activities.

3. The Board would be left to administer elections and rule on "evidence", while its every act would be subject to com-

Glass Union Lifts Wages $45,000

Columbus, Ohio, Mar. 9—Pay increases amounting to $45,000 a year are provided in a new agreement signed between the Franklin Glass Corp. and Local 15, Federation of Flat Glass Workers, CIO. The contract covers 400 employes of the company's plant in Butler, Pa.

Terms of the contract which runs for a year include retention of the check-off, sole bargaining rights, improved vacation with pay clause and grievance procedure, and a six cents per hour wage increase for labor and wareroom employes, with a three-cent hourly general increase for all other employes.

In announcing the agreement, Peter J. Vidmar, FFGS secretary-treasurer, said that the Franklin Corp. was the only independent plate glass manufacturer that operates the round table system.

Labor And The Law:

The Smith Committee's 'Ripper Bill'

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

The Smith Committee Investigating the National Labor Relations Board has now openly shown its fangs aimed at the heart of the Wagner Act and the rights of labor. A majority of the Committee, consisting of two Republicans and Chairman Howard Smith, have filed a report recommending certain proposed amendments. It should be recalled that Howard Smith voted against the Wagner Act when it was passed and has also voted against all other labor and social legislation enacted during the past six years.

GREAT MINORITY REPORT

The two liberals on the Committee, Congressman Abe Murdock of Utah and Congressman Arthur Healey of Massachusetts, have filed a magnificent minority report clearly analyzing what the proposed amendments would do to the rights of labor. They stated in their report that ". . . the proposed amendments . . . are in fact emasculatory and threaten the principles, purposes and objectives of the Act.

These two liberal Congressmen deserve the commendation of all labor and all progressives throughout the country for their splendid and courageous stand.

NOT SUPPORTED BY THE RECORD

Not a single amendment proposed by the Smith majority group has been supported in the slightest way by the record of the hearings before the Committee. Try as he would, Toland, who has acted as attorney for one of the chief detective agencies of the country, could not produce evidence to justify these emasculatory amendments.

THE SMITH PROPOSALS

The specific proposals of the Smith-Republican majority are openly and shamelessly directed toward the end of destroying the rights which labor has obtained through the Wagner Act. A summary of a few of the amendments shows this clearly:

(1) A proposal that where an employer discharges an employe for union activities, the Board, in ordering the worker's reinstatement, may not award him back pay in excess of six months. Employers may delay Board proceedings to their hearts' content but their obligation to pay back pay will be limited, and they can thus discharge union men freely because the cost will be so slight.

(2) A proposal that no complaint that may be issued in regard to any unfair labor practices which occurred more than six months prior to the issuance of the complaint. In other words, all the anti-union employers who successfully deprive their workers of any opportunity to organize may not have these unfair practices charged against them when a union finally manages half a year later to organize a sufficient number of employes to file charges with the Labor Board.

RE-DEFINE 'COLLECTIVE BARGAINING'

(3) A proposal that the term "collective bargaining" be re-defined so that an employer has to sit down with the union at a conference table and does not have to bargain in good faith. Congressmen Murdock and Healey, referring to this amendment, state that the QUEEN OF STENOGRAPHERS is Helen Bengston of New York, so chosen in a recent competition by the CIO United Office & Professional Workers. She'll be functioning in her official capacity when she acts as "chief hello girl" at a "Pay The Telephone Bill" party planned by the union for March 15. The bill at issue was run up during the recent Credit Clearing House strike, when constant calls from UOPWA supporters tied up the firm's 88 trunk lines and helped win a new contract.

DISSENTED: Smith Committee amendments to the Wagner Act received a verbal trouncing from two Representatives who formed its liberal minority. Rep. Arthur Healey, Mass., joined with Rep. Murdock, Utah, (above) to condemn the proposals.

To Set Date For Election At Con-Ed

Washington, Mar. 9—Elections among the employes of seven utility companies forming the Consolidated Edison Company System were ordered this week by the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

They are to be held on or after April 3. Workers will choose between the Amalgamated Utility Workers, CIO; the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL; the Brotherhood of Consolidated Edison Employes, independent; or by none.

BASED ON AGREEMENT

The Board's election order was based upon an agreement entered into on Feb. 14, by the companies, the CIO, the AFL and the independent union, setting up two bargaining units—one composed of production and maintenance employes together with the workers in the construction and operation departments, the other including all clerical and office workers and engineers.

The Labor Board polls will bring to a final conclusion long drawn out proceedings beginning with the filing of a petition last April by the Amalgamated and followed by hearings extending from September 5, 1939 to February 9, 1940.

Consumer Power Poll Gets O. K.

Washington, Mar. 9.—A run-off election among several thousand employes of the Consumers Power Company, Jackson, Michigan, delayed for many months by court proceedings started by the AFL, was ordered by the National Labor Relations Board this week.

Workers will vote for or against representation by the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, the only union which will be on the ballot. The CIO union won the highest number of votes at a poll conducted by the Board January 10-13,

Liberals Condemn Changes

WASHINGTON, Mar. 9. — Sharp condemnation of the Smith Committee majority report featured the dissent opinion written by the Committee's two liberals — Rep. Abe Murdock of Utah and Arthur D. Healey of Massachusetts.

"We believe that the proposed amendments, agreed upon by the majority of the committee, are in fact emasculatory, and threaten the principles, purposes and objectives of the act," the statement charged.

Concluding a point-by-point survey in which it held the majority's proposals on specific amendments to a critical barrage, Rep. Murdock and Healey declared:

"We wish to state that we cannot acquiesce in amendments which, under the guise of improvement, propose to sacrifice vital rights of labor guaranteed under this Act.

"We will continue to ascertain and recommend genuine improvements in the Act or its administration but we cannot approve amendments whose predominant effect would be to eviscerate the act and deprive labor of guarantees which are the fruits of many years of struggle and hardship."

WITHSTOOD PRESSURE

The Smith Committee's three-man majority tried desperately to win unanimous support for their anti-labor proposals, but the minority group were steadfast in their refusal to have a hand in the scuttling of the Act which they

CIO Ahead Of AFL In Board Polls

Washington, Mar. 9. — CIO unions won 10 more elections and four times as many votes as AFL unions during January, according to figures released this week by the National Labor Relations Board.

The CIO carried 31 elections, receiving 4,158 votes while the AFL won 20, receiving 1,468 votes, it was reported. Unaffiliated unions were successful in 10 elections in which they received 3,901 votes, and in 27 elections no union secured a majority of the ballots cast.

Altogether a total of 88 elections were conducted by the Board during the month. Out of a total of 37,673 workers eligible to vote in these elections, 34,619 or 92 per cent cast ballots.

A total of 25,968 cases involving 5,805,699 workers have been handled by the Board since the fall of 1935. This includes action on charges of unfair labor practices and petitions for elections received by the Board and its 22 regional offices. More than a million have voted in elections conducted by the Board since it started functioning.

Act Now to Defend the Wagner Act!

The amendments to the Wagner labor relations act proposed by the majority of the Smith investigating committee are so extreme in their anti-labor character that they should arouse labor and all its friends to immediate action in defense of the basic right to organize embodied in the act.

They are a glaring example of the dangers to the Wagner act against which the CIO warned in a recent appeal to all affiliates.

It was CIO unions and their members throughout the country who were the backbone of the movement that preserved the Wagner act from destructive amendments last year. They must get busy again.

Blocked on the legislative field, the reactionary forces made some undercover gains by inducing changes in Labor Board administrative policies.

The CIO was forced to take a vigorous stand against these appeasement policies on the part of the Board—policies which deliberately promote craft division at the expense of the CIO industrial unions.

But the only amendments which the CIO proposes are amendments designed to strengthen the Wagner act, and to insure that it is administered in line with its basic purposes.

The amendments proposed by the CIO would (1) provide for the punishment of employers disobeying the act; (2) forbid administrative practices designed to carve up industrial unions; and (3) prevent the government from encouraging law-breaking by awarding its contracts to proven violators of the act.

All other amendments proposed in Congress are of an opposite character. Drafted by anti-labor manufacturers, even though some of them have the blessing of AFL leaders, these amendments would destroy the whole purpose of the Wagner act—labor's right to organize freely in unions of its own choosing.

The danger is now acute from this type of destructive amendments as is clearly shown by the Smith Committee recommendations.

The Senate and House labor committees have concluded their hearings and are also considering what, if any, amendments to recommend to Congress.

Labor's enemies are on the job and well-financed. They have put out all the propaganda that money can buy against the Wagner act. They are determined to pressure Congress into destroying the basic rights of labor embodied in the act.

Labor and its friends must be alert as never before if we are to defend our rights against this planned assault.

All CIO affiliates, members, and other progressive groups and individuals are urged to send wires and letters to their Congressmen and Senators, particularly those who are on the committees now considering Wagner act amendments.

Let your representatives in Washington know that labor and progressive groups are opposed to any amendments except the CIO amendments. Unless we can put teeth into the law, we want it to be left alone.

Order Voting At G.-E.

Washington, Mar. 9—Two elections among certain employes at two plants of the General Electric Company, Fort Wayne, Ind., have been ordered by the Labor Board.

Maintenance machinists and apprentices, tool and die makers and repairmen, and other similar groups, will choose between CIO and AFL unions.

Green Is Mad

Portland, Me., Mar. 11.—A resolution by the Portland Newspaper Guild urging labor unity brought sympathetic acknowledgment from CIO Pres. John L. Lewis and a semi-hysterical scolding from AFL Pres. Green, leaders of the Guild said today.

The resolution spoke of the alliance formed by AFL leaders with publishers of the struck Hearst papers in Chicago, and criticized the AFL for its suspension first of American Newspaper Guild.

The Wearing of the Green

Looking Ahead — By LEN DE CAUX

A Cave-in Threatens

TERRIFIED residents of Shenandoah, Pa., recently awoke in the middle of the night to find their homes trembling and swaying, and the town starting to sink into the bowels of the earth.

While everything seemed normal on the surface, the foundations of Shenandoah had been undermined. The proper pillaring had not been maintained underneath. The catastrophe came with all the sudden shock of an earthquake — although it could have been foreseen and averted.

The whole United States is in danger of another sort of cave-in, and a far more disastrous one.

Most of the people above ground pay little attention to occasional rumblings below. Like the unsuspecting citizens of Shenandoah, politicians and profit-makers go about their politics and their business in the same old way.

Our own foundations are solid, they say. Nothing very drastic needs doing at home. Let nature and our economic system take its course. Remove some of the props that have been getting in the way of business. Don't bother about the people down below. Let's economize on public works, public planning and security measures—to make more money available for armaments.

But the people of the United States are being given much clearer warning of a possible cave-in than were the citizens of Shenandoah.

The warnings come from John L. Lewis and other CIO representatives of the people who will be the first and most immediate victims of an economic and social cave-in.

Danger Signals

"The country is now hovering on the edge of a period of very serious liquidation and depression," warns "The Economic Outlook," research survey of the CIO Unemployment Division.

A sharp fall in the index of production is noted, accompanied by an equally sharp drop in employment. More than 1½ million workers were thrown out of work in one month.

CIO unemployment estimates, based on government figures, show an increase of 14 per cent in unemployment between December and January.

The number of Americans out of a job in January is estimated to be 11,936,000, as compared with 10,124,000 in December, and 10,469,000 in November.

Business got an artificial shot in the arm in the last half of 1939, due to anticipated war orders and fear of rising prices. Now a serious slump has begun in many industries—and there is danger of a general cave-in.

But to the people on top, things still seem pretty good, despite such warning signs. The country's leading manufacturers made boom profits, averaging 7½ per cent, in 1939—the CIO survey shows—at a time when one out of every five American workers was out of a job, and on the verge of caving in at the stomach.

Knocking the Props Out

One of the most serious signs of danger ahead is the removal of some of the major props that have been holding up our economy.

The CIO survey shows that business recovery has been closely related to public works. When the number of people given WPA and PWA jobs has increased, their purchasing power has simulated business generally. When there have been drastic slashes in WPA and other public employment, on the other hand, the result has been a serious drop in private industrial production and employment.

At a time when unemployment is increasing so sharply (partly as a result of last year's WPA slashes the President's budget proposes to throw another 650,000 off WPA jobs and to eliminate PWA entirely.

Aside from the misery this will cause to the unemployed directly involved, it is like lighting the fuse to a charge of dynamite under one of the country's chief business props.

The unemployed are threatened with being buried alive when the roof falls on them. And all those on top, who so blithely ignore the fate of their fellows in the economic lower depths, are liable to find the ground caving in beneath their feet.

A Public Service

Public works are not the only props that are being threatened today. Cuts in youth and farm relief are proposed in the budget; and the effectiveness of the wage-hour administration and other social services is menaced by inadequate appropriations.

Labor organization is the greatest pillar of all, to protect the people below and to keep firm the ground upon which our whole economy rests.

But attempts to undermine this pillar are being made in the form of attacks on labor's rights, as embodied in the Wagner act. The act is being sabotaged by the granting of government contracts to corporations that violate it. And its outright destruction is threatened by most of the amendments before Congress.

The CIO is performing a great patriotic public service when it calls attention to the conditions that threaten a national cave-in; when it demands expansion, not reduction, of public works—more aid for the jobless, the youth and the aged—more security and social services—and the strengthening of the act that defends labor's rights.

The Smith Bill

definition is "so drastically restricted as to undermine the very foundation of the Act by specifically excluding most essential elements of genuine and effective collective bargaining."

(4) A proposal to re-define the term "employe" so as to deny the benefits of the Act to any worker who is found to have engaged in violence regardless of its pettiness or provocation. This is nothing other than an attempt to sentence to economic death peaceful pickets who would be at the mercy of labor spies, provocateurs and hired thugs of the employers.

'INCONCEIVABLE PENALTY'

Congressmen Murdock and Healey point out that "the only justification for such an inconceivable penalty against the employe would be the imposition of an equal penalty against the employer who is responsible for violence. No such penalty is contained in the amendment."

The Supreme Court has already ruled that workers who actually commit serious criminal offenses may not secure the benefits of the Labor Act. But the Courts have also held that it is only fair that those workers who merely commit minor offenses arising out of the emotions of an industrial dispute should not be deprived of their rights.

DELAY IN THE COURTS

(5) A proposal that all orders of the Labor Board directing elections may be appealed to the courts. This amendment was specifically discussed at the time the Act was originally considered. It was eliminated on the ground that it would merely afford an opportunity to employers to delay elections through court appeals and thereby destroy the moral of the workers who seek the election to demonstrate their right to exclusive recognition. Again this proposal is being offered as another means of allowing employers to defeat the rights of their workers by getting delays.

(6) A proposal to permit employers to express themselves to their employes or to the general public on any subject including union organization. This is merely a thinly disguised attempt, in the name of free speech, to permit the employer in exercising his economic power to destroy any attempt on the part of his workers to exercise their right of self-organization. The courts will afford ample protection to employers if their constitutional right of free speech is in any way interfered with unjustly by the Labor Board.

'RIPPER AMENDMENT'

The very viciousness of this amendment is demonstrated by the fact that it does not in any way purport to defend the exercise by workers of their constitutional right of free speech in case of strikes or boycotts. Under the guise of freedom of expression the Smith-Republican group is really giving back to employers their license to destroy all unions.

Not content with these amendments which leave the Labor Act completely emasculated, the Smith-Republican group proposes another which was called by the liberal minority the "Ripper Amendment."

This one proposes a drastic reorganization of the administrative procedure established under the Act. An Administrator is set up to take over all of the functions which the Board now has regarding acceptance of charges, issuance of complaints, investigations, and enforcement of orders of the Board. It should be noted that there is no appeal if the Administrator decides, regardless how arbitrarily, that he will not accept a charge that has been filed with him or issue a complaint thereon.

SETS UP A DICTATOR

A new Board of three is set up which will merely have jurisdiction over the trial examiners and hearings and issue orders. All enforcement is left with the Administrator. Thus, while charging the Board with being dictatorial and arbitrary, the blatant attempt of the Smith group to destroy the Act can easily be seen in he fact that they in turn set up an Administrator who really would be a dictator.

As to this whole problem Congressmen Murdock and Healey say: "The administrative process which has been built up in the United States over a period of 50 years and has functioned efficiently would, in our opinion, be very seriously menaced in a field which immediately and vitally affects the welfare of a great mass of American workers. We were unwilling to take this far-reaching step without necessary safeguards which were not provided in the proposed amendments."

NO EVIDENCE OFFERED

The evidence has not yet been brought forward to justify changing the administrative set up of the present Board. Any amendments which so drastically alter the flexible procedure under the present Act are intended to destroy the basic rights of labor.

In addition, the hearings before the new Board to be created are practically made impotent through straight-jacket rules. There are proposals which are deliberately intended to give the courts more reasons to overrule orders of the Labor Board.

There is a proposal that the rules of evidence prevailing in the Federal courts should be made applicable to the hearings of the Board. All of these proposals are aimed at but one thing—to make it as difficult as possible for the administrative agency to really give effective enforcement to the rights which labor is supposed to enjoy under the Act.

RENEWED DRIVE ON ACT

The administrative procedure now provided for in the Wagner Act is practically the same as the procedure established for all the other administrative tribunals of the Federal and State governments. Singling out the Labor Board and the procedure under the Labor Act has but a single purpose—to sacrifice the vital rights of labor guaranteed by the Act.

The amendments that have thus been proposed by Smith and his two reactionary Republican aides will be the basis for a renewed drive against the Wagner Act. It has now become of vital importance that the full support of our unions and other progressive groups be rallied behind our program of no amendments to the Wagner Act except the three CIO proposals which would strengthen the Act and provide for its effective enforcement.

Novel Pact Aims To End Threat Of Silicosis

CHICAGO, Mar. 9—One battle in the nationwide war against silicosis, dred industrial disease of the lungs, was won today by District 50 of the United Mine Workers.

Two hundred and fifty workers ended a 15-week strike at the Harbison-Walker Refractories plant at East Chicago, Ind., with a contract which devotes much of its text to plans for removing the causes of silicosis.

Between 1927 and Nov. 2, 1939 when the strike was called, at least 72 workers at the plant died from the lung disease, R. W. Hanson, District 50 representative recalled. The walkout quickly won support from the public and from the state labor department, which expressed horror at conditions in the factory. The company manufastures oven bricks for steel mills and operates 22 plants throughout the nation.

SAFETY COMMITTEE

The contract, which grants substantially all the strikers' demands, provides that "for the general health and welfare of all employes, a six-member safety committee, represented equally by the company and the union, shall be established. They shall meet each month to discuss methods of reducing hazards, dust, etc., and make proposals for their elimination by the company. The company on its behalf agrees to fully cooperate with this committee.

The agreement provides for x-ray examinations of all the regular working force as soon as possible, with future periodic examinations to be conducted whenever deemed necessary by the state board of health.

FREE TREATMENT

Where such examinations show a worker suffering from silicosis, the company agrees to furnish "free of charge to the disabled employe, an attending physician for the treatment of his occupational disease, and in addition thereto, such surgical, hospital and nurses' service and supplies as the attending physician may deem necessary for a period up to 90 days."

To safeguard further the workers' interests, the contract stipulates that the same service will be accorded to any worker who contracted an occupational disease prior to the first of the company's periodic examinations.

Rights of the worker to regain his job on recovery from the treatment are guaranteed by the pact.

MAKING SURVEY

State officials are making a survey of the plant, Hanson said, to provide mechanical equipment to lessen the dust hazard in accordance with a contract provision that "every measure possible will be taken to reduce the dust hazard."

Other gains won by the strikers were vacations with pay, wage increases for a large number of the men and a promise by the management to seek stabilization of employment.

1939, but did not get a majority.

WON FIRST ELECTION

The vote at this first election was 1,164 for the UWOC; 1,072 for the Int'l. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL; and 560 for neither. The Board therefore ordered a run-off on March 1, with the UWOC as the only union on a "yes" or "no" ballot, on the basis that it received the highest number of votes in the January election.

The IBEW protested, petitioned the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals to set aside the election. and the request was granted. The case was thereupon appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court, and on January 2, 1940, the Supreme Court reversed the decision of the lower court.

A definite date for the election will be set later, probably in April, as the Board has ordered it held within 45 days from March 6.

Hail Effort To Check Silicosis

Barre, Vt., Mar. 9 — Workers at the J. K. Pirie Estate, the Rock of Ages Corp. and the Wells-Lamson Quarry Co. have voted not to reopen the contract for wage negotiations until the agreement expires in April, 1941.

The pact, which was signed in April, 1938, by Local 12 of the Quarry Workers Intl. Union, and affects some 700 granite quarry workers, gives the union the right to reopen the contract on the question of wages only 30 days before April 1 of this year.

Wages in the Barre monumental granite quarries—the granite center of the world — are the highest paid in any monumental quarrying section in the country.

In addition, equipment for the control of silica dust, which causes the dread lung disease of silicosis, has been partially installed. By June 1 all dust-creating tools will be equipped to control the dust hazard.

Barre is the only granite so equipped, union leaders say, and workers, when buying a monument, should buy Barre granite from these firms and support the union in its fight to make other granite centers eliminate the hazard of silicosis.

Leaders Tell Nation Of CIO Aims

'Keep Eyes On Home Problems'—Robinson

Denver, Colo., Mar. 9 — Jobs "made in America" have a greater appeal for American workers than bullets shot from foreign guns, CIO Vice-Pres. Reid Robinson warned the nation's politicians in a nation-wide speech heard on March 4 over the NBC's blue network.

"You and I—Americans all—have many problems," Robinson reminded his radio audience. "We can solve these problems only by concentrating on them the full force of our national energies, the best product of our national thinking. We need peace; we need security; and we need jobs—made in America.

"I feel the need of making this plea because there is an increasing tendency on the part of politicians and on the part of the press to divert our attentions from American problems to the troubles of war-born Europe," he continued.

Our Own Victims

"Our hungry unemployed draw less attention from these quarters than the hungry civilians of these warring countries. Our own victims of industrial tyranny and industrial anarchy get less sympathy than do the victims of political disturbances abroad. Our own law-breakers are overlooked in the rush to indict foreign treaty-breakers."

American workers intend to keep their attention focussed on conditions at home, and intend that their governmental representatives should do likewise, Robinson, who heads the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, declared.

"Here is our war—the fight for jobs and an American way of living for all Americans," he asserted. "Herre are our front line trenches.

"The army carrying on this battle is the mighty army of organized labor. And the plant of its General Staff today is the economic and legislative program of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

CIO PROGRAM

"This program contends America can win its war for jobs, stability and peace if it realizes four objectives:

"1. The United States must keep out of any kind of involvement in foreign wars.

"2. The attention of the people and government of this country must be directed toward the immediate solution of the problem of unemployment.

"3. The democratic rights and institutions of this country must be preserved.

"4. The continued protection of labor in its right to organize and bargain collectively must be recognized as the cornerstone of any American economic and social program."

In calling for jobs for the unemployed, Robinson backed the proposal of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis that Pres. Roosevelt call a national conference of all groups in the nation to discuss means of solving the overwhelming problem of unemployment.

Five Coal Dealers Sign With CIO

Flint, Mich., Mar. 9—Five coal dealers here have signed contracts in the last two weeks with CIO Local Industrial Union 1019, providing wage increases of 10c to 25c per ton.

The agreements, according to CIO Field Representative Severino Pollo, also include seniority provisions and a reduction in hours.

Lorillard Still Unfair

Middletown, O., Mar. 9. — P. Lorillard & Co., manufacturers of Old Gold cigarettes and other tobacco products, still maintains its refusal to bargain collectively with Pioneer Tobacco Workers Local Industrial Union 55 of the CIO.

The firm is on the CIO national unfair list, and members of the local ask that CIO members refuse to buy Lorillard products until the company changes its attitude and obeys the law of the land.

The company is operating the Middletown plant only three days a week, though the Kentucky plant is going full blast. As a result, local workers are receiving as low as $10.30 and $15.44 a week.

plete and exhaustive review by hostile courts.

4. A "statute of limitations", would provide that workers may receive a maximum of only six months' back pay from the Board and infringing on the right of unions to file charges against an employer.

INTERFERENCE GETS O. K.

5. Interference by employers with their workers' bargaining choice would receive governmental o. k. under a section allegedly aimed at giving full rein to employers' "freedom of speech."

6. Workers involved in any sort of "unlawful" activities during the course of a strike would be barred from receiving assistance under the Act.

7. Collective bargaining, under the law, would degenerate into a mere series of discussions between workers and employers, with no necessity for the employer to reach a definite understanding with the union representatives.

WEASEL WORDS

Scattered liberally among the proposed amendments are enough weasel words to give the nation's anti-labor judges a continuous field day for the next five years.

As he reviewed the amendments at a conference with members of the press, Rep. Howard Smith — who has an unblemished record of never having voted for a labor measure — showed obvious glee with the preliminary results of his smear campaign. Equally self-satisfied was Republican Rep. Routzohn of Ohio, who chuckled appreciatively at Smith's interpretation of their handiwork.

When Smith read a proposal that the NLRB's economic research division be abolished because its staff of "30 people are spending a right smart amount of government money," Routzohn beamed.

"That's taking Mr. Saposs (head of the economic division) into the woods and shooting him," Routzohn commented.

SMITH IS PLEASED

The newspapermen looked frankly amazed as Smith, withdrawing his ever-present cigar from a corner of his mouth and removing his be-ribboned eye glasses, declared:

"This is a moderate, fair approach to many of the things that have been sought. Nothing in these amendments interfere with the right to collective bargaining or with the right of employes to organize," Smith said, his eyes twinkling.

Outstanding in the onslaught against the Wagner Act was the recommendation for an "Administrator of the National Labor Reltaions Act, to be "appointed by the President and . . . to have no connection whatsoever with the Board.

KEY TO SENTIMENT

Key to the Smith committee majority's sentiment was the suggested change in the declaration of policy in the Act.

Smith proposed that the sentence that denial by employers of workers' rights to organize lead to strikers, be supplanted by a "simple" statement that "failure to bargain collectively between employers and employes leads to strikes."

"In the opinion of the committee the present language of the Act constitutes an indictment of employers generally which is not justified by the facts," he said.

People Demand Security—Dalrymple

Akron, O., Mar. 9.—Security for the American people—help for the aged worker, a decent standard of unemployment aid, and a national health program for those who can't pay present medical costs are major aims of the CIO, Sherman Dalrymple, CIO vice-president, told a coast-to-coast radio audience over a Mutual Broadcasting System network.

Dalrymple emphasized the CIO $60 at 60 program for adequate pensions for older people, as a humane and necessary measure that would not only provide security for the aged but would increase national purchasing power and make more jobs available to younger workers.

"We of the CIO offer a bold and simple answer to the problem of the senior citizen," Dalrymple said. "We urge that all persons over 60 years of age receive an income of $60 per month, with supplementary payments up to $90 per month for aged couples.

"Under the CIO program of $60 per month at 60, these senior workers would be able to provide for themselves, would be able to live their own lives without humiliating dependence or without the need to compete fiercely for jobs with younger and stronger wage-earners."

JOBLESS AID

The CIO program calls equally strongly for adequate unemployment compensation, Dalrymple said, since; "we of the CIO believe as a cardinal article of our faith in America that the unemployed worker should be able to feed, clothe and shelter himself and his family on an American standard of living."

Present social security standards under Federal law are far too inadequate for the needs of the millions of American wage and salary earners, Dalrymple said, in presenting the CIO program for broadening and simplifying benefits. Many groups are excluded from even the "meager protection" at present offered.

"We of the CIO believe firmly that security for the American people is within reach today," he concluded. "Our CIO program is built on the American people's need for security, worked out by American people organized in strong, united industrial unions like the union I represent. And that is why we ask your support—because our program is made to help you, the people of America."

termed the "emanicipation of labor and its Magna Carta."

The Murdock-Healey statement declared the Wagner Act to be "the most important of all labor legislation ever enacted by the Congress of the United States," and added that while it may not yet be perfect, "we should be most cautious in adopting any amendments which may have the tendency of impairing the rights guaranteed" under its statutes.

Ford's Terror Tactics Bared At Hearing

DALLAS, Tex., Mar. 11.—With 45 witnesses called to testify, a National Labor Relations Board hearing against the Ford Motor Company opened in Dallas last week before Trial Examiner R. D. Denham.

The hearing in which charges that Ford's strong arm squad and special employes beat several union organizers and sympathizers got under way after Denham ruled that a witness in a labor hearing is granted immunity from prosecution in state courts for matters to which he testified.

The question was raised by James R. Longley, first witness called to the stand, who declined to testify on the constitutional grounds that what he said might be used against him.

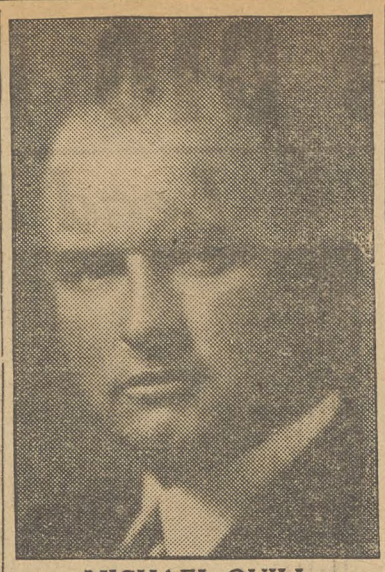
Longley testified that Sailor Barto Hill, said to be a member of the strong squad in 1937, went to Fretz Park in Dallas to tar and feather a labor speaker there, but when it developed he was an aged man, the plan was abandoned. Instead, a movie projectionist was tarred while Longley destroyed the sound records used with a movie film being shown.

BECAME CAPTAIN

Longley said he left his post on the assembly line in the plant to take an outside job and later became a "captain" in charge of one of the "inside squads" of which he said Sailor Barto was the leader. He said they did not work in the plant, but worked outside to keep the union out.

He told how he and his squad met and beat on a downtown street in Dallas a CIO lawyer, W. J. Houston, then of Dallas but now of Seattle.

A blackjack Longley identified as his was introduced in the evidence and he testified he obtained it from a man in the maintenance shop at the Ford plant.



BEATEN IN STORE

Baron DeLouis, organizer for the United Automobile Workers, testified that he and a companion were beaten by a strong arm squad in a drug store near the Ford plant. The union then was affiliated with the CIO, he said, and he had been trying to ascertain if there was a demand among Ford workers for an organization in the Dallas plant.

"We don't want any union talk here," DeLouis testified one of the men who beat him said. He said at another time he was set upon by a group of eight and beaten but he escaped the gang by "taking a poke" at the smallest fellow in the ring surrounding him and running through the hole when the little fellow fell. He ran into a house nearby and called the police.

BEATEN ON STREET

W. J. Houston, Seattle attorney, testified that his arms were pinned behind his back while he was beaten by a gang on a downtown Dallas street. He said he was kicked in the head and face when he fell to the pavement and that one of the mob reached around a policeman who came to the scene and gave him another jab in the mouth. He said Ford officials came to police headquarters where all were taken and prevented newspaper photographers from taking pictures.

MICHAEL QUILL
Leads Fight On Plan

Win 20-Week Strike, Get Pay Raises

Minneapolis, Mar. 11. — The American Farm Machine Co., whose stubborn refusal to negotiate with Local 1140, UER&MWA, was the cause of a protracted twenty weeks strike, has agreed to come to terms with the union by signing a union contract—something it said it would never do.

Sole and exclusive bargaining rights were granted Local 1140, with a 2½-cent increase in wages to take effect October 24, 1940.

Prior to this strike, the management sent an official communication to Local 1140 stating in part,

"We take this opportunity to advise you that we desire to terminate the above referred to labor contract."

REFUSE TO BARGAIN

From then on the management refused to recognize the union, so the union formulated its demands and went on strike. This was not an ordinary strike. All indications are that the reactionary, open-shop employers and their company union specialist, L. M. McAloon had banded together to attempt to crush the labor movement by using the American Farm Machinery Company as a "guinea pig."

Commenting on the strike settlement, William Mauseth UE Sub-District 11 Organizer, said, "After twenty weeks of strike the Company finally signed a standard contract proving once again that when workers are determined and fight that 'they can win'.

"We wish to inform all concerned that if there are any other employers who wish to become a scapegoat in attempting to smash our union, we stand ready to take them on. Our U. E. Unions now have agreements with 118 different employers in the Twin City area."

Buffalo CIO Backs Lewis On Politics

Buffalo, N. Y., Mar. 9—Endorsement of the policy voiced by CIO President John L. Lewis, of deferring support for any presidential candidate until the issues have been more clearly stated, was voted unanimously by the Erie County CIO Industrial Union Council at its last meeting.

Declaring that the "political scene at this early date is confused and undeveloped," the resolution stated that "the war in Europe brings the greatest cause for labor to act with extreme caution in the United States in order to insure neutrality of this nation."

SUPPORTS POLICY

The resolution advocated support of the national CIO convention policy and the recent utterances of Pres. Lewis, and opposed "any political endorsements at this early time, in the belief that caution is wiser at this moment; and that labor can best serve its own interests by withholding any and all premature commitments until events have sufficiently developed for labor to utilize its powerful support for its own maximum benefit."

Crisis Nears On New York Transit Plan

NEW YORK, Mar. 11. — Threatened by a "union-busting, company union" plan for labor in Mayor LaGuardia's transunification plan, Pres. Michael Quill of the CIO Transport Workers Union today warned city officials that his members are prepared for a showdown fight to preserve their organization.

Three mass meetings, attended by 18,000 TWU members on the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit lines, voted overwhelmingly for resolutions authorizing strike action by the executive board if the situation demands, union officials said today.

The issue at stake is the right of the workers to preserve the union conditions they have built up under CIO auspices during the last few years on the IRT and BMT lines, both of which will soon be operated by the city. In a letter to Pres. Quill, the mayor served notice that seniority, the closed shop and other gains won by the union in collective bargaining with the private companies will be sacrificed, with the workers receiving only a measure of civil service protection in return.

At a conference called by the TWU to discuss the situation, some 400 leaders of AFL and CIO unions with a membership of 800,000 workers, adopted a declaration supporting the union and condemning LaGuardia's refusal to allow the TWU the right to collective bargaining. The mayor was reminded that he attained his present high office through the efforts of organized labor.

LETTER TO MAYOR

"For this you will undoubtedly be applauded, as you already have been, by labor hating reactionaries," Quill wrote to LaGuardia. "The people of the city of New York, I am sure, will not share the enthusiasm of the reactionaries, when they learn that your plan, the manner in which you arrived at it, are destined to precipitate disruptions in transit service that might easily have been avoided had you been disposed to adopt and maintain decent labor relations."

MAYOR SHUNNED UNION

Reviewing past relations between the union and the mayor, Quill wrote:

"Ever since the summer of 1938, we have repeatedly besought you to confer with us with a view to the formulation of a plan which would, after unification, recognize the right of transit employes to organize and bargain collectively in respect to their wages, hours and working conditions through a bona fide labor union of their own choosing and assure the people of the city of safe, efficient and uninterrupted service. But on each occasion you refused to confer with us."

Quill said that when LaGuardia announced unification of the transit lines under city ownership would be consummated on May 1, TWU leader twice inquired about the future status of the union. Neither query brought a response.

TURNS ON LABOR

"We asked you for bread and you give us a stone. Thus do you turn against labor — you who have always pretended to be a staunch friend of labor and who under their pretence, have achieved high place and power."

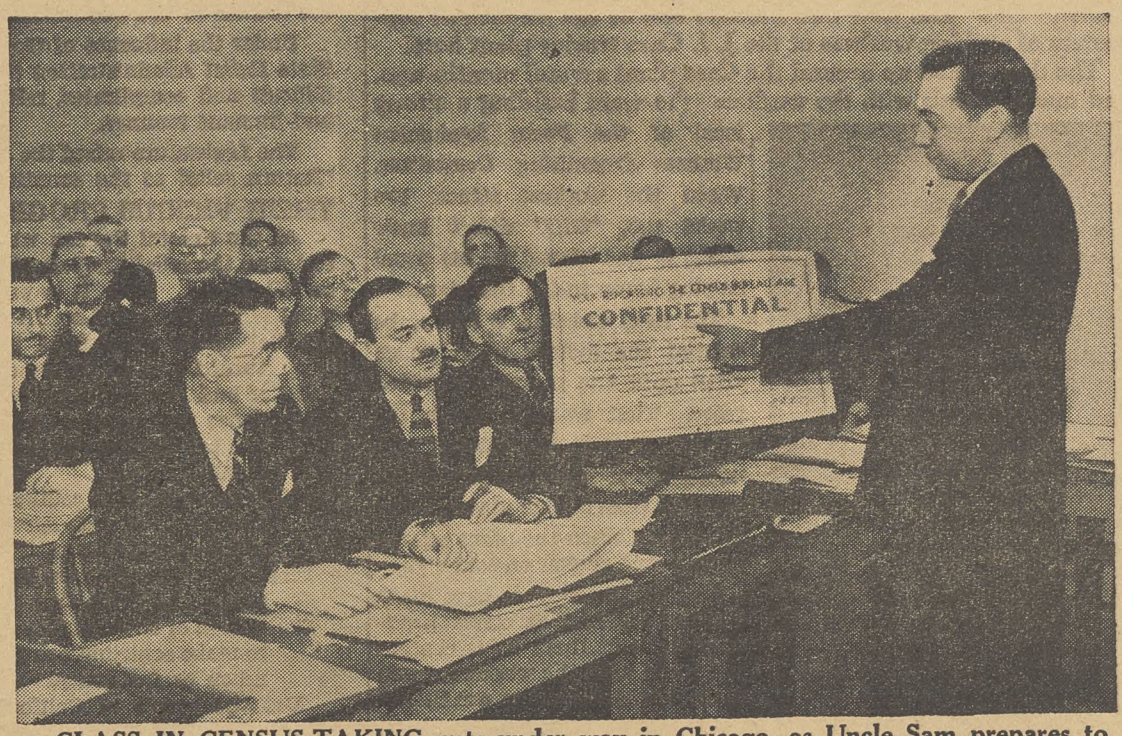
Speaking to 9,000 union members in the Bronx, Austin Hogan, head of the TWU's New York Local, backed up Quill's charges.

"There is no one in the nation who can kick the labor movement in the face," Hogan warned. "Politicians have kicked labor around before, but this is 1940, and we have a CIO, that doesn't take it from anybody."

Connecticut Council Pushes Education Drive

HARTFORD, Conn., Mar. 9. — An extensive educational program for all local unions of Connecticut is being sponsored for the first time this year by the Connecticut State Industrial Union Council.

A circuit of labor movies has met with wide support, showing "Millions of Us", "People of the Cumberland", "The River", and other labor films at a standard reduced price.



The educational committee of the Council has also planned a program of classes and discussion groups in such subjects as The History of American Labor, Labor Economics, How to Speak in Public, Legislating for Progress in America and Connecticut, etc. Locals of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers in Waterbury, Ansonia, and Bridgeport; Textile workers of Norwich and Shelton; the Torrington CIO Council representing CIO brass, auto and machine shop employes; UER & MWA members of Hartford, are all offering classes to their memberships, and report that interest is high and attendance usually more than satisfactory.

SPEAKERS BUREAU

A speakers' bureau for membership or mass meetings, labor books at reduced rates, and help in putting out shop papers are also services used by Connecticut CIO locals under the Council's educational program.

Such educational activities are helping to meet the great need of a deeper understanding of industrial unionism.

Massachusetts CIO Maps Program

Salerno Succeeds Widman as Head; Many Speakers

WORCESTER, Mass., Mar. 9. — Joseph A. Salerno, state director of the Textile Workers Union, was elected president of the Massachusetts Industrial Union Council at a two-day convention marked by lively debate and enthusiastic planning to reach CIO's organizing goal of ten million members in five years. The CIO unions of the state were represented by close to 400 delegates.

Salerno, elected without opposition, succeeds Michael F. Widman, who retired as state president due to his elevation to the office of Assistant National Director of Organization of the CIO.

MUCH DEBATE

The issue which caused most debate at the convention was a resolution to endorse President Roosevelt for a third term. It provoked several hours' discussion and was finally sidetracked by adoption of a motion to refer the issue to the incoming state executive board, with instructions to submit the matter to affiliated unions for a mail vote.

Earlier the delegates had taken a standing vote of 116 to 64 to refer the matter to the CIO national executive board. A roll-call vote was asked, and resulted in 95½ to 95 votes in favor of such action. In view of the closeness of this vote, the final motion was moved and adopted as a compromise.

Other officers elected at the convention included Salvatore Camelio, United Rubber Workers, first vice president; Daniel J. Boyle, International Fur and Leather Workers, secretary-treasurer; and George F. Markham, American Newspaper Guild, legislative agent. In addition eleven vice presidents were elected.

HAYWOOD SPEAKS

Governor Saltonstall, CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, and David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, were main speakers at a well-attended mass meeting held to open the convention.

In a fighting speech, Haywood told of CIO organizing gains and predicted an overwhelming victory in the General Motors election. He said that Tom Girdler and Henry Ford would before long have to agree to collective bargaining.

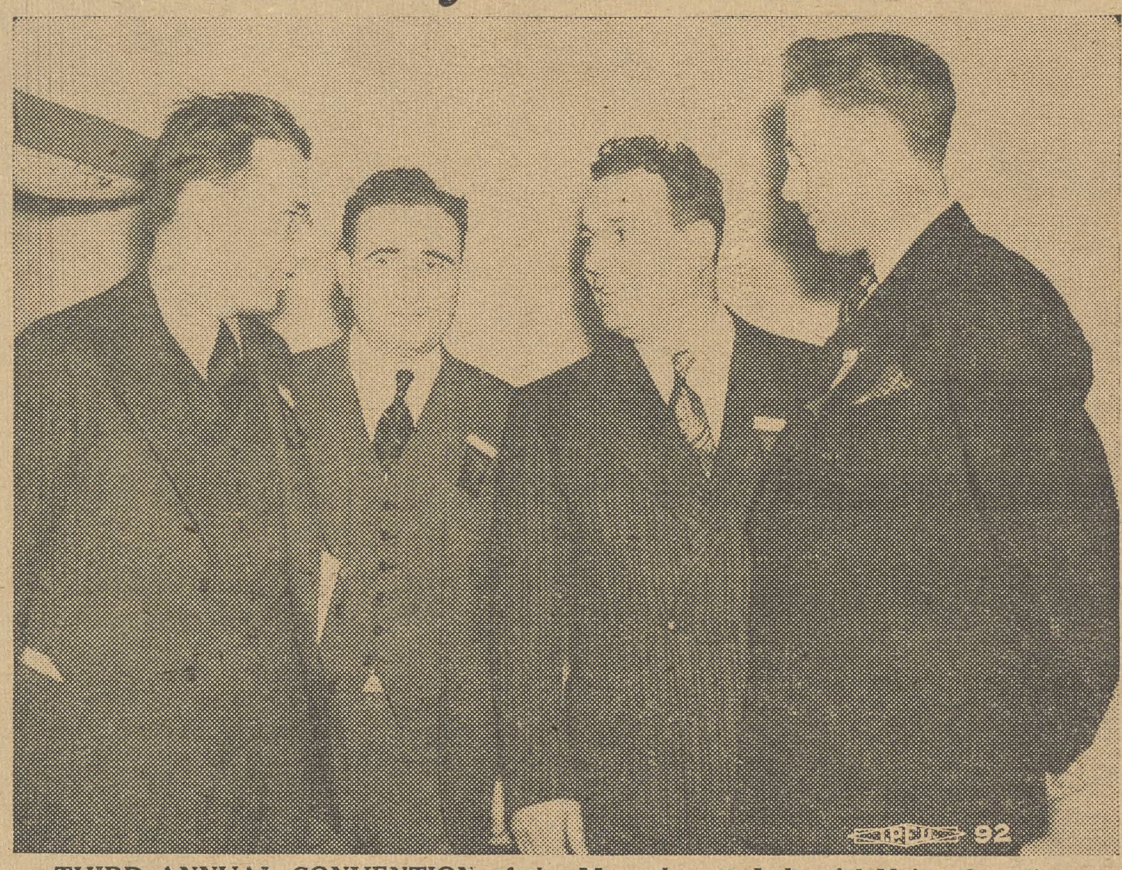
"The CIO wants peace with the AFL," Haywood said, "but an honorable peace without any Munich pact and a peace that will permit us to go on organizing."

McDonald stressed the CIO proposal that the President call a conference of leaders of government, industry, labor and agriculture to work out a plan for solving the unemployment problem. He suggested a system of industrial councils, with employers and unions represented, to consider production and employment problems in each industry and attempt to solve them.

A lengthy debate was precipitated by a resolution declaring that the CIO is "an American organization not interested in Communism, Fascism or Naziism," which was introduced in advance of the third term debate. The resolution was finally carried by a vote of 135 to 93.

Vice presidents elected included Harold Daoust, Donal M. Sullivan, Thomas McGowan, Edward Jackson, Joseph J. Kelleher, Jr., Fred Pezzini, Ralph Hall Frank Lerman, Jesse Prosten, Mariano Bishop and Louis Pilato.

Priest Backs Demands Of Labor



Worcester, Mass., Mar. 9 — "The Catholic Church throughout the world, from the Pope down to the humblest village priest, raises her voice against the injustices of employers and pleads for labor", said Rev. Fr. Vincent C. Dore of Providence College, in the opening address of the Massachusetts State CIO Council convention.

Father Dore urged a more Christian spirit in the dealings between capital and labor.

"While we must give to every man liberty of action in entering a union", he said, "I venture to express the hope that, through the validity of arguments presented through moral suasion and through the influence of public opinion, practically every eligible worker of this nation may be convinced that he should become a member of a union or congress whose purpose it is to work for social justice.

"While capital owns the machines,labor should have a voice at least by contract and through collective bargaining about their operation, since in an industrial country and age the masses depend upon them for a livelihood".

Lead Bay State Council

Introducing 'CIO':

Loyal Pup Refuses To Enter Struck Plant

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Mar. 9—This is a story about a dog named "CIO" and how he's become one of the staunchest supporters of striking workers at the J. I. Case tractor plant here.

The dog turned up around the Case plant several months ago, and made friends with the workers who were building a strong local of the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee. When the workers struck two weeks ago, "CIO" didn't know about it and stayed in his usual lodging house inside the plant.

"CIO", the dog who refused to scab on Rock Island, Ill., farm equipment strikers.

The next morning, a few scabs entered the factory when police pried open the picket-surrounded gates. That was too much for "CIO." He left immediately and joined the striking workers. Since then he hasn't gone through the gates, even when the plant offered warmth and shelter on cold nights.

Instead, the workers have made a place for him at strike headquarters, and there he is content to remain until the workers regain their jobs under union conditions.

Your WPA Job:

California's Vicious Relief Bill

By RALPH HETZEL
CIO Unemployment Director

"Return relief to the states" has been the major stock-in-trade of conservatives, both Republican and Democrat, for the last few years. It is enthroned in full glory in the recent "Statement of Republican Principles" of the Republican Program Committee. It is repeated a thousand times in every debate on relief funds. It is the "budget-balancers" best solution to the unemployment problem.

The reason is very simple. The advocates of such plans merely want to smash any attempt to an effective job for the unemployed. This is glaringly revealed in the recent attempt of the New Jersey Legislature to disfranchise relief clients.

It is even more clearly exposed in the recent happenings in California.

TORIES IN CONTROL

At the last election California elected a liberal Governor for the first time in many years. But the Legislature remained in the control of the Republicans and the reactionaries.

Under the influence of Governor Olson and his appointees the State Relief Administration tried hard to handle the exceedingly difficult and complicated relief problem of California in a fair and humane manner.

The Legislature raised the old battle-cry. But this time it was: "Return relief to the counties!"

THEIR VICIOUS PROGRAM

At the Special Session which Governor Olson recently called to act on the relief problem, the Legislature made a terrific assault on all fronts. Here is a partial list of the provisions in the relief bill as presented to the Governor by the Legislature:

- Relief taken away from the jurisdiction of the SRA and turned over to the reactionary county boards
- Relief budget reduced by 40 per cent.
- Residence requirement raised from 1 year to 3 years (which will bar the thousands of migrant workers from any relief at all).
- $58 per month set as ceiling for a family, no matter how large or how great their special medical or other requirements.
- Reduction of administrative staff by 25 per cent.
- Prohibition of any press activity by the SRA to inform the public about the true conditions of the relief clients.
- Restriction of civil liberties of relief clients by forbidding them to make contributions for any reason whatsoever—church, union or fraternity.

But the people of California are not taking it lying down. Labor's Non-Partisan League and the CIO are in the forefront of an active campaign to save some rights for the unemployed of California.

SEN. WAGNER CONDEMNS SMITH AMENDMENTS

Pick Flaws In DuPont 'Estimate'

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16—Behind the sudden flood of newspaper articles "proving" that unemployment amounts to only 2,000,000 people lies the DuPont chemical company, it was learned here today.

One Edmund Lincoln, economist for the Delaware billionaires, worked up the figures all by himself, then sent memoranda on his conclusions to friendly conservative newspapermen and a few high-ranking government officials.

Whether Dorothy Thompson, sage of the New York Herald-Tribune, received a copy of the report is unknown; but shortly after its appearance, Miss Thompson broke into print with a story belittling the unemployment problem and using many of the figures in the Lincoln report.

The next day Arthur Krock, New York Times Washington bureau chief, wrote his column on the basis of the Lincoln report, while tossing a bouquet to Miss Thompson for her pioneering work. Not to be outdone, Miss Thompson made the retort courteous the following day with a little tribute to Mr. Krock.

Republic Steel Accepts NLRB Order

Pittsburgh. — The Republic Steel Corp. announced today that it would comply with a decision of the Circuit Court of Beaver Falls, Pa., upholding a National Labor Relations Board order involving 300 workers at its Union Wire Drawn Steel plant.

The order directed Republic to stop interference with the CIO steel workers to reinstate one worker and to disestablish a company union. Republic's decision marked the first time it has obeyed a Board order without appeal to higher courts.

Toledo, Ohio. — Petitions supporting the candidacy of Edward Lamb, CIO counsel here, for the Democratic nomination for Ohio attorney-general, are being circulated by friends in the unions.

Prepare for Transit Strike

THEIR UNION THREATENED by Mayor LaGuardia's unification plan, members of the New York Transport Workers Union authorized a strike to fight anti-labor proposals. Scene shows Pres. Michael Quill addressing one of the series of mass meetings held by employes of the two private subway lines to be taken over by the city in May.

Ford Hearing in Dallas Bares Tales of Beatings, Violence

DALLAS, Texas, Mar. 16.—At last the whole brutal story of the Ford Motor company's viciously terroristic efforts to prevent organization of its Dallas, Texas, plant has been told.

The National Labor Relations Board today closed its case against the Ford Company in a hearing on charges brought against the Ford Company, during which more than forty witnesses have been heard.

Witness after witness has testified that under instructions from the management of the Ford Motor company in Dallas they participated in beatings of union organizers, union members, and suspected union members — both CIO and AFL—in telephone tappings of a UAW attorney's phone, in the tarring and feathering of one union worker, and in labor espionage work for open shop interests all over Texas.

These same witnesses have testified that during this time they were paid regularly by the Ford Motor Company.

Witnesses have testified that black-jacks were made and distributed in the Ford Company to a squad of more than twenty "outside men", and that pistols were distributed to these same men in the Ford factory.

Perhaps the most damaging evidence in the Labor Board's case was presented in the testimony of S. C. "Fats" Perry, 252 pound former Ford thug, who, under instructions from Rudolph Rutland, Assistant Superintendent of the Dallas Ford plant, led the anti-union activities of the "outside squad."

EARCH FOR 'SUSPECTS'

Perry said that early in 1937 he was told by Ford Superintendent Abbott to scout around Dallas to find out whether there were any union organizers and to report to Assistant Superintendent, Rudolph Rutland.

From witnesses' testimony it was apparent that after a while the Ford thugs decided that the only way to save their soft outside jobs was to find suspects, no matter whether or not their were CIO representatives or members in Dallas.

Age of Miracles:

DETROIT, Mar. 16.—The good wife of a good union man at Hy-Grade Packing Co. here got a pleasant—though startling—introduction to the benefits of unionism this week.

Her husband, who had worked in the plant for 14 years, came home last pay day with his week's pay and told her he didn't have to work for a week. "Vacation," he explained, "We won it in our CIO union contract."

The incredulous wife got on a street car and went out to see the management of the plant. Quite reasonably, she was afraid her husband had been fired—he'd never had a paid vacation before in all his 14 years of service. But the management assured her everything was okay, and her husband was expected to come back to work after being paid for a week of well-earned leisure.

Terrible things—these unions!

Warns Bill Would Hurt Act

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16—Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, father of the National Labor Relations Act, today heaped blistering criticism on the amendments recommended by the three-man majority of the Smith Committee which "investigated" the National Labor Relations Board.

"The Smith amendments, whatever their intent, in their full sweep would more than repeal the Labor Act," the veteran progressive warned the Senate in a fiery speech. "They would make it a delusive remedy for the worker and a concrete weapon for the oppressinon of labor."

The Smith proposals, he added, "are providing a strategic rallying point for the enemies of the Labor Act.

"The Labor Act and all who believe in it are now faced by a new threat, as menacing as any which they overcame in the past. The friends of industrial democracy must again rally promptly to repel this latest danger. Because I have confidence in America, I have confidence that they will do so."

AFL Split Plan Bared By Official

Anderson, Ind., Mar. 16.—The cat jumped out of the bag here today, revealing in all its glory the AFL's plan for splitting automobile workers into craft units wherever the AFL may win a plant in coming General Motors NLRB elections.

The president of the AFL Metal Polishers international union wrote to a local auto worker and outlined his plans for division of GM employes:

'THEY'RE FOOLISH'

"The AFL is going to vote under the name of the UAW-AFL, with the distinct understanding that all craftsmen have their own union. . . .

"Maybe as far as some of their members are concerned, they don't know anything about it, and they simply believe that if they carry the vote there can't be any other organization.

"Well, they are just foolish, that's all . . . . If the UAW-AFL wins, we win."

Explains CIO Stand On Politics

Middletown, Conn., Mar. 16 — In the new situation caused by the European war, "we find the national leadership of the Democratic and Republican parties offering no real program to meet our burning domestic problems," Len DeCaux, editor of The CIO NEWS and CIO publicity director, told the Wesleyan University Parley here.

Speaking at a forum conference arranged by Wesleyan students, DeCaux warned that the "economic situation is getting rapidly worse, not better," with the "shot in the arm" effects of anticipated war orders beginning to wear off.

"What do our national political leaders propose to do about this situation?" he asked. "They propose in effect to make it much worse — to stage a wholesale retreat from the social and economic program that was barely begun before 1936 — and to divert the people's attention to foreign affairs when they face starvation and misery at home.

LEWIS' POSITION

"These are some of the basic considerations, the real issues, which have led John L. Lewis to speak up as he has done recently," DeCaux explained. "He has come to his present conclusions as a result of a long series of events, in which he has had repeated occasion to call attention to lack of consideration for labor and its demands; to the halting of the program of progressive legislation begun before 1936; to the present retreat from it; to the failure to do anything about unemployment but make it worse; and to the diversion of attention from domestic issues to foreign affairs."

"The CIO is the only group today that advances a real program to meet our present national emergency," he said.

Most significant feature of progressive labor's 1940 attitude, he concluded, "is that labor is assuming greater independence on the political field, in line with the greater independence it has gained through industrial organization."

Big Victory Foreseen at Con-Ed; CIO Growing as Election Nears

By F. E. DeLUDE

NEW YORK, Mar. 16.—April 4 will go down in history as "Independence Day" for 32,000 Consolidated Edison employes. Throughout the greatest city in the world, the CIO spirit is running high—the same spirit which carried the CIO across the continent in 1937.

The greatest steam-electric plant in the world—Hudson Avenue—is CIO right now. The greatest steam-manufacturing plant in the world—Kips Bay—is CIO right now. The greatest coke-oven gas plant in the world—Hunts Point — is CIO right now. Likewise for the other giant plants that constitute the entire production facilities of the New York and Westchester monopoly.

In the other parts of the system — the linemen, splicers, gasmen, customer service men, meter readers and testers, collectors, the street construction forces, the yards and shops — in all of these the word is CIO. Organization has spread to every nook and corner of the Edison utility empire!

WHITE COLLAR FORCES

The 13,000 in the non-physical group, who will vote separately from the 19,000 physical workers, are keeping neck and neck with their over-alled brethren.

In the great office buildings, housing from one to five thousand men and women workers in engineering, technical, bookkeeping, and clerical lines, the crossed American flags of the Amalgamated Utility Workers - CIO campaign button are evident on all sides. The two huge Commercial Centres in Manhattan and the Bronx, for example, are already majority CIO.

It has been said that organization of the Con Edison white-collar forces would constitute a major miracle in labor history — yet the Organizing Committees, Section Officers, Departmental Chairman, etc., expect to do just that. And their confidence in the outcome is equal to that of the plant workers.

A CIO STREAMLINER

Between now and the elections, over half-a-million pieces of literature will hit the 260 Edison properties. At all major plants, shops and offices there will be two or more open-air meetings each week. No single section of the system will want for union activity, for the spoken, written message of the CIO.

On the scene for the rest of the campaign is Michael Widman, assitant organizational director of the CIO. Likewise for Harold J. Straub, national director of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee — himself an ex Edison lineman. Local CIO unions are co-operating splendidly, and their help will increase as the campaign reaches its climax.

COMPANY UNION FADES

Intensive activities, hundreds of meetings, distribution planning, and the countless other organizational functions are being conducted from eleven offices in all parts of New York and Westchester. Fiercely active days and nights are crushing every effort of the company-spawned "Brotherhood of Consolidated Edison Employes."

The AFL's IBEW, technically in the situation, is no longer an issue — but 9,000 laid off men and women testify mutely to the outfit's usefulness to the company during the past three years.

To the whole CIO, Local 111 of the UWOC (the Amalgamated Utility Workers) extends deepest thanks for the splendid help it is receiving. "Watch our smoke!" is the byword. Con Edison men are on the march!

Shoe Local Quits AFL, Joins CIO

Binghamton, N. Y., Mar. 16 — The entire membership of the AFL shoe workers local at the Endicott-Johnson plant here has resigned from that union and joined the CIO United Shoe Workers of America.

All officers of the AFL local, including Pres. Emlyn C. Hughes, signed membership cards in the CIO union. Both organizations were defeated in an NLRB election at the plant some time ago.

Meanwhile, CIO sentiment in this area spurted higher following two quick strike victories in smaller shoe plants. Wage increases and other benefits were won.

6c Increase Won in Philly

Philadelphia, Mar. 16. — Wage increases of 6½c an hour featured a new contract signed here by the Pennsylvania Smelting & Refining Co. and Local 493 of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

The agreement also provides for seniority, the union shop, time and a half for overtime, vacations with pay and additional 2½c wage increase in three months, bringing minimum wages in the plant to a minimum of 40c.

Representing the workers in the pact negotiations were Joseph Cannon, CIO regional director, and Field Representative Kosik.

CIO Quintet Wins Hoop Tourney

Gary, Ind., Mar. 16.—For the second straight year, a CIO basketball team has won the Indiana state championship and will head for the national AAU tournament in Denver.

The quintet, playing under the colors of Club Vida-CIO, easily swept aside district competition and scored three state wins in the state finals. The team is composed entirely of CIO members, and is sponsored by Rubicon Lodge 1014 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

In the state tourney at Shelbyville, the CIO basketeers downed teams representing Indiana Central College, Conn's of Elkhart and Fleet Wing Oilers of Fort Wayne, running up a total of 149 points to 103 for the opposition.

Labor Board Flouters Face Jail

Philadelphia, Mar. 16.—Threat of jail sentences for contempt of court today hung over two New Jersey corporation executives who failed to comply with a Labor Board back wages award.

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals here ruled that failure to pay the money, as directed by the NLRB and confirmed by the court in a previous order, placed the Tidewater Iron & Steel Co. and two of its chief executives in defiance of the court.

The company had discharged five members of the AFL teamsters union, and later was directed to pay them $1,470 in back pay.

CIO Clothing Union Under Wage Law Asks 40c Minimum

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16. — Recommendations for setting a 40-cent minimum wage in the clothing industry was backed officially this week by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

John J. Abt, special counsel for the ACW told Col. Philip Fleming, Wage-Hour Administrator, that this proposed minima recommended by the Industry Committee appointed by the Wage-Hour Administration, would really serve only to restore wage levels prevailing in 1934-35 prior to the nullification of the NIRA.

"The increases which the recommended minima will require are neither excessive nor unusual," Abt declared in his oral argument supporting the union's brief.

"On the contrary, they are negligible in comparison with those to which the industry so successfully adjusted itself in 1933, and are not in excess of increases which have subsequently been secured and successfully absorbed in organized sections of the industry."

EARNINGS UP 15%

Justifying the union request for a 40-cent minimum in the clothing industry, Abt showed that average hourly earnings in all manufacturing industry have risen 15 per cent since 1935. During the same period farm income has likewise increased 10 per cent and the national income has risen from 55 billion dollars in 1935 to 68 billion in 1939.

"Thus the purchasing power of the workers in the clothing industry has declined in the face of an increase in the purchasing power of the American people who are its customers," Abt contended.

The committee's recommendation for a 40-cent hour in the men's and boys' clothing branch of the apparel industry has the support of clothing manufacturers employing more than 125,000 workers, or 90 per cent of the total number employed, the ACW counsel showed.

Opposition comes solely from the Southern Garment Manufacturers' Asosciation, he declared.

Farm, Labor Meet Planned In Fort Wayne

Fort Wayne, Ind., Mar. 16.—Action calling for a joint legislative conference of all labor and farm groups in the CIO to be held not later than April 21 was voted by the CIO Industrial Union Council here, as a step toward a better understanding of problems both groups hold in common.

The Fort Wayne Council also went on record as opposed to war loans to foreign countries "at the expense of labor and social legislation."

CIO Files Defense Of Labor Act; Sen. Wagner Raps Smith Bill

Says New Act Would HurtLabor

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16—Sen. Robert F. Wagner joined the liberal critics of the Smith proposals to amend the Natl. Labor Relations Act with a fighting speech in the U. S. Senate that described the tory amendments as designed to make the Act a "delusive remedy for the worker and a concrete weapon for the oppression of labor."

Amendments such as those proposed by the tory Smith and his like are "providing a strategic rallying point for the enemies of the Labor Act," Wagner said, in warning that the act "and those who believe in it are now faced by a new threat, as menacing as any which they overcame in the past."

Smith has produced no evidence to show that the Act has not led to industrial peace, Wagner said, citing the evidence of U. S. government reports to show how strikes have declined since the Act came into effect after the Supreme Court decision in 1937.

COVERT ATTACK

Consequently, he pointed out, "the bitterest foes of collective bargaining are ever more fearful than before of attacking openly the fundamental soundness of the Act" and must center their strategy on proposals to hamstring it

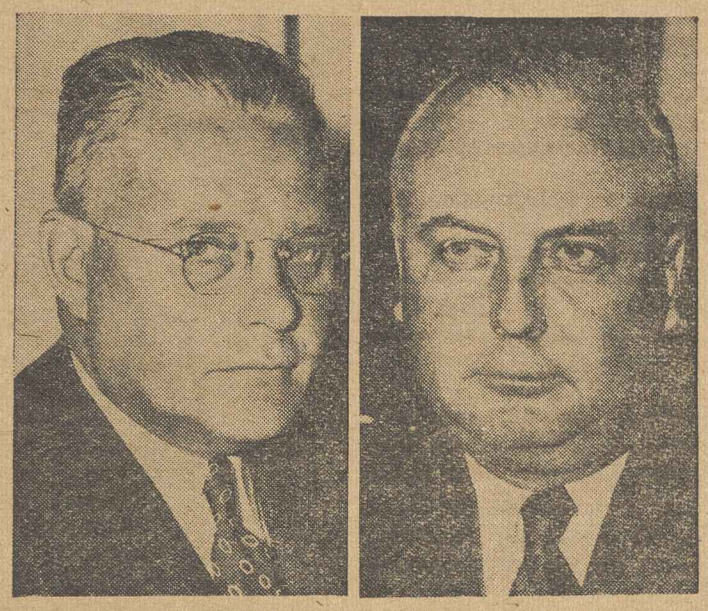
Pal of Dies Indicted For Murder

New Orleans, Mar. 16.—Another pet witness of the Dies Committee has run afoul of the law.

William McQuistion, shipowners' agent, who used the protective wing of the Texas Congressman to call the National Maritime Union a "red" organization, was indicted here, charged with the murder of Philip Carey, NMU Gulf official, last September.



Carey, stewards' secretary for the NMU Gulf district, was beaten with chains and shot by three thugs who found him seated in a parked car. NMU members attributed the murder to a group of labor spies who had been thrown out of the union, and charged that McQuistion was affiliated with this group. Only a few days before Carey was murdered, McQuistion had attacked him on a city street.

PROTECTED BY DIES

McQuistion was arrested in Washington last summer by New Orleans police officers who had journeyed to the nation's capital for that purpose. Dies, angered by the arrest of one of his fair-haired boys, pouted that it was a plot to discredit McQuistion's testimony by framing him for murder.

The Dies committee report apparently accepted McQuistion's testimony at its face value, for it echoed his lies against the union.

Attack Smith Bill

HouseGets CIO Views OnChange

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16—The Smith Committee proposals to amend the Wagner Act are "directed toward the destruction of the rights of labor" guaranteed by the Act, the CIO told House Labor Committee members considering the ripper bill put out by three members of the Committee here.

"Not a single amendment contained in HR 8813 (the Smith bill) is supported by the evidence" brought out by the probe, Lee Pressman, CIO counsel, told the House Committee, and the CIO "is unalterably opposed to them."

Keynote of the Smith proposals, the CIO memo to the House Committee pointed out, is in the anti-labor scheme to redefine the statement of policy of the act, in the new definition of collective bargaining, which merely requires an employer to meet with his workers, with no requirement of real bargaining, and in the proposal to allow revocation of all outstanding Board orders.

THE PAYOFF

The payoff on the Smith amendments, Pressman declared, was in the hearty approval they won from the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, which issued an enthusiastic statement the day they were put out.

"We do not doubt that all anti-labor employers who are still energetically devoting their attention to depriving workers of their rights will add their support to these proposed amendments," Pressman wrote in the CIO message.

Other Smith plans for mayhem on the Wagner Act were sharply criticized in the CIO memo, which

Transit Union Warns of Strike To Protect Jobs

NEW YORK, Mar. 16.—A demonstration by thousands of members of the CIO Transport Workers Union in front of New York City Hall today gave Mayor LaGuardia their answer to "union-busting" plans tied up with unification of city subway and elevated lines under city ownership and operation.

Other developments followed quickly as the crisis between the union and the mayor threatened to force a strike to protect the workers' hard-won gains:

1. Pres. Michael Quill of the TWU made public a point-by-point answer to LaGuardia's statement to the transport workers.

2. The TWU announced that 27,000 employes of the IRT and BMT lines have voted to strike if necessary to protect their rights.

3. An Emergency Conference Committee, composed of union, civic, religious and consumer group leaders, pledged support to the union's campaign.

TO MEET UNION

With CIO Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman at his side, the mayor announced that on Monday, Mar. 18, he will confer with TWU leaders on the matter, a step which he previously had not taken despite many demands by the union.

Appearing at a 5-hour hearing of the city's Board of Estimate to demand jobs for workers forced into unemployment by demolition of parts of the elevated structure were Quill, Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, and Harry Sacher, TWU attorney.

Michigan Auto Workers To Hear Lewis Apr. 6&7

DETROIT, Mar. 16. — CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will visit Detroit and Flint on April 6 & 7 to further the cause of the United Automobile Workers in the General Motors Labor Board election scheduled for the middle of next month.

The visit will mark Pres. Lewis' first public appearance in the auto capital since the stirring days of early 1937 when he led the union through triumphal strikers to its first agreements with the big motor corporations.

Appearing with Lewis will be CIO-Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, who helped the UAW weather the series of crisis brought on by a band of disrupters bent on destroying the workers' gains.

PARADES PLANNED

The two days have been designated as CIO days in the two auto cities, it was announced by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW, who said that, weather permitting, parades and demonstrations will precede the giant mass meetings scheduled to hear the CIO leaders.

Following conclusion of the UAW's executive board meeting in Chicago, Walter Reuther, who heads the union's GM department, and Vice-Pres. Leo Krzycki of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers departed on a speaking tour throughout General Motors centers in all parts of the country.

Some 125,000 workers will vote in the elections, it is estimated, making the poll far and away the largest ever conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. GM employes will be asked to choose between the UAW-CIO, the AFL union or neither, while in a few cases craft unions will be on the ballot.

All plants carried by each of the unions will be lumped together into bargaining units for subsequent contract negotiations. CIO leaders predicted, however, that the UAW-CIO will win a sweeping victory, for the AFL splinter organization is crumbling.

In recent weeks, a number of its locals have swung back to the CIO, and AFL headquarters has been forced to appoint a negotiator over its affairs. Homer Martin, once the fair-haired boy of the AFL disruptionist clique, has been little heard from in recent months, and it has been rumored he has little voice in the policy of the organization.

Kauai Goes Union; CIO Sweeps Hawaiian Poll

LIHUE, Hawaii, Mar. 11.—The CIO Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union has become the sole collective bargaining agency for the waterfront workers in all ports on the island of Kauai as the result of a Labor Board election victory at the Lihue Plantation Co.

The CIO union won 89 votes, while an AFL union received only 61 and three men voted for no union.

Pedro Bitanga, president of the CIO local, said negotiations looking towards a union cotract would be started immediately.

Louis Welch, CIO official in Honolulu, said he was well pleased with the results of the election.

2,000 to Vote In Textile Election

Biddeford, Me., Mar. 16.—Some 2,000 workers at the Pepperell Mills here will vote on representation by the Textile Workers Union of America at a poll to be conducted by the National Labor Relations Board on March 18.

Local officials of the CIO textile union who are confident of winning the election, declared that the addition of this mill to the list of those organized by the TWUA will bring two of the largest sheeting concerns in New England within the CIO fold.

CIO WON IN '39

Workers at plants of the Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. in Salem and Peabody, Massachusetts, where nearly 3,000 are employed, voted for the TWUA at a Labor Board election held last summer.

An important poll was also won recently by the CIO textile union in the Massachusetts' wool industry, when it defeated an AFL union at the Barre Wool Combing Co., So. Barre, by a vote of 406 to 241.

Employes at the Pepperell plant will be given time off from work to vote during the polling hours, 8 A. M. to 1:30 P. M. The TWUA will be the only union on the "yes" or "no" ballot.

Consumer Power Poll March 25

Detroit, Mar. 16.—Employes of the big state-wide Consumers Power Co. will start balloting on March 25 to determine whether they wish to be represented by the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee or by no union.

Several thousand employes in a number of cities will cast their votes in the election, one of the most important of the year. A corps of CIO organizers are assigned to the campaign and report sweeping sentiment for the union.

CIO WINS REFORMS

Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, who is directing the pre-election campaign, pointed out that the mere existence of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee has led the company to institute sweeping reforms, including seniority, time and a half for overtime and double pay for Sundays, and a number of wage increases.

The CIO officials warned workers not to be misled by AFL and company propaganda to the effect that a defeat for the CIO will result in another election within a month, this time with the AFL union on the ballot.

Smith The Ripper

The proposed amendments of the Smith committee majority have aroused the justified resentment of all friends of the Wagner act and all defenders of labor's collective bargaining rights.

Senator Wagner, author of the act, declares that the Smith amendments "would more than repeal the Labor Act; they would make it a delusive remedy for the worker and a concrete weapon for the oppression of labor."

The Smith bill (HR 8813) is a "ripper bill" in more than one sense. Besides its abolition of the present Labor Board, its appointment of a dictatorial administrator and its drastic reorganization of the whole administrative machinery, it would rip and slash the present act to shreds in a dozen other ways.

Under these amendments an anti-union employer would be encouraged to employ delay tactics; would not be required to bargain collectively in good faith but merely to go through the motions of sitting down and conferring; would be able to tie up Board action by court appeals; and would be permitted to interfere with his employes' right of self-organization in a number of other ways.

Workers, on the other hand, would be denied their right to regain jobs from which they have been unjustly fired, after six months. Back pay awards would be limited to six months. Provocative work by employers' agents would be encouraged, since a striker could be deprived of his rights under the act, if he became involved even in a minor scuffle on the picket line.

If further evidence be needed of the anti-labor character of the Smith amendments, it can be supplied by looking at the consistently anti-labor record of their sponsor, Congressman Howard W. Smith, who strongly opposed the enactment of the Wagner act in the first place.

It can also be supplied by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, which has fought the Wagner Act from the first and demanded its repeal, and which now fully approves the Smith amendments.

Urge your representatives in Congress to stand fast against the anti-labor Smith bill (HR 8813), and to oppose all other amendments except the three CIO proposals to strengthen the Wagner Act.

LaGuardia and Labor's Rights

The threat issued by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia to abrogate the union contracts and collective bargaining rights of 27,000 New York subway workers, when two transit lines are taken over by the city, is much more than a local issue.

The Transport Workers Union has had a record of peaceful collective bargaining which has won wide praise. But now that the basic union rights of the workers are threatened, it is preparing for militant resistance, and labor generally in New York is rallying to its support.

When private employers are required to accord to their employes their full collective bargaining rights, it comes as a shock to find a municipality seeking to deny and to restrict these rights—particularly when this municipality is headed by a man whom labor has supported as its friend.

The whole CIO will follow with close sympathy and support the struggle of the Transport Workers Union to defend its members' union rights in the crisis which threatens. It will also follow closely the behavior of Mayor LaGuardia in a situation which will put to a sharp test his reputation as a friend of labor.

pointed out that denial of Wagner Act rights to workers guilty of petty law violations, exemption of hundreds of thousands of processing workers, court review of all Board decisions, and the like, would have the effect really desired by labor's enemies — emasculation and effective repeal of the Act.

Similarly proposed administrative changes and license for employers to talk against unions would destroy the basic purposes of the Act, Pressman wrote. The latter proposal, he declared, was merely "a thinly disguised attempt in the name of free speech to permit the employer . . . to destroy any attempt on the part of his workers to exercise the right of self-organization."

THERE are some people who have never admitted there is such a thing as unemployment.

They can be found in some of our most exclusive clubs.

Facts and figures don't mean a thing to them—"just damn' lies!" They can look out of their club windows at thousands of unemployed workers demonstrating in the flesh, and wave them away with, "They're just lazy — don't want to work."

These human ostriches stick their heads in the Chicago Tribune or some other tory paper, and swear that they can see no human misery that needs social attention. Today there is great rejoicing among these gentlemen. A regular fairy godmother, in the person of a lady three-columnist, has waved a statistical wand — and presto, there aren't any unemployed, at least not in her chain of papers.

Or rather, this lady has taken the collective wisdom of the country's see-nothing tory clubmen, stuffed it into one pumpkin-head, waved her wand over it and created a character she calls, "the Grouse."

This Grouse is a very flattering personification of the rather inarticulate unemployed in the upper income brackets. It is supposed to be able to count and even to argue and bandy about statistics.

It has taken more than 11,000,000 American unemployed and just argued them out of existence!

A Serious Fraud

Dorothy Thompson's Grouse and her fairy-tale statistics are probably the product of an overrich diet and too much association with the over-rich.

They will not be taken seriously by any competent statistician, any more than they will be by the unemployed and their families. After all, it takes something more than three columns of emotional verbosity to put even one man back to work.

But what should be taken seriously is the fact that such vaporings are being spread through the press of the country as arguments against doing anything to relieve America's No. 1 problem, unemployment.

Basic Fallacies

There are at least three basic fallacies in the type of figuring whereby the Grouse and his imitators are trying to make the unemployed disappear.

One is that they do not take account of the full increase in working population in recent years. Another is that they start off with a figure of unemployment in a past year that is far below the real figure. And a third is that they do not count the unemployed who are on WPA work.

Every qualified research survey, whether government, labor or employer, has shown the number of unemployed to range between nine and twelve million. The Thompson type of statistics have been shown up promptly for the fraud they are.

Stomachs and Statistics

But American workers themselves do not need statistics to convince them of the seriousness of our present unemployment.

When you are out of a job yourself, or when you see neighbors and friends suffering all the hell of unemployment, you are not concerned as to whether statisticians figure a million more or a million less. And you feel only bitterness toward the tory liars who say there is no problem that cries for attention.

Because they represent the working people who feel the full impact of unemployment in their own lives and the lives of their families, the unions of the CIO know how serious is the present situation. All reliable statistics simply bear out their practical knowledge.

War on the Jobless

That is why the CIO bitterly resists the present proposals to lay off hundreds of thousands more unemployed from WPA and to curtail the government's public works program at a time when unemployment is increasing close to the twelve-million mark.

That is why the CIO calls for a government-sponsored conference of representatives of government, industry, agriculture and labor—so that the spokesmen of all the main interests may get together on plans to remedy unemployment.

That is why the CIO demands an expansion of socially-useful public works to provide at least three million jobs for America's unemployed.

The Grouse incident marks the opening of a new type of propaganda campaign against labor's demands. Its phony statistics are just one of the weapons that will be used in the tory warfare against the unemployed.

Even the most calloused tories must wince at times at present proposals to starve the jobless. So alleged statisticians are hired to kid them and the public about there not being so many unemployed to starve after all.

11 CIO Conventions During April, May

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16.—In the spring a CIO man's fancy turns to thoughts of union conventions, it would appear from the number of meetings scheduled during the next two months.

Eight international unions and three State councils are to convene between now and the end of May. The conventions:

APRIL

1	Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union	North Bend, Ore.
8	American Communications Assn.	Chicago
23	Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers	Pittsburgh
24	Aluminum Workers of America	Maryville, Tenn.
29	Utah Industrial Union Council	Ogden
30	Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council	Reading

MAY

2	Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers	Washington
13	Amalgamated Clothing Workers	New York
14	Steel Workers Organizing Committee	Chicago
17	Indiana Industrial Union Council	Gary
30	Plaything & Novelty Workers	New York

Clothing Workers Will Mark Silver Jubilee

NEW YORK, Mar. 16.—Election of delegates to the Silver Jubilee convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, will be the main order of business in the hundreds of locals and joint boards now flourishing in all clothing centers throughout the country, it was announced at ACW headquarters here this week.

The convention will open in New York City on May 13. A quarter of a million workers now enrolled in the powerful union will be represented at this thirteenth biennial meet.

"This year we shall celebrate at our Silver Jubilee convention, 25 years of progress and growth," says the official call issued by the ACW general office.

HOPE FOR PEACE

"In the past 25 years the world has been largely re-made. There was a world war on when our organization was launched, and most unfortunately there is also a world war on now. We will hope and pray that our own country may succeed in staying out of the war."

Recalling that 25 years ago men's clothing was a sweated industry, the call, signed by Secretary Joseph Schlossberg, points out that now the ACW is "practically completely organized under a system of industrial law and order in which our organization is a very potent factor.

QUARTER-MILLION MEMBERS

"We come to the Silver Jubilee convention with a membership of a quarter of a million in the cloth- ing and kindred industries. We have brought hope, improvement in working conditions, and human dignity to all who work in those industries and enjoy the protection of our organization.

"We have given to hundreds of thousands of other workers moral and financial aid in building strong unions."

Amalgamated Board Meets

Washington, Mar. 16. — The general executive board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, representing 250,000 workers, will open a four-day meeting here on Mar. 19.

The board is expected to consider a number of industrial, political and legislative problems of national importance. Seventeen general executive board members from the principal men's clothing markets of the country will attend the sessions.

Dept. Store Signs Pact

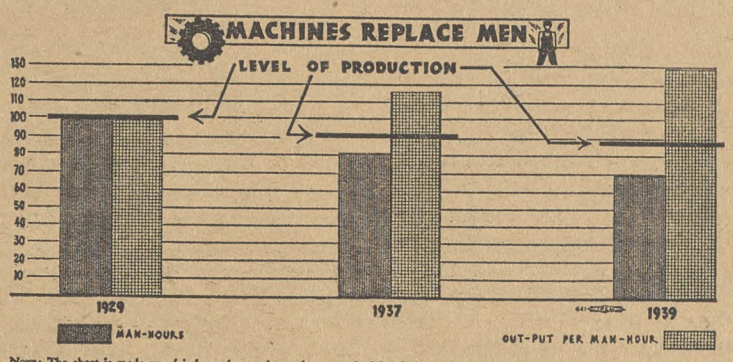
New York, Mar. 16.—Signing of a closed shop contract covering 400 workers in the mail order department of the Lane Bryant Co., women's department store, was announced today by Local 65 of the United Wholesale & Warehouse Employes, CIO.

U.S. Facing Depression; 11,936,000 Are Jobless

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16.—The U. S. is on the edge of a serious depression, with January unemployment figures at 11,936,000 and production in basic industries lagging, according to the current issue of the CIO Economic Outlook, released here this week. Profits are up—to a higher level than for any comparable period before, including 1928 and 1929.

The unemployment estimate, based on government figures and CIO reports, shows an in-crease of 14 per cent over December, 1939, while industrial production fell seven per cent in the same period, with a probable fall of 15 per cent for February and 17 for March.

The prediction of "a very serious depression and liquidation" in the near future is based on declines in four basic industries, steel, automobiles, textiles and building construction.



In steel, output is down to 65 per cent of capacity, with 25,000 steel workers out of jobs since December, and more being fired daily. Stocks of automobiles are "dangerously high" and the industry is reported to be "scheduling production on a week-to-week basis." Textile output "is moving into a lull" with any chance of increase dependent on general business improvement. Building construction is down 24 per cent from December, with only a seven per cent increase in prospect for the whole of 1940.

BUT PROFITS ARE UP

But lower production and increased unemployment don't mean a cut in profits to corporations, the CIO Outlook says. On the contrary, profits were never better, reaching in the last three months of 1939 a higher total than "in any fourth quarter previously reported, including 1928 and 1929." Sixty-two corporations, the CIO Outlook says, got $265,000,000 in profits in that period, which was $16,000,000 more than 1937, $20,000,000 more than 1929.

These huge profits were made despite 10,000,000 unemployed in the last quarter of 1939, showing once again that "it is possible for industry to make boom profits in the face of the unemployment of one out of five of the working population."

They show too, the Outlook points out, that cuts in wage costs are a major cause of profits—that is, the industrialist pays less in wages for a greater productivity per worker. This trend is illustrated by a chart in the Outlook, (see cut), showing an increase in labor productivity of 28 per cent between 1929 and 1939—a condition that has cut down the number of workers required to produce a higher output in 1939 by 2,000,000.

Note: The chart is made up of indexes for total man-hours worked, level of production and output per man-hour, based on 1929=100. The total man-hour figures are calculated on Bureau of Labor Statistics average payroll figures divided by average hourly wage rates in the manufacturing industries.

WPA AND RECOVERY

The proposed Federal budget, which makes deep slashes in WPA and other relief and social services in favor of increased arms appropriations, is emphasized as another basic cause of decline.

WPA employment is cut to its lowest level in Pres. Roosevelt's 1940 budget, the Outlook says, in warning that "unless some substantial change is made in the WPA program . . ." it will act as "a very serious pressure towards depression."

One + One = Three:

Dorothy Thompson's Arithmetic Flunks CIO Critical Test

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16. — The strange case of Miss Dorothy Thompson's arithmetic, which enabled the New York Herald-Tribune columnist practically to banish the unemployment problem with a few swift licks of a pencil, came in for some critical examination today by Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director.

Miss Thompson, after a column and a half of figuring, came to the conclusion that there are only two million unemployed throughout the land, a conclusion that led her to a state of unbounded optimism.

Hetzel suggested that "fictitious gentleman, the Grouse, whom you quoted in your column . . . represents a complacency about unemployment which is very disturbing. It is disturbing because it seriously inhibits an honest approach to the solution of unemployment.

IGNORES 'HARD FACTS'

"Those who really want to insure the stability of our form of government had better face the facts clearly and boldly. To brush away the hard facts of unemployment with a sweep of breakfast arithmetic is to do a serious harm to the cause of democratic government."

Hetzel challenged Miss Thompson's estimate that the nation's working population had grown by only three million in 10 years, pointing out that conservative economists figure the increase to be at least 6,000,000. That, the CIO official wrote, "adds 2,400,000 workers to those who were forgotten by the Grouse."

These, plus the 2,300,000 on WPA whom Miss Thompson brushed aside as "employed", plus the 2,600,000 jobless in December, 1929, plus the two million admitted by the columnist to be unemployed, total up to 9,300,000, "even using the Grouse's own basic figures," Hetzel pointed out.

Meanwhile, Hetzel pointed out, the working population actually has increased during the decade by 11,700,000 workers, due to a "lower birth rate and a shift in age distribution" of the people. This fact, ignored by Miss Thompson, brings her estimate even farther away from reality.

U. S. FIGURES NEEDED

"Of course," Hetzel concluded, "what the government really needs is current and official information on unemployment in all its varieties. So far, the government has failed to provide any such material. Until it does, we must do the best we can with the fragmentary information we have."

Wagner Raps Smith Bill

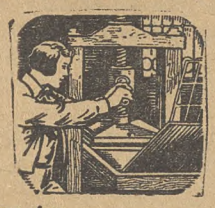
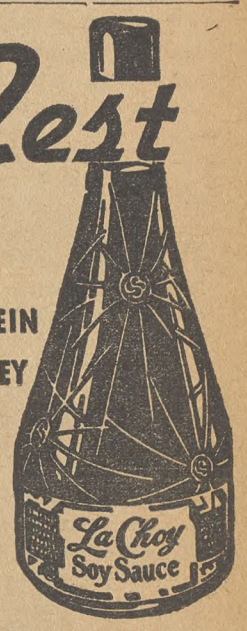
through amendments such as produced by Smith and his two Republican allies on the Committee.



Sen. Wagner, who fathered the Act when it was passed in 1935, analyzed the Virginia reactionary's amendments in detail in his Senate speech, pointing out in the beginning that Smith was one of the original enemies of the Act.

"It is only fair to recall to the public that none of the three members of the Committee who filed the majority proposals assumed leadership in the hard struggle for the original act," he said, "and that the chairman of the Committee strongly opposed it."



Wagner also pointed out that the Smith proposals came while Smith was trying to get another $50,000 to continue his witch-hunt investigation of the Board.

FBI Hit For U. S. Law Violations

FBI Seen Acting Beyond Scope Of U. S. Laws

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation is going beyond limits contemplated by Congress or authorized by Federal law in its current drive against "subversive activities", "sabotage" and "activities detrimental to the internal security of the U. S.", according to analysis of testimony given by its chief, J. Edgar Hoover, at hearings before a Congressional appropriations committee here.

Study of Hoover's testimony shows the FBI spending much of its time and the public money—and planning to spend more — in carrying out "investigations" and other detective work that are not only beyond the scope of its authority, but constitute grave violations of the Constitution of the United States.

These activities, by chief G-Man Hoover's admission, include:

1) Setting up a "General Intelligence Division" in September, 1939, to probe "espionage", violations of neutrality laws, "sabotage", "subversive activities" and "activities detrimental to the internal security of the U. S.—only the first two of which are Federal crimes.

2) Fingerprinting industrial workers and supplying reports on them to their employers, without the knowledge of the workers.

3) Making a general index of supposed "subversive individuals" — arranged alphabetically and geographically.

4) Preparing secret detention calls in FBI offices for "suspects."

5) Inviting reports from employers, bankers, "patriotic societies" and private citizens on activities and opinions of their employes and neighbors.

This illegal work of Mr. Hoover's FBI has been carried on, and is being carried on, in spite of repeated declarations by high U. S. officials in the past and at the present time that the function of the Bureau, as stated by U. S. Attorney General Robt. M. Jackson, is to confine itself to investigation of violations of U. S. laws and collection of evidence for U. S. prosecutions.

As early as 1924 Harlan F. Stone, then Attorney-General, wrote in disbanding the contemporary "General Intelligence Division" recently reestablished by Hoover:

"The Bureau of Investigation is not concerned with political or other opinions of individuals. It is concerned only with their conduct and then only with such conduct as is forbidden by the laws of the U. S. When a police system passes beyond these limits, it is dangerous to the upper administration of justice and to human liberty, which it should be our first concern to cherish."

AND IN 1940

And this week Attorney General Jackson, answering the demand of veteran liberal Senator Norris for an investigation of illegal acts by the FBI in conducting midnight raids on Spanish Republican sympathizers in Detroit, wrote to virtually the same effect:

"The FBI will confine its activities to the investigation of violations of Federal statutes, the collection of evidence in cases in which the U. S. may be a party in interest, and the service of processes issued by the courts."

How far J. Edgar Hoover is prepared to go in setting up a nationwide espionage service against supposed "subversive" elements is shown not only by his own testimony before Congress but by past history of the FBI in the hysteria of the first world war and the period following it.

How sharply such activity—supposedly directed against "spies", "subversive agents" and the like—is really directed at organized labor is clear not only from the World War record of the FBI but from Hoover's own industrial activities, his services to anti-union employers and his general attitude to unionism.

On the "indices" of the "General Intelligence Division," Hoover told Congress:

"The indicies have been arranged not only alphabetically but geographically, so that at any time, should we enter the conflict abroad, we would be able to go into any of the communities and identify individuals or groups who might be a source of grave danger to the security of this country. Their backgrounds and activities are known to the Bureau. These indices will be extremely important and valuable in grave emergency."

AN OLD STORY

In the postwar hysteria of the 1920's, a similar blacklist by the FBI resulted in the Palmer raids in which thousands of innocent aliens, labor leaders, anti-war people, and plain citizens were hauled out of bed to jail, handcuffed, held incommunicado for weeks, deported, and generally harried by agents working under the then Attorney-General Palmer and his aide, J. Edgar Hoover.

Of that period, a distinguished body of educators, ministers and liberal leaders said in protest that the Dept. of Justice had violated the U. S. constitution repeatedly by ". . . cruel and unusual punishments . . . arrests without warrants . . . unreasonable searches and seizures . . . use of provocative agents . . . compelling persons to be witnesses against themselves . . ." and many similar illegal acts.

For the "General Intelligence Division" and other extra-legal activity of the FBI, Hoover asked in his testimony for an appropriation one third as much as that required for the Department's regular work — and the FBI, as recent events have shown, is spending much more time on this angle of its work than on the detection of crime.

On the subject of fingerprinting industrial workers, Hoover said that he was now serving over 500 industrial corporations, that he had called "for conference the officials of the various plants" and was getting "very excellent cooperation" from them.

Hoover was equally frank on the subject of secret detention cells for "suspects," stating in his testimony that the FBI has such cells built into branch offices. "In all of these field divisions we must have detention facilities installed at the expense of the lessor," he said—paralleling the testimony of an earlier FBI chief, Wm. J. Burns of labor-spy agency history, who told of secret detention of "suspects" under his regime in post-first world war days.

ARMY-NAVY COOPERATION

Hoover also told of close cooperation with officials of the U. S. Army and Navy, both in checking on workers in plants supplying the two departments and in general detective work against "subversive" elements. "Almost daily conferences" take place between the three agencies, he testified, and relations were never "as close and cordial" as they are today.

Further Hoover testimony brought out that the FBI head favors fingerprinting of all relief clients, WPA workers, etc., as well as taking prints of workers employed in private industry supplying the U. S. government with defense materials — which would include almost all categories of plants in the nation.

As a final commentary on the work of the FBI in setting up a nationwide check on "subversive" activities, Hoover told Congress in his testimony that he expected a minimum of 78,000 such cases in the coming year — a total nearly three times as great as the number handled by the Bureau in the days of A. Mitchell Palmer and the post-1918 drives.

Transit Union Demands City Protect Jobs

transport lines, the TWU would lost its present closed shop contract and all workers would be transferred to civil service. In addition, Quill charges that no provision would be made for workers who lose their jobs when parts of the 2nd Avenue and 9th Avenue elevated structures are demolished by the city.

Replying to LaGuardia's statement, which he termed "an 11th hour desperate attempt to stymie public protest against LaGuardia's unification-demolition schemes," Quill asserted:

"The Mayor says that all present employes will hold their jobs. This is not true if the Mayor's present plans for demolition are carried out. Twenty-eight hundred men will immediately lose their jobs when the 2nd and 9th Avenue lines are demolished. Two thousand more will lose their jobs when the Brooklyn lines are demolished pursuant to the permission already granted by the Transit Commission."

HITS STATEMENT

The TWU leader blasted the Mayor's efforts to soothe the subway workers with promises that everything's going to be all right.

"In saying that employes are free to join any labor organization they desire, the Mayor gives them absolutely nothing unless he is willing to enter upon genuine collective bargaining with that union in respect to their wages, hours and working conditions," Quill asserted.

U. S. Press Hits Illegal Acts Of 'G-Man' Hoover

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16.—"Mr. Hoover (J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation) is widely believed nowadays to be building up a secret police organization of un-American, anti-American complexion . . . we sympathize with Sen. George Norris, (Ind., Nebr.) when he writes to Atty. Gen. Robert H. Jackson an urgent request to put 'a strong restraining' hand on Hoover's FBI, 'to keep it within bounds'."

In these words the powerful New York Daily News editorially expressed a fear that has been growing in the minds of American citizens in recent months.

The revival of the "General Intelligence Division" of the FBI, the request for $100,000 for "confidential work of unforeseen character," midnight raids, the use of wire-tapping devices, and the card-indexing of individuals — these have created fears which are expressed in such publications as the Baltimore Sun and the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Discussing the correspondence between Sen. Norris and Atty. Gen. Jackson, the Baltimore paper declared:

"The charges against the Federal Bureau of Investigation which Senator Norris made Monday do not involve bribery, speculation, or extortion, but it would be a grave mistake to dismiss them as not serious."

These same fears were expressed in the Inquirer on March 1:

". . . There are definite indications that the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which is the baptismal name of the department whose agents are called G-Men, are being gradually but inexorably extended to plain and fancy spying, snoopery and espionage.

"If the stage is being set for government surveillance and supervision of our daily activities and avocations, with no one knowing where the net will be spread next in an attempt to 'get something' on persons who are not approved by the powers that be; if things like these are forecast by the new and indefensible acts charged, then we may as well recognize that what we are heading into is the wanton rule of a bludgeoning spy system, arrogant and menacing, such as has been developed by the totalitarian governments of Europe."

WIRE TAPPING HIT

Again, on March 13, the Philadelphia paper repeated its demand for Senate inquiry of Hoover's activities. It said:

"Senate inquiry into wire-tapping, dictograph tapping and other abuses of police authority that smack of the Gestapo at its worst, is fully justified. It should be undertaken not only to bring into the open the oppression to which innocent persons have been subjected, but to serve notice that in this country no OGPU methods will be tolerated . . . There must be no OGPU taint on the FBI or any other police agency. They must be forced to keep their activities, as the Committee urges, 'within the bounds of civilized government'."

The FBI was originally set up to track down criminals; how far Hoover has wandered away from this in practice can be seen from a review of recent FBI activities which appeared in The Nation on March 2:

"In September, 1939, the FBI organized a 'General Intelligence Division' and when Hoover appeared before the House Appropriations Committee to ask a supplemental appropriation in November, he described the activities of this division. He said it had 'compiled extensive indices of individuals, groups and organizations engaged in these subversive activities, in espionage activities, or any activities that are possibly detrimental to the internal security of the United States.'

"The detection of espionage is part of the bureau's duty, but what does Hoover mean by 'subversive activities' and 'any activities that are possibly detrimental to the internal security of the United States'? Either category can be as broad as the head of the FBI chooses to make it, and neither is made a subject for inquiry by any federal law.

"What is the purpose of these 'extensive indices'? They have been arranged 'not only alphabetically,' Hoover explained, 'but also geographically, so that at any time, should we enter into the conflict abroad, we would be able to go into any of these communities and identify individuals or groups who might be a source of grave danger to the security of this country. These indexes will be extremely important and valuable in grave emergencies.

WROTE TO BANKS

". . . In September, Hoover testified, he wrote to many persons and organizations, including 'banks, business houses, railroads' asking for their cooperation in the 'general intelligence' work. The definition of 'subversive' held by some bankers, business men and railroad executives is apt to be a broad one, sometimes broad enough to take in the whole of the New Deal from Mr. Roosevelt down."

A card index of "suspects," the creation of an intelligence division wrapped in mystery — in these Hoover exceeded his authority. But that is only half the story—for on March 13 the Associated Press carried an interview with the FBI chieftain in which he tacitly admitted violation of federal laws!

Since 1931, he said, the practice of wire-tapping has been followed by his agency. Attempting to minimize this phase of his work, Hoover was indirectly quoted as saying:

". . . Wire-tapping has been limited to specific cases of such crimes as kidnaping, extortion and 'flagrant' white slavery . . . He said wire taps never had been used for evidence, but only for 'collateral' work in developing leads."

WIN VACATIONS

Detroit — More than 2,200 workers in the cleaning and dyeing industry have won vacations with pay through a new contract won by the Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON.—Neither government nor industry has yet found an effective answer to the shelter needs of the American people.

Far less than half the number of houses needed to keep abreast of current demand are being erected. And those houses that are going up ar not intended for the overwhelming number of Americans of low income.

Industry is building houses for the upper third while government nibbles at the slum-clearing problem. The average worker is in a no-man's land between high-cost private housing and subsidized government projects.

It is evident at this late stage of the New Deal that it is futile to expect dynamic leadership from Washington on this vital subject. It is equally a waste of time to expect the so-called home-building industry to do this job.

The existing agencies, both governmental and industrial, are too tied in with vested interests, old patterns of behavior, and inertia, to provide America with the homes it needs.

Right at this point is where labor enters the door. For by now it has been demonstrated that if a constructive solution of the nation's housing problem is to be found, then it is up to labor to find it.

WHAT CAN LABOR DO?

Answers to the housing question are as numerous as economists in the New Deal. And, it may be added, just as far apart.

There is one basic principle, however, on which all agree and which labor, and labor alone, can make effective. It is simply this: That the answer to housing will be found through COLLECTIVE action.

Collective action is what workers do when they bargain through their unions for better wages and working conditions. It is simply the process of a large number of workers acting together. Here again is proof of the maxim "Divided we Fall, United we Stand."

Everyone agrees that houses cost too much. It is also an oft-repeated fact that the home-building industry is set up as a handicraft, luxury trade. So long as houses are built in single units, or small blocks, built one by one for individual buyers, this situation will remain. It is just as though each suit, or small group of suits, were tailor-made.

A JOB FOR LABOR

This is a job for labor—for the CIO—because labor is hardest hit by the current housing mess and because labor knows how to work together. It has the customers for low-cost housing and it is organized for collective action on this front as well as in collective bargaining.

The mass market of organized labor offers an ideal chance to get mass production of housing.

If 1,000 union members decide together that they must have better homes, either for rental or purchase, it means that some builder is going to have the chance of his life to get housing going again. By building in large quantities the savings of mass production are possible.

Large tracts of land can be bought for less than lots, materials can be obtained by the carload at sharp reductions, construction can be planned without waste motion, and financing terms are simpler on large scale operations.

A FIRST STEP

One of the first steps toward making a reality of such a program would be to determine what are the housing needs of workers.

Simple questionnaires circulated among the membership of various unions should quickly obtain the answers. Such facts are needed as these: What are the incomes of union members; what do they pay in rent now; what is the size of their families; how many can put up a small down payment; what type of housing do they wish?

Armed with this and any other pertinent information labor can knock on the door of government and industry and demand action.

Unions Urge Owens, Ohio CIO President, To Run for Governor

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16.—Unions throughout Ohio are urging Pres. John Owens of the state's Industrial Union Council seek nomination for governor of the state.

The move, started by the Transport Workers local in Akron, has been endorsed by a number of city CIO bodies, including the powerful Cleveland Industrial Union Council.

Last week the Cleveland group urged Labor's Non-Partisan League to explore the "possibility of independent labor political action," and urged Owens to "give full consideration to requests . . . that he become a candidate for governor of Ohio."

The CIO leader is a well-known and influential figure throughout the state. In addition to heading the state CIO council, he is also Ohio chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League and district president of the United Mine Workers.

LABOR IGNORED

The Akron Transport Workers' resolution said in part:

"It is apparent today that Bricker and Davey will probably be the candidates offered by the Republican and Democratic parties, neither of whom can provide a government friendly to labor. Such a condition offers the voters the difference only between Tweedle-dee and Tweedle-dum.

"Through his efforts to expose the deplorable conditions revolving around the unemployment compensation discrepancies in the state, and his fight for old age pensions, plus his long years of service on behalf of labor, John Owens has endeared himself to both the farmers and workers of Ohio.

"We urge that Mr. Owens give serious consideration to becoming a candidate on an 'Independent People's Ticket' in the race for governor this coming fall."

Your Money Can Buy The Union Label

What sort of labor conditions are you buying with your clothing dollars? Cheap, shoddy, sweatshop labor—or the best in labor conditions which honest unionism has brought about in this industry? And what is the quality of the garment you are buying?

You do not need to be guessing or speculating about labor conditions and workmanship which went into the suit, overcoat, or shirt which you are buying. Take the word of the people in the factories who made the garments.

These people, all skilled workers, are members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, a union 250,000 strong. Their union label on a garment is their stamp of approval and testimony that the garment was made under good labor conditions. The Amalgamated label is your guarantee that the garment is of best workmanship.

YOU HELP WORKERS

When you ask for the Amalgamated union label on all men's garments, you are helping the workers and the union to rid the industry of the sweatshop; you are supporting the fair, progressive American employer who adheres to fair American industrial labor practice.

It costs you no more to buy clothes bearing the Amalgamated union label. Demand the label and get your money's worth.

YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO ASK:

1. Is it cheap or costly clothes that bear the union label?

2. What men's garments carry the Amalgamated label?

Suits, topcoats and overcoats; uniforms, trousers, slacks and riding breeches; leather, sheeplined and suede jackets; mackinaws, lumberjackets and heavy sports outerwear; boys' wash and novelty suits, snow suits, legging sets, sport clothing and three-piece suits; work clothing; washable service apparel; office and waiters' coats; shirts, pajamas and underwear; neckwear, mufflers and gloves.

3. Will it be difficult for me to find union made men's colthes?

No—because about ninety-five per cent of the men's clothing industry is organized and operates under Amalgamated union agreements.

4. Does the union label help organized labor?

Yes—by giving the support of the buying public to those manufacturers who recognize organized labor.

5. Does the union label help the consumer?

Yes—by supporting fair union wages, it increases purchasing power and builds better prosperity for all.

BACK CIO PLAN

Los Angeles, Cal., Mar. 16—To aid the building program started by the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee to provide CIO-built homes at a minimum cost, the CIO Industrial Union Council here passed a resolution urging all CIO union members planning to build or repair homes to see that the work is done by CIO construction union members.

10,000 Join Electrical Union

New York, Mar. 16. — Approximately 10,000 new members paid initiation fees to the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in the three months ended Feb. 1, Organization Director James Matles reported to the union's general executive board today.

The board indorsed the CIO's 1940 legislative program, and heard reports of progressing in attaining union goals from Pres. James B. Carey and Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak. Despite the fact that the quarter was not the union's peak period, contracts, new and renewed, were signed for 8,920 workers, the board was told.

CIO Broadening Out Activities In California, Bridges Says

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16.—The CIO in California has withstood all the heavy artillery the bosses and the AFL have brought up against them in the past three years—and that's been plenty—and now is beginning to move inland to organize the vast number of workers back from the coastline, Harry Bridges, California CIO leader, told THE CIO NEWS in an interview here.

"We're broadening CIO organization in every field," Bridges said, "in rural areas, in the small cities, in the valleys back from the waterfront. This is the majob job the CIO in California has on its hands today, both for expansion and for self-defense.

"The California employers have a slogan that says the waterfront is their frontier, that they intend to keep the CIO there until they can isolate us from the rest of the workers and then chop us down at their leisure. We know better, and our campaign to organize back from the waterfront is showing us already that we can make the whole state CIO."

OFFER PEACE PLAN

This bosses' war-cry is an additional reason why the CIO waterfront workers in San Francisco offered their five year peace plan recently, Bridges said. For three years the waterfront employers have tried every union-busting trick in the repertoire, and within the past few months have carried provocative tactics to new extremes all the time talking "industrial peace."

"They talk piously about labor peace," Bridges said "but in recent weeks they've refused to allow mediation, refused to arbitrate, refused to make concessions of any kind, tried to provoke strikes every time they saw a chance. Not only that, but they go into the inland country trying to stir up anti-labor scares among the farmers and the rural workers, all on the grounds that the CIO is only out to make war on industry."

The CIO is going into the rural areas with its own message, Bridges said, telling about recent highly successful meetings that have been held in farming centers where CIO speakers have told the people the truth about organized labor.

The response has been good, Bridges explained, pointing out that farmers and small growers were listening eagerly to CIO exposes on the role of the Associated Farmers, the Manufacturers' Assn. and other anti-labor big business groups.

KICKED INTO LINE

Small growers are getting tired of being "kicked into line" against labor by the Associated, Bridges said, whose control of packing, shipping and distribution of fruit and vegetable products has given them an iron hand on the small farmer. They are rebelling against this monopoly dictatorship, and as the rebellion spreads, the CIO is coming in to add its educational work to the force of economic facts.

Union Wins $100, Job For Worker

Cleveland, Mar. 16. — Howard Archer, a member of the Atlantic Foundry Lodge of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, is $100 richer today because he insisted on respect for his rights.

Archer had been promised an increase in pay, and when he considered that enough time had elapsed, he began pressing his foreman. Still he did not get the increase, and finally he insisted so strongly that bitter words passed between him and the foreman. As a result, the foreman fired him.

William Donovan, SWOC district director, and Wilmer Tate, Akron CIO official, took up Archer's case, asking the company to reinstate him and give him back pay. When the two union leaders suggested taking the case to arbitration, the company gave in and ordered the $100 back pay award.

Steel Workers Negotiate For Pay Raise

Sydney, N. S., Mar. 16.—Negotiations for a basic wage increase of seven cents an hour and improved working conditions for Dominion Steel and Coal Company's 3,000 employes, members of Lodge 1064, SWOC, will start at Sydney this week.

Union demands were again given to the company several weeks ago. The company's annual report, just issued, shows net profit of $1,332,599 against $1,239,177 in 1938. This was after $1,212,769 was listed as depreciation.

ORDER HALT TO REIGN OF TERROR

NLRB Cracks Down On Goodyear's Alabama Violence

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Mar. 16.—Evidence that a tardy and too mild-handed justice is again trying to block the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company's career of violence and terrorism in Gadsden, Alabama, was revealed this week in an announcement by the National Labor Relations Board that a final decision had been directed against this bitter union-hating concern.

A complaint was first issued against the company more than two and a half years ago on charges filed by the United Rubber Workers, CIO. The charges grew out of a brutal campaign conducted by Goodyear in Gadsden in the summer of 1936, during which meetings were broken up, unionists slugged, and Sherman Dalrymple, president of the URW, was beaten by company gangsters and driven out of town.

THREE-POINT ORDER

In its decision issued this week, the NLRB ordered the company to:

1. Withdraw all recognition from the company dominated group, the Etowah Rubber Workers Organization, as collective bargaining agency for its employes.

2. Prohibit its "flying squadron", made up of husky men chosen from employes and recent college graduates, from interfering with or participating in union activities.

3. Offer to reinstate with back pay 13 employes fired for union activity; reimburse 14 others for any loss of pay suffered during the period in 1936 when they were discriminatorily out of work; and place three others on the waiting list for jobs in order of seniority.

Hearings held by the Board in Gadsden from August 19 to December 1, 1937, and also in Birmingham, Ala., and Atlanta, Ga., revealed that shortly after the United Rubber Workers began organizing Goodyear employes in June 1933, the company formed a company union called the Joint Conference Plan to oppose the URW.

After the Labor Act was declared constitutional, this plan was revamped to form the Etowah Rubber Workers Organization.

Acts of violence against the union were provoked constantly. An open meeting held by the URW on June 6,1936, at which URW President Dalrymple was scheduled to speak, was broken up by company inspired agents who hurled eggs, vegetables and made a mass attack on the speaker's stand, while two policemen stood by refusing to intervene.

DALRYMPLE BEATEN UP

After the meeting when Dalrymple and his wife were on the way back to the hotel under police escort, the URW President was seized and beaten by a mob, who ordered him to get his baggage and leave town. Supervisory employes of the company and members of the "flying squadron" were leaders of the mob.

Two days later, three members of the URW were beaten while they were at work in the plant and thrown off company property along with four other workers, by members of the same mob that took part in breaking up the June 6th meeting.

Safety A La Mode

WHILE EUROPE adopts gas masks for protection against air raids, America works to improve conditions at home. At a regional safety meeting in Philadelphia, Miss Nina Moore of Harrisburg, Pa., displays the latest styles in industrial safety apparatus — a new-type mask, a steel helmet, an ironworker's shoe and an improved safety belt.

End Strike, Disappoint Labor Foes

Rock Island, Ill., Mar. 16.— Acting suddenly to smash the company's strategy of breaking the strike while pretending to negotiate with the Labor Board about holding an election, 300 strikers of the J. I. Case plant here stole a march on the company and returned to work in a body, an American flag flying at the head of their unbroken ranks.

The Case strikers who belong to the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, went back to await the Labor Board's order for an election, better organized than when they went on strike.

During the three weeks the strike lasted, only a few workers entered the plant in spite of a campaign of terror and intimidation conducted by the local police.

FIRM TRIED TO STALL

Union officials explain that the company's strategy, which was defeated by the sudden return of the strikers, consisted in pretending to negotiate with the Labor Board, while stalling on one pretext after another in the hope that meanwhile the strikers would be starved out and return with their union smashed.

The executive board of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers will hold its next meeting here, March 31, in tribute to the Case strikers.

Plans will be made at the meeting for an intensive drive in the Tri-Cities area comprising Rock Island, Moline and East Moline, where more than 25,000 farm equipment workers are employed in the plants of Case, International Harvester and Deere & So.

Full CIO Aid To Fur Union Pledged

New York, Mar. 16.—The whole force of the CIO is behind the Fur Workers Union in their struggle against Justice Department attempts to send union leaders to jail on a six-and-a-half year old "anti-trust" indictment, Allan S. Haywood, CIO organization director, told a mass meeting of 6,000 CIO members and friends here.

"I pledge to you tonight that we will put every force at our command in the fight to maintain clean, progressive unions in America," Haywood said. "This is the fight of the CIO, not just of the Fur Workers. The CIO pledges everything at its command to help.

DOES NOT APPLY

"The Sherman anti-trust Act was never intended to be applied as it is applied in this case," Haywood added. "You will have the backing of every clean person in America. You are going to win this fight. Let no one divide you. Stand up. The CIO will go with you solidly united forever."

Nova Scotia Mine Leader Is Mayor for 9th Time

GLACE BAY, N. S., Mar. 16. — Organized workers who advocate their union leaders seek government office may well point to the record of D. W. Morrison, president of District 26, United Mine Workers of America.

Morrison has just been elected Mayor of Glace Bay for the ninth two-year term and on March 6th began his 17th year in office. Glace Bay has a population of 25,000 citizens.

The UMW district chief has upheld labor ideals and programs during all his years in office to the great benefit of the workers. He compiled a total vote of 3,185 in the March election, 69 more than his closest opponent, Charles McVicar with 3,116. Robert McAulay, another mayoralty candidate, polled 1,278.

Although the most prominent, Morrison is not the only UMW leader in public life. Douglas MacDonald, New Waterford, Sub-District Board Member, represents Cape Breton Centre in the Nova Scotia legislature having been elected on a combined UMW-Co-operative Commonwealth Federation ticket.

And the mine workers in the district are pulling hard for two other UMW men to win seats in the Canadian parliament in the federal election scheduled for March 26.

NINTH TERM as mayor of Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, was won by D. W. Morrison, above, district president of the United Mine Workers. He's been chief executive of the city of 25,000 people since 1923.

AFL Union Admits Craft Raids Persist

Washington, Mar. 16.—Inability of the American Federation of Labor to enforce its decisions in jurisdictional disputes may result in a jungle warfare between certain conflicting AFL unions, says an article in the March issue of the Machinists' Journal, official organ of the Intl. Association of Machinists.

"Expansion of their original jurisdiction by many of the numerically strong organizations, without any regard for charter rights of other AFL affiliates, has reached a stage where the 'law of the jungle' instead of reason and logic rules."

League, CIO Endorse Sen. Guffey

Pittsburgh, Mar. 16.—Sen. Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania today had won the endorsement of the state Labor's Non-Partisan League in his campaign for re-election.

Announcement of the league's decision to back the liberal Democrat was announced here by Pres. Patrick Fagan, who also heads District 5 of the United Mine Workers.

"A man in public life is known by the record he makes," Fagan said. "Senator Guffey has been wholeheartedly in his advocacy of that long list of constructive measures which not only saved business from collapse under the old deal, but placed it on a safe foundation, extended a helping hand to the farmers and rescued millions of unemployed with jobs.

Maryland Handbill Law Gets Paddling by Court

CUMBERLAND, Md., Mar. 16. — Labor unions throughout the state of Maryland today hailed a court ruling that the Cumberland Handbill Ordinance, requiring a permit and fee for the distribution of leaflets, violates the 14th Amendment to the Constitution and the Maryland Declaration of Rights.

The ruling was won by John Geise, member of the United Rubber Workers, who was arrested at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. plant here as he distributed union handbills.

John T. Jones, head of the Maryland-D. C. Industrial Union Council, said that "it is indeed a sad commentary that an organization like the United Rubber Workers had to use its funds to right a wrong that the mayor and the city commissioners and the city solicitor did not have the courage or the fortrightness or the American conscience to correct.

"I wish to direct the attention of these officials to the anti-picketing ordinance, which is an even more flagrant violation of civil liberties than the handbill ordinance. I wish to suggest that this evil be corrected and the house of the city government be put in order to conform with the laws of the land which the mayor and the city commissioner have taken an oath to respect."

CIO PUSHES BIG CAMPAIGNS FOR AUTO, UTILITY POLLS

Confer On Transit Union Problems

AFTER 18 MONTHS Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York agreed to confer with CIO officials on the union's status under proposed unification and municipal operation of subway lines. Shown at City Hall conference are: (seated, left to right) CIO Pres. Lewis, Mayor LaGuardia and John Delaney of the Board of Transportation. Standing, CIO Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman and Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union

Associated Press Ends Seven-Year Struggle, To Sign Guild Contract

NEW YORK, Mar. 23. — The American Newspaper Guild here secured its first contract with the Associated Press, major newspaper wire service, when AP and Guild representatives initialled an agreement which is subject to AP unit and Guild executive approval.

The agreement culminated seven years of organizing effort by AP workers, which began back in 1933 and led to the famous Supreme Court decision which upheld the Wagner Labor Relations Act in ordering reinstatement of Morris Watson, Guild vice-president fired for union activity.

The agreement secures the five day, 40 hour week, ups severance pay to 24 weeks maximum, increases vacations, and secures guaranteed minimum wage scales for all AP workers. It follows closely a similar agreement won earlier from United Press, AP's competitor, and is expected to spur organizing all over the nationwide AP network by Guild leaders here

The story of Guild dealings with AP is one of long struggle, with the CIO union forced to go to the Labor Board no less than five times due to management's reluctance to bargain. First attempts to win a contract began in 1933, when the newly born Guild's request was summarily refused.

Rubber Union Gets $20,000 Increases

Boston, Mar. 23 — Annual increases of more than $20,000 for 900 employes of the Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Co. have been won by the United Rubber Workers, CIO, Int'l Rep. Salvatore Camelio announced today.

The contract making the union sole bargaining agent, was signed by Pres. John Canavan of URW Local 25 and James Patterson, assistant factory manager for the company.

For the first time the firm agreed to a war service clause which assures employes who serve in the country's armed forces in wartime that their seniority will accumulate during war service.

Minimum wages were lifted by the agreement from 45c to 50c an hour for men, and from 35c to 37c for women workers, with one-week vacations for workers of less than five years' standing, and two weeks for those employed over that time.

Employes will receive time and a half for overtime and double time for work on holidays.

BETTER CONDITIONS

Long Beach, Calif.—(FP)—A new agreement providing better working conditions and improved arbitration machinery has been signed between the Oil Workers Intl. Union, CIO, and the Shell Oil Co.

CIO Sweeps Textile Poll In Maine

Biddeford, Me., Mar. 23.— Following the "swing to the CIO" in Labor Board elections throughout the country, workers at the big local plant of the Pepperell Manufacturing Co. today had voted by an almost 3-1 majority for the Textile Workers Union of America.

With less than 100 of the plant's 2,113 eligible employes failing to vote, the CIO union polled 1,418 votes, while only 582 voted for no union.

The Pepperell plant is the main industry in this town, located 16 miles from Portland, the state's largest city.

Consumer Power Poll Postponed

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23— Big pre-election campaigns by the CIO moved into the home stretch today as the zero hour approached for two big National Labor Relations Board polls involving 150,000 workers in the automobile and electric power industries.

A third scheduled vote, at the Consumers Power Co. in Michigan, which had been set for March 25, was halted by a last-minute injunction obtained by an AFL union fearful of a CIO victory.

The other two elections—at Consolidated Edison in New York on April 4 & 5, and at General Motors on April 17, are expected to produce huge majorities for the CIO unions involved.

Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, who has been directing the Consumer Power campaign, described the injunction as a "temporary delay, and only postpones the CIO landslide victory that would have taken place next week."

Largest election in NLRB history is slated for April 17, when 125,000 General Motors workers in eleven states will name their bargaining agents. Leaders of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, predicted the CIO would sweep the three-score plant elections.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization who is personally directing the campaign at Consolidated-Edison, declared the AFL's withdrawal from the ballot will clarify issues and make certain CIO victories among both clerical and production workers.

Steel Union Wins Fight At Bethlehem Plant

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Mar. 23. — The first strike ever won against gigantic Bethlehem Steel was chalked up before the world this week by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee here.

The strike started when the company, which dominates the little town, fired the SWOC local president. Overnight 1,100 of the 1,200 workers "hit the bricks."

Five days later, after a Federal labor conciliator had met with both sides, the SWOC won reinstatement for the fired worker, oral recognition for the union, establishment of proper union grievance machinery with a promise that the company will answer all grievances within three days, and maintenance of all seniority rights as they existed when the strike was called.

Bata Shoe Co. Faces New Wage-Hour Case

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23. — The federal Wage-Hour Division today took action to compel the Bata Shoe Co., with headquarters in Ziln, Germany, to abide by the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Following a complaint by the CIO United Shoe Workers that the company was openly flouting the law in its new plant at Belcamp, Md., U. S. inspectors looked into practices there. As a result, the case is now in the hands of Dept. of Justice lawyers.

The CIO union charged that the company's Maryland employes—recruited from nearby small town high schools, herded into European style dormitories on company property and paid sub-standard wages—were being short-changed through profit-making deductions from their pay envelopes.

WAGE SLAVERY

Under the Bata wage slavery system, the company houses, feeds and clothes its employes, checking off the charges for the services. Investigation proved that the deductions left the workers with as little as $5 and $8 a week in cash, with the corporation making money on the services for which it charged.

Failure to pay its employes for overtime was also charged to the firm in the USWA complaint.

Meanwhile Bata's attempt to import foreign workers to take away jobs from American workers moved into the courts, where the company filed a plea for an injunction against the U. S. Dept. of Labor's Immigration Service.

IMPORTED WORKERS

The government had ruled that all but 25 Czech "specialists" were nothing more than shoe production workers, and that they had been illegally brought into the country in violation of the immigration laws. Pending outcome of its injunction suit, in which it attempts to keep all the imported workers at its Belcamp plant, the company has placed the men back at work, it was learned here.

Interesting sidelight on Bata's efforts to enjoy American profits while flouting American labor laws, is the keen interest of Sen. Millard Tydings, Maryland tory Democrat, in the company's affairs. Tydings, a foe of all progressive legislation, has pleaded the company's case both on and off the floor of the Senate.

A key to how Bata's "community system" works in practice was shown last week in revelation that prospective employes are asked some 600 questions, many of them obviously aimed at weeding out those who may become "uncooperative" to the point of joining a union.

Foes of Labor Pay and Pay

CASHIERS CHECK

THE SMITH COMMITTEE shudders at pictures like these, showing union members receiving back pay awards from firms that have violated the Wagner Act. Top scene shows eight members of the CIO Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union holding checks of from $100 to $2,500, paid by Montgomery Ward under Labor Board and court orders. Check below is the second installment paid to members of the United Automobile Workers by the National Motor Bearings Co. of Oakland, Calif., for Wagner Act violations. But Smith Committee, anxious to destroy the Act, would limit such payments to a maximum of only six months' wages.

Reach Accord In Inter-Union Dispute

New York, Mar. 23 — A jurisdictional dispute of many months involving the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the International Ladies Garment Workers Union has been amicably settled, it was announced by Sidney Hillman and David Dubinsky, presidents of the two organizations.

Cause of the dispute, which led the ILGWU to picket the clothing workers' national office, was the manufacture of bathrobes in a New York plant in which the workers were claimed by both unions.

Both presidents agreed to respect the jurisdictions conceded to their respective organization.

"In view of the existing situation," the statement said, "it was agreed that disputes now pending as well as any disputes that may arise in the future between the two organizations involving overlapping jurisdiction shall be taken up and settled between Mr. Dubinsky and Mr. Hillman.

Ask Defeat of Amendments

Boston, Mar. 23. — Pres. Roosevelt was asked today by the Massachusetts CIO Council's Executive Board to express publicly his opposition to amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

A resolution passed by the board denounced the Smith Committee amendments, and praised Rep. Arthur Healey of Massachusetts and Rep. Murdock of Utah for their opposition to Smith's efforts to make the NLRB ar. 'instrument to stab labor in the back."

Furniture Union Shows Big Gains; Chicago Local Quits AFL for CIO

By VIC LEVITT

NEW YORK, March 23.—A thousand members have been added to the rolls of the CIO United Furniture Workers of America by the switching of the big Chicago local of the AFL Upholsterers Intl. Union to the CIO. Local 18B went over to the UFWA after a long and trying history of betrayals by the AFL union's leadership, and defeats in the shops, due largely to failure of their International to support their demands and actions.

The local has merged with the original UFWA Chicago local, which was No. 708, composed of 800 workers in furniture and bedding shops. Since the amalgamation and the consequent consolidation of labor in the industries under UFWA jurisdiction, numerous workers have joined the union who formerly were reluctant to affiliate with any union.

AFL DISCREDITED

The Chicago victory of the UFWA was attended by considerable skullduggery by the AFL leaders, notably one Al Rota, agent of Pres. Sal B. Hoffmann of the AFL union. Rota is now thoroughly discredited in the furniture industry around Chicago, just as he has been for some time in Indiana and elsewhere.

UFWA is now involved in several important strikes. In Gardner, Mass., the newly organized O. W. Seibert Co. employes, who make baby carriages, have been on strike for two weeks because the company refused to bargain. An NLRB election has been ordered to convince the company that the force of 200, which is nearly 100% in the UFWA and on strike and picketing, really wants UFWA Local 154 to represent it.

INDIANA STRIKE

At Bloomington and Bloomfield, Ind., the employes of Showers Bros. Co., where a UFWA closed shop contract had been in effect, have struck for a new and better contract which the employer refused to grant at expiration time. Locals 243 and 496 are involved, and Chairman Joseph D. Persily of UFWA Dist. 6 (Indiana) is in charge of activities.

In Brooklyn, N. Y. Local 45B has voted strike action at Artex-Green Table Pad Co., which has just been organized. The firm pays $12 wages, has fired a dozen workers on the pretense of a layoff, and has refused to negotiate. A case has been filed with the Regional Labor Board.

Local 45B has just renewed its closed-shop contract with six employers composing the Venetian Blind Mfrs. Assn. of New York winning wage increases, two additional holidays with pay, and three-day paid annual vacations.

WIN INCREASES

Raises of $2 to $8 a week were won by a short strike of Local 101 recently at the Krakauer Piano plant in New York. Local 45B won a long strike at Arnel Mfg. Co., New York, and got its members there wage increases which will amount to $5,000 for the year, besides paid vacations equivalent to some $1,000 more.

In Rockford, Ill., Local 707 has just established a credit union among its 2,500 members. It is the first such group in UFWA, and will lend money to its members. The credit union is under Illinois State supervision.

Hail Ruling Of High Court On NLRB

New York, Mar. 23 — Officials of the Textile Workers Union of America issued a statement at the headquarters of the New York Joint Board hailing as a victory the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court upholding the enforcement of an order of the National Labor Relations Board against the American Manufacturing Co.

The decision gives the green light for the workers to collect about $60,000 in back wages, according to Jack Rubinstein, general manager of the Joint Board, and for the reinstatement of employes fired for union activity.

The American Manufacturing Co., located in Brooklyn, is engaged primarily in rope manufacture and is one of the largest in its field in the world, employing some 1,100 workers.

The case grew out of a strike in the Nu-Art division of the company involving about 300 workers engaged in making automobile seat covers. The Supreme Court decision which affects 52 workers directly, will act to stimulate greatly the unionization of the rope industry, the Joint Board declared.

Unionists Call On Congressmen

Washington, March 23—Twenty union workers representing every important organization in Connecticut spent a day here this week calling on their Senators and Congressmen to let them know how workers feel about the Wagner Act and other important labor legislation now at issue in Congress. The delegation, led by Calvin Sutherlin, came down from the Connecticut Labor's Non-Partison League for the visit.

Not all of the solons visited were equally responsive to labor's needs, Sutherlin revealed, and the Hon. B. J. Monkiewicz, Congressman at large, was particularly recalcitrant. The two Senators, Danaher and Maloney, were also somewhat indifferent, Sutherlin said, though Danaher seemed open to reason on the Wagner Act.

"Connecticut is a highly industrialized state where the vast majority of the population is benefitted by the Labor Relations Act, the Wages and Hours Act, and the Housing Act," Sutherlin said.

"It is up to the workers now, through Labor's Non-Partisan League, to organize themselves so effectively that men friendly to labor will be elected."

Win Contract At Sugar Firm

Houston, Tex. — A contract with the Imperial Sugar Co., Sugarland, Tex., was announced this week by the United Sugar Refinery Workers, CIO local industrial union.

It provides wage increases, paid vacations and check-off of union dues, and is effective for two years.

Lewis, Transit Leaders Confer With LaGuardia

NEW YORK, Mar. 23.—Led by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, officials of the Transport Workers Union held their first conference in 18 months with Mayor LaGuardia and discussed the future of the union under city unification and ownership plans for subway lines at present operated by private companies.

Further conferences were scheduled during the week, leading up to another meeting between the mayor and the CIO president on March 27.

Following the first meeting, which came after TWU leaders had assailed the mayor for his refusal to discuss the issues, Pres. Lewis issued this statement:

"I may say that there has been a very fair analysis of the entire problem here today and I think that there has been some clarification of points of misunderstanding. We are hopeful that as a result a satisfactory solution will be had after this examination by the legal representatives and following a further conference which the mayor has announced."

DELEGATION

Accompanying Lewis to the conference were CIO Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman, Pres. Michael Quill and other officials of the TWU, CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman and Pres. Gustave Strebel of the New York State Industrial Union Council.

Unification of the city's subway lines under municipal ownership is scheduled during the next few months. The TWU insists that the closed shop and other gains wrested from the private companies be retained when the city takes over the lines. In addition, it is seeking new jobs at equal pay for 4,800 transit workers now employed on three elevated lines which soon may be demolished.

UNION'S POSITION

"Organized labor is firm in its conviction and demand that the contracts held by the TWU which do not expire until June 30, 1941, must be assumed and their terms observed by the City, the same as the city has undertaken performance of contractual obligations of the IRT and BMT companies," Quill stated in a leaflet issued to union members after the Citl Hall conferences.

During recent weeks a series of mass meetings under TWU auspices have voted to authorize a strike if the mayor refuses to meet the union demands.

Three Pennsylvania Contractors Sign CIO Construction Pacts

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23.—An important advance of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee in the heavy construction field was announced this week by Chairman A. D. Lewis.

Contracts were signed between the UCWOC and three Pennsylvania contractors who do extensive work on highways, bridges, tunnels and similar types of heavy construction. Many other heavy contractors in Pennsylvania have indicated an intention to sign with the UCWOC.

Signatories to the contract are James J. Skelly Co., Media; Dalton Brothers, Inc., Paoli; and Edward R. Sibole, Jr., Morton. For the UCWOC the contracts were signed by Chairman Lewis, Comptroller Gardner H. Wales, and General Organizer Paul M. Nothern. Mr. Skelly is President of the Associated Pennsylvania Constructors.

One of those who played a major role in negotiating this important contract is A. E. O'Brien, secretary of Associated Pennsylvania Constructors, an organization of several hundred heavy contractors. Wales and Nothern handled the UCWOC end of negotiations.

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

The contract which embodies the industrial union principles of all UCWOC contracts also contains the checkoff and the closed shop. It calls on the UCWOC to furnish men but allows the contractor to hire outside providing new workers join the union. Free selection is reserved for contractors to choose workers and for workers to choose contractors whom they desire.

Conditions include the eight-hour day and the 40-hour week with seven holidays in a year and time and a half for overtime, double-time for holiday work. Parties to the contract are the UCWOC national office and the three contractors. Provision is made for the comfort and safety of the men. The contract includes arbitration machinery to settle disputes without stoppage of work. Material may be bought from any source.

Date Set For GM Poll; CIO Union Ready

To Cut 700,000 From WPA Rolls

Some 700,000 people throughout the country will be purged from WPA employment, it was estimated, in order that the agency may stay within the bounds of the scanty $1,477,000,000 appropriation passed at the last session of Congress.

With WPA jobs numbering 2,323,000 on March 6, the cut will lop over 200,000 people off the rolls during the month of April. May and June will witness further cuts of 250,000 a month.

Labor Act Changes Hit Snag

Auto Union Prepares For Election April 17

DETROIT, Mar. 23.—The Labor Board election at General Motors, largest in American history, will be held on April 17, Frank Bowen, NLRB regional director, announced today.

Some 125,000 workers employed in 59 plants in 11 states will go to the polls to name their collective bargaining agencies. Voting will be done within the plants and during working hours, Bowen said in making public the election plans.

The states in which GM elections are scheduled include: Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, New York, Indiana, Missouri, Georgia, Maryland, Connecticut, California and New Jersey.

A huge campaign to assure a decisive majority for the United Automobile Workers, CIO, is in full swing. To aid the drive CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will speak in Detroit on Apr. 6 and Flint, Mich., on April 7.

Union at Peak Strength

By EDWARD LEVINSON

DETROIT, Mar. 23.—Facing the approaching NLRB election among more than 125,000 General Motors employes, the UAW-CIO is hitting a stride that it has not known in two years.

President R. J. Thomas announces that a partial tabulation shows the CIO auto workers union has contracts with more than 250 companies, covering more than 350 plants.

Whereas, two years ago all contracts gave the union recognition for its members, today 43 provide for the closed shop, 20 for the union shop and all the others for exclusive recognition.

Secretary-Treasurer George F. Addes reports that dues paying membership in February of this year has hit the highest point since February of 1938.

Surveying the 58 GM plants in which the elections will take place, Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's GM department, predicts that the AFL will not carry a single plant.

AFL 'INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM'

From the camp of the so-called UAW-AFL come a series of protestations that it, too, is an industrial union. At the same time, the AFL patternmakers' and machinists' unions insist on getting on the ballots in 10 GM plants, while the metal polishers and electricians, also AFL crafts, are clamoring for places on the ballots in three other plants.

Replying to an innocent inquiry, President W. W. Britton of the AFL metal polishers writes in a "confidential" letter that anybody who thinks the crafts have given up in GM are "just foolish, that's all."

A popular pastime in auto centers is to find out who is the head of the AFL. Auto workers long ago have given up trying to find some rank and file to the thing.

As for the "leadership," Homer Martin, president, and his secretary and vice-president have signed over all the authority of their offices to one George L. Googe, Atlanta printing pressman who has had the unhappy job of "administering" the UAW - AFL wished up on him.

COMFORT FROM GERALD

Googe's main job thus far has been to restrain or at least conceal, the appetites of the AFL crafts long enough to give the UAW-AFL a chance to win one or two of the GM plants. To date, he has been snubbed by at least six craft unions.

Pending promises of a "personal appearance" by William Green, campaigning for the AFL is being carried on by Gerald L. K. Smith, only member of the Huey Long Louisiana gang still outside of jail. Smith also campaigned for the AFL in the Motor Products, Briggs, Packard and Chrysler elections —all of which went, roughly,

Court Delays Consumer Power Poll

Detroit, Mar. 23. — Postponement of the NLRB poll at Consumers Power Co. by a federal court injunction, causes only a "temporary delay and only postpones the CIO landslide victory that would have taken place next week," Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to CIO Pres. Lewis, declared today.

"It will not deter the CIO or Utility Workers Organizing Committee from using every legal means to remove all obstacles and permit as quickly as possible the opportunity for Consumers Power employes to exercise their free vote guaranteed by law," Smet-

AFL Withdraws From Ballot In Con-Edison Election

New York, Mar. 23. — The AFL's company union at Consolidated Edison in a surprise move today withdrew its name from the ballot in the coming Labor Board election, apparently fearful of a bad defeat at the hands of the CIO.

Decision of the AFL affiliate, the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, was announced by Mrs. Elinore Herrick, regional director for the National Labor Relations Board. Some 32,000 employes are expected to vote in the polls, scheduled for April 4 and 5.

HAYWOOD STATEMENT

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization and chairman of the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee, declared that the IBEW's action substantiated previous charges that the company's agreement with the AFL was made "without the consent of the employes involved.

"We would have welcomed an opportunity to match the AFL in an election so that we could have demonstrated in true American fashion the honest wishes of the vast majority of the employes," Haywood emphasized.

"The CIO will, of course, be strengthened by the run-out of the IBEW.

"We are most confident that we will have the overwhelming majority of the employes in the election in April.

LESSON TO WORKERS

"The run-out should further prove to the employes of the Consolidated Edison that company-dominated unions will not serve their interests but are set up wholly for the purpose of deceiving them or benefitting the company, or both."

OPTIMISTIC

Optimism about the election results was evident in the latest issue of the "Utility Post", publication of the Amalgamated Utility Workers, CIO local at Con-Ed.

"We have a strong, determined membership in every point on the system from Coney Island to Peekskill," the paper said. "There was a time when being the CIO was the exception—it is reaching the point now where being out of the CIO means isolation."

Kips Bay, the world's largest CIO steam plant, is completely CIO. In Westchester, the independent union, after a fruitless search for members, practically conceded a CIO victory. The independent is crumbling in the big Queens division, and reports of CIO successes throughout the rest of the system lead union officials to predict an overwhelming victory for the CIO.

Stop the Hatchet Men

The House Appropriations Committee has called for deep cuts in the budget for two of the most vital labor agencies in the entire federal government, the National Labor Relations Board and the Wage-Hour Division of the Labor Department.

The cut in Labor Board funds is 10 per cent, in Wage-Hour funds 20 per cent. Budget recommendations by Pres. Roosevelt were bad enough to begin with; now they are to be cut still more if the House Committee has its way. If the cuts go through, both agencies will be crippled in the work of carrying out the law as required by the Constitution of the U. S. and as directed by Congress when the two acts were passed.

The 20 per cent slash in Wage-Hour funds would mean the inspection force, set up to watch for violations and to crack down on chiselers, would be cut by 350 men, a one-third reduction. The proposed cut in Labor Board funds would mean that trial examiners, attorneys, and other Board personnel already unable to keep up with the flood of complaints, would be reduced to a point where enforcement of the Wagner Act becomes a farce.

The Committee controlled by reactionary Republicans and renegade Democrats virtually demanded in one section of its report that the Wage-Hour Act be amended to fit the reduced appropriation.

This is an unprecedented step for such a Committee, whose legal function is to pass only on the President's budget. In other words, the House Committee is using its power of recommending appropriations to bludgeon through changes in vital labor legislation that Congressional reactionaries have not been able to bring on the floor either in this session or the last. Such changes would cut off a million sweated workers from the meager protection now given them by the Act.

This is a sideways attempt to do the bidding of the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce without the risks that would face open debate in the House and Senate.

Immediate protests should be wired to Senators and Congressmen from all sections of the labor movement. The House is due to vote on the question early this week.

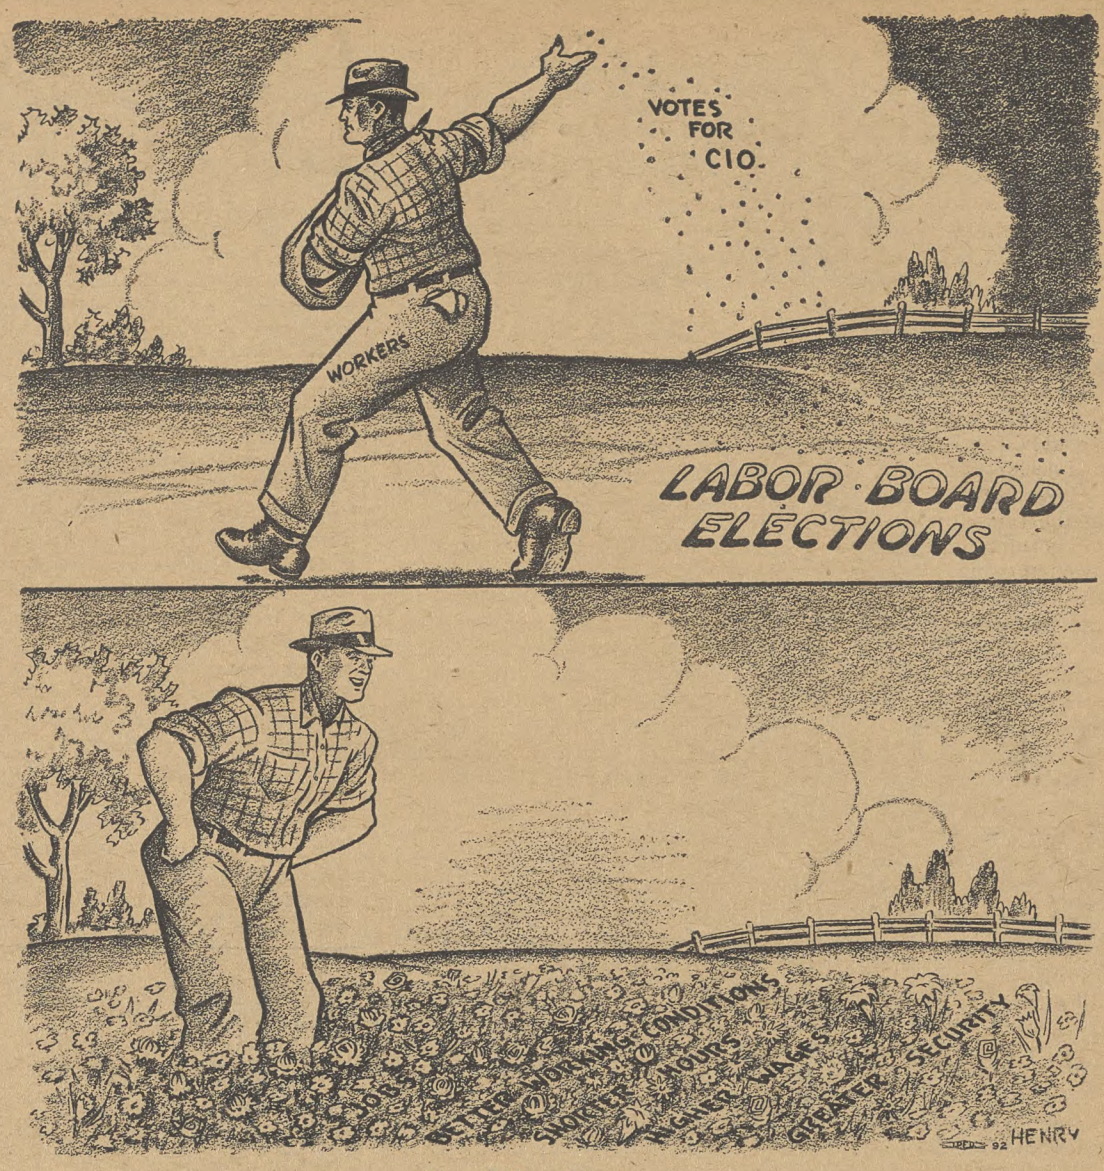
Wire your protest at once to your Representatives in Congress, urging that they vote for adequate appropriations to insure proper enforcement of these vital labor laws.

A Contrast

The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers union has recently completed a study of indictments against nearly one hundred AFL officials "on charges having nothing to do with bona fide union work."

"The many AFL union officials recently indicted are not charged with putting up a fight FOR union members," the union points out.

"Most of them are charged with working hand-in-glove with big employers' associations, big contractors, AGAINST the interests of union members and the public generally."



A sorry record of racketeering, graft and collusion is revealed—in complete contrast to the 100% clean record of the CIO.

There's a reason for this contrast, the union makes clear.

"Racketeering is impossible under democratic industrial unionism," it declares. "Hence AFL racketeers are compelled to use coercive methods in 'holding in line' their membership."

Those AFL leaders who "have found it more profitable to themselves to enter into racketeering deals with employers than to work for the interests of the employes . . . are opposed to organization and do not want to 'organize the unorganized'.

"They like craft unionism, because the many small craft groups offer a maximum opportunity for racketeering and graft. They are opposed heartily to unity with CIO, because that too would put an end to their rackets."

Looking Ahead

Collusion Does Not Pay

THERE'S a story behind the run-out powder taken by the AFL in the Consolidated Edison election in New York. It is so full of meat and morals that we commend it for one of the "crime-does-not-pay" series.

When one of the neighborhood poolroom boys, without visible means of support, suddenly blossoms out with a diamond stickpin, a flashy car and money to burn, there are grounds for suspicion.

So when the AFL Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (with hardly a member to its name among the tens of thousands of Consolidated Edison employes) suddenly blossomed out two or three years ago with what was almost a closed shop contract, people began to talk.

The CIO was making much headway at the time in an organizing drive, and the IBEW local at Consolidated Edison had just gone over to it as a body.

Then suddenly the company decided to wrap up its employes in a neat package, tied with a company union bow, and to deliver them on a silver platter to the AFL union which they did not choose to join.

The IBEW jumped from rags to riches overnight at Consolidated Edison, and the whole company apparatus was put to work driving the employes into its ranks.

But now, after a few short years, the IBEW is right back where it started — so discredited and with so few members that it has had to withdraw its name from the coming Labor Board election ballot.

AFL Company Unionism

This Consolidated Edison contract became the classic example of what is known as a "collusive agreement" — the kind of agreement which the Labor Board has ruled to be in violation of the Wagner act, and which anti-union manufacturers and AFL leaders are seeking to protect by amending the act.

Under this type of collusion, which was imitated by a number of other companies, the employer could pick the organization to which he wanted to deliver his employes, sign a contract with it, and thus prevent them from organizing in the union of their own choice.

This scheme seemed like an inspiration to companies which were trying to stop the CIO and to get around the Wagner act. It meant that they could keep the essence of company unionism by just putting an AFL label on it.

To many AFL leaders it also brought visions of sitting in their swivel chairs while the CIO did the hard work of organizing—and then getting the employer to turn over all his workers willy-nilly rather than recognize the CIO union.

And yet — and yet it hasn't worked out according to plan. This collusion at Consolidated Edison brought only grief and confusion to company and employes; and all the membership that was delivered to the AFL has slipped through its hands like sand.

Prior to the AFL run-out, an unaffiliated company union was hastily formed to salvage the wreckage of the AFL company union, in an effort to prevent the workers from serving their own interests by voting for the CIO Amalgamated Utility Workers.

Employes Have Last Word

The Labor Board declared the contract invalid on the basis of conclusive evidence that it was imposed on the workers by the company; and in effect involved company interference with the right to organize as defined by the Wagner act.

The Board's decision was appealed all the way up to the Supreme Court. While the Court refused, on a technicality, to invalidate the contract, at no point were the facts of collusion and company domination disputed.

It was not the Board or the courts that disposed of the AFL at Consolidated Edison. It was the employes themselves. They resented being herded by their bosses into a company union, even if it bore an AFL label; and they have turned to the CIO in increasing numbers for bona fide union representation through a union of their own choice.

Honest Unionism

In all of this there is an encouraging moral for those who are working to build a real labor movement. It is that honesty is the best policy, in unionism as in other affairs.

The road may sometimes seem long and hard to build a genuine union of the workers, by the workers and for the workers, in line with CIO policy. But it is the only real road to union success.

The workers who fall for phony schemes of company unionism and collusion will soon learn their lesson. And employers too learn from experience that it is better to deal with a responsible union that really represents their employes.

Once American workers get the idea they want a real union of their own, they are not so easily fooled by company shams and substitutes.

UPHOLD MINIMUM

New Orleans, Mar. 23 — (FP) — A temporary injunction restraining the wage-hour administration from enforcing the 25c minimum wage for Florida citrus workers was reversed and dismissed by the U. S. District Court of Appeals on March 15.

The writ had been granted to the Lake Wales Citrus Fruit Growers Assn. by a federal district court.

Union Victory Seen In Girdler Bow to NLRB

PITTSBURGH, Mar. 23. — Action of Republic Steel's Union Drawn Wire Division in accepting a Labor Board decision upheld by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, was hailed as a major victory by leaders of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The order, the first which the company has accepted, involves 300 workers and requires the company to end interference with its workers' rights to organize.

Joseph Timko, SWOC regional director in Beaver Valley, where the Girdler subsidiary is located, said: "we are very glad that the Republic Steel Corp. has, after three years, admitted its guilt and has decided to obey the National Labor Relations Act.

"We hope that this represents a change in attitude on the part of the company generally. The company's employes have asked for nothing more than the right to organize into a union of their own choosing. The notice the company has posted is the first assurance from Republic Steel that this fundamental right will not be intefered with.

"This represents an outstanding step forward for labor relations in Beaver Falls."

R.J. Thomas Speaks On CBS, April 3

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23. — Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, will discuss "Responsible Unionism" in a nationwide radio speech to be heard over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Wednesday, April 3, from 10:15 to 10:30 p. m., eastern standard time.

The speech is being offered by CBS to its affiliated stations, but local union groups should immediately check with their local station managers to make sure that the proram is to be carried by their outlet. If enough local interest is shown, station managers usually will book the program.

If the time is filled by a local commercial program, arrangements can frequently be made for the station to make a transcription of the program, to be broadcast at a later time during the evening.

Rep. Geyer Sees Poll Tax Giving Power To Minority

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23.—Only three places in the world—outside the U. S. A.—impose poll taxes on voters, Rep. Lee E. Geyer, California liberal, told a coast-to-coast radio audience in a broadcast from here. These three, Turkey, Persia and China, line up with the eight southern states of this country that place such restrictions on suffrage.

Rep. Geyer, whose bill, HR 7534, just introduced into Congress, would abolish the poll tax, pointed out in his radio talk that only 35 per cent of the adults vote in national elections in the eight poll-tax states, while double that number, 70 per cent, vote in the other 40.

"That is government by the minority, not the majority. That is un-American," he said. "In the 1936 election, in Virginia, a poll-tax state, 25.7 per cent voted, while in a bordering state, West Virginia, 92 per cent of all adults went to the polls. New Mexico, a non poll-tax state, voted 94 per cent of its eligibles, while Texas, a poll tax state, voted but 26.2 per cent. Can it be said truthfully that these people live in a democracy?"

Federal help to the potential voters in these eight states—Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, S. Carolina, Texas, Tennessee and Virginia — is needed, Geyer said, since politicians in power, elected by a minority, do not intend to surrender their privilege without intervention by a higher power.

Pointing out that many Southern Congressmen were elected by a vote as low as 5,000, yet possess more power than others elected by 150,000 votes, he said:

"The influence of the poll-tax representative is usually greater, for his tenure of office is much longer on the average. It is easy to service with satisfaction a special class such as the great plantation owners and their hangers-on who might make up a majority of those able to pay the poll-tax. Seniority means much in the halls of Congress."

RETROACTIVE

While a poll-tax of $1.50 per year is a serious enough item in a sharecropper's budget, Geyer explained, the situation is made even worse by requiring voters to pay up tax arrears for as far back as the voter has failed to pay.

This situation, Geyer declared, could only be handled by Federal law. Raising the time-worn cry of "states' rights" is "trickery," he said.

"The people of these poll-tax states, caught in this vicious circle, look to the Federal government for a way out. We must not turn our backs on them. We must not tell them to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps. We must give them a helping hand, now that they extend their hand to us for help."

Labor Act Changes Hit Snag

made by the Smith committee majority had been voted down.

Pro-labor sentiment among committee members, plus swarms of correspondence and wires from CIO and AFL unions throughout the nation helped to withstand reactionary pressure on the 21-man group and were responsible for the set-back to the Smith amendments. Only change approved by the Labor Committee was one increasing the present Board from three to five members, with the present NLRB officials to remain in office.

HOFFMAN'S 'MISTAKE'

Amusing sidelight on the Labor Committee's action was the fact that Rep. Clare Hoffman of Michigan, one of the most vocal foes of unionism in Congress, unwittingly cast his vote to retain the present National Labor Relations Board.

Hoffman's first pro-labor vote since he came to the House resulted from his acceptance of a speaking engagement in the midwest while the matter was up for Labor Committee consideration. Hoffman gave his proxy to Rep. Clyde Smith, liberal Maine Republican. Smith caused the Michigan reactionary his most embarrassed moment when he voted against "emasculatory" amendments to the Wagner Act, voting Hoffman's proxy as well.

The result was that the anti-NLRB amendment was defeated 9-8. An attempt by Hoffman to get reconsideration of the vote was defeated, 11-7.

ACWA JOINS PROTEST

Meanwhile another power union joined the chorus of criticism leveled at the Smith Committee when the general executive board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, meeting in Washington, urged the defeat of all amendments designed "to weaken all of the great outstanding achievements of the New Deal, the Wagner Act."

Lewis To Address Negro Congress Meeting In April

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23. — CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will speak at the Natl. Negro Congress convention opening here in Washington Friday, April 26, it was announced by Congress officials. Pres. Lewis will appear at the opening session, which will be held in the U. S. Labor Dept. Auditorium—same hall where he addressed the American Youth Congress in February.

Speaking with Pres. Lewis will be A. Philip Randolph, Congress president and head of the Intl. Brotherhood of Pullman Porters. More than 3,000 delegates are expected to attend, according to the estimate of John P. Davis, secretary, who has been working to set up the meeting here.

NEGRO WORKERS' PROBLEMS

Problems of Negro workers will be the main topic of the sessions of the Congress, which is planned to last several days. Chief of these, the Congress call stated, are civil rights for Negroes, an end to lynching, abolition of the poll-tax that disfranchises millions of Negro and poor white workers in the eight Southern states where it is applied, as well as the problems of unemployment and relief that all American workers face.

Shortly after the announcement of Pres. Lewis' speech to the Congress, Kathryn Lewis, executive assistant, attended a testimonial dinner to A. Philip Randolph at the YMCA here.

Also attending the dinner were representatives of 150 Washington labor and progressive groups. Arrangements to broadcast the opening sessions of the Congress on a coast-to-coast radio hookup are being worked out.

CIO Head To Speak In W. Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., Mar. 23—CIO President John L. Lewis will speak at a giant labor rally at Traction Park, Monongah, near here, on April 1, it was announced this week.

Thousands of workers from all over the state including representatives from every local in District 31, United Mine Workers of America, will join the throngs who will come to hear the UMW President's address.

April 1st has been set aside by the United Mine Workers as the annual coal miners' holiday in celebration of the winning of the universal eight-hour day in the bituminous industry in 1898.

OTHER SPEAKERS

Other speakers will be Senator M. M. Neely of West Virginia and John B. Easton, president of the CIO West Virginia Industrial Union Council. C. F. Davis, president of District 31 will be permanent chairman, and Willis Drummond, Local 6593, will be temporary chairman.

FBI-Inspired Arrest of CIO Organizers Hit By Murray

WASHINGTON, Mar. 23.—Protest against J. Edgar Hoover and his FBI "General Intelligence Division" for assaults and threats on labor and civil liberties is continuing to rise in union and liberal circles to a point where the Attorney-General of the U. S. is reported seriously considering clipping the FBI and expanding Federal civil rights protection as a counter-force.

In Pittsburgh Philip Murray, vice-president of the CIO and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee issued a sharp statement protesting the FBI-inspired arrest of two SWOC men for the strange crime of photographing a billboard in Weirton, W. Va., feudal domain of Ernest T. Weir of Little Steel.

The two SWOC men, Murray told U. S. Attorney-General Jackson in his wire of protest, were snapping a picture of Mr. Weir's billboard that proclaims the fact that Weirton is the largest unincorporated village in the U. S., when they were picked up by the local sheriff, hauled to his office, and grilled for an hour and a half.

FBI INSTRUCTIONS

"They were later released," Murray said, "and told that there would be no more pictures taken, with the amazing addition that he, the sheriff of Hancock county, was operating under instructions from the Federal Bureau of Investigation to apprehend any individuals that the sheriff in his judgment considered suspicious.

"I am anxious to know if it is the policy of the Department of Justice and the FBI to issue instructions to public officials that tend to frustrate the ordinary legitimate organizational activities of a bonafide American union."

In Cleveland the CIO Industrial Union Council passed a strong resolution urging a Senate investigation of the FBI and the chief G-Man, declaring: "There is every evidence to believe that Hoover is preparing for a repetition of the shameful Palmer raids in which he participated, with the object of attacking and destroying the various unions."

"In Indianapolis 100 delegates to a farm-labor conference attended by CIO and AFL members as well as farmers representatives passed a similar resolution.

EXPAND CIVIL RIGHTS

Meanwhile, in Washington Attorney-General Jackson was reported to be planning to curtail the FBI and to expand the Civil Liberties Unit of the U. S. Justice Dept., which has been undermanned and underfinanced since it was set up a few months ago. This unit is in charge of running down and prosecuting violations of civil rights, on which it has been receiving a steady stream of complains from labor and liberal groups. At present the unit has only nine men.

Jackson was also reported to be preparing a public appeal to lawyers and progressive leaders for cooperation in protecting civil rights, asking for reports of cases and for their help in preventing violations.

League Pamphlet Discusses War Issues

WASHINGTON, March 23.—American workers can keep out of the European war—if they organize now for the 1940 election campaign in time to put Congressmen and other political figures into office who are pledged to vote and fight against U. S. involvement.

This is the message of a new leaflet put out by Labor's Non-Partisan League here, just released under the title "In 1940 You Will Vote—For—Against War?"

"If in this year's elections, we put into Congress only the same old run-of-the-mine politicians, the fellows who will do anything for a campaign contribution or a favorable mention in the home town paper, the men who owe their allegiance to the local banker or employers' association, you may wake up some morning to read in the headlines 'WAR IS DECLARED'," the leaflet says.

Only way to prevent this is to build up the league—. "Get onto that job at once—join your local unit of Labor's Non-Partisan League—volunteer to work in your precinct in the 1940 campaign. UNLESS LABOR DOES THAT JOB it will certainly not be done."

Radio Listeners' Letters Show CIO Leaders' Programs Popular

Washington, Mar. 23.—The CIO has a popular program for the common people of these United States.

That fact is clearly written in the flood of letters that have poured into CIO headquarters following nationwide radio speeches by Vice - Presidents Reid Robinson and Sherman Dalrymple.

From east and west and from the agricultural areas of the Mississippi Valley; from youngsters looking for their first job and from senior citizens thrown on to the industrial scrap heap, these messages are tokens of faith in the CIO and the progressive aims it stands for.

Praise for the CIO legislative program; requests for information about CIO unionism and how it works; inquiries on how the program can be furthered—these are what radio listeners are writing to the CIO.

SCHOOL TEACHER

An AFL school teacher from New York says, after listening to Robinson's address on "Jobs — Made in America":

"I am impelled to say that I think that that program, and the CIO as the dynamic force behind it, represents the life of a decent future for all of us Americans."

Across the continent, in San Francisco, a man writes in by postcard:

"I congratulate you on the first constructive suggestion in 10 years for an equalization of work opportunities . . ."

A lady in Olympia, Wash., declares:

"We are convinced that you are in earnest — because you do not boast about what you have done, or intend to do. You ask for understanding and help to do what needs to be done now to keep us out of war—to feed, clothe, and shelter our own people here, at home . . ."

"I can't understand how a large company can operate and enjoy the tremendous profits in the aviation industry, working on government contracts without the employes having a voice as to being organized," states a letter from a man in Rosedale, Md., site of an aviation plant.

More constructive talks like those of the CIO leaders are what the radio needs, opines a housewife in Oswego, Ore.

"This household consists of four grown-ups," she writes. "All agreed completely and all thought it a pity that we don't have more such talks and less of the tripe ordinarily dished out to us. I have never liked the radio, but I surely would enjoy it could we have more such talks."

The avalanche of mail from old folks who heard Vice-Pres. Dalrymple's speech was obvious evidence of the fear of insecurity which haunts the nation. How can I get social security? How can we help to get $60 at 60? How will the CIO social security program aid me? These were the questions that ran through hundreds of letters and post cards.

"I am a straight American from way back and certainly coincide with your opinions on the old age security payment and care for our sick. What can I do to help put your ideas over?" writes a man from Newark, N. J.

A former California Congressman declares: "I feel your CIO offers more for the thinker than any other organization, and after hearing this radio address last night, I am inclined to say 'amen' to your efforts in behalf of alleviating our present unnecessary distress."

Name Quill To Housing Position

Washington, March 23. — Housing needs of Congress of Industrial Organizations members over the nation were brought sharply to the fore here with naming of a CIO consultant on the staff of the United States Housing Authority.

Selection of Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers of America and chairman of the CIO housing committee, as USHA consultant, was made public in correspondence between A. D. Lewis, Chairman of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, and Nathan Straus, Administrator of the USHA.

One of Quill's primary purposes at USHA will be to seek action by federal agencies on housing needs of the CIO membership, most of which is in the "no-man's land" between government subsidized projects and high-cost private dwellings.

Expansion of the USHA program to mining towns and textile centers is also a key aim.

UCWOC CAMPAIGN

Chairman Lewis of the UCWOC announced an agressive drive by that CIO affiliate to bring low-cost housing to the entire CIO membership. Talks are going on here with federal officials who have promised to cooperate.

Each local office of the UCWOC is setting up a new service for home owners to advise them on all phases of home ownership. The building of large-scale rental projects by private capital especially designed for CIO members is also being pushed. Both the houses and apartments constructed would use UCWOC labor.

Purpose of the UCWOC is to obtain the economies that are only possible by. mass production methods Building of houses in blocks of 1,000 or more would offer opportunities to effect real low-cost housing. This is possible if the problem is tackled in an organized way through the big CIO unions.

CONFER ON PROGRAM

In cities over the nation UCWOC officers were conferring with builders, federal agencies and CIO unions, on aspects of the program. In Los Angeles the drive had brought publication of an attractive folder of home designs by FAECT members. Thus, homes are being designed, built and bought by CIO members in that area.

Emphasis was placed in the California pamphlet on the advantages of collective action on the housing problem.

Cleveland On Its Toes As CIO Seeks 10,000,000 Members

CLEVELAND CIO GOES TO TOWN: Volunteer organizers pass out leaflets at the Thompson Products Co., No. 1 concentration point in a big drive to make Cleveland a union city and help the CIO national campaign for 10,000,000 members.

By TED COX

CLEVELAND, Mar. 23.—At 2:30 in the afternoon a half dozen cars draw up to the curb near the big Thompson Products factory. A score of workers from organized shops get out, take leaflets and greet 1,500 workers coming off the day shift.

At 10:30 P. M. the same event is repeated.

This happens twice a week at the huge auto and airplane parts plant here which has been designated as the number one concentration plant for the CIO drive to organize the unorganized in Cleveland.

At the same time dozens of volunteer organizers, recruited from the shop move through the neighborhoods throughout the city, visiting workers from unorganized shops—discussing unionism, conditions in the plant, forming shop committees and signing up new members.

These are a few of the activities stemming from the decision of all Cleveland CIO unions, coordinating their efforts through the Cleveland Industrial Union Council, to organize the unorganized.

"WE'LL DO OUR PART"

The unions declared in a resolution that "we will do our part to realize the goal of the CIO and have 10,000,000 CIO members by 1945." They didn't file the resolution in a pigeon-hole. They pooled their forces to put it into effect.

The results are as follows:

First, representatives of all unions met. They agreed upon certain unorganized factories as concentration plants—the most important to receive the attention of the entire CIO in this city.

They agreed, that in the meantime, certain work could be done by all unions to lay the basis for organization in all unorganized shops in Cleveland.

The next step was to involve the entire rank and file in the program. Volunteer organizers were called for from every local union. The city was divided into geographical districts. Volunteer organizers were assigned to district committees in their own neighborhoods. These district committees divided up names and addresses of unorganized workers in their own neighborhoods and visited them at their homes where they were willing to talk freely in spite of company intimidation.

30,000 LEAFLETS

To enlist the services of those less active, the CIUC executive committee is now distributing 30,000 leaflets through the organized plants.

The leaflets, now being distributed by shop stewards and local union officers, specifically instruct every union worker to list his acquaintances and then determine which ones work in unorganized or partially organized plants. Workers should then set down the names and addresses of those who work in unorganized or partially organized plants, state the name of the factory and turn in the list to the shop steward or shop chairman.

The message, calling for this minimum action from every CIO member, did not stop at issuing the instructions. It pointed out in detail that "every CIO member should do his part by turning in at least one name."

It points out that it is the duty of every CIO member to yourself, the other 75,000 CIO members in this city, your family and your country to do your part to organize the unorganized."

The leaflet then lists the names of the 30 most important unorganized mass production factories in the city to remind rank and file workers of plants where they may know people.

RESULTS SHOWING

Names are already coming in by the score, according to A. E. Stevenson, secretary of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council, who is in charge of the drive.

The names and addresses are then redistributed to national and international union offices here and given to organizers for home visits or for a mailing list.

All new names are either put on the mailing list of The Cleveland Union Leader, official weekly newspaper of the CIUC, or on the mailing list of the international union involved so that all receive weekly educational material on unionism.

Contracts Show Gains Of Unions

New York, Mar. 23 — A guarantee against job lay-offs due to mechanization is contained in a contract signed between the American Communications Association, and the Mackay Radio System, the CIO union announced this week.

The agreement which covers the company's 351 employes, provides pay increases amounting to $55,000 and calls for the highest minimum wages for semi-skilled and unskilled workers in the entire industry. Individual workers will receive pay raises ranging from $6.25 to $22 a month.

PROTECTION TO WORKERS

The mechanization clause states that no employe of the company shall be dismissed during the life of the agreement "because of mechanization of technological changes."

Other provisions are: Closed shop with all hiring done through the ACA; no split tricks; guaranteed full work week; one hour night differention; time and a half for overtime and Sunday work, and eight paid holidays a year.

Vacations with pay were increased from two to three weeks for employes with more than ten years' service. This affects 81 of the company's employes.

7% Increase

New Castle, Del., Mar. 23. — A 7% wage increase for 300 employes of the Delaware Rayon Corp. was won today by the Textile Workers Union, CIO, and new amendments written into the present contract brought the closed shop and increased vacation pay.

Announcement of the TWUA victory was made by Herbert Payne, vice-president of the union in charge of the synthetic yarn division.

The union and the company first entered into contractual relations in May, 1938, he said. "The changes in the present contract, agreeable to both parties, is a continuation of those amicable relations. The union and its members are fully aware of their responsibilities under the contract."

Aircraft Pact

New York, Mar. 23. — A union shop contract covering the new plant of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. at Newark airport has been signed by the United Automobile Workers, Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization announced this week.

The agreement contains the same provisions and conditions as the contract already in effect in the Brewster plant in Long Island.

Wage Boost

Wheeling, W. Va., Mar. 23—Pay increases, a closed shop and other benefits are provided in a contract signed by the United Construction Workers local at Bellaire with the Gunite Construction Co.

Radio Station

Baltimore, Md., Mar. 23.—Technicians employed at radio station WCBM won pay increases and vacations with pay in a contract signed between the American Communications Association, CIO, and the station management. The pact which is retroactive to March 1, is the first ever signed by the station.

D.C. Co-op Gas Station Signs CIO Construction Pact

Washington, Mar. 23 — With the awarding of a contract to build the new Konsum automobile service and repair plant to Morton Levy, the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee goes into its first important construction job in downtown Washington.

Levy, the contractor, is a member of the association of contractors having a collective bargaining contract with the UCWOC. The job will be a 100 per cent CIO job. Konsum itself is a 100% organized service station, a cooperative made up largely of members of the CIO United Federal Workers, and handles gasoline, oil, automobile accessories and all types of automobile service.

The new station, to be built at 26th and Virginia Avenues, is at one of the important traffic centers of Washington. The removal to the new location and the building of a new station of about three times the previous capacity is an indication of the growth that comes when organized workers give their attention to cooperative enterprise, leaders said.

The fact that this station is the only station in Washington whose employes are organized, and that its construction work is done under union conditions is, of course, linked to its success as a cooperative.

Wins Ruling In Rayon Poison Case

Philadelphia, Pa., Mar. 23—The menace of carbon disulphide poisoning to workers in the rayon industry was brought to public attention here recently in a case that came up under Pennsylvania's year-old occupational disease law.

John Nichols, employed for 19 years in the Marcus Hook plant of the American Viscose Corp., until his health broke down completely three years ago, won a decision in his favor but got no money, as he was unlucky enough to leave his job December 31, 1937, just one day before the new law went into effect on Jan. 1.

Nichols' story as he told it to John Alessandroni, Workmen's Compensation referee, appears in the March 18 issue of the news weekly "Time."

Three years ago, he said, he began to feel "sick and dizzy; then 'things got kind of smoky'. His legs shook, his fingers stiffened into claws, he had 'to sit down and slide downstairs', and at night he was yanked out of sleep by terrific spasms of his chest muscles. Finally (Dec. 31, 1937) he left the plant."

Union Wins $350 In Back Wages

New York — Back wages totaling $350 have been paid to four former employes of the Liberty Watchcase Co., members of the Watch Workers CIO Local Industrial Union. The firm ran away from New York City to South Norwalk, Conn. during a strike last June.

THWART FORD FIGHT ON UNION

Workers Get CIO Leaflets

EDGEWATER, N. J., Mar. 23. — CIO organizers brought free speech to Henry Ford's workers and defied the auto king by distributing thousands of leaflets at the big Ford assembly plant here.

The CIO organizers refused to be fingerprinted in advance as the town's ordinance requires. They refused to submit the leaflet to the police for censorship 72 hours in advance, as the same ordinance specifies.

The literature called for a mass meeting the following day, immediately after work in an attempt to hasten the complete organization of the 3900 workers employed in the plant.

The company, in an attempt to forestall the mass meeting, shut the plant down the following day in the hope that the meeting would be thwarted because the workers in the plant are scattered all over New Jersey and New York.

However, the meeting was well attended, and the following morning the CIO organizers again appeared to distribute leaflets calling for a mass meeting that same night. This meeting was also well attended and many new members were signed up by the UAW-CIO.

NLRB CHARGES

The Labor Board charges that have been filed against the Company for firing 14 members of the Union have been amended to demand a full day's pay for every one in the plant due to the shutting down of the plant for the one day.

A carload of Ford service men attempted to run down Leonard H. Goldsmith, executive secretary of the New Jersey State Industrial Union Council who is in charge of the organizing drive, while he was distributing leaflets.

The company has imported the same thugs who had beat Richard Frankensteen and other CIO leaders at the River Rouge plant at Dearborn, Michigan in 1937.

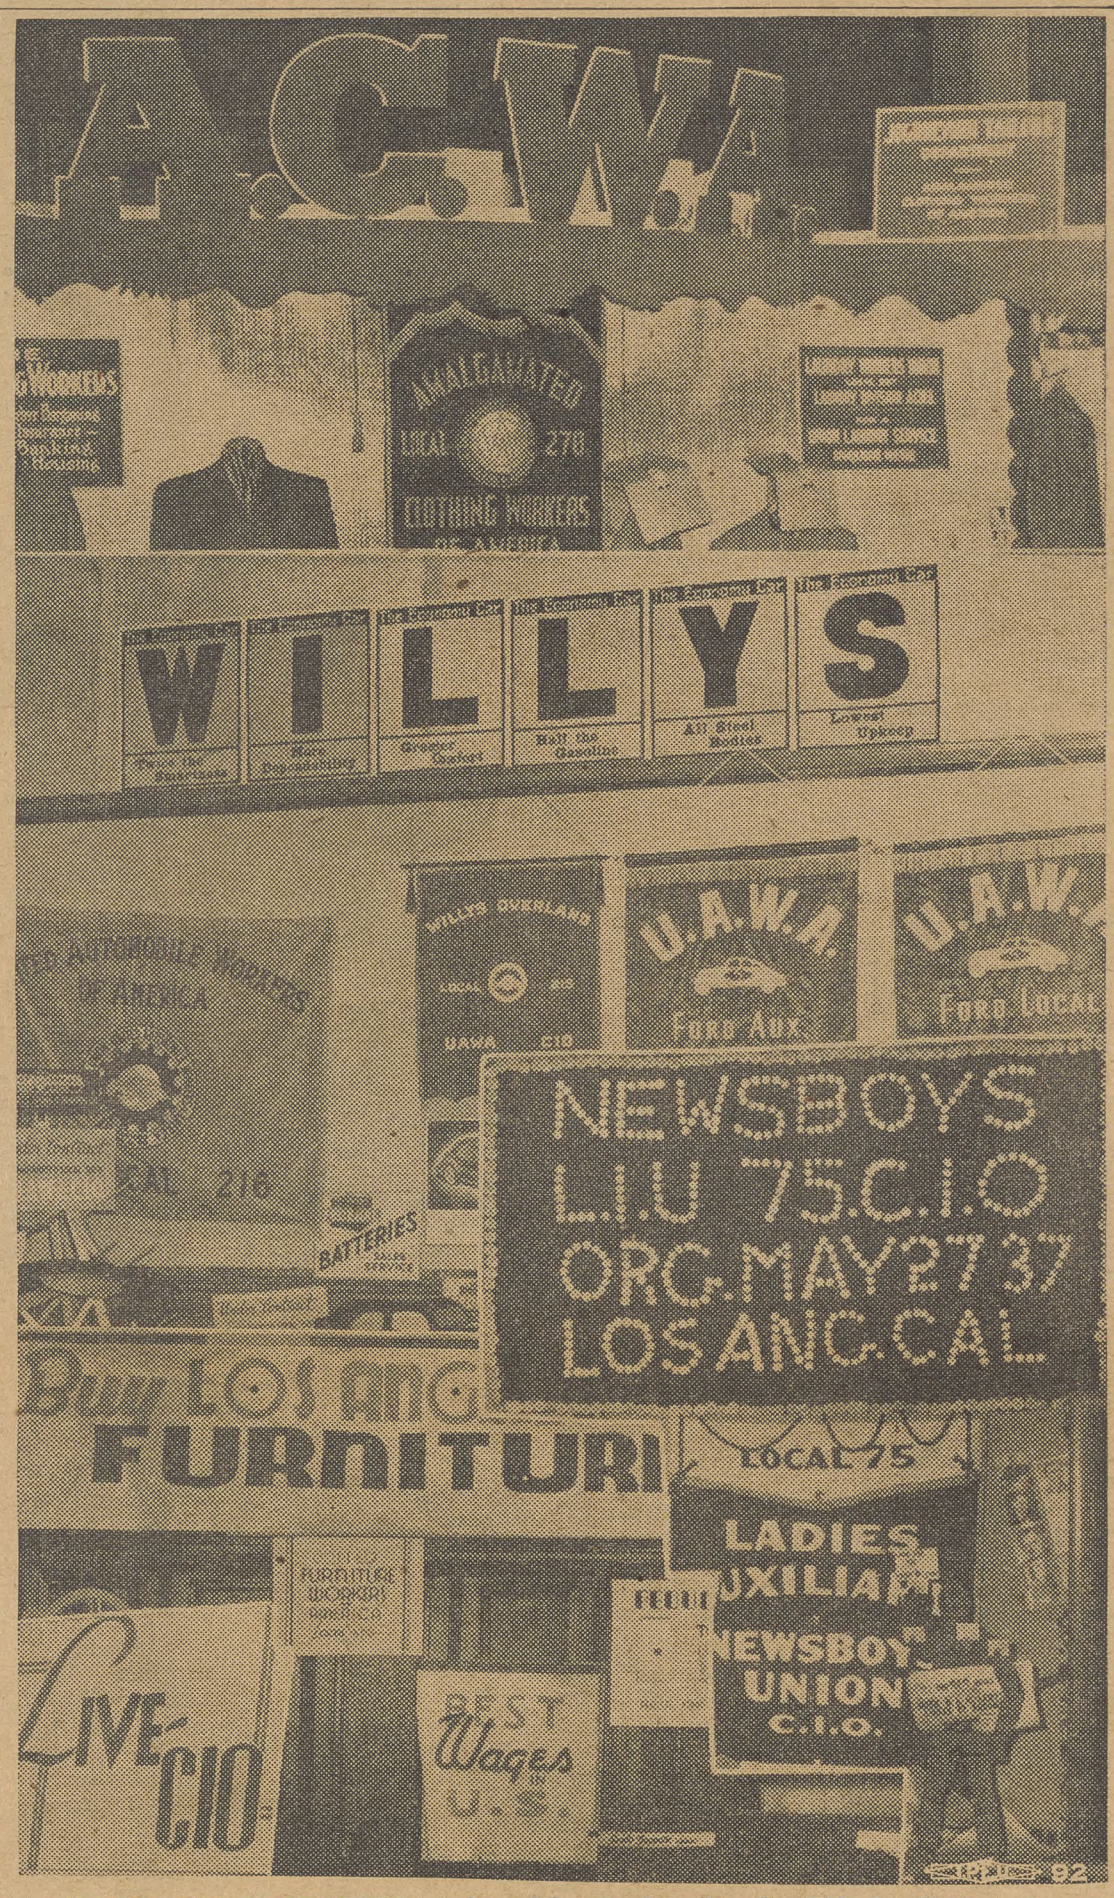
The leaflets distribution was accomplished through the cooperation of all organizers in the area.

Sixty Attend CIO Banquet

E. St. Louis, Ill., Mar. 23 — Sixty delegates from 11 local CIO unions attended a CIO banquet here, sponsored by the East St. Louis Industrial Union Council, and heard speakers urge greater CIO organizing activity and participation in politics by organized labor.

Harry Deck, Illinois Labor's Non-Partisan League official, told the banqueters that winning union contracts was not enough — it was necessary to put fair-minded, progressive men in Congress and other political offices to protect the gains the unions won from employers.

"Labor has the problem of 10,000,000 unemployed to solve and the government has to do something about this No. 1 question," he said, in urging increased political activity through Labor's League.



Los Angeles CIO Fair Wins Praise

Los Angeles, March 23. — "Live CIO" was the slogan of Los Angeles' first CIO Union Label Fair—both Fair and slogan were big successes.

Sponsored by the Ladies' Auxiliary, the Fair displayed only those products manufactured under CIO contracts. Furniture, clothing, electrical equipment, drugs, music, art, newspapers, food gasoline autos, shoes, furs, rubber, steel, iron products and hundreds of other products were on display.

Such great interest was shown by unionists in the first CIO exposition that the Auxiliary council will publish a booklet "Buy CIO" containing a listing of local CIO products. In addition the Auxiliary council has mimeographed an instruction sheet based on experience gained during the Fair. The bulletin offers advice on how to stage a Fair, what to do and what not to do.

Both publications may be obtained by writing to Mrs. Dorothy Connelly, Chairman, Union Label Fair Committee, Los Angeles Industrial Union Council, 212 West Third St., Los Angeles, Calif.

SCENES FROM THE FAIR conducted by the Los Angeles CIO Auxiliaries. At top, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers display of union-made men's garments. Just below it is the United Automobile Workers display, which included both new cars and accessories. To the right is the Newsboys' Local exhibit, which displayed copies of the CIO NEWS and Los Angeles daily papers. At lower left is the Furniture Workers exhibit.

Fight Change In New York Labor Act

New York, Mar. 23.—Opposition to a bill excluding bank and brokerage employes from the benefits of the New York State Labor Relations act came today from the CIO.

The Bank and Brokerage Employes Union, a local of the United Office and Professional Workers, sent each state assemblyman a letter outlining the union's opposition to the proposal and asked for an adverse vote in the lower house of the state legislature. The state senate has already passed the bill.

If the assembly follows the senate's lead, the union announced it will call upon Governor Herbert Lehman to use his veto power.

Labor School Starts Session

Cumberland, Md., Mar. 23.—The Allegany Workers' Labor School was formally opened here recently at a meeting held in the United Rubber Workers hall. Dr. Robert Kerlin, director of the school, and James A. Dundon, president of the Celanese Local of the Textile Workers Union, were among the speakers who addressed a large and enthusiastic audience.

Originally sponsored by the Rubber Workers Local, the school is on the way to receiving the support of all important unions in the area.

Classes will be held Sunday afternoons at 2 p. m., and will continue for 16 weeks.

City Signs CIO Contract

Gloucester, Mar. 23 — The State, County & Municipal Workers, CIO has won a signed agreement with the city fathers here in behalf of the refuse workers.

The contract covering about 27 workers provides for a closed shop, check off.

Report Steel Union Gains In Midwest

JOLIET, Ill., Mar. 23.—Achievements of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Chicago-Calumet area were reviewed by Chairman Nicholas Fontecchio in his report to the district convention held here.

Some 360 delegates representing 60 lodges in the Chicago-Calumet district attended the convention.

Three new lodges have been established in the district and a number of lodges have succeeded in organizing their plants 100%, Fontecchio said. Three new contracts with sole bargaining rights have been secured and a number of agreements renewed, he reported.

Van A. Bittner, SWOC regional director for the Midwest, in his address to the convention told the delegates that the SWOC which had less than 7,000 union members when it started out, in June, 1936, now has 1,200 lodges and 700 contracts covering more than 625,000 steel workers.

Warn of Influx To Alaska

Fairbanks, Alaska, Mar. 23 — CIO unions with workers in Alaskan industries — chiefly mining — are warned by the Mine, Miil and Smelter Workers local here that a big influx of labor is being lined up for this area in an effort to break down labor standards won by the CIO.

The advice comes from Local 444 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, which reports that employers are trying to whip up a mass migration in order to fight their organization and other

NEW YORK RECOGNIZES TRANSPORT UNION PACT

Survey Shows U.S. Favors Spending To Aid Jobless

NEW YORK, Mar. 30. — "The American people believe national security can best be served if the Federal government spends more money for reducing poverty and unemployment than it spends for increasing armaments, for dealing with agricultural problems or for public construction," Fortune Magazine's quarterly survey of public opinion reported today.

On a point basis, spending for the reduction of poverty and unemployment led with 76; increasing armaments came second with 65, followed by dealing with agricultural problems, 62, and public construction, 42.

"Thus," the big businessmen's magazine declared in its April issue, "the public regards the solution of the domestic human problem, the one that was the most pressing back when the New Deal came into office, as still the most vital to our national security in a confused world."

FAVORITE METHODS

Interesting, too, were replies to the question of which methods of spending to reduce poverty and unemployment, are most favored. The survey found old age pensions leading with 60 points; but slum clearance, training skilled labor and work relief were all closely bunched behind it.

Canadian Miners Win Pay Award

Sydney, N. S., Mar. 30 — Wage increases ranging from three to 19 cents daily for the 10,000 miners of the Dominion Coal Corp. here, were recommended in the federal conciliation report handed down this week a day before the federal election. The board estimated the increase at $150,000 a year, retroactive to Feb. 1. Unanimous recommendation was also made that the company erase an estimated debt of $215,000 owed the company by the miners for coal and rent.

The report, submitted by Justice McTague, Ralph Bell for the company and Prof. F. R. Scott for the miners, is subject to ratification by Dosco and District 26, UMWA.

Wants Peace Sentiment Expressed

Washington, Mar. 30 — Congress and Federal government leaders will be given a chance to commemorate America's entry into the last World War and to reassure "the nation at large of the determination to remain at peace" if a resolution just introduced by Rep. Lee Geyer of California goes through.

Rep. Geyer's resolution proposed that a joint session of Senate and lower House be held, with the President invited to address the session and the nation, and the diplomatic corps and high government officials in attendance.

CIO Keeping Wires Hot

BALTIMORE, Mar. 30—Notified by the national CIO office that the House of Representatives planned crippling slashes in NLRA and Wage-Hour Administration budgets, Baltimore CIO unions and members responded with so many telegrams to Congressmen that Postal Telegraph was forced to work overtime one day this week.

Win Election In Baltimore By 3-1

Baltimore, Mar. 30 — The CIO today moved towards contract negotiations at the United States Printing & Lithographing Co. here, after piling up a better than 3-1 majority in an election sponsored by the National Labor Relations Board.

Out of 213 eligible workers, 209 voted in the poll, with 161 naming the United Label Workers Union, CIO, as sole bargaining agency, and 46 voting for no union, Frank Bender, CIO regional director, announced.

LaGuardia Agrees To Union Shop On City Subways

NEW YORK, Mar. 30.—The New York Transport Workers Union, CIO, today had gained a complete victory in its life-and-death struggle to win recognition of its union shop agreements on local subway transit lines when they are merged under city ownership and operated as one super-transportation system.

Announcement of the union's victory came at a second conference with Mayor LaGuardia, at which a union delegation led by CIO Pres. Lewis, Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman and TWU Pres. Michael Quill, were informed that their demands had been completely granted.

The union's contracts with the IRT and BMT subway lines will continue in operation after those two lines are taken over by the city, probably in the early summer. As a result, collective bargaining, seniority, hours and working conditions won by the TWU will be preserved.

At the same time the Mayor made an unconditional pledge that jobs will be found for workers now employed on two elevated lines which are slated for demolition.

Victory came as the Transport Workers Union was rushing intensive plans for possible strike if the city refused its demands for protection of the subway employes.

'New Homes For Old'

Unions Show Opposition To War

New York, Mar. 30. — More than sixty labor groups, including national and international unions, state and regional bodies, as well as locals, have gone on record as opposed to U. S. entry into the present European war, an incomplete survey of the labor press reveals.

Of these 60, the majority have also expressed themselves on the dangers of war profiteering, on threats to civil rights, and on the risks of U. S. involvement attending war loans.

The survey, prepared by Labor Research Assn., starts out with the anti-war resolution of the CIO at its San Francisco convention, where the 500 delegates voted unanimously that: "Labor wants no war nor any part of it," and demanded that the U. S. keep out of the current slaughter in Europe.

A further supplementary survey will be undertaken by the Research Assn., which describes the present one as not pretending to be comprehensive.

Report Finds New York Times Violates Wagner Act; Guild Raps Leiserson

Washington, Mar. 30.—The New York Times was found guilty of unfair labor practices under the Wagner Act in an intermediate report filed with the Labor Board today by Trial Examiner Tilford Dudley.

The report said the newspaper's repeated "insistence" upon the presentation of grievances by individuals and not through the New York Newspaper Guild interfered, "restrained and prevented" the employes from "exercising their right to assist the Guild and to engage in a concerted activity for the purpose of mutual aid and protection," as guaranteed by the Wagner Act.

Discussing negotiations between the Guild and Publisher Arthur Hays Sulzberger, the NLRB official reported that Sulzberger appears to have "meant what he said when he announced that the Times was opposed to unions for its news and editorial writers.

"The respondent's conduct in refusing to allow the Guild to represent employes in the presentation of grievances and its unwarranted technical position' that reduced the negotiations to a stalemate, indicate that opposition has been expressed not only in words but also in performance."

While recommending that three employes be rehired, Dudley suggested that petitions for reinstatement of two business department men be dropped. One of these, Leonard Goldsmith, is now executive secretary of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council.

HAILED BY GUILD

The Board examiner's report was hailed by Nat Einhorn, executive secretary of the New York Guild, who said the "Times case ranks as one of the most important Labor Board actions in which the Guild has participated. We hope that legitimate collective bargaining between the Guild and Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of the Times, will result from it . . .

"The Times case has one very significant feature of interest to all unions. It establishes the right of union grievance committees to present grievances for their members in the absence of a proven majority where no labor contract is in effect.

New York, Mar. 30. (FP)—Officers of the American Newspaper Guild today expressed amazement at the dissenting opinion of NLRB member William Leiserson in an order directing the Newark, N. J., Ledger to reinstate Miss Agnes Fahy, president of the local Guild, who was fired on Sept. 22, 1937.

Leiserson said the complaint should be dismissed, remarking that "the alleged discriminatory discharge of Miss Fahy occured after the (union) agreement was signed, but it grew out of internal differences in the union, and under the circumstances no complaint should have been issued."

PUBLISHER'S POLICY

Union officials have long been familiar with the policy of S. I. Newhouse, publisher of the Ledger, who signs contracts with the Guild and then proceeds to weed out all militant unionists and replace them with employes who will take orders from him. This process had almost been completed on the Ledger, but Miss Fahy's refusal to quit was a fly in the company union ointment. Finally, she was fired.

"The case was one of the most clearcut I have ever seen," commented ANG Sec.-Treas. Victor Pasche.

"The theory that an employer can, by intimidation and dismissals cause internal difficulties in the union, and thereby justify the dismissal of a union officer to complete his wrecking program, is a brand new wrinkle in labor philosophy."

The Board's majority decision, supported by Chairman Madden and Edwin S. Smith, awarded some $6,500 in back pay to Miss Fahy, who is a sister of the NLRB's chief counsel — a fact which was constantly over-emphasized by the Ledger.

Use Radio in Drive At Con-Edison

By F. E. DeLUDE

New York, Mar. 30 — On Monday, March 25th, President E. T. Shedlock of the CIO Amalgamated Utility Workers opened the union radio campaign with a stirring speech directed at both employes and public, bringing to all listeners the clear and constructive program of the CIO in Consolidated Edison.

Highlighting the streamline campaign now under way in the nation's biggest operating utility, the Amalgamated has taken radio time on three stations, and will be on the air every night until the elections on April 4 & 5, when 32,000 workers will cast their ballots in the Labor Board poll.

Expecting opposition at the last moment, the union is now prepared to give better than it takes, and is set for any development. Letters from the public, following Mr. Shedlock's speech bring out a significant point — the New York public leans strongly toward the workers — a fact which makes the utility advertising campaign on "contented employes" look very sick instead.

E. T. SHEDLOCK

OFFICERS SPEAK

On following nights, H. J. Straub, national director of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, and Michael Widman, asst. director of organization of the CIO, delivered addresses on the position of the CIO in utilities, and the concern of the national organization regarding utility unionization.

Between now and the election, Michael Quill, International President of the Transport Workers will speak — the power of his voice magnified by the great victory just scored by his union in New York.

Preceding Quill's night on the air, the union will stage an "Irish Night", which will be a rank-and-file program involving workers from the many great power and gas manufacturing plants on the Edison system, as well as Irishmen from other parts of the system.

Another night will be run by the technical and clerical workers of the Edison system. These groups are highly enthused over the tremendous organizational strides made among the white-collar workers since the beginning of the New York campaign.

The workers who deal directly with the public — collectors, meter readers, customer service men, etc. — will present their views to fellow employes and the public on still another occasion.

UNION NEWS

The union newspaper, Utility Post, is now on the air nightly, bringing to all Edison men and women the latest news and developments all along the front—260 Edison properties which would otherwise be somewhat isolated from each other.

The message of the Amalgamated, to all the rest of our CIO, is, "Watch us take Con Edison!"

A joint campaign committee, made up of more than 500 representatives of all CIO unions in and around New York City, was formed at a meeting at the Hotel Diplomat called by Haywood, to support the Amalgamated Utility Workers in their campaign for the country.

Withdrawal of the AFL Brotherhood of Electrical Workers from the contest last week, left the Amalgamated Utility Workers and a recently formed independent union, the Brotherhood of Consolidated Edison Employes, the only names on the ballot.

THE BIG FACTOR

Set 35c Minimum

60,000 SHOE WORKERS won direct benefits when Wage-Hour Administrator Philip Fleming (right) signed the order putting into effect a 35c - hourly minimum wage for workers in the nation's shoe industry. With Fleming is Msgr. Francis Haas, head of the shoe industry committee which recommended the minimum scale.

60,000 Shoe Workers Gain By 35c Base

Washington, Mar. 30. — Some 60,000 shoe workers in the United States will receive fatter pay envelopes as the result of an order by the Wage-Hour Administration setting a minimum wage of 35 cents an hour in the shoe industry.

Representatives of the CIO United Shoe Workers took an active part in the industry committee conferences which resulted in a recommendation for the 35 cent minimum, pointing out that opposition to the recommendation came from the same anti-union manufacturers who had opposed the passage of the Wage-Hour Act and had continued to fight it ever since.

Wage-Hour Administrator Col. Philip Fleming estimated that of the 60,000 shoe workers who would benefit under the new minimum about half are employed in plants concentrated largely in New England and Missouri. In addition there are about 5,000 in Illinois; 3,800 in Ohio, and 1,400 in Tennessee, with the remainder scattered through a number of other states.

CIO Fights For Jobs In Relief Crisis

Sacramento, Calif., Mar. 30 — Firing of half the staff of the California State Relief Administration, including 300 members of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers, today brought forth picket lines, demonstrations, mass meetings and petitions from scores of cities and towns.

Gov. Culbert Olson and executives in the SRA were accused by the CIO union of throwing seniority on the dump heap, with political appointees being retained on the staff while experienced professional social workers received dismissal notices. The SCMW also charged the Governor with having failed to put up a real fight in the legislature to save the relief administration.

BittnerGivesExecutives Facts About Labor Act

Chicago, Mar. 30 — Rising young executives at the Junior Chamber of Commerce here heard some plain talk on the subject of the Wagner Act when Van A. Bittner, CIO Packinghouse Workers chairman, accepted their bid to speak at the annual "Bosses' Day" dinner.

Reactionary employers who thought that the Wagner Act needn't be obeyed — until the Supreme Court told them otherwise — and who have thrown every obstacle in the way of the Act since that time were bluntly warned that they might as well make up their minds that organized labor is here to stay.

"They may as well make up their minds to deal with organized labor in a fair way because organized labor is not only here to stay but it will grow in numbers, in strength, in power and influence until every man and woman in America who is eligible to belong to a labor union shall be enrolled under the banner of organized labor," Bittner said.

LASHES SMITH WRECKERS

Bittner lashed out at the Smith Committee as affording "the most brazen spectacle of an attempt to destroy organized labor" ever seen in Congress, in criticizing the Smith probe into the Labor Board and its proposed mutilation of the act.

The same tories who "were against the establishment of this great Republic," who fought against "freezing the chattel slaves" and who have opposed every attempt of the people to gain greater freedom are against the Wagner Act and against organized labor, Bittner declared.

House Tories Slash Wage-Hour, NLRB Funds, Ignore Need

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—Congressional tories have carried out another step in their plan to wreck labor legislation by slashing enforcement funds, in a 148 to 115 vote in the House to cut the Wage-Hour law appropriation by 20 per cent.

The vote came after hot debate in which Rep. Casey of Massachusetts warned that "This is a vote for the wage-hour law or against it," and in which Rep. Knute Hill of Washington state confessed; "This is my fourth term in the House and the longer I stay here the more I am amazed at the smug complacency of the members at the tragedy around us."

After slicing a million dollars from the wage-hour appropriation, the House, with its Tory hatchet crowd in the leadership, plowed into the National Labor Relations Board. By a 160-90 vote, funds for the NLRB were sliced $337,000, which will seriously cripple the Board's activities and wipe out its important economic research division. The appropriations bill now goes to the Senate for action.

ADMIT HOSTILITY TO ACT

Leaders of the anti-NLRB bloc freely admitted their action was based not on the Board's needs, but on the belief that this was one method of carrying on the NAM-Smith Committee attack on the Board and the Wagner Act.

The vote came on a motion by Rep. Abe Murdock of Utah, member of the Smith group's dissenting minority, to restore at least $248,000 to the appropriation.

NLRB Chairman, J. Warren Madden, said the House action, if sustained by the Senate, would "seriously impede the work of the Board during the coming fiscal year and further delay the handling of labor disputes, the issuing of Board decisions, and their enforcement in the courts."

The tory hatchet men took refuge in a teller vote when they put across the slash, since a teller vote does not require a record of the ayes and nays. Gallery observers, however, were able to spot such adverse votes as those of Rep. Cox of Georgia, Hoffman of Michigan, Smith of Virginia—chairman of the Smith Committee probing the Labor Board—Thorkelson of Montana, a member of the Silver Shirts, Taber of New York, and a few others. A more complete list is in preparation.

VIRTUAL REPEAL

The 20 per cent will amount to virtual repeal of the act, Rep. Casey declared, telling the House that "if the law isn't effectively and efficiently enforced, it ought

Wire, Write To Senators

Enforcement of the Wage-Hour Act and Wagner Act is threatened by the House of Representatives' appropriation cut.

Every union, every worker should write or wire his Senators. Tell them that labor demands that the NLRB and the Wage-Hour Division be given the full appropriation set by the 1940-41 budget.

Time is short. ACT NOW!

Lewis Demands Funds For Labor Agencies

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—CIO Pres. John L. Lewis today had demanded of Congress that action be taken — and taken quickly—to preserve the appropriations asked for the National Labor Relations Board and the U. S. Wage-Hour Division.

The House Appropriations Committee last week sliced crippling amounts from the allotments asked by both agencies. The CIO leader said the proposed cuts "were based primarily on the displeasure entertained for the legislation itself and not upon any fair estimate of the financial administrative needs of the agencies involved."

The Wagner Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act, he pointed out, "are the two acts of Congress for which organized labor most earnestly demands protection."

TEXT OF LETTER

Lewis' letter to Representatives Rayburn and Martin, Democratic and Republican floor leaders respectively, follows in full:

"The House of Representatives is now considering the Department of Labor and Federal Security appropriation bill.

"In this appropriation measure the National Labor Relations Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act, both of the utmost importance to labor, are being scuttled through an attempted slashing of the appropriation for their administration. In both cases the cut in appropriations has been based primarily upon the displeasure entertained for the legislation

THOUSANDS OF UNEMPLOYED in New York City marched around City Hall to demand better relief standards and more jobs.

Accept Transit Union Terms in New York

NEW YORK, Mar. 30.—A strike-averting agreement today guaranteed the Transport Workers Union, CIO, full union shop status on subway lines soon to be taken over and operated by the City of New York.

Backing down from an earlier position which had aroused the ire not only of the TWU but of all organized labor in the city, Mayor LaGuardia told a conference composed of city and union officials that he would recommend recognition of the TWU's existing contracts and in addition pledge himself to find jobs for several thousand union members who will be affected by the demolition of two elevated lines.

CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, who with Pres. Michael Quill of the TWU led the labor delegation in its second conference with the mayor, issued this statement on the precedent-setting decision.

"We are of the opinion that this conference resulted in substantial progress.

"We understand that Mayor LaGuardia, by this statement, recommends the assumption of the existing contracts of the Transport Workers Union in their terms and conditions, subject only to judicial decision."

QUILL SEES GAINS

Quill, backing up the CIO leader's statement, commented that "we understand that every line of the contracts will remain intact. We expect now that by the time unification is accomplished, the union will have 100% organization on the Independent Subway System," which was built and is now operated by the city.

The agreement won enthusiastic approval from 500 members of the New York locals' general executive board at a meeting the same night.

As worked out by the conferees, following a week of legal exploration by city and union lawyers, the understanding calls for the mayor to recommend to the Board of Transportation that it take over the union contracts when the city absorbs the subway lines now operated by private corporations.

PLAN COURT TEST

The agreement provides that after the Board of Transportation accepts the contracts, the issue will be brought into the courts to test its constitutionality.

Over 20,000 employes of the IRT and BMT systems are directly affected by the union victory. Indirect beneficiaries are workers on the city-owned Independent Subway System, which since its construction some years ago has maintained that Civil Service regulations automatically bar a contract with the union.

This was the same position taken by LaGuardia up until the conferences this week. As a result of the change in policy, TWU leaders predicted a rapid growth in union membership on the Independent line, which will be amalgamated with the IRT & BMT under city merger plans.

Smethurst Raps AFL's Injunction

Detroit, Mar. 30 — Action on the Consumers Power Co. election, stopped at the last minute by an injunction granted to an AFL union fearful of a sweeping CIO victory, rests today with the National Labor Relations Board.

The polls, which were to be held in a dozen Michigan cities where the big utility company has sub-stations, were halted when Federal District Court Judge Moinet, acting on application from the AFL's Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, granted the injunction just five days before the first scheduled election.

BARRED FROM BALLOT

The AFL union had been barred from the ballot when it came out second best in a previous election more than a year ago, though the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee at that time failed to receive a majority of the votes

Transit Union May Strike In Louisville

Louisville, Ky., Mar. 30—Threat of a strike of the Transport Workers Union increased here as the Louisville Railway Co., operators of the city's street car and bus lines, refused to recognize the CIO organization.

"A strike is inevitable unless the company takes steps to recognize us," M. J. Britt, TWU international representative declared. His statement followed the dismissal of Alfred Herald, a veteran company employe and acting secretary of the local union.

"This is one of the most out-and-out cases of discrimination for union activity that I've ever seen," Britt said.

Moving to support Herald, the union placed pickets around the home of F. H. Miller, president of the traction outfit which employs close to a thousand men. Herald's discharge was attributed by the company to infraction of safety rules, a complaint which brought a retort from the fired worker that he had a perfect record during the last six of his 14 years' service with the company.

SUPPORT FROM PAPERS

Powerful support for the TWU came in the form of editorials in the Louisville Courier-Journal, which pointed out that Herald's discharge came the day after it became apparent the Kentucky legislature would not pass a "genuine" state labor relations act.

Attacking the company's "short-sighted" labor and publicity policies, the paper said of the case:

"The press has tried to find the facts. But no facts are available, except labor's side of the story. The company sticks to the view that its labor relations are nobody's business.

"This is a view which can lead to nothing but suspicion and bad feeling. It is a view which is not tenable in the year 1940."

Workers Choose CIO, 8-1, As AFL Drive Goes Pft-t-t

SPARTANSBURG, S. C., Mar. 30.—The latest edition of the AFL's annual "campaign" to organize the South met its first big obstacle today when employes of the Beaumont Manufacturing Co. voted eight-to-one to remain in the CIO Textile Workers Union.

In casting aside both the AFL's Southern Cotton Textile Federation and an independent union, the workers at Beaumont held fast to their choice of two years ago in a vote sponsored by the National Labor Relations Board.

The meeting at which the vote took place was called by groups hostile to the CIO union and followed a drive by the AFL affiliate to organize local workers. Only employes of the mill were permitted to attend the meeting, and all official organizers were kept out while the discussion and the pro-CIO vote took place.

Vote CIO!

The utility workers and the automobile workers who are to vote in the forthcoming Labor Board elections at the Consolidated-Edison Co. in New York and General Motors plants throughout the country, have the chance of a lifetime.

The people of the United States had to fight a war of independence to win their freedom from England.

But the thousands of workers who are going to vote in these elections can win their union freedom—and an opportunity to build a brighter future for themselves and their families—with no more effort than it takes to mark their ballots for the CIO.

In the Consolidated-Edison election, the choice is between the strength of modern CIO industrial unionism and the weakness of a company outfit. The AFL union was so bankrupt and discredited that it had to withdraw from the ballot.

In the General Motors election, it is a great and powerful industrial union on the one hand, the CIO United Automobile Workers, and the pitiful remnants of Homer Martin's rump outfit — hemmed in by a flock of AFL craft unions — on the other.

By marking their ballots for the CIO, all of these workers can secure for themselves better wages and conditions, greater security and the right to run their own affairs democratically through the most modern, efficient and powerful form of unionism yet devised.

The alternative is the weakness and division of craft or company unionism, or no union protection at all.

That is why competent observers are so confident of victory for the CIO in the coming elections.

But they who would be free must themselves strike the blow —even if it is no more than the blow of a pencil on a ballot. And every worker owes it to himself, his family, and his and their future, to take advantage of this chance of a lifetime, by going to vote and voting CIO.

A Relic of Serfdom

Those who are looking for un-American conditions that are subversive of our democratic institutions, would do well to start by investigating the poll tax laws of eight American states.

These rules subvert democracy by allowing only a minority of more prosperous citizens to vote.

Congressman Lee E. Geyer illustrated how the poll tax works in a recent radio speech. While 70 per cent of the adult citizens vote in those 37 states where democracy prevails, in the eight poll tax states, the percentage is only 36 per cent. This is not democracy, but minority rule.

Geyer points out that to place a tax on the privilege of voting is "a relic of Roman serfdom, that exists today in no place in the world except Turkey, Persia, China and these eight American states."

At the request of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Congressman Geyer has introduced a bill, HR 7534, to abolish the poll tax in federal elections. This bill should have the vigirous support not only of labor but of all believers in American democracy.

Industry-Wide Collective Bargaining

Cheering news comes from the West Coast in the announcement that lumber employers in Washington and Oregon have agreed to industry-wide negotiations with the CIO International Woodworkers of America.

Pres. Harold Pritchett of the IWA sees in this progressive move many advantages for the workers and the industry.

It will mean "elimination of jurisdictional disputes and phony boycotts" by the AFL craft union which has tried by such means to defeat the desire of the woodworkers for a progressive industrial union, he points out.

"The desire on the part of the employers to negotiate on this basis will mean the elimination to a great extent of unfair cut-throat competition," he also adds. "It can be the means of stabilizing the lumbering industry."

Balancing the Human Budget?

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Keep Your Eye on the Ball

IT all started with Mickey Mouse — the little rat! Snow White had something to do with it too.

They made so much money for Walt Disney that he was able to be an "angel" to Leopold Stokowski for his goodwill tour.

Now, Stokowski is a "Red Network" man. Not that his orchestra concerts have been broadcast over the Red Network of the NBC — nothing so radical as that. He was just included in a directory of the same name, which lists nearly every American who ever had a liberal thought — or ever associated with anyone suspected of having entertained a liberal thought.

So all on account of Mickey Mouse, millions of young Americans were threatened with loss of job and educational aid.

You don't get the connection? Well, probably nobody else does except Rep. John Taber of New York.

But he actually fought to slash the appropriation for the Natl. Youth Administration, on the grounds that it aided some young American musicians to obtain jobs with Stokowski's orchestra—on a tour partly financed by Walt Disney, who got his money from Mickey Mouse and Snow White.

Incidentally the tour is sponsored by Colby M. Chester of General Foods, former president of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, and a bevy of other big businessmen.

A Smokescreen

Such clownish antics of types like Taber give the newspapermen a laugh and get quite a lot of space in the papers. They even start some inmates of Union League clubs and other old ladies' homes to looking under their beds for reds.

But while all the fun and frenzy is at its height, more serious business is afoot. Millions of American workers, unemployed and young people are threatened with loss of jobs, and with loss of relief and union rights, under cover of this smokescreen.

How To Skin A Law

There is more than one way to skin a cat. And at the present time American working people are being skinned by one of the slickest, quietest and most effective methods — namely by cutting appropriations for the enforcement of the legislation that most concerns them.

Take the wage-hour act, designed to protect the most miserably sweated workers in America. Sweatshop employers and their representatives in Congress have for a long time been trying to have amendments passed which would remove some millions of the lowest-paid workers from the act's protection.

Failing to get such amendments through Congress to date, these sweatshoppers have tried the appropriation method with some success.

The House appropriations committee recommended a slash of 20% in funds needed to enforce the wage-hour act. It coupled this recommendation with a demand that the act be amended before more funds should be granted. And the House has actually voted, by 115 to 148, for this crippling cut in funds for this vital labor law.

Backstairs Attack

This backstairs method of attacking labor legislation is also being tried on the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Having failed so far to enact destructive amendments to the Wagner Act, the House reactionaries have tried to achieve the same result by cutting the appropriation for the Labor Board. The House pushed through a 10% slash in funds, which would mean the laying off of hundreds of the Board employes needed for proper enforcement of the act.

In this case, too, a smokescreen of propaganda has been thought necessary to cover up the dirty work.

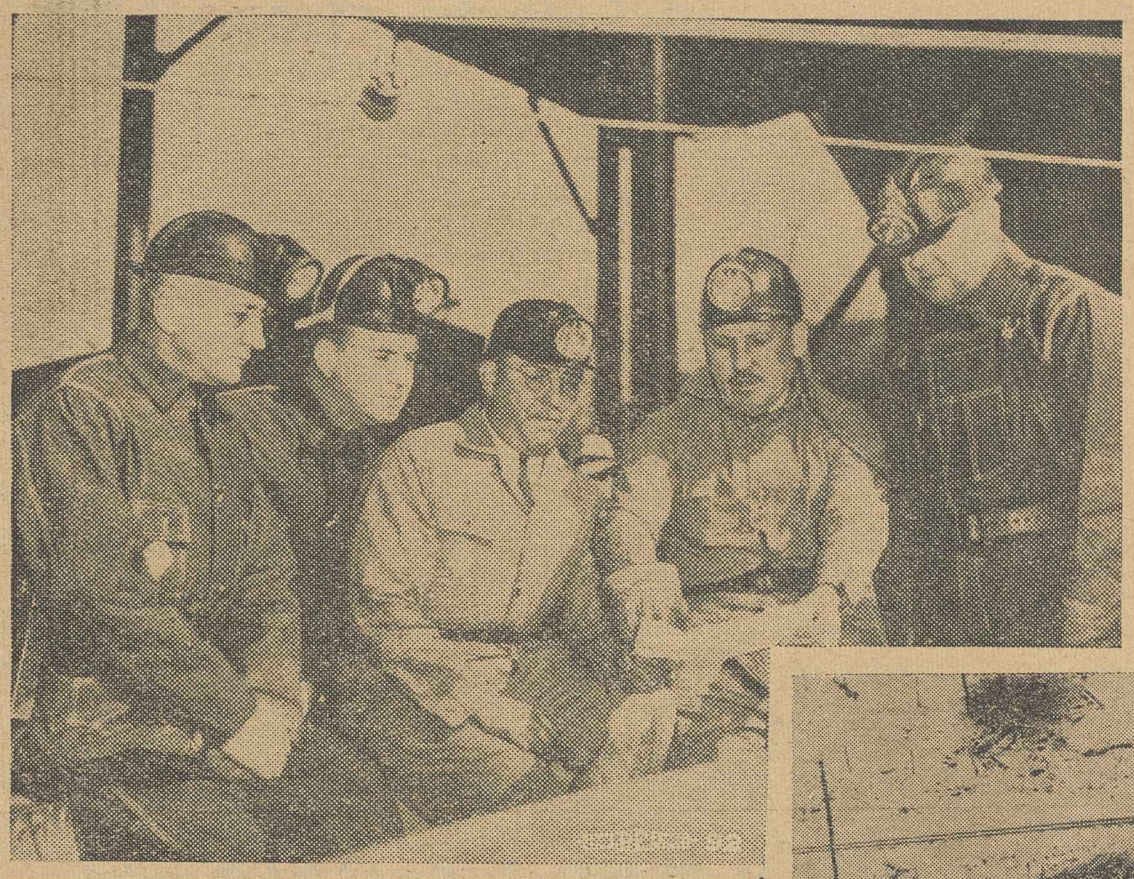
Rep. Howard Smith, for instance, who has been "investigating" the Labor Board with a sledgehammer and a meataxe, tried to cover up this murderous attack on labor's rights by raving about an article written years ago by an economist who later got a job with the Board.

This kind of stuff, like the Mickey Mouse-Stokowski incident, makes newsy copy. It is designed to divert labor's attention to trivialities while its throat is being expertly cut by Smith and his ilk.

An Old, Old Story

The same kind of barrage may be expected to cover up the attack on the unemployed, when it comes to slashing appropriations for WPA and other public works.

It's an old, old political technique — to create incidents and stunts to divert attention from the real issues. It has been used against every union since the labor movement began.

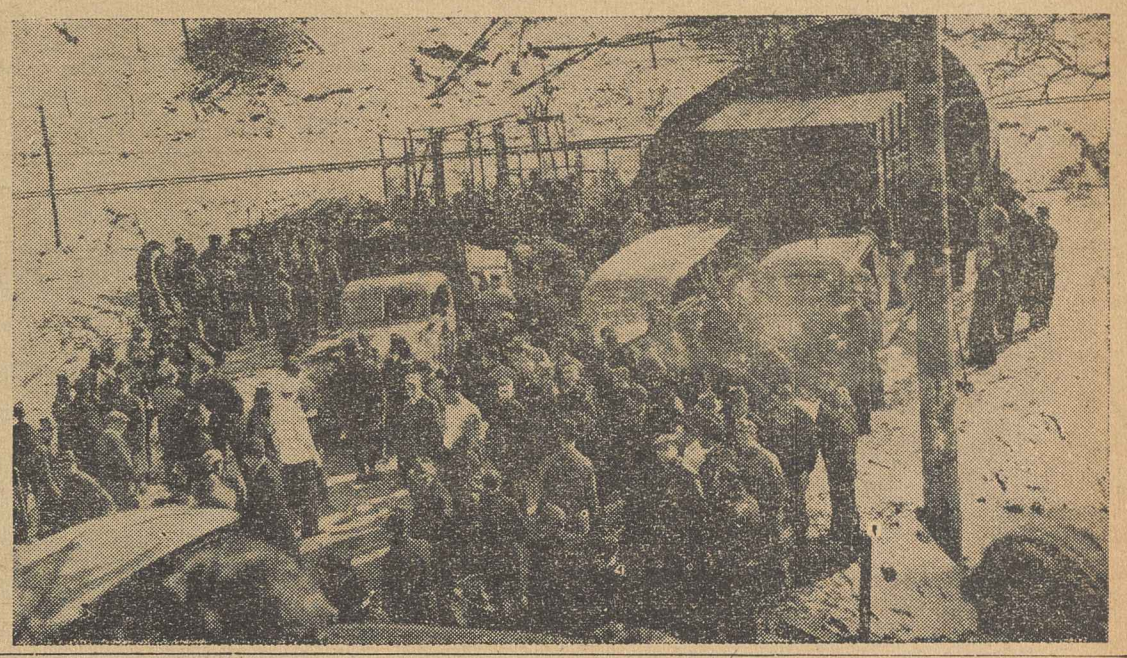


So experienced labor men are keeping their eye on the ball while Congress is acting on the vital question of appropriations. They know what proposed cuts mean in terms of lost jobs and human misery, and they are not being kidded by slick patter and phony "incidents."

Push Drive In Minnesota

Minneapolis, Mar. 30. — Twin Cities CIO unions are setting up a Committee of 100 to carry on a campaign to complete organization of heavy industry in the state, following a conference here.

The conference also adopted a resolution offering support to the Farmer-Labor Party "if and when it adopts" a legislative program in keeping with that of the CIO for progressive labor and social laws.



'Probe' Causes of Latest Coal Mine Accident

WITH 73 KILLED in mine explosion at St. Clairsville, Ohio, members of the House of Representatives Mines Committee temporarily shook off their lethargy and came out to the scene of the disaster. Pres. John Owens of District 6, United Mine Workers (second from right, at left) explained the accident to the Congressmen, charged that present mining laws "created a slaughter house for the murder of citizens."

Back in Washington, Committee officials cautiously predicted they "might possibly" hold hearings on the Neely-Keller bill, calling for federal safety inspection of coal mines. The bill passed the Senate after Pres. John L. Lewis of the UMW addressed a blistering letter to members of the upper house calling attention to the mine industry's fearful accident record.

Picture, below shows family and friends of the St. Clairsville disaster gathered at the mine entrance to await news of their loved ones.

Settlement Ends 15-Month Walkout At Mid-Continent

TULSA, Okla., Mar. 30.—The 15-month attempt of the Mid-Continent Oil Co. to destroy the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union ended in failure today with the reaching of an agreement between company and union.

As an outgrowth of the settlement, 84 criminal cases against strikers which had been dragging in local courts for many months, were dismissed by county law enforcement officials.

Settlement of the strike came about in conferences attended by David Fowler, CIO regional director for Arkansas and Oklahoma, Pres. Coulter of the oil union and Jack Hays, local president, together with company officials. Negotiations started on Feb. 29, after Fowler and Hays had persuaded Gov. Phillips of Oklahoma to invite company officials to participate in the conference.

TERMS OF PACT

The agreement which terminated one of the southwest's most bitter labor disputes, calls for re-employment of workers at full seniority as soon as jobs are available. Employes who have received letters of discharge will have the right to appeal their cases.

At the end of six months, company and union will call a joint conference for the purpose of reaching an agreement on wages, hours and working conditions. Mid-Continent agrees to make no further contracts with individuals to set aside provisions of the old union contract.

HAILS VICTORY

Fowler, hailing the conclusion of the strike, said the company's granting of seniority and collective bargaining are "the greatest victories won by organized labor in the oil industry."

The CIO regional official said it "is now up to both parties to this agreement to cooperate for the best interests of the industry and the employes.

"At the expiration of this contract, which is six months hence, we again meet for the purpose of rewriting a working agreement that will guarantee harmonious relationships. I consider this a great victory won in favor of collective bargaining."

The Mid-Continent strike won support from CIO and AFL unions in all parts of the country, with the CIO convention at San Francisco placing the firm's products on its unfair list.

Labor Board hearings a few months ago disclosed widespread spying and violence against the strikers, with local officials in cooperation with Mid-Continent to break the workers' morale.

cast. Last week's election would have offered Consumers' thousands of workers a choice between the CIO and no union."

"As a result of this injunction," declared Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to CIO Pres. Lewis "the employes of Consumers Power Co. are obliged to suffer further delay in the determination of a collective bargaining agency

"The Utility Workers Organizing Committee, which is affiliated with the CIO, is doing everything within its power to minimize this delay," said Smethurst, who led the CIO campaign, wrote to the workers involved. "As soon as some definite disposition has been found by the Labor Board, this information will be passed on to you so that you might be informed of the situation as progress is made.

CIO IN MAJORITY

"Do not let this injunction discourage you in perfecting your union organization. If there ever was a time for needed organization, it is now!

"There is no longer a question about the attitude of the employes of the Consumers Power towards the UWOC."

to go off the books." Labor sources pointed out that the cut will result in reducing already inadequate inspectors by 350, which will allow chiselling employers to violate the act at will, discourage those who try to comply.

Earlier CIO Pres. John L. Lewis wrote to House Majority and Minority leaders pointing out that labor is aware of this attack on its painfully acquired standards and demanding the full appropriation for both the Wage-Hour Division and the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

The House reactionaries also voted to cut $10,000,000 out of old age assistance funds of the Social Security Board, following recommendations of the same Appropriations Committee that urged crippling the two labor acts.

itself and not upon any fair estimate of the financial administrative needs of the agencies involved.

"The National Labor Relations Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act are the two Acts of Congress for which organized labor most earnestly demands protection. The contemplated decrease in appropriation constitutes a direct attack on this basic legislation.

"On behalf of the CIO I desire to urge upon you the deep importance which labor attaches to this problem and the need for granting to the National Labor Relations Board and the Wage and Hour Administration the full approriation which was recommended by the Bureau of the Budget."

WIRES AFFILIATES

In a telegram sent to all CIO affiliates, Lewis warned it to be "urgent that our national and local unions and councils wire their Congressmen and Senators, protesting against such an underhanded attack on labor legislation."

Cite Anti-Trust History To Prove Apex Damage Award Not Justified

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—CIO attorneys today urged the U. S. Supreme Court to accept the doctrine that unions are not subject to the Sherman and Layton anti-trust acts except when they "join a combination of employers which would be in violation of the anti-trust laws."

The argument was contained in a brief filed in the Apex Hosiery case by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, acting as a "friend of the court."

Appeal to the nation's highest court was taken by the Apex Co. of Philadelphia, which last year won a $700,000 Sherman Act triple damages award against the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO affiliate. The federal circuit court of appeals overruled the lower district judiciary, however, causing the company to take the case to the Supreme Court.

The CIO position, based on a full review of legal history of the Clayton Anti-Trust Act, was based on the argument "any activities of a union and its members alone, whether collective bargaining, strikes, boycotts, or picketing, do not come under the anti-trust law" since "any possible criminal or otherwise illegal acts a union may commit are amply covered by other federal and local statutes."

FIRST OF ITS KIND

Noting that the CIO brief was the first in which the Supreme Court had been presented a full history of the Clayton Act, Pressman pointed out that "labor laws of the past decade show intention on the part of Congress to encourage collective bargaining, rather than to regard it as in restraint of trade."

He quoted Section 6 of the Clayton Act, "which clearly provides that 'unions shall not be held to combinations in restraint of trade'," and explained that "history shows tha this section was written into the Act in response to the demands of organized labor following the Danbury Hatters decisions by the Supreme Court in 1908."

Local Unions Plan Confab In Indiana

Indianapolis, Mar. 30—A statewide meeting of CIO local industrial unions — the first of its kind — will be held here on April 7, James Robb, CIO regional director, announced today.

Planned to bring about full discussion of the "miscellaneous" unions, which are directly affiliated to the CIO rather than to a national or international union, the convention is expected to draw a large number of delegates.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, and John Brophy, director of local industrial unions, will be principal speakers at the meeting, with local union officials also scheduled for a number of talks on the problems involved.

CIO Building Men Busy As Spring Boom Starts

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—With the advent of the annual spring construction upswing, members of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee are at work on many types of projects in all parts of the nation.

Some of the many jobs now employing UCWOC members include a $1,000,000 FHA apartment project in Philadelphia, a large apartment house at Teaneck, N. J., a 400-house project in New York, a printing plant near Washington, an extensive list of electrical jobs in New York, and a large housing program in Chicago.

In addition to these types of building, UCWOC members are also now at work in the heavy construction field on road, bridge and similar projects. Countless other jobs are in progress over the nation.

SPOKE IN NEW YORK

A. D. Lewis, Chairman of the UCWOC, spoke by special invitation before a meeting of the Board of Governors of the New York Building Trades Employers Association. Membership of this association includes most of the large builders in New York and vicinity. Lewis also appeared this week before a large association of Philadelphia contractors.

Admission by craft union leaders that nearly all the home building is being done under non-union conditions was an incident of Lewis' New York visit. These unorganized workers do 50 per cent of the building work in the New York area. Workers in this field receive only from $5 to $8 a day and often work overtime and Sundays at regular rates.

After ignoring for years the unorganized workers, far more than a majority of the 3,000,000 in the industry, the craft bosses are now making frantic efforts to meet the challenge of the UCWOC but without success. Commenting on this, The New York Post said:

"The AFL leaders are considerably alarmed over the progress of the CIO's Construction Workers Union, which has signed up some 9,000 members in the small building and alteration field during the last eight months.

"The CIO, by its policy of vertical contracts, has been able to organize the small building field on a scale which has been impossible for the AFL under its complicated system.

UNIFORM WAGES

"The CIO contracts provide for uniform wages of $9 a day for all skilled workers, $6 for helpers and $5 for laborers, with a five-day 40-hour week. In contrast, the AFL contracts are divided into 25 trades, which are broken down, in turn, into 125 subdivisions. Wage scales range from 75 5/8 cents an hour for 'stone beginners' upward (often in complicated fractions) to $3.12½ for 'scenic artists in a supervisory capacity."

Predict Big Victory In GM Election

DETROIT, Mar. 30.—The AFL auto union's last stronghold in Detroit swung over to the CIO this week as leaders of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, revised upwards their already optimistic predictions on the outcome of the big General Motors Labor Board election on April 17.

The last plant of consequence in Detroit where the AFL union had bargaining rights went solidly to the UAW-CIO when the membership of the AFL local voted to merge with the CIO local at Graham-Paige.

Meanwhile, union and NLRB officials, after checking General Motors employment lists, said that 136,000 workers—rather than the previously estimated 125,000—will vote in the elections.

TO VOTE APRIL 17

All the polls, to be held in 59 plants in 11 states, will take place on the 17th. Votes will be counted and the results announced on April 18.

CIO union leaders are touring the election sites in a vigorous campaign to achieve the highest possible demonstration of votes for the UAW-CIO. G M Facts, election campaign paper, has already been printed in 625,000 copies, with new issues coming off the presses at frequent intervals.

On April 6, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will make his first Detroit speaking appearance since the historic 1937 strikes. Accompanied by Vice-Presidents Murray and Hillman, he will speak at Olympia Stadium on that day, and the following evening the trio will speak at a huge mass meeting in Flint.

Your WPA Job:

What's to Be Done?

By RALPH HETZEL
CIO Unemployment Director

At least 800,000 people will be dropped from the WPA between now and June, if the WPA keeps within its present appropriations. 800,000 heads of families—and their millions of dependents—are going to be cut off at a time when unemployment is increasing rapidly.

By July, WPA rolls will be down to 1,500,000 which is lower than they have ever been except for one month in 1937. If the Budget estimate for WPA for next year is adopted, the WPA rolls will be lower than they have ever been.

If the Budget estimate for WPA for next year is adopted, 600,000 more workers will be cut off from WPA between July and November.

WHY THESE SLASHES?

What basis have the "budget-balancers" for such brutal slashes? Nothing but wishful thinking. The present predictions of reliable economists are for an average of ten million unemployed in the fiscal year 1940 and nothing less than an average of nine million unemployed in the fiscal year 1941.

The CIO is concentrating its forces right now on the fight to keep the WPA rolls at least at present levels until June 30. The WPA can do this if it spends the money it has available and goes into the red for about one hundred million dollars. This deficiency can then be made up by adding the sum to the 1941 Appropriation.

Congress can give the WPA authority to do this if it simply repeals the Woodrum Amendment to the last WPA Bill, which provides that the WPA funds must be spread over the full fiscal year.

If Congress is sufficiently convinced of the need for more WPA jobs right now, they will repeal the Woodrum Amendment. Then it will be much easier to convince them that the Budget estimate for the WPA should be raised to provide not 1,350,000 jobs but at least three million!

R. J. Thomas On CBS Chain, April 3

Washington, Mar. 30 — CIO members and friends of labor are urged to tune in on their local Columbia Broadcasting Co. station Wednesday, April 3, at 10:15 P. M. Eastern Standard Time, to hear the latest in a series of CIO speakers on national radio hookups.

Wednesday's speaker is R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers and vice-president of the CIO, who will talk on "Responsible Unionism." Local union groups should check with Columbia stations in their community to see that the program is carried.

If the time is contracted already, and cannot be shifted to Thomas' speech, arrangements should be made for later rebroadcast by electrical transcription.

FEWER JOBS

Chicago. — Illinois workers had fewer jobs and earned less money in February than January, state Department of Labor reports revealed. Usually there is an advance in employment in payrolls and employment during that time of the year.

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

By CECIL OWEN
Publicity Director
United Construction Workers Organizing Committee

WASHINGTON. — The legislative program of the Congress of Industrial Organizations calls for 1,000,000 new homes a year, of which 700,000 are to be built by private industry.

This is not a Utopian dream nor does this phase of the CIO program call for a single cent of government subsidy. It has already been done in England and Wales where from 1935 to 1939 new housing averaged about 350,000 units a year—a figure that in proportion to the population is the equivalent of 1,000,000 a year in the United States.

Of the CIO's proposed 1,000,000 homes a year, 700,000 to be built by private capital would house the vast group of Americans now in the no-man's land between government subsidized housing and high-cost private homes Few homes are being built for the 40 per cent of our population, including nearly all the CIO membership, with annual incomes between $1,000 and $2,000.

Here exists a vast market for low-cost housing that is a challenge to industry. Why doesn't it accept the challenge?

THE CIO CONTRIBUTION

One of the standard alibis for failure of industry to build homes for this overwhelming majority of Americans is that construction costs are too high Much is said about high labor costs and there is considerable talk of the annual wage as a way out.

Construction costs are too high but labor is only one factor and, in fact, a minor one so far as housing is concerned. Critics of labor overlook the cold fact that is now admitted even by the backward craft union leaders of the AFL that labor in the house building field is almost wholly unorganized. Labor on residential construction simply does not get the high hourly rates that the craft unions ask.

But the CIO has an even better answer to this phase of construction costs. It has made a definite contribution to lower costs and more home building.

High hourly rates have been eliminated in favor of a lateral wage scale by the United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee of the CIO which is now organizing building workers in all fields on an industrial union basis for the first time in construction industry. The UCWOC has also ended the jurisdictional strike problem and the barriers against use of new materials and modern production methods. It has outlawed illegal combines to keep materials prices jacked up and similar evils long tolerated by craft unions.

MASS MARKET

Furthermore, the CIO membership offers an ideal mass market for low-cost housing and CIO unions stand ready to cooperate with industry or government on any feasible program of mass production that would sharply cut construction costs. The CIO welcomes technical advances in construction because it has a vital interest in low costs as consumers of housing and also because it knows the less costly the houses the more work there will be for its construction workers.

Thus, the CIO has taken the lead in bringing America the housing it needs. Now it is up to the material dealers, the land speculators, the get-rich-quick operative builders, the banks and building and loan agencies, and other factors in housing, to match this CIO contribution. Let the government assume responsibility for working out a well-rounded program and then present it in a forthright manner to industry with demands for action.

What America wants now is action!

Survey Shows Union Aids Auto Industry

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—The CIO in the automobile industry is responsible for stabilizing labor relations, for higher wages, shorter hours and generally improved working and living conditions, according to a report by the Brookings Institution here.

The Brookings Institution—a privately endowed and generally conservative setup for the study of economics and sociology—hedges its praise of the United Automobile Workers with qualifying phrases, but the fact that the CIO union is responsible for the improved conditions comes clearly through the report.

The report says, according to an advance summary, that wages have "greatly advanced" and though it isn't all due to the union, "the apparent fact that wage differentials between organized and unorganized plants are now much greater than the contrasts between the same plants in pre-union times, indicates, however, that the union has been responsible for some of the increase in the general level."

IN OTHER WORDS

In other words, the UAW has raised wages in every plant where it is organized, and the advantages of CIO organization are clearly discernable to anyone who studies working conditions in plants that are as yet unorganized.

Union seniority rules, its insistence on cutting down the speed-up, and its rigid observance of agreements, all contribute to stability in the industry and in the long run to better feeling on the part of management, the report observes.

The report is based, the Institution said, on extensive field work and conferences with union leaders and management officials.

Signs Pact With Textile Union

Anderson, Ind., Mar. 30.—After fighting the union for three years, the Anderson Mattress Company here has finally signed a contract with Local 169, Textile Workers Union, providing a closed shop, vacations with pay and other benefits. This is the first agreement the firm has ever signed, and one of the first closed shop pacts won by the CIO in Anderson.

Drop Charges Against Canada CIO Official

TIMMINS, Ont., March 30.—Defense of Canada Regulations charges under which he was arrested last December were dismissed yesterday against C. H. Millard, Canadian secretary of the CIO.

Millard was allowed his freedom by the crown after Cecil Snyder, deputy attorney general of Ontario, had read an exchange of correspondence between the CIO leader and Hon. Gordon Conant, attorney general.

In his letter to Mr. Conant, Millard said criticisms of the Canadian government for which he was arrested were made in good faith. He advised the crown he was fully in agreement with Canada's war effort and was supporting it.

Millard was arrested Dec. 6 in Toronto for statements he allegedly made before a meeting of miners in this gold mining camp. His trial was postponed until this month due to his illness.

The crown charged the CIO official said that men were joining the army "because that was the only place they could be sure of eating regularly;" that "we should have democracy in Canada before we go to Europe to fight for democracy" and that "there is not a great deal of sense in going to Europe to fight Hitlerism while there is Hitlerism right here in Canada."

PLANS INQUIRY

Dismissal of the charges came four days before Canada's federal elections, in which labor's vote was an important factor.

Commenting on the government action, Millard said that he intends "to inquire why I was arrested on such flimsy charges, why I was not allowed to see my attorney before leaving for the first hearing, and why I was put to the expense of long trips to appear for remands, when a court in Toronto could have been used.

"I have retracted nothing of my original statements, which were evidently misinterpreted by someone, as the crown has now tacitly admitted."

Carolina Liberals Cite Needs

Greensboro, N. C., Mar. 30.—A state and congressional legislation program was drawn up at a conference of the North Carolina League for Progressive Democracy held in Burlington, N. C., on March 10. Some 300 delegates from trde union, farm, youth, student, and Negro organizations and other groups attended.

A "people's program" was drawn up calling for increased appropriations for unemployment and relief, farm aid and housing programs; condemning the Dies Committee, and finger-printing of aliens, and favoring additional funds for the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee.

The first plank in the platform opposes any step which may lead America into war.

AFL Resorts To Forgery Against CIO

Washington, Mar. 30.—Slandering the CIO is an old standby for discredited AFL officials, and here in Washington they've carried it to the point of forging the CIO name to phony leaflets.

Latest product, traced by local police to a Mr. Fabrizio of the AFL Building Trades, calls on its readers (in the name of the CIO) to "get what's been stolen from you for years past," promises to "double your wages and cut your hours in half," and similar inflammatory nonsense, solely to discredit the CIO.

CIO complaints to the police brought the investigation and tracking down of the author of the forgery.

Clothing Strikers Win Aid

Baltimore, Mar. 30.—Backed by all labor in this city, 400 members of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers are striking against Kaylon, Inc., manufacturers of cotton garments and big-scale seller of merchandise to Montgomery-Ward, Inc.

Newman Jeffrey, local ACWA official, said the union is seeking a contract and general wage increases. Cutters and pressers, he pointed out, are receiving far less than the union's minimum wage scale.

Strong support is coming from the AFL teamsters' union, which is refusing to handle merchandise addressed to the plant or shipped out by it.

AFL Statistics WinHaw-Haw From CIO

New York, Mar. 30 — Adolph Germer, CIO regional director here, today proved an unimpressed observer of "the mathematical gymnastics" displayed by Pres. Thomas J. Lyons, head of the New York AFL, who claimed his state organization had more dues than the CIO throughout the nation.

"I was rather amused," Germer commented, adding that Lyons' statement was probably due "to his lack of more reliable information, which is not uncommon in AFL circles."

Pointing out that the United Mine Workers alone have 600,000 members, Germer said:

"More intelligent and more honorable representatives of the AFL freely give credit to the CIO for their growth in membership. They tell us that we created the upsurge in union sentiment, and they cashed in on it.

"Never in the history of the nation have so many workers been organized as during the existence of the CIO. If we have succeeded in moving complacent AFL organizers and executives from their swivel chairs, we have justified our existence."

Seek New Pacts On Tankers

New York, Mar. 30.—Wage negotiations are in progress with eight major tanker companies employing more than 2,300 workers on 69 vessels, the National Maritime Union announced this week. The CIO union is seeking to formulate new contracts to replace those which expire April 1.

A monthly pay increase of $10 for all ratings and one and two-men increases in the manning scale ranging from $60 to $120 a month were signed, the NMU points out, before the increase in carriage charges, which now average three to four times as much as was being received last year.

The companies with whom negotiations have started include all the major tanker concerns except Standard Oil and Tidewater. They are: Sinclair Navigation, Pennsylvania Shipping, Kellog Steamship Co., Gulf Oil, National Bulk Carriers, Pan American Petroleum Transport, Commercial Molasses and B & L Shipping Co.

Optical Workers Win Gains

New York, Mar. 30 — Renewal of a closed shop contract with M. H. Harris, Inc., which operates 27 retail optical stores in New York and New Jersey, was announced today by the United Optical Workers Union, CIO.

Under the terms of the agreement the large part of the workers will receive a wage increase of three dollars weekly, with continuance of seven holidays with pay, one week's vacation and other union conditions won previously.

Sebastian Rebaldo, organizer and secretary of the Optical Workers Coordinating Committee conducted the negotiations for the contract, which he said was signed in the face of frantic efforts by the Optical Employers Association to persuade M. H. Harris to join them in an attempt to break the union.

3-WEEK STRIKE

The Association with which the union had a contract the previous year, embarked on an ill-fated attempt to abolish conditions won by the workers over a period of years and cripple the union. A three-week strike, 100% effective, was conducted by the union.

At the end of the second week, two of the Association's members broke away and signed individual contracts. The Association then began to negotiate in earnest and the strike ended a week later.

The American Optical Co. of Southbridge, Mass., which has more than 300 branches throughout the country actively supported the Association, following their policy pursued for years of provoking a general strike whereever possible in the hope of breaking the union involved. In this case, they were unsuccessful, as the employers were all retailers and vulnerable to a picket line.

Distorts Facts On Workers' Income

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Washington, Mar. 30. — Many a worker in Birmingham, Alabama, trying to squeeze enough out of his skinny pay envelope to bring home the bacon and buy the baby shoes, must have been puzzled or peeved last week to read in a five column headline in a Birmingham paper that the "Worker Receives Lion's Share of Wealth Produced by Industry."

Sherman Rogers, identified in this paper as a "nationally known lecturer and former associate editor of Liberty Magazine," told the convention of the Alabama Education Association before whom he spoke as an "expert in employer - employe relations," that out of each dollar of income produced by manufacturing industries, about 84 per cent was paid to the worker.

HIDES CONNECTIONS

What was not mentioned in the press stories was that Rogers, formerly with the "Crusader," is connected with the American Economic Foundation, an organization exposed in an article carried in the September 11, 1939 issue of The CIO NEWS, as a phony anti-labor front outfit set up with funds supplied by labor-hating manufacturers.

Although Rogers did not make it clear just where he got his amazing figure of 84 per cent—he was reported as saying that it came from "a recent book published by the U. S. Dept. of Commerce" — apparently he was attempting to make an entirely false comparison between the total income of manufacturing industries and the total amount paid in wages AND SALARIES.

According to the Survey of Current Business for June, 1939 published by the Commerce Department, the total income from all manufacturing in 1938 was in round numbers, 13 billion dollars. Out of this, a total of some 11 billions or about 84 per cent was paid in wages and salaries.

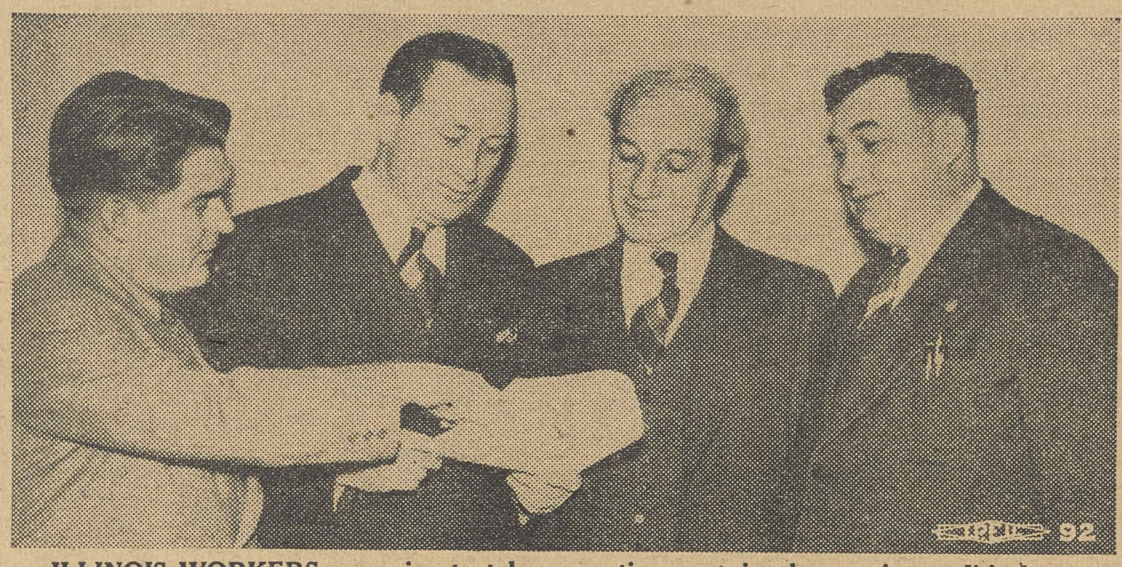
The trap in Roger's statement—undoubtedly aimed, as CIO Regional Director Yelverton Cowherd later pointed out to school officials, against union labor's campaign for better wages and working conditions — lay in not breaking down his figures into wages and salaries.

RIDICULOUS FIGURE

That Rogers' figure of 84% of total income going to the workers is utterly ridiculous is shown by the Dept. of Commerce figures on the 1938 total payrolls of hourly paid production workers in all manufacturing industries, which is seven billion dollars, or 59% of the total manufacturing income.

The other 25% which Rogers included in his figure of 84%, goes to salaries.

In the list issued by the U. S. Treasury Department in January containing 400 names of those who were paid more than $75,000 in 1938, it was revealed for instance that F. A. Countway, president of Lever Bros. & Co., soap manufacturers, headed the list with $469,000 paid him in salary and bonus.



E. G. Grace of Bethlehem Steel received $378,698 and President William S. Knudsen of General Motors, drew down $303,400. These are samples of the staggering salaries included in the 84 per cent that Rogers would have the public believe is paid out to "workers" in industry.

If Rogers had been giving an honest talk and really wanted his audience to know what American workers are being paid, he could have quoted figures on a government study of Consumers' Income in the U. S. made by the National Resources Committee in 1938, showing that 46% of the people in the country receive under $1000 a year, that 17% get under $500 and 5% under $250.

The Alabama News Digest, a liberal weekly paper supported by union labor, warned the teachers after Rogers' had spoken at their convention, that their organization was being used without their knowledge to spread anti-labor propaganda.

Rogers' appearance in Birmingham last week, shows that the American Economic Foundation is still actively spreading its subtle anti-union propaganda, and that labor groups should be on the lookout for such speakers in their cities.

Discuss Political Plans

Woodworkers Enter First Industry-Wide Parleys

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—Some 40,000 lumbermen in the Pacific Northwest will soon enjoy the fruits of industry-wide collective bargaining, Pres. Harold Pritchett of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America, revealed today.

In Washington for a brief visit, Pritchett said the decision of lumber employers in Oregon and the state of Washington to enter the industry-wide negotiations will mean "the elimination, to a great extent, of unfair cut-throat competition. It can be the means of stabilizing the lumbering industry.

Recognition of the IWA on an industry-wide basis, he added, "means the complete elimination of jurisdictional disputes and phony boycotts, as sponsored by the reactionary Hutcheson leadership of the AFL Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

"IWA negotiators will do their utmost to maintain and extend our contractual relationships with our employers with a view to continued peace and harmony in the industry . . ."

BLOW AT DISRUPTION

Bargaining in the northwest has been done previously on a district basis, with eight or more sets of negotiations necessary. This situation has aided Hutcheson's and employers' disrupters attempts to smash the CIO union and cut the workers' living standards.

Pritchett came to Washington to discuss with Federal Officials the unsolved slaying of Mrs. Laura Law of Aberdeen, Wash., wife of an IWA official. He said that while all signs point to the murder having been committed by anti-labor vigilante groups, law enforcement officers are doing nothing to break the case, apparently preferring to use it to further the employers reactionary propaganda.

Klan Seen Offending Masters

Washington, Mar. 30.—A picture of the Ku Klux Klan as an anti-labor Frankenstein which has slipped out of the control of its reactionary sonsors, was painted today by John Brophy, CIO director of local industrial unions.

Just back from the south, where he conferred with CIO regional officials, Brophy reported that newspapers and industrialists seemed little worried about the activities of the white-robed vigilantes so long as they kept their noses to the grindstone of combatting CIO organizational activities.

"But," Brophy continued, "the Klan apparently felt it could expand into the general vigilante business. As a result, there's been an outburst of murders, beatings and threats involving people not associated with the union movement.

"That's carrying things too far for some of the labor-haters."

REVIVED IN '37

Klan activity was revived in the late summer of 1937, following CIO activity in the textile and steel industry, he said, with placards posted in the textile towns trying to link the CIO with communism. Parades, cross-burnings and intimidation of organizers followed.

The fatal flogging of an Atlanta barber, and other similar instances, have revolted the people of the south, and a considerable body of public opinion is demanding that the organization must be eliminated.

When the AFL recently held a widely-publicized meeting of its southern leaders, Klansmen stationed themselves at the doors of the building and distributed the organization's leaflets — all this, strangely enough, without a protest from the union leaders.

CIO MAN FLOGGED

At the same spot where one of the latest floggings split the case wide open and brought about a grand jury investigation, a CIO local leader was beaten unmercifully just a year ago. Pierce Toney, president of a textile union in suburban local was taken away, presumably by the same crowd which engineered the recent beatings.

At that time, the union was unable to secure an indictment of the guilty parties. One member of the grand jury was an official of the Scottdale Mills, where Toney was employed. All efforts to effect his removal from the jury ended in failure and the case was finally dropped.

Lewis Aids Ducktown Strikers

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30— The "services and strength of the CIO" are on the side of the striking Ducktown Basin copper workers, President John L. Lewis told a delegation of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers that visited him here to ask support for the eight months' walkout.

The delegation, composed of Board Member Van D. Jones, Intl. Representative Anderson and Research Director Ben Riskin, told Pres. Lewis of the bitter opposition from the Tennessee Copper Corp. and its allies among top AFL leaders.

TEXT OF STATEMENT

"The members of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in the Ducktown basin of Tennessee have been conducting a long and valiant fight for their rights as American citizens and for the existence of their union," Lewis said.

"They have not retreated in the face of a powerful and hostile corporation that leaves no weapon unused in its enmity to organized labor. They have withstood the assaults of the corporation and of its allies among certain American Federation of Labor leaders whose only aim is to destroy the CIO at all costs—even the cost of the interests of the workers involved.

"I am glad to place the services and the strength of the Congress of Industrial Organizations on the side of the Ducktown basin workers in their struggle for the rights that belong to them as Americans and as members of organized labor."

Building Union Spurts In Oregon

Portland, Ore., Mar. 30 — Oregon is a fertile field for the organization of CIO building trades workers, Regional Director William Dalrymple told unionists at a meeting held here by the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee to install a charter for the first UCWOC local to be set up in the state. The hall was packed and 41 new members were signed up.

Scab Cigar Changes Name, Still Smells Bad

OAKLAND, Cal., Mar. 30.—A scab cigar by another name still smells bad. The Alameda County CIO Industrial Union Council this week called the attention of CIO members to a new brand of cigar, the "Marco Supremo," put out by the union-hating Rossi Cigar Company here.

Effectiveness of the CIO campaign against the firm for its unfair labor practices was shown, Council Secretary Paul S. Schliff said, by the fact that the company has practically abondoned the old brand names—Marco Rossi, Toscani and Toscanelli—and is concentrating on a new one, Marco Supremo.

Rossi, through intimidation and discrimination against union members, has been fighting the organization of his employes by CIO Local Industrial Union 771, even bringing pressure to bear on the relatives of workers in the plant, most of whom are Italian women.

Grand-Pop Of Fake UnionsDies, Aged 25

Washington, Apr. 6. — The death warrant of Rockefeller's notorious company union formed 25 years ago after the massacre of a number of the women and children of striking coal miners in Ludlow, Colorado, shocked the nation, was signed last week by the National Labor Relations Board.

The Colorado Fuel & Iron Corporation, of which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is the chief stockholder, was ordered by the Board to abolish an Employe Representation Plan and its Employe Representation Organizations at its steel mill in Pueblo, Colorado, and its iron mine at Sunrise, Wyoming, and to stop its unfair labor practices.

'DOMINATED'

The Board found that the Plan was set up by the company as a "safety valve" to give the employes an opportunity to voice grievances, not through a legitimate union but through a "form of organization which was such as to insure complete domination and control by the company, and to render the organization incapable of functioning as a real bargain agency for the employes."

The company was also ordered to bargain collectively with Local 442, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, CIO, as sole bargaining representative of employes at the Sunrise mine. The local started organizing activities at Sunrise in January, 1938, the Board's investigation showed, and a majority of the employes designated it as their bargaining representative.

A campaign to destroy Local 442 was started immediately by the company which threatened to shut down the mine and secure its ore elsewhere.

CIO OPENS FIGHT ON NORTON BILL

New Wagner Proposal Attacked

THOUSANDS OF MINERS poure into the town of Monongah, W. Va on April 1 to hear CIO Pres. John L Lewis demand passage of mining safet laws by Congress and to warn politi cians that the CIO will call a conven tion of all progressive groups if majo party conventions fail to nominate can didates satisfactory to labor. Lower in set shows Lewis conferring with Sen M. M. Neely of W. Va., sponsor of the federal mine inspection bill.

Lewis Sees 'Unholy Intrigue'

WASHINGTON, Apr. 5.— The CIO today launched a nationwide campaign to save the Wagner Act from four destructive amendments proposed by the House Labor Committee.

Most serious of the proposals is one which would force the National Labor Relations Board to set up craft bargaining units, enabling AFL top leaders to split up industrial unions at their will.

"The craft amendment constitutes a declaration of war on the industrial unions of the CIO and will be vigorously fought as a threat to the very existence of our organizations," Pres. Lewis declared.

"The Norton bill is the fruit of an unholy intrigue between anti-labor manufacturers and AFL craft leaders blinded by partisan venom," Lewis said.

CIO Moves to Save WPA Jobs for 800,000

WASHINGTON, Apr. 6.—The CIO took steps today to save the WPA jobs of some 800,000 workers who face prospects of being dropped from the government rolls before the end of June.

In letters to all CIO affiliates, Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, called for union demands upon Congress for a WPA deficiency appropriation to forestall wholesale WPA slash-es in the next few months, and to provide for 3,000,000 WPA jobs "under improved conditions of employment" in the fiscal year starting July 1.

Outlining ways to save WPA from further destruction at the hands of the budget balancers, Hetzel suggested:

"1. The provision of a 'deficiency' appropriation for the WPA. This means that Congress would have to provide immediately for an additional appropriation to the WPA sufficient to maintain the present WPA employment.

"2. The Congress can direct the WPA to spend the funds that it still has available in such a way as to prevent the layoffs. Then, at a later date, when the approriation for the WPA for next year is being considered, the Congress can provide sufficient funds to make up the difference necessary to carry the WPA at its present levels until the end of the fiscal year, June 30th."

Ft. Wayne Poll Won By CIO, 3-1

Fort Wayne, Ind., Apr. 6 — A Labor Board election victory for the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at the General Electric plant here today brought to 13 the number of the corporation's factories covered by its general contract with the union.

The CIO union swept the election by a more than 3-1 victory, piling up 3,053 votes to 902 voting for "no union."

Furniture Union Wins Newark Poll, 213-15

By VIC LEVITT

NEW YORK, April 6.—Another victory in its march against the unprincipled methods of the AFL Upholsterers Intl. Union has been scored by the CIO United Furniture Workers of America, which last week won a Labor Board election at the big American Hair & Felt Co., Newark, N. J., by a vote of 213 to 15 for "no union." The company makes upholstery and bedding materials, and has plants in many parts of the country.

The AFL withdrew from the ballot at the last moment, conceding defeat, despite its "closed shop agreement" with the employer.

It was unwilling to take the terrific blow the CIO had freely predicted it would deliver against the AFL, whose so-called agreement had been in effect for over a year. The pact made it the sole dues collection agency, after the AFL had permitted what amounted to an 8 per cent wage reduction.

CONTINUE DRIVE

In Chicago, UFWA continued to fight for unionization of the furniture field despite AFL efforts to block it. Recently, the AFL Upholsterers' Local 18B switched affiliation to the CIO International. Now, stooges of the AFL are helping Goldblatt Bros. Co. fight UFWA organization at its shops. UFWA is on strike, and has just been enjoined from picketing.

Auto Workers' Leader Tells Nation of Gains Brought by Unions

DETROIT, Apr. 6.—A nationwide CBS radio audience was told this week by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers that the "CIO conception of responsible unionism" is demonstrated by the fact that "we seek and can obtain sound, constructive and peaceful labor relations in our industry."

Declaring that union responsibility must be determined both by its service to worker-members and in the larger sense to the "community at large, to the workers and consumers who make up the American public," the CIO vice-president declared:

"The great unions affiliated with the CIO accept that test. They have come through with flying colors. CIO unions have raised wage levels, to the gain of all of us. They have ended the dictatorship, and lessened the insecurity of some four million American workers.

"The CIO alone, by resisting general wage cuts in 1938, kept up the wage standards of all Americans. CIO unions prevented the recession of that year from becoming a full-fledged, deadly depression."

'RICHEST INDUSTRY'

Turning to the problems of his own industry, which he described as the "richest and most profitable in the country," Thomas pointed out that prior to the formation of the CIO, "the blessings of that industry trickled down in only a small stream to the auto workers."

He drew a picture of average hourly wages hovering around 59c, of no recognition of unions — seniority rights were unknown. Discharges and layoffs were subject to the whim of the anti-labor bias of the corporations. The speed-up was an accepted practice. Overtime rates were unknown. Production seasons were short and geared at a high speed, only to be followed by months of unemployment."

400,000 UNDER CONTRACT

Now, he continued contracts with 340 companies have raised and protected the working standards of some 400,000 workers in 430 plants. Seniority is a definite part of each of these agreements, and average wages have been lifted from 59c to 95c.

While high hourly wage rates are good, the annual wage of auto workers is still far too low, Thomas went on.

"The UAW-CIO has as its major goal in General Motors the attainment of a 30-hour week, with no guaranteed annual wage," he said. reduction in pay. We seek also a Being realistic about present conditions, the union will propose to negotiate after the coming GM Labor Board election for a "general wage increase, for improved seniority provision, and for joint time studies and negotiations where the speed of operations is in dispute."

WANT INDUSTRIAL PEACE

"The UAW-CIO is not interested in industrial conflict. We have demonstrated that we seek and can obtain sound, constructive and peaceful labor relations in our industry. We have demonstrated our ability to serve the auto workers and the communities in which they reside."

Funeral For 'Ghost Town' Yarns

Detroit, April 6—Calamity howlers who have sought to picture a unionized Detroit as a ruined Detroit, received a setback today from a spokesman for some of the town's biggest businessmen.

Harvey Campbell, secretary of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, cited figures to show that the motor capital has gained six times in business expansion for whatever it has lost. Since 1937 only 35 plants have left the city, while 226 new ones have moved in.

"The number of plants which left Detroit was no more than would be anticipated in line with the usual migration in and out of any great industrial center," Campbell's report asserted. "The great exodus to seek better labor conditions must now be listed as a false cry that Detroit is sinking."

Auto Union Wins 4 Elections; Drives for Big GM Victory

By EDWARD LEVINSON

DETROIT, Apr. 5. — The CIO's United Automobile Union has scored four more labor board election victories.

The AFL did not have sufficient strength to gain a place on any of the ballots, thus heightening expectations of a great UAW-CIO victory in the General Motors elections to be held April 17th.

The NLRB has received voting lists from GM indicating that there are 136,000 workers eligible to vote in 58 plants.

These were the new election triumphs of the UAW-CIO as the union entered the final stage of its campaign in GM:

International Harvester Truck, Fort Wayne—UAW-CIO, 1,160; AFL, 0.

Federal Screw, Detroit—UAW-CIO, 120; American Labor League, 44; AFL, 0.

Martin Co., Cleveland—CIO, 14; AFL, 0.

This is written before the John L. Lewis, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman rallies to be held in Detroit and Flint on April 6 and 7, but all indications point to two of the most notable labor rallies Michigan has ever seen in many years.

The compelling importance of the UAW-CIO in Detroit was seen this week when Detroit's Mayor Edward J. Jeffries accepted an invitation to speak at the Detroit rally, ignoring charges of employers and AFL that he is letting himself in for partisan associations in labor matters.

Mayor Jeffries last year defeated Mayor Reading, whose election two years ago Reading then said, meant the "death of the CIO in Detroit." Now Reading is politically dead—and forgotten, except by certain persistent graft probers—while his successor appears at a CIO rally.

Further indications of the solid position the UAW-CIO occupies in the auto industry was given last week when the Brookings Institution issued a report declaring the CIO affiliate occupies the "dominant" labor position in the industry, and the Detroit Chamber of Commerce came forward with a survey, showing tremendous industrial progress in Detroit in recent years.

RAZZ COUGHLIN, SMITH

Harvey Campbell, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, referred to the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin and Gerald L. K. Smith as "professional irritators who stir up the town and who stir up opinion elsewhere against us."

Both of the men are on the radio every Sunday thundering impotent denunciations of the UAW-CIO. Now the Chamber of Commerce wants them to keep quiet.

Such opposition as the AFL is affording the UAW-CIO in the GM elections is a constant source of merriment in an otherwise intensely serious campaign.

Quarry Union Gets Flock Of New Pacts

Barre, Vt., Apr. 6 — Signing of a series of contracts in recent weeks with firms in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Georgia were announced today at the headquarters of the Quarry Workers International Union here.

Marble Cliff Quarries, Columbus, Ohio, has signed an agreement with Branch 232 of the QWIU, calling for definite seniority rights and voluntary check-off of union dues. In Oakfield, New York, the Phoenix Gypsum Co., has renewed its contract with the union and in York, Pa., the quarry workers branch has signed an agreement with the Thomasville Stone & Lime Co., granting pay increases ranging from 2½ to 5 cents an hour.

In the South, the union's branch at Lithonia, Ga, has obtained a preferential shop for its members employed by the Pine Mountain Granite Co. Negotiations with other firms are now in progress, the QWIU stated.

Peace—It's Terrible!

CHICAGO, Apr. 6.—A glimpse of how the meat packing industry, which has made millions in profits out of every past war, feels about the present European conflict was provided today in an article appearing in the National Provisioner, trade journal of the American Institute of Meat Packers.

Written by W. S. Clithero, vice-president of Armour & Co., the article said in part:

"The psychological effects of the war have also been unfavorable. Everyone believes that early peace would result in a serious business collapse in this country and demoralize meat and food prices. This fear has made everyone bearish and unwilling to take any unnecessary risks."

On the Picket Line

JOINING STRIKING WORKERS at a Washington, D.C., restaurant, Miss Kathryn Lewis, executive secretary to her father, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, took a turn on a noontime picket line. Public sympathy rallied to the strikers after management issued slanderous statement aimed at fanning race prejudices.

Laundries On 5-Day Week

New York, Apr. 6. — The five-day week in the laundry industry, won for the first time on a city-wide basis, goes into effect today under a new contract won by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers after negotiations with principal laundry owners' associations in the New York metropolitan area.

Housewives were notified in an announcement issued by the union that laundry bundles will no longer be picked up or delivered on Saturdays or Sundays.

PRAISED BY HILLMAN

Hailed by ACWA Pres. Sidney Hillman and by Hyman Blumberg, Laundry Workers Joint Board manager, as "raising the standards of living and granting a decent rest period to those needing it most," the five-day week won the unanimous support of heads of the laundry owners' groups.

Hillman, pointing out that the "laundry industry has always been the most exploited and sweated industry in the city" urged cooperation from housewives in supporting the "constructive advance of 25,000 laundry workers."

Ask 40c Base For Paper Pay Rates

Washington, April 6—A minimum wage rate of 40 cents an hour for the Pulp and Primary Paper Industry was recommended this week by Industry Committee No. 11, under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The recommendation, which will be submitted to Col. Philip B. Fleming, Wage-Hour administrator, is the highest minimum rate that can be ordered under the Wage-Hour Act.

CIO REPRESENTED

The Industry Committee which is composed of 18 members—six representing the public, six the employes and six the employers—began its deliberations March 18. The recommendation for the 40 cent minimum will be submitted by Dr. John A. Lapp of Chicago, a public member of the committee who serves as chairman. Representing the CIO was Ray Thomason, regional director with headquarters in Richmond, Va.

CIO Demands Defeat of Norton Amendments to Wagner Act

Transit Union Wins New York Demands After 2nd Crisis

By SAUL MILLS

NEW YORK, Apr. 6.—The agreement by the City of New York to assume and perform, after taking ownership of private transit lines, the union-shop contracts held by the CIO Transport Workers Union was conclusively reaffirmed here this week following collapse of unmitigated efforts to emasculate the pact.

Re-affirmation and new guarantees of observance of the agreement came at the close of a two-hour conference April 2 between Mayor LaGuardia and union representatives headed by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman, TWU President Michael Quill and CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman.

A general transit strike voted by the TWU's 50,000 members on subway, elevated, trolley and bus lines in the city was averted through Lewis' eleventh hour action.

DEFIED BY DELANEY

The agreement, originally effected on March 27 had been repudiated and defied but two days later (March 29) by transportation Board Chairman John H. Delaney, charged with its administration. New York's labor-hating newspaper publishers, through news columns as well as vicious editorials, joined the Delaney attack. Mayor LaGuardia gave indications of weakening under the deluge of printer's ink.

The next morning Mayor La Guardia, through Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg (New York Social Security director) communicated with Pressman, who since March 18 had been counseling TWU officials in the fight, and asked that a conference be held immediately.

Pressman and CIO Director Allan S. Haywood, conferred with the Mayor for several hours on Mar. 30, LaGuardia seemed adamant in support of Delaney's position that he (Delaney) determine what terms of the Union contracts were legal and would be assumed, refusing to leave such decisions to the courts as per the March 27 agreement. Stalemated, the Mayor, Pressman and Haywood, however agreed to meet again the next day.

Pressman and Haywood spent six hours with the Mayor on April 1, at the conclusion of which he agreed to a formula for settlement. But the formula released to the press that very same evening by Chairman omitted the two main points at issue—assumption of the contracts as such and deferment of legal questions to final judicial decision.

A strike strategy committee of 2,200 TWU members met that evening. All was set to shut down transit service in the World's largest city. LaGuardia, defiant, set up a police "dictatorship" over all city departments to fight the strike.

Arriving in New York the next day, Lewis declared: "On March 27 I made an agreement with Mayor LaGuardia that was presumed to be a settlement.

"You may judge my amazement when I learned that Delaney was sufficiently powerful to reverse the Mayor's decision and judgment. In consequence the situation has again become accute.

ANNOUNCE ACCORD

Three hours later from the Mayor's office in City Hall, Pres. Lewis announced that the agreement had been reaffirmed, newly guaranteed, and a general transit strike averted.

In the presence of the Mayor and Union representatives including Hillman, Pressman, Haywood, Quill, John Santo, TWU international secretary-treasurer; Austin Hogan, TWU New York President; Douglas MacMahon, TWU International Vice-President; Harry Sacher, TWU general counsel and Gustave Faber, TWU New York treasurer, Pres. Lewis anounced: "This matter is satisfactorily settlede. There will be no strike."

32,000 Con-Ed Employes Vote

New York, Apr. 5.—Thirty-two thousand employes of the Consolidated Edison Co. today awaited results of the two elections conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. Results will be known on April 8 or 9, Labor Board officials predicted.

On the ballot were the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee and an independent union. The AFL's Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, fearful of an overwhelming defeat, withdrew from the ballot a few weeks ago.

Court OKs $1,000,000 In Back Pay

Denver, Apr. 6.—CIO workers in the Sunshine Mining Co. of Wallace, Idaho, won a complete union victory in tre Circuit Court decision upholding a Labor Board order against the company, which to date has been one of the strongholds of the notorious open shop Coeur D'Alene district.

The order directs the Sunshne Co. to cease and desist from coercion, and intimidation, to disestablish a company union, to bargain with the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, and to post notices of compliance.

In addition, the order directs payment of one of the largest back pay orders in Labor Board history, a total of $1,000,000 going to 216 men who were fired for union activity.

Lewis Charges 'Unholy Intrigue'

WASHINGTON, Apr. 6. — The Norton Bill to amend the Wagner Act, recommended by a close vote of the House Labor Committee here, is "a declaration of war on the industrial unions of the CIO", John L. Lewis, CIO President, declared in announcing plans for a national campaign to oppose the Norton Bill and "all other amendments designed to emasculate the Wagner Act, defeat its basic purposes, and turn it into an instrument for the oppression of labor."

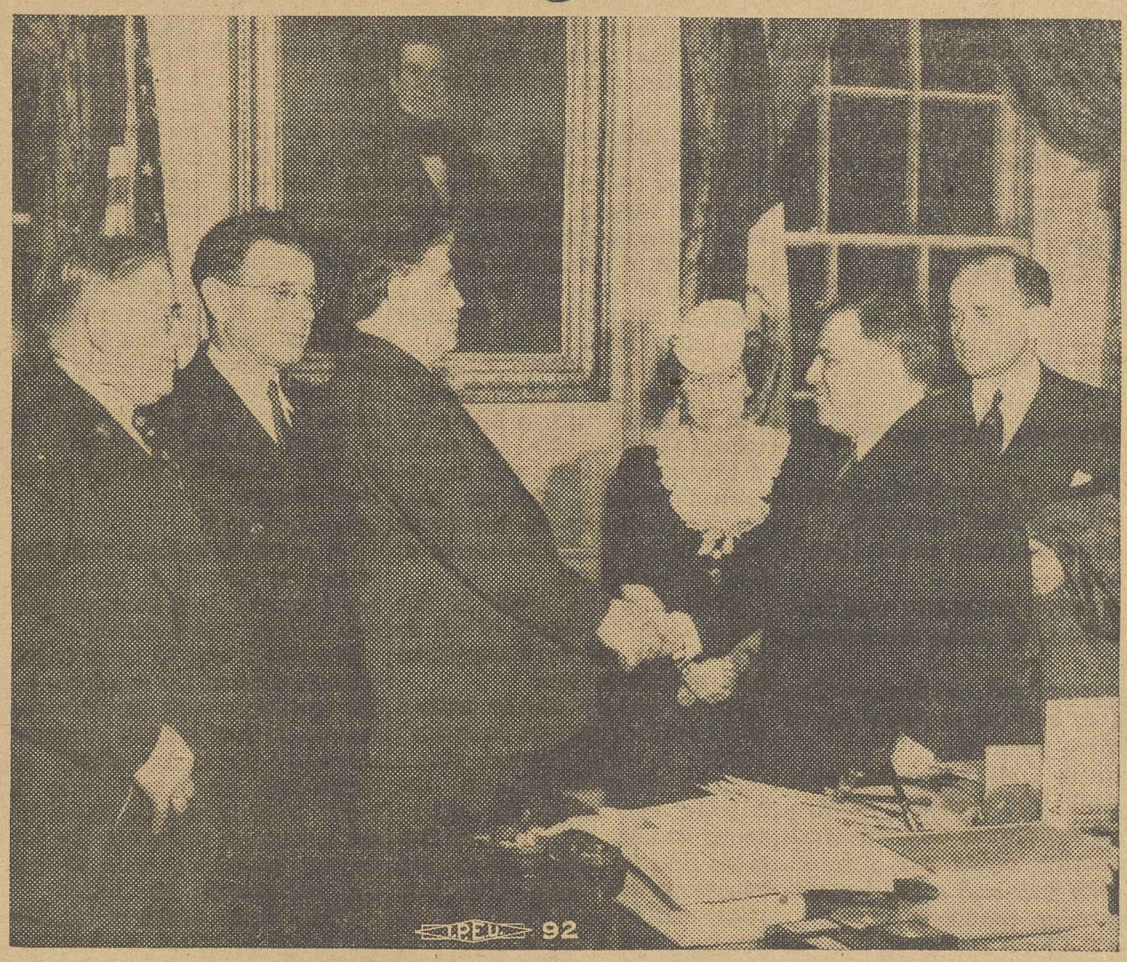
President Lewis made this announcement following a conference in Washington of executive officers of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League. Particularly vigorous opposition was expressed to the craft amendment proposed by the House Labor Committee in the Norton Bill, under which "every established industrial union would be in constant danger of division and destruction through the slicing off of craft splinter groups, even in the face of existing industrial union contracts."

"The Norton Bill," Pres. Lewis said, "is the fruit of an unholy intrigue between anti-union manufacturers and AFL craft leaders blinded by partisan venom. It is a dastardly attempt by AFL leaders and their anti-labor allies to put a competing labor organization out of business through Congressional enactment.

"Progressive labor and its friends will hold strictly to account all members of Congress who betray the public interest they are supposed to represent by supporting this partisan intrigue against the form of labor organization desired by millions of American industrial workers."

LEWIS' STATEMENT

Lewis' statement follows in full:



"At a conference of executives of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and Labor's Non-Partisan League, consideration was today given to the amendments to the National Labor Relations Act ap-

Murdock To Run For Senate

Washington, April 6 — Rep. Abe Murdock of Utah, Democrat, will seek the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senate, it was revealed today.

A member of the Smith Committee which investigated the National Labor Relations Board, Murdock joined in the vigorous minority report which tore shreds into the Tory's majority attempt to cripple the Labor Board's value to the organized labor.

President Reid Robinson, of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, whose organization has large membership in Utah, commented that "the great work that Congressman Abe Murdock has done for the workers and common people makes it mandatory upon them to support his election to the United States Senate.

"The miners and smeltermen of Utah know how honest and sincere Murdock is and will prove their appreciation of his progressive efforts by going to the ballot boxes and electing him to the United States Senate."

A Dastardly Attack

The Norton Bill to amend the National Labor Relations Act constitutes one of the most dangerous attacks yet attempted on the Act and on the industrial unions of the CIO.

President John L. Lewis, in fact, describes it as "a declaration of war on the industrial unions". For one of the proposed amendments would invite splitting and disruption of every existing industrial union by craft splinter groups, even in the face of existing industrial union contracts.

Every CIO unionist will readily understand how vicious and destructive such an amendment would be, defeating the democratic wishes of the majority of the workers and leading to disturbance of existing peaceful labor relations in many industries.

The CIO also objects to the other amendments of the Norton Bill, as being designed to pack the Labor Board for partisan and anti-labor purposes, and to weaken enforcement of the Labor Act.

How a majority of the House Labor Committee could be induced to vote for such an outright and partisan attack on the industrial unions chosen by millions of American workers, is something on which the members of this committee will have to do a lot of explaining.

A number of the members who are reported to have voted for the amendments come from industrial areas where they have been supported by strong CIO industrial unions. Every union in the constituencies of the Labor Committee members should write to the member from their district to inquire how he voted on this issue.

Those who voted against the Norton amendments should be commended for their stand and encouraged to keep up their fight in defense of the Wagner Act.

But those who supported the intrigue of the AFL craft leaders and their anti-labor allies, in this attempt to destroy industrial unions, should feel the wrath of the workers they have betrayed. They should be called upon to reverse their stand on the floor of the House or else be marked for defeat as enemies of labor when they next run for re-election.

The members of the House Labor Committee are as follows: Mary T. Norton, N. J.; Robert Ramspeck, Ga.; Kent E. Keller, Ill.; Matthew A. Dunn, Pa.; Reuben T. Wood, Mo.; Jennings Randolph, Va.; John Lesinski, Mich.; Albert Thomas, Tex.; Graham A. Barden, N. C.; Frank W. Fries, Ill.; Lawrence J. Connery, Mass.; W. F. Norrell, Ark.; Thomas D'Alesandro, Jr., Md.; John F. Hunter, O.; Richard J. Welch, Cal.; Fred A. Hartley, Jr., N. J.; Clyde H. Smith, Me.; Bruce Barton, N. Y.; Gerald W. Landis, Ind.; Chester H. Gross, Pa.; and Clare E. Hoffman, Mich.

Let them hear from you!

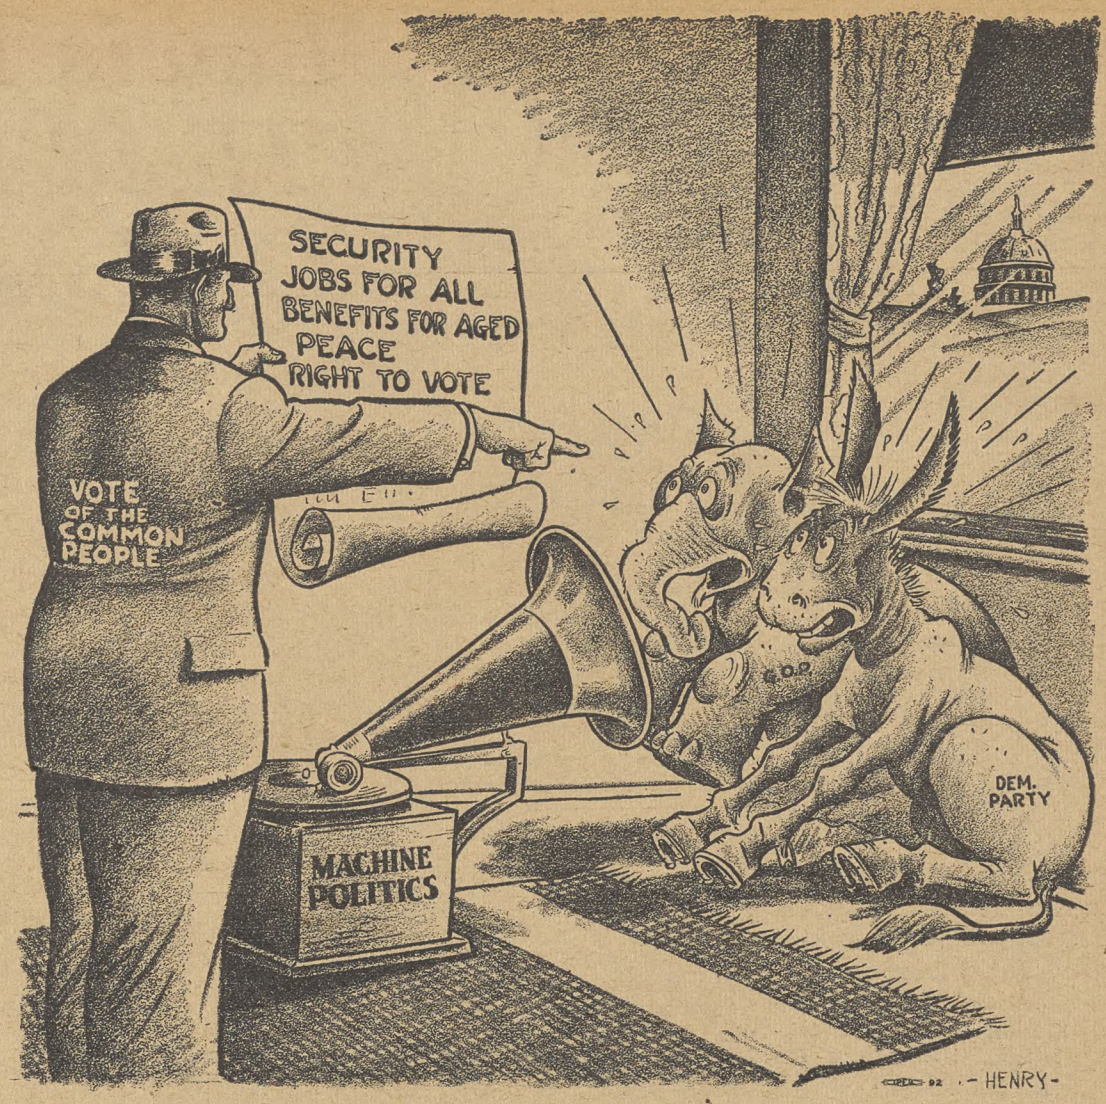
What CIO Has Done

There is no mystery as to why the automobile workers are so overwhelmingly for the CIO.

The CIO United Automobile Workers of America has a record of achievement for its members that is hard to match.

Pres. R. J. Thomas, in his recent nationwide radio broadcast, could point to such facts as these:

The hourly wage of auto workers seven years ago was 59c. Today in plants under contract with the CIO union the average is 95c an hour.



A few years ago no unions were recognized. Seniority rights were unknown. Men could be fired or laid off at the whim of the corporations. Overtime rates were unknown.

Today the CIO union has contracts with 340 companies, covering 430 plants and protecting 400,000 men and women.

In most of these plants there is a maximum 40-hour week with special overtime rates. Seniority rights are assured. Bonuses for night work, vacations with pay and other benefits of all kinds are common features of union contracts.

Much yet remains to be done for the auto workers. But the CIO union has a practical and realistic program for improving conditions and for working toward its goal of a 30-hour week and a guaranteed annual wage.

These are but a few of the reasons why tens of thousands of auto workers have voted overwhelmingly for the UAW-CIO in all recent elections, and why the coming General Motors elections will register another smashing victory for the CIO.

The Louder Voice

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Labor's Logical Role

THERE was a certain historic logic and inevitability to the speech of John L. Lewis at Monongah, W. Va., in which he proclaimed labor's championship of the cause of all the less fortunate.

Industrial workers, by the very nature of the factory system, have greater capacity for solid organization than do other popular groups.

Once organized, their interests impel them to support political programs that are democratic and socially progressive in character.

Organized workers, for instance, whose power lies in their numbers, naturally favor the widest extension of the right to vote. They seek greater civil liberties for the many.

If any section of the population is especially low-paid or oppressed, as for instance sharecroppers or Negro workers, the labor movement has an economic interest in raising their standards. For any reservoir of low-paid labor is a constant menace to the wages of the better paid.

For this same reason, labor desires to see the farming population generally enjoy a better income, so that the city labor market may not be flooded with impoverished farmers, and so that greater prosperity on the farms may lead to greater purchases of industrial products.

That organized labor is the group most concerned of all in finding jobs for the unemployed goes without saying.

But it has an equally natural and impelling interest in seeking greater security for old people through adequate pensions, and a better chance in life for the young people. This is both because it is its own old folks and youngsters that need such help most, and because there will be less competition for existing jobs when youngsters are not forced to hunt work at too early an age, and when oldsters can enjoy a comfortable and deserved retirement before they work themselves into the grave.

In seeking higher wages for themselves, organized workers also seek and tend to effect a general raising of purchasing power which means better incomes for farmers, business and professional people.

A Natural Alliance

All of these popular groups, farmers and small businessmen, Negroes, old people, the youth, have special organizations, special problems and special programs of their own.

But none of them—because of the looser ties that bind them, because they are not thrown together in such close and continuous proximity as factory workers, and for similar reasons — are capable of such strong and permanent organization as are industrial workers.

Consequently it is natural that they should seek fulfillment of their aims in alliance with the organized workers. And it is natural that labor should stand forth as their champion and play a leading part in the formation of a broad political movement to win the common objectives of all these groups.

Why So Late?

All of this is natural. But what is not so natural is that labor has been so late in assuming this role in the United States.

The reason is to be found in the backwardness of the American labor movement until the CIO was formed. It was a small sectional movement made up chiefly of higher-paid craftsmen, not a broad labor movement based on the millions of workers in the big modern industries, such as the CIO has brought into being.

When large numbers of the lower-paid industrial workers began hammering on the doors of the AFL, it may be remembered that one of the craft leaders publicly and arrogantly referred to them as "riff-raff."

By a curious coincidence, the official AFL newsheet, with equal arrogance and mendacity, recently referred to the farm, youth and old age pension groups whose cause the CIO is championing as "riff-raff."

Because the petty pinheads of the AFL took this kind of an attitude toward the millions of unorganized industrial workers, the CIO had to be formed to build a real labor movement.

And now that this new labor movement is beginning to assume its natural and historic role as ally and champion of the popular groups with whom its interests are so closely interwoven, it is interesting to note that the Bourbons of the AFL leadership have learnt nothing and forgotten nothing. They react to progressive political activity just like they reacted to industrial organization.

In so doing, however, they unwittingly point to the inevitable connection between the two.

New Independence

Four or five years ago America witnessed the birth of a real modern labor movement in this country.

Today we are witnessing the first beginnings of a progressive political movement, with labor in the lead, that is rallying to it youth and old people, the unemployed, disfranchised Negroes and whites in poll tax states, farmers and small businessmen, and all others who make up what Lewis calls "the average men and women."

What political forms this movement may take will depend on many factors. But what is already certain is that through the CIO, Labor's Non-Partisan League and the type of leadership which Lewis offers, labor and the common people have won a new power and independence in asserting their rights. The old parties and politicians must recognize this power or take the consequences.

Demand Defeat Of Norton Bill

proved by the House Labor Committee, by a close vote, and embodied in the bill introduced by Representative Mary T. Norton.

"As president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League, I am authorized to announce the unqualified opposition of these organizations to these and all other amendments designed to emasculate the Wagner Act, defeat its basic purposes, and to turn it into an instrument for the oppression of labor.

HIT CRAFT UNIT PROPOSAL

"The craft amendment, in particular, constitutes a declaration of war on the industrial unions of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and will be vigorously fought as a threat to the very existence of our organizations.

"Under this proposed amendment every established industrial union would be in constant danger of division and destruction through the slicing off of craft splinter groups, even in the face of existing industrial union contracts.

"We have had repeated occasion to protest against the administrative policies of the National Labor Relations Board, under which the desire of the great majority of workers in a plant for an industrial form of organization has been frequently disregarded by the Board, and craft divisions have been encouraged to the detriment of industrial unions which have been chosen by the workers by overwhelming majority votes.

COMPELLED TO SPLIT

"But under this amendment, no discretion even would be left to the Board, and it would be compelled to split up industrial unions, wherever a handful of craftsmen could be persuaded to disrupt the industrial unity desired by most of the workers.

"No existing industrial union, no matter how long established as the workers' representative, would be safe from this form of invasion, leading to serious disturbances of existing peaceful labor relations in many industries.

"The other amendments are also objectionable to the Congress of Industrial Organizations. They are designed to pack the Labor Board, so that it may become an instrument of partisan or anti-labor policy, and they are further designed to weaken the Wagner Act in its enforcement of labor's collective bargaining rights.

'UNHOLY INTRIGUE'

"The Norton Bill is the fruit of an unholy intrigue between anti-labor manufacturers and AFL craft leaders blinded by partisan venom. It is a dastardly attempt by AFL leaders and their anti-labor allies to put a competing labor organization out of business through Congressional enactment.

"Progressive labor and its friends will hold strictly to account all members of Congress who betray the public interest they are supposed to represent by supporting this partisan intrigue against the form of labor organization desired by millions of American industrial workers."

Lewis Tells Politicians: 'Heed Labor Demands Or Lose Its Support'

(See Text of Pres. Lewis' Speech on Page Six)

MONONGAH, W. Va., Apr. 6.—President John L. Lewis, speaking at a huge Mine Workers' rally here, warned the Democratic Party that if it does not "nominate a candidate for President or adopt a platform satisfactory to labor and the common people," he would, after the Democratic and Republican conventions, urge "the assembling of a great delegate convention, to be composed of delegates from the CIO, Labor's Non-Partisan League, the Old Age Pension Movements, the National Negro Organizations, and liberal farmers organizations, to meet in some central city, present their views and crystallize their judgment into a program that each and every American can support.

"We will then see," he said, "whether mere machine politics in this country is going to be more powerful and more controlling than the voice of the citizens of the land."

Lewis said he addressed his challenge to the Democratic Party because "after all, I don't expect anything from the Republican Party, because it is obvious that those who pay the fiddler call the tune."

"I am serving notice that America cannot permit itself to drift, drift, merely to drift, while politicians hope, hope, merely hope," he declared, "and I am also serving notice in behalf of the people I represent in this country, and there are many of them, that the answer to these problems is not the answer of having America participate in the European war."

PROBLEMS OF AMERICA

Major American problem — and major failure of the present Administration—Lewis said, was the problem of unemployment, which numbered close to 12,000,000 jobless at the beginning of March.

"Far from settling the unemployment question, the existing Administration, in the name of economy, is curtailing the meager relief heretofore extended to men and women out of work," he said, pointing out that between now and July 1,600,000 WPA workers are to be dropped in the name of "economy."

INVITES AFFILIATION

Lewis told his thousands of listeners that his earlier invitation to the American Youth Congress to affiliate with Labor's Non-Partisan League had resulted in a "complete and satisfactory working alliance," and that he intended to extend a similar bid to other progressive organizations during coming weeks.

He revealed that he plans to speak at the Natl. Negro Congress later in the month, at the old age pension convention in July, and at the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People in the same month. All of these groups, he said, will be assured of CIO support in their struggles against such evils as the poll tax and poverty in old age, and all of them will be asked to join with labor in working out a common program for jobs, security, peace, "the right to work and the right to live."

Devoting an early part of his speech to a brief review of the achievements of the United Mine Workers, Lewis declared that the UMWA, after establishing the right of miners to organize, has turned its "great energy and great constructive strength to helping our fellow citizens and the people of our Republic in solving some of the questions which bear so heavily upon the people of our land."

NOT AGAIN

Lewis was emphatic in his declaration that the American people want no part of the present European war, and in warning politicians and others against secret hopes or plans for involving the United States.

"America's young men, if I understand the temper of the American people, are not again going to be butchered in a European country, or upon a foreign shore. So let those who are interested take heed of this sentiment."

Cleveland CIO Wades Into City Tax Fight

By Ted Cox

CLEVELAND, Apr. 6.—Again the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League have stepped on an important municipal issue as the sole organizations to conduct a militant fight—not only in the interests of their own members—but in behalf of the hundreds of thousands of other ordinary citizens who will be soaked enormous tax bills under a special real estate tax levy sponsored by Republican Mayor Harold H. Burton.

The levy, submitted in the form of a charter amendment, calls upon Cleveland people to:

1. Pay a special real estate tax of nearly $10,000,000 in addition to the regular real estate taxes and assessments.

2. Relinquish their right to vote for special levies in the future, giving up that right to the administration and the council in power.

The special levy hits already over-taxed small home-owners and small business men, as well as laying the foundation for further increases in rents.

Side by side on the platform, plumping for passage of the measure were AFL leaders, leaders of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, bigwig Republican politicians and the ultra-reactionary Citizens League. In addition, there were all three big daily newspapers and 28 other organizations lined up for this newest and biggest tax grab in city hall history.

Against this formidable array stood the CIO, Labor's Non-Partisan League with its affiliates and the Apartment House Owners Association.

Auxiliaries Plan Confab In New York

New York, April 6—The CIO Council of Women's Auxiliaries will hold its first conference here April 27 at Transport Hall, 153 West 64th Street, from 1 to 6 p. m., to discuss the greater consolidation and coordination of its work, Mrs. Mary Santos, temporary chairmen, and Mrs. Ro Berne, chairman of the arrangements committee announced this week.

One of the important matters to be taken up will be a discussion of further ways to aid CIO trade unions.

A WARNING TO POLITICIANS

Lewis Demands People's Interests Be Served

The United Mine Workers of America now, with the cooperation and with the help of West Virginia's great statesman in the Senate, Senator M. M. Neely, is trying to have enacted by the Federal Congress a law that will provide for the Federal inspection of coal mines by representatives appointed by the Federal Government, in order that the question of life or death in the coal mine may be raised higher than the mere plane of partisan political policies, and the question of enforcing the law of safety in the coal mine may not be left to the disposition of a man who, though a State inspector, or in charge of State inspectors, may be more responsive to the political influence which created him, than his desire to avoid the killing of men in the coal mines of America.

Through the good offices of Senator Neely, and many other honorable men in the United States Senate, that bill has passed the Senate, and is now pending in the House of Representatives. Let us hope that it will be enacted, because men's lives depend upon it, and women's tears must be saved by having it enacted.

'Unemployment Is Rife'

Unemployment is rife. Dispossessing of man power by the use of machinery, technological displacement of employes is constantly going on in a highly competitive industry in a manner that bears heavily upon the men and the women who live in the company houses of this industry.

I speak not alone as President of the United Mine Workers, but as President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and as Chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League. I represent a great segment of the population of our country, because they have authorized me to represent them, and they have authorized me to speak their desires, and they have authorized me to say for them to the country that they want a job at a wage that will let them live like Americans should live.

Right to Work

And I am going to say those things in this country, regardless of opposition from any quarter, regardless of any political consideration, regardless of any other factor, that the men and women in this country who want to work for a living and earn it by the sweat of their brow have a right to a job—and they have a right to a job at a wage that will let them raise those children in the way American children should be raised. And I am going to continue this organization of workers in this country and this organization of the common people to a point where their viewpoint can be crystallized to a degree that it cannot be ignored by any political party that wishes to remain in power, or any politician or statesman who values his job.

On January 24, 1940, at the Golden Jubilee Convention of the United Mine Workers of America, more than 2,400 delegates present, I made some statements as affecting the national political and economic situation, and placed some grave rseponsibility upon the political party in power. I wish to quote just a sentence or two from that statement, today:

"After seven years of power, the Democratic Party finds itself without solution for the major questions of unemployment, low national income, mounting internal debt, increasing direct and consumer taxation, and restricted foreign markets. There still exists the same national unhappiness that obtained seven years ago. The present Congress is without a program, except to enact necessary appropriations in ample time to engage in the national quadrennial political marathon, meaning the campaign of 1940."

Since I made that statement, which was published in the newspapers of this country, no statesman, no member of Congress, no politician, no defender of the Administration, no industrialist, and no banker has arisen anywhere in this land to gainsay the truth of that statement.

Nearly 12,000,000 Jobless

When I say that there is unemployment in America, I mean just that — just that — and to date no gentleman in Congress, no member of the President's cabinet — not even the President himself — has arisen to say to these eleven million people, and the country at large, I propose to do something about the unemployment question.

Far from settling the unemployment question, the existing Administration, in the name of economy, is curtailing the meager relief heretofore extended to men and women out of work. Between now and July one million six hundred thousand men have to be dropped from the relief rolls of the WPA in this country, to make the suggested appropriation last through the slim winter months. What a sad commentary it is that we are putting men and women off relief, careless of whether they live or die, when the Congress is asked to appropriate more money to employ more Federal detectives.

Why, bad as Herbert Hoover was in the days when he was President, he only asked the Congress to appropriate two million, eight hundred thousand dollars for the Federal Bureau of Investigation to hire detectives; while our own Administration is asking a budget of nine million, eight hundred thousand dollars for detectives. What good are detectives, when men and women cry for bread?

What good are national Police Institutes conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation to train men for industrial espionage at great expense to the taxpayer, while men and women, not by the thousands, but men and women by the millions, throughout this country do not have enough to eat, do not have enough to wear, cannot secure the necessary medicine to treat themselves when illness befalls, as it does befall from malnutrition? Yet we appropriate millions to build up a secret service in this country to train men to act as industrial spies, to furnish a recruiting office for industry in America to hire the Federal detectives at more salary than the Government to conduct their own industrial espionage. Those are some of the paradoxes that now exist that cannot go on, because the people will awaken in the end.

Youth & League

Some few weeks ago, as Chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League, I addressed the American Youth Congress, in Washington, D. C. Delegates were there in convention representing various youth organizations, representing from four and one-half to five million of our working young people in every State in our Union. I invited them to become affiliated with Labor's Non-Partisan League, and to join themselves with the progressive labor organizations of our time, in working towards the common objectives of every American.

They received the invitation with enthusiasm, and I am happy to say that since that time a complete and satisfactory working alliance has been worked out and ratified as between the American Youth Congress, and all its component units, and Labor's Non-partisan League, with its millions of members throughout this country.

Between now and July 4 I expect to address two conventions of great Negro organizations in this country, the National Negro Congress, and the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. And I am going to say to those representatives of the Negro race that it is an outrage and a shame that 8,000,000 Negroes in America are prevented from voting in eight southern states, because they do not have enough money to pay their poll tax for one year, or the accumulated years which they run in those states. In addition to those 8,000,000 Negroes, there are millions of white Americans in the same situation who are disenfranchised in the same manner, in order that they might be prevented from expressing themselves at the polls as to who should represent that population in public offices of the State and Federal Government.

And what is being done about that? Nothing, except what Labor is trying to do about it. It is supporting a bill now pending in Congress, asking the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to strike down those poll tax provisions upon all men and women who vote for Federal offices. In addition to that, labor is financing some litigation in the courts, designed to test the principle of this debarment from the right of suffrage in the highest court of this country.

I am going to mention some of these things to these great Negro conventions, when they convene, and I am going to invite these Negro organizations to associate themselves with and become affiliated with Labor's Non-Partisan League in this country, just the same as the American Youth Congress.

To Address Townsendites

Some time between July 1 and July 4, I expect to address in St. Louis, Missouri, some 20,000 delegates that will assemble there in a Townsend Old Age convention, and I am going to tell those delegates that the Congress of Industrial Organizations has already declared in favor of the principle and in favor of legislation to provide for old people after they reach the age of sixty years, and the Congress of Industrial Organizations has declared for old age pensions of $60 per month per person, after sixty years of age.

Why? For both humanitarian reasons and for economic reasons, to take these old people out of the job lines in this country, and make way for younger people; because when a man or woman reaches the age of sixty, they should not be compelled to endure the haunting terror day by day of looking for a job in fields where they cannot physically or otherwise compete with the younger men and women in this country, who also want a job, and should be permitted to work.

As Chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League, I am going to extend to the Old Age Pension organizations of this country, and to the Townsend convention in St. Louis, an invitation to join with and affiliate with Labor's Non-Partisan League, and make common cause in this country for the attainment of these objectives with organized labor, with the Negroes, with the American youth, and with the liberal organizations of farmers in this country.

It is time that American sentiment, as affecting the common people, be crystallized, so as to bring pressure to bear upon these politicians, and these statesmen.

Democrats Inactive

In my address at Columbus I pointed out that if the Democratic Party wanted to work with labor and the common people, there is yet time to work out a program that would be acceptable to the common people and to labor in this country, so that all could work wholeheartedly in behalf of an agreed program and an agreed presidential candidate in the Democratic Party.

I was assuming, of course, that the Democratic Party would naturally be desirous of working out a program that might commend itself to the great mass of exploited and oppressed Americans who find themselves so heavily burdened, either with unemployment or increased taxes—because each one of you men who have no property and works for a living pays about 21 per cent of what you make into the indirect taxes that are assessed against your wages—for those business men who find their business disappearing. I assumed the Democratic Party would want to work out a program and select a presidential candidate who might reflect the viewpoints of that great mass of Americans.

Up to this point, however, I have no reason to believe that the Democratic Party is even alive to its own hazards; and I have no reason to believe that many of its leaders even desire to cooperate with labor and the other liberal organizations of the common people in this country, and time is passing.

So in behalf of labor, and in behalf of the average man and woman, I am going to work towards the end of crystallizing the sentiment of these people, and make a common cause each with the other, to protect themselves in this dire economic situation that now oppresses our land.

May Call Conference

In the event that the Democratic Party does not nominate a candidate for President, or adopt a platform satisfactory to labor and the common people of this country, I shall, after the conventions of the Democratic and Republican Party, espouse and urge upon these various organizations the assembling of a great delegate convention, to be composed of delegates from the CIO, Labor's Non-Partisan League, the old age pension movements, the national Negro organizations, and liberal farmers' organizations, to meet in some central city and present their views, crystallize their judgment into a program that each and every American can support, and we will see whether mere machine politics in this country is going to be more powerful and more controlling than the voice of the citizens of the land.

I am serving notice on the political parties of this country—after all, I don't expect anything from the Republican Party, because it is obvious that those who pay the fiddler call the tune—; but I am serving notice on the major political parties of this country that America cannot permit it to drift, drift, merely to drift, while politicians hope, hope, merely hope; and I am also serving notice in behalf of the people I represent in this country, and there are many of them, that the answer to these problems is not the answer of having America participate in the European War.

Name Baker To Navy's Pay Board

Washington, Apr. 6. — Assistant Secretary of the Navy Lewis Compton announced today that Pres. Jacob Baker of the CIO United Federal Workers of America, has been named to the Department's National Board of Wage Review as labor's representative.

The board will make recommendations to the Secretary of the Navy with a view to establishing new rates of pay for civilian workers employed in Navy shipyards and air stations.

WILL ADJUST RATES

The new pay rates will be adjusted to wage scales in approved private industries employing the same type of workers on similar occupations. Should the board find that wage rates are higher in these industries it will recommend commensurate pay boosts in the Navy yards. Should they find instances where the rates are lower on the average no Navy yard decrease in pay will be permitted. This provision is embodied in existing regulations.

Before submitting recommendation to the Secretary of the Navy in June, the board will study data submitted to it by regional wage boards located at the various Navy yards which convened on February 15.

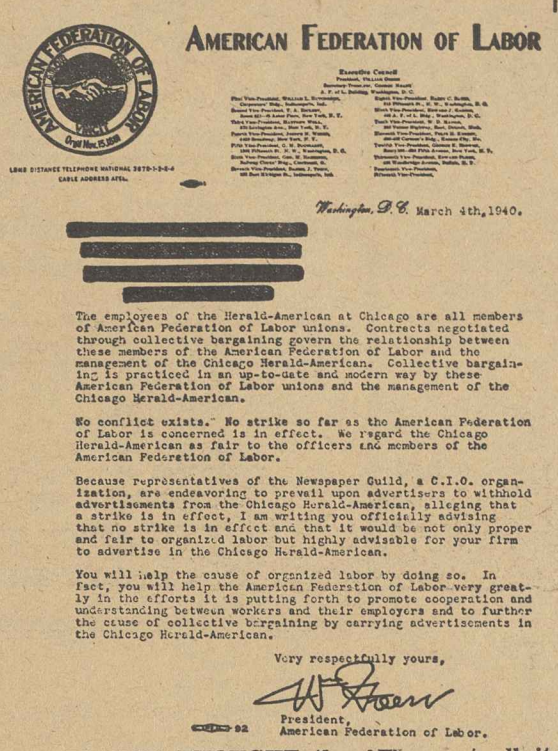
Bill Green — Hearst Ad Peddler

NEW YORK, Apr. 6. — Does Bill Green get a commission for all the advertisements he sells for William Randolph Hearst?

That was the question half-seriously asked today by local newspapermen when it was revealed here that the president of the American Federation of Labor used official AFL stationery to solicit a mailing list of corporations with a fancy plea that they advertise in the struck Chicago Herald-American.

But Green, as a true salesman, glossed over some of the unpleasant facts in the case. Thus, he didn't mention the fact that over 200 members of the American Newspaper Guild have been on strike at Hearst's Chicago property for over 15 months, that circulation is down, that advertising has skidded in sight of the vanishing point, and that unions, both AFL and CIO, all over the country are supporting the walkout.

With the skill of an old hand at the high pressure selling game, Green announced that "no conflict exists" on the paper, adding that "you will help the cause of organized labor" by buying space in the nation's most unpopular paper.



Other points unmentioned by Green:

1. That the strike was caused by refusal of the company to pledge security to working newspapermen.

2. That the Hearst management has refused to negotiate a settlement in good faith.

3. That with the help of Green and his Chicago stooges, the AFL set up a fink company union among the scabs at the plant.

4. That 1,200 advertisers have withdrawn from the Herald-American.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Executive Council

President, William Green
Secretary-Treasurer, George Meany
A. F. of L. Building, Washington, D. C.

Washington, D.C. March 4th, 1940.

[redacted]

The employees of the Herald-American at Chicago are all members of American Federation of Labor unions. Contracts negotiated through collective bargaining govern the relationship between these members of the American Federation of Labor and the management of the Chicago Herald-American. Collective bargaining is practiced in an up-to-date and modern way by these American Federation of Labor unions and the management of the Chicago Herald-American.

No conflict exists. No strike so far as the American Federation of Labor is concerned is in effect. We regard the Chicago Herald-American as fair to the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor.

Because representatives of the Newspaper Guild, a C.I.O. organization, are endeavoring to prevail upon advertisers to withhold advertisements from the Chicago Herald-American, alleging that a strike is in effect, I am writing you officially advising that no strike is in effect and that it would be not only proper and fair to organized labor but highly advisable for your firm to advertise in the Chicago Herald-American.

You will help the cause of organized labor by doing so. In fact, you will help the American Federation of Labor very greatly in the efforts it is putting forth to promote cooperation and understanding between workers and their employers and to further the cause of collective bargaining by carrying advertisements in the Chicago Herald-American.

Very respectfully yours,

President,
American Federation of Labor.

SO YOU THOUGHT the AFL spent all its time trying to help workers? Well, here's additional evidence concerning some of the federation top leaders' outside activities. Bill Green, it turns out, is now an ad salesman in his spare time. His boss: Mr. Hearst, publisher of the scab Chicago Herald-American.

Atlanta Grand Jury Indicts AFL-Klan Member for Part in Flogging

ATLANTA, Ga., April 6.—An AFL-Ku Kluxer, along with four other Klansmen, was indicted by the Fulton County Grand Jury for the flogging of Pierce S. Toney, official of CIO Textile Workers Union local at nearby Scottdale. Ten indictments were returned by the grand jury involving a large number of beatings and floggings in the Atlanta area covering a period of more than a year.

Grand jury investigation began to take shape when Ike Gaston, East Point barber, was flogged to death the early part of March. Solicitor General John A. Boykin and Asst. General Solicitor Daniel Duke have carried on a relentless investigation, backed up by the two daily newspapers in Atlanta for the past several weeks.

The grand jury is still in session and there are indications that other indictments will be made involving the death of Ike Gaston and the flogging of other persons. Some sources estimate that more than 100 citizens of the Atlanta area have been flogged during the past two years.

A widespread movement is on foot, led by The Atlantic Constitution, to force the unmasking of the Klan in this State.

Three of the persons indicted by the grand jury Friday were released on $10,000 bail.

A group of men came to Toney's house on the night of August 1, 1938, and impersonated themselves as officers of the law. One of the men said they wanted to know why Toney had a "foreign" license tag on his automobile.

Toney explained that he had just bought the car in another State and that he planned to get a Georgia tag within the number of days prescribed by Georgia law. The Klansman then told Toney he was an officer of the law and that he would have to go with him to get the matter straightened out then. He proceeded with the men to an automobile in which there were several other men.

They drove Toney several miles to the place known as the city dump, in East Point, near Atlanta in Fulton County. Accused of being a CIO organizer, Toney denied this but told them he was active in organizing the textile union in Scottdale.

They proceeded to strap him over a stump and whipped his bare flesh with a large leather strap. The whipping continued for some time, after which they released him and put him back in the car and carried him to a spot in the city of Atlanta and dumped him out. He was barely able to proceed to the nearest street car line and take a car to a point near his home in Scottdale.

Brophy Speaker At Mine Holiday Celebration

Nanty Glo, Pa., Apr. 6—Parades, dedication of a $35,000 miners community hall and speeches by union leaders, including John Brophy, CIO director of local industrial unions, featured Nanty Glo's celebration of its April 1 mine workers' holiday.

Brophy, a worker in local coal mines many years ago, told the United Mine Workers members that "through your efforts, democracy in industry has been made possible for workers in the steel and automotive industries.

"In turn," he pointed out, "these powerful unions will be a support to the United Mine Workers in times of adversity. Unionism of the miner, the steel worker and the automobile workers, together with many other groups, has revolutionized the social, political and economic life of the laboring class."

Wire Union Meeting In Chicago

Chicago, Apr. 6.—Delegates representing nearly 20,000 telegraph workers, radio men and other employes in the communications industry throughout the country are arriving in town for the fifth national convention of the American Communications Association, CIO, which opens here April 8 at the LaSalle hotel.

Outstanding speakers scheduled to address the convention include Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel; Morris Watson, vice president of the American Newspaper Guild; James B. Carey, president of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Joseph Curran, president of the Natonal Maritime Union; Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administrator and Mayor Kelly of Chicago.

RATHBORNE TO REPORT

ACA President Mervyn Rathborne will report to the delegates that the contracts obtained by the union have resulted in "an upward trend of wages, elimination of part time work, speed-up and split tricks, guaranteed full payment of pensions and a general increase in living standards for the members of the union."

The major part of the convention's deliberations will center around the union's program to completely organize the employes of the Western Union Telegraph Company within the next year.

DISCUSS MERGER PLANS

Another important matter to come up will be the organization of a drive to protect communications workers in case of a merger of communications companies now pending before the Federal Communications Commission. The ACA has opposed the consilidation plan charging that it would result in mass lay-offs, and has demanded that full protection of the jobs and working conditions of the workers involved be a prerequisite to any merger proposal.

The report of the International Executive Bard will show that the union has won 167 contracts with steamship, radio and telegraph companies, covering 16,880 employes, 164 of which are closed shop agreements, and 3 preferential shop contracts.

CIO Dockmen Convene In Oregon

North Bend, Ore., Apr. 6 — A five-year agreement with shipowners to nail down fundamental rights so far won by the union is the main item on the agenda of the third annual convention of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union which opened here last Monday and will be in session another week.

Delegates have come to the convention from 78 affiliated local unions in California, Washington, Oregon, Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands. The San Francisco Warehousemen's Local 1-6 heads the list numerically, with more than 8,000 members, including units in Oakland, Crockett, Pesaluma, Redwood City and San Jose.

With ILWU President Harry Bridges in the chair, registration of delegates, election of committees and other routine matters to expedite proceedings took up the earlier sessions.

Merchants Run for Cover As Anti-CIO Drive Flops

HOPEWELL, Va., Apr. 6.—Hopewell merchants, their bold anti-union campaign a complete flop, were scurrying for cover today, leaving in their wake a bevy of newspaper advertisements proclaiming their utter devotion to the cause of organized labor.

Reason for the abrupt about-face of the local businessmen was an unexpected victory for District 50, United Mine Workers, in a National Labor Relations Board election at the Hummel-Ross Fibre Co. Despite full page anti-CIO advertisements and throw-aways which were signed by all but a handful of the town's store proprietors, the District 50 local won 233 votes, to 185 votes cast for a company-dominated "Workers' Council."

Even before the votes were fully counted, some of the merchants were trying to climb back from the ends of the limbs where they'd placed themselves.

AIDS SOLVAY STRIKE

Winning of the election is expected to have a marked effect in strengthening the strike of several hundred laborers, 90% of them Negroes, at the $50,000,000 Solvay plant, next door to the Hummel-Ross factory.

The Solvay workers, also organized by District 50, walked out in protest against 33c-hourly wages paid to them. Under a peculiar set-up, the strikers, all of whom were classified as common laborers, were hired by one W. G. B. Thompson, who acted as a contractor for the company. Pay came from Solvay, however, and the men worked under the supervision of Solvay foremen.

As soon as the strike was called, Thompson shut up shop and has stayed out of the picture.

LONG HOURS, LOW PAY

Chosen for their jobs by the notorious "shape-up" process, under which no man ever knows whether or not he is going to work on any given day, the strikers' incomes were kept at starvation levels. Hours ran up to 12 a day, with the 33c an hour rate in effect regardless what type of work was being done.

Day and night picket lines, a big strike commissary and support from other unions in the area have featured the workers' attempts to win a better living standard. Roy Lancaster and Fred Ruscoe, District 50 representatives guiding the strike, said NLRB proceedings will soon be under way, and predicted speedy victory for the men.

The Solvay company is a division of the powerful Allied Chemical & Dye Co. Its big plant, located here at Virginia's only inland port, extracts nitrogen from the air through an elaborate chemical process.

Steel Union Gains In Open Shop Firms

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH, Apr. 6.—Officers of the CIO's Steel Workers Organizing Committee will open the union's second national convention this spring with a report that definite inroads on the "Little Steel" front indicate that opposition is crumbling under the union campaign.

That "Little Steel"—only important segment in the steel industry still fighting the SWOC—is "softening" is shown in these three important developments:

1. SWOC Lodge 2177 scored a smashing victory over Bethlehem Steel Corporation after a five-day strike at Pottstown, Pa.

2. Republic Steel Corporation pleaded guilty to violating the Wagner Labor Relations Act, posted notices in its Beaver Falls, Pa., plant it was ceasing such violations, and offered reinstatement to an SWOC member.

3. A strike at the Indiana Harbor plant of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company was settled to the complete satisfaction of the steel union.

SWOC DEMANDS MET

The Bethlehem Steel strike was brought to an end after the company agreed to every demand of the union, including a guarantee by the company to recognize and deal with SWOC grievance committees; negotiates with the union on a 10 per cent wage raise, and meet at regular periods with the grievance committees to settle cases as fast as they arise.

The SWOC lodge at the Pottstown plant is the youngest in any Bethlehem mill and the sweeping victory here has added impetus to the union campaign at other plants of the company.

REPUBLIC BOWS

Republic Steel's action came in a notice it sent the Labor Board that the company would obey the law. This case, involving only the Beaver Falls plant, had been upheld by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Republic posted notices in the plant that it was withdrawing all recognition from the "Independent Protective Association of Employes" and the "Employes of Union Drawn Steel" (the Republic subsidiary involved) — both of which were shown to be company unions.

Meanwhile, several thousand dollars in wage increases and back pay has been won by SWOC members in various parts of the country.

$32,000 INCREASES

In Cincinnati, O., the steel union won an annual wage increase of more than $32,000 for employes of the American Can Company, through a new contract signed between the company and SWOC 1861.

CIO Mine Worker Elected To Seat in Canadian House

AT LEFT: Clarie Gillis, elected in recent Canadian voting, as the first CIO union member to sit in the Canadian House of Commons. A coal miner from Glace Bay, N. S., he is prominent in District 28 of the United Mine Workers.

AT RIGHT: Angus Morrison, who was elected as a labor candidate to serve in the Alberta legislature. Morrison is secretary-treasurer of District 18, UMW, and a cousin of D. W. Morrison, head of UMW District 26.

Halifax, N. S., April 6—CIO organizations in Canada will have direct representation in the Canadian House of Commons (corresponding to Congress in the United States) in the person of Clarie Gillis, a coal miner who hails from Glace Bay, Nova Scotia.

Long active as a leader in the United Mine Workers of America, Gillis was elected in the Cape Breton South constituency of Nova Scotia in the general election March 26.

Pledged to further a complete Labor program, he went before the electorate with the endorsement of District 26, UMW, and under the banner of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation party, with which the District UMW is affiliated.

THREE-MAN CONTEST

In the voting Gillis unseated the former Liberal member of Parliament, Dr. D. J. Hartigan and also vanquished National Government candidate Clyde Nunn in a three-cornered contest. Prominent CIO leaders spoke on behalf of Gillis during the election campaign.

Necessity that industrial workers be represented in the Parliaments of their country by men who knew problems of the working people was stressed in campaign speeches for the CIO man.

WELL-QUALIFIED

The successful candidate, who handles a pan shovel in Dominion Coal Company's No. 2 Colliery in Grace Bay, is exceedingly well qualified to represent the workers in the Canadian Parliament. He is a speaker of great ability, is absolutely fearless, liberal in his outlook and one of the most advanced labor men in Canada.

Clothing Union Opens Group Insurance Plan

NEW YORK, Apr. 6.—Group health, life and accident insurance covering 15,000 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Chicago, has been written by the Amalgamated Life & Health Insurance Co., just launched by the ACW, it was announced here this week by the union's national office.

The Amalgamated is a pioneer in the field of unemployment insurance, labor banking and co operative housing. Capitalized at $200,000, the new company has a paid in surplus of $100,000.

In announcing the union's new venture in insurance, Sidney Hillman, ACW president, expressed the hope that the Chicago "laboratory experiment" would justify the eventual extension of the group insurance plant to the entire Amalgamated membership of 250,000.

The union's group policy in Chicago will grant an outright $500 to beneficiaries of union members upon death, up to the age of 70, and $250 to those over that age. Health and accident provisions will yield a $10 weekly indemnity not exceeding an aggregate of 15 weeks in any consecutive 12 months.

In the case of accident, the period of indemnity will begin the first day of such disability, and in the case of sickness, from the eighth day.

The Amalgamated Life & Health Insurance Co. was formed as the result of an agreement between Chicago clothing manufacturers and union members concerning the disposition of unemployment insurance funds collected in the Chicago market.

Tell your members about CIO issues by distributing CIO literature at local meetings, rallies, etc. Write CIO headquarters for list of pamphlets and leaflets, prices, etc.

Expect Crowds At CIO Dance

Louisville, Ky., April 6.—Members of Local 41, American Communications Association, CIO, are planning to turn out in crowds tonight at the union dance to be held at the Seelbach Hotel. Peter Campbell, CIO regional director for the Louisville area, is among those who have bought tickets.

The Blue Grass News, official organ of the ACA local, hails Campbell as "a grand fellow" for his wholehearted support for the dance and the excellent work he has done for the union here.

Labor Man Wins Seat In Alberta

Edmonton, Alberta — A CIO leader, Angus Morrison, secretary-treasurer of District 18, United Mine Workers of America will be the only Labor member in the Alberta legislature which has just been elected.

Morrison was declared winner of the seat in Edson riding March 27, after a second vote count made necessary by Alberta's transferable system of balloting.

After the second choice votes of an Independent candidate—low man in the first count—had been tabulated, Mr. Morrison had 2,558 votes and J. H. Unwin, Social Credit candidate who had been seeking re-election in the mining-district riding, had 2,100.

The newly elected member of the legislature is a native of Marion Bridge, Nova Scotia. Before coming to Alberta some years ago, he worked in the coal mines in the Glace Bay district of Nova Scotia.

LIBERAL CONGRESSMEN CONDEMN NORTON BILL

End Of An Era

BLOODIEST INDUSTRIAL MASSACRE in modern American history was the attack on striking Republic Steel Co. employes at Chicago on Memorial Day, 1937. Ten men lost their lives, and others were seriously injured as Chicago cops did the dirty work for Tom Girdler (right), labor-hating head of Republic Steel.

This week the United States Supreme Court upheld the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the Labor Board; ruled, in effect, that the corporation was responsible for the bloody strike, and ordered reinstatement and back pay, running into millions of dollars, for 5,000 employes of the firm's Ohio plants. Next day, a Republic stockholder filed suit in New York courts charging the company's officials with business negligence, asked that they be forced to restore over $12,000,000 to the corporation.

CIO Unions Rap Craft Unit Plan; Lewis Leads Drive

(See Stories Pages 3 & 5)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 13 — Quickly mounting protest against the Norton Bill and the Smith Bill, both aimed to weaken the Wagner Labor Relations Act, was felt on Capitol Hill today as letters, wires and personal visits informed Congressmen of labor's opposition to both measures.

These events stood out in a week studded with developments in the drive to save the Wagner Act from destructive amendments:

1. A dissenting minority on the House Labor Committee issued a sharply-worded report criticizing the Norton Bill and its craft unit features.

2. The CIO formed a special committee to lead the drive against amendments, with John T. Jones, Maryland district head of the United Mine Workers named chairman by Pres. Lewis.

3. An urgent call to all CIO affiliates from Pres. Lewis for organized protest against the reactionaries' proposals.

4. Personal visits to Congressmen from units of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League, warning that industrial unions would regard passage of the bills as a "declaration of war" and would seek defeat of Congressmen voting against the Act.

5. Reps. Murdock and Healey filed a minority report attacking recommendations offered by the Smith Committee majority group.

6. Sen. Edward Burke, Nebraska reactionary and foe of the Wagner Act, was defeated for renomination under an avalanche of labor and liberal votes.

Hail Board Order Ending Phony Union

Denver, Colo., Apr. 13.—Action of the National Labor Relations Board in ordering dissolution of the company union at the Rockefeller-controlled Colorado Iron & Fuel Corp. brought enthusiastic comments from two CIO officials today.

CIO Vice-Pres. Reid Robinson, who heads the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union, said the NLRB decision was "a sweeping decision for the International and for Local 442 at the company's Sunrise, Wyoming, plant."

In Raton, New Mexico, Frank Hefferly, CIO regional director for Colorado and New Mexico, said the company "doubtless will negotiate a wage and hour contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee" covering the corporation's Pueblo, Colo., plant.

Southern Liberals To Meet

Chattanooga, Apr. 13. — More than a thousand representatives of all southern progressive organizations will gather here April 14-16 for the second coference of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Large numbers of CIO and AFL groups, farmers organizations, Negro civic and liberal university groups will send delegates to the meeting, at which Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will be principal speaker.

William Mitch of Birmingham, Ala., southern director for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and district president of the miners, will speak .

AFL Democracy

WASHINGTON, Apr. 13. — A convention of the AFL Intl. Union of Operating Engineers heard William Green atack the CIO as "dictatorial."

The convention at which Green spoke was the first held by the union since 1928!

Optimistic

Another CIO Victory

BALTIMORE, Apr. 13 — The CIO added another to its long string of Labor Board victories, as District 50, United Mine Workers emerged the winner in a poll at the Standard Wholesale Phosphate Co. by a 173-151 margin.

Ben Rilenge, District 50, representative, said contract negotiations would be started immediately.

Ballots Uncounted At Con-Ed; Union Hits Handling of Poll

NEW YORK, Apr. 13.—Some 31,000 ballots cast during two days of voting at the Consolidated Edison Co. remain sealed, locked and guarded while officials of the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee attempt to untangle one of the most slipshod elections ever conducted.

CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, who personally supervised the pre-election campaign, said: "there is no doubt the company wishes the 'independent' brotherhood to win the election, and will do everything in its power to bring about such a result.

"For that reason the CIO will study closely every development in the situation, in order that the democratic interests of the Consolidated Edison employes may be fully protected."

PREDICTS CIO VICTORY

Despite the conduct of the election, Straub predicted a CIO victory. Two separate units were established by the NLRB, one for production workers and another for clerical and commercial employes, with approximately an equal number of workers in each.

"A CIO victory will be a triumph for democracy under conditions and circumstances hardly favorable to democracy, for in no company have employes faced greater hazards of insecurity than in Consolidated Edison, which has laid off nearly 40 per cent of its workers during the past seven years.

"A CIO victory will bring real benefits—in job security, equalization of pay, seniority rights and adequate pensions—to Edison employes."

Appearing on the ballot were the UWOC, an "independent" brotherhood hastily organized a few weeks ago, and no union. The AFL's Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which signed a collusive contract with the company two years ago, withdrew from the election when it foresaw certain defeat.

CRITICIZE HANDLING

Scarcely before the polling places had closed, Director Harold Straub of the UWOC had demanded of the Natl. Labor Relations Board that Mrs. Elinore Herrick be removed from further supervision of the election.

His request turned down, Straub said further action would be taken against Mrs. Herrick, whom he accused of at least eight actions prejudicial to the CIO union.

The ballots meanwhile were impounded in sealed rooms, guarded by city police and Labor Board employes, company representatives and CIO officials pending a complete checkup of voters' eligibility to participate in the election.

Most serious of the CIO complaints against the New York regional official of the Labor Board was an accusation that under the election procedure, it would have been easy for the company to send "repeaters" to the various polling places, where they could easily vote several times against the Utility Workers Organizing Committee.

ESSENTIAL DEMAND

Straub asked why Mrs. Herrick, in her initial statement to the press, said "nothing about her willingness to check the 65 separate voting lists against a master list to find out if any 'repeaters' voted in the election, and how many.

"This is absolutely essential," he continued, "not only because we have reports that such repeat voting occurred but because the election machinery itself made this possible.

"It is especially necessary in view of the fact that the identification cards issued by the Board to each eligible voter were actually addressed on company machines and mailed from company property. Since Mrs. Herrick denied our request to have union observers present at the time, how can we be sure that no extra cards were issued?

"Mrs. Herrick may have faith in Consolidated Edison—a company convicted by the Supreme Court of violating the Wagner Act—but we have none. That's why we want the lists checked."

In addition, the UWOC official accused the Labor Board representative of having consented to discuss the election on a company-sponsored radio program and of having written an article on the subject for the Con-Ed company house organ. The radio speech was cancelled at the last minute, following action by the NLRB, and the pages containing her article were torn from the magazine before it was put in the mails.

CONSOLIDATED EDISON employes turned out by the thousands to vote in the largest Labor Board poll in New York history. Ballots remain under lock and key while check is made of the voting list of 31,000 eligibles, following complaints about election procedure filed by the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee.

Union Leader Runs For Congress

Carnegie, Pa.—William T. Allott, president of Carnegie Local 1070, a 100 per cent union mill, is seeking the nomination on the Democratic ticket in the 34th Congressional District, due to the decision of Rep. Matthew Dunn not to seek reelection.

Allott advocates adequate pensions for the aged, work relief at decent wages for all unemployed, no foreign alliances and no sending of American soldiers out of the country.

Hit Policies Of Utility

McKeesport, Pa., Apr. 13. — Despite sky-rocketing profits, the Duquesne Light Co. has refused to give any wage increases to its employes, Local 110 of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee pointed out today in an appeal for increased membership.

The company, completing its most profitable year, earned $10,328,513, some $1,397,186 more than in the previous year, the local pointed out, and deemed it necessary to grant a voluntary rate reduction to consumers.

"But what have these profits meant to the employes? Nothing," Local 110 points out. "Instead the company is continually taking advantage of the lack of organization among the majority of its employes.

DIVIDE AND RULE

"Instead of a general raise which they could very easily grant, they have drastically reduced the wages of many of their employes under the cowardly cloak of reclassification. These reductions range from $9 to $25 a month.

"The company perpetuated its policy of divide and rule by granting raises to various employes which, in most cases, amounted to three cents an hour, and which were more than taken care of by the reduction in hourly rates of other workers."

Witnesses Brand Poll Tax 'Undemocratic'

WASHINGTON, Apr. 13. — Prominent southern liberals today urged the House Judiciary Committee to approve the Geyer Bill, which would ban payment of poll taxes in eight southern states as a condition for voting in federal elections.

Hearings on the bill, which have been in progress for the last fortnight, are expected to end soon.

Leading witness was Crampton Harris of Birmingham, former law associate of Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black and a prominent attorney throughout the south. He told the committee that the bill is clearly constitutional, and should be passed at once in order to extend the franchise to millions of people who are barred from voting because of their low incomes.

Lucy Randolph Mason of Atlanta, public relations director for the CIO Textile Workers Union in the South, and Noel Beddow of Birmingham, official of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, testified that organized labor is strongly behind the bill and wishes its immediate passage.

SPREADS CORRUPTION

George Pruner, Republican state legislator in Virginia, branded the poll tax requirement a breeder of corruption, and said that in his own state candidates were all too frequently nominated on the basis of their ability to pay poll taxes for thousands of voters.

In one Virginia county, well over half the $19,000 collected in poll taxes came from the treasuries of politicians bent on buying up votes, Pruner estimated.

Indiana Local Unions Hear Brophy At Parley

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Apr. 13. — Problems facing CIO unions nationally and locally were outlined by John Brophy, CIO national director of local industrial unions, at the first state convention of LIU affiliates which convened here April 7.

CIO Regional Director James Robb, chairman of the convention, in his opening speech, told of the desire of the miscellaneous unions throughout the state affiliated directly with the CIO, to follow the general policies and program advocated by the national CIO.

The meeting which was attended by some 100 delegates was the first state convention to be held by local industrial unions as a body.

STRESSES ROLE OF LOCALS

Brophy stressed the importance of these miscellaneous unions to the labor movement, and pointed out that they were not an isolated group, but were closely tied to the CIO through their affiliation with city, county or state councils.

The need of understanding the political and legislative problems now before the country as they affected labor, Brophy said, was of paramount importance. He called attention particularly to the four Norton amendments to the Wagner Act now being proposed in Congress, and explained how they would harm the CIO movement.

He advised all locals in Indiana to do everything in their power to fight these amendments by writing or wiring their opposition to their congressmen and senators. He also recommended taking an active part in the government low-cost housing program. Secretary-Treasurer Bartee of the State CIO Council later introduced a resolution on housing which was adopted unanimously.

Other speakers included Walter Truman of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, a candidate for the state legislature on the Democratic ticket; Professors Fay and McGuire of DePauw University, and a number of CIO state and local officials.

Guild Wins Pay Boosts

Boston, Apr. 13. — Greater security and wage increases for hundreds of employes of the Boston Globe and the Boston Herald-Traveler were won in contract renewals signed by the CIO Newspaper Guild here.

Report Hits Labor Act Enemies

Washington, April 13.—Detailed and inclusive condemnation of the Wagner Act amendments proposed in the Smith bill is contained in the minority report just released by two of the five members of the Smith Committee appointed to investigate the National Labor Relations Board.

The report, signed by Reps. Abe Murdock of Utah and Arthur D. Healey of Massachusetts, bluntly declares that the majority report does not produce "even a scintilla of evidence" to support "the most drastic modifications of the present law" that it recommends, and winds up by urging that "the bill submitted by the majority" be rejected.

RAKE COMMITTEE

The report deals frankly with the procedure of the Smith Committee, laying the blame for its methods squarely on the majority and on the shoulders of the Committee counsel, Edmund Toland, one-time attorney for anti-labor detective agencies.

The Committee, Reps. Murdock and Healey declare, "made little effort to follow out the mandate of the House that it 'investigate and ascertain the facts', but instead spent many weeks listening to charges and counter-charges of unrelated instances of alleged indiscretion on the part of various employes of the Board, rather than focussing its attention on the problems with which the Board was dealing."

Analyzing the amendments proposed in the Smith bill, the two-to-three minority report points out that the majority, instead of making a thorough investigation, "abruptly suspended hearings and immediately prepared a draft bill which contemplates the most drastic modifications of the present law."

MOVE TO SAVE WAGNER ACT

Thousands Greet CIO Leaders In Michigan

By FRANK WINN

Detroit, Apr. 13.—With the stirring and militant words of CIO President John L. Lewis and two of his chief lieutenants still ringing in their ears, Michigan General Motors workers—with others throughout the nation—put the finishing touches this week-end on a campaign that will roll up a record majority in the NLRB elections on April 17.

If there was any doubt by anybody as to the loyalty of GM workers to the CIO, it was dispelled last week-end when more than 30,000 in Detroit and Flint filled the largest halls available and cheered to the echo the messages of President Lewis and Vice Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman.

URGE BIG MARGIN

Taking their cue from the enthusiasm which greeted them, the CIO leaders accepted a UAW-CIO victory as a "foregone conclusion" and went on to urge the greatest possible victory to insure the best possible contract so that the union could then concentrate its energy on its next objective — the Ford Motor Company.

"Why not make the election unanimous?" Lewis asked. "You're going to win it anyway!"

Arriving in Detroit last Saturday, Lewis, Murray and Hillman were first speakers at a luncheon sponsored by the Wayne County Industrial Union Council at which President Tracy Doll was toastmaster and which was attended by more than 500 local union leaders and city and state officials.

That evening they spoke at a giant and colorful demonstration of 15,000 CIO members at Olympia Arena, which was opened by a parade of 200 local union banners and 200 American flags led by the Dodge Local band. UAW-CIO GM Director Walter P. Reuther was chairman.

MAYOR MAKES ADDRESS

Local speakers included Mayor Edward J. Jeffries, who welcomed the CIO leaders to Detroit, President R. J. Thomas and Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes of the UAW-CIO, and Monsignor John S. Mies of the Roman Catholic Church. Chairman William Stevenson of the UAW-CIO GM Council opened the meeting.

Next day, Lewis, Hillman and Murray went to Flint, center of the GM empire and of the historic

CIO Foresees No Gains In Employment, Asks More Funds For WPA

Washington, Apr. 13.—The April issue of the CIO Economic Outlook, pointing to a "continuous slow fall" in industrial production, today found little room for optimism during the next few months.

Chief reason for a levelling off from the "serious drop" in production which got under way in December, the Outlook said, was the maintenance of large inventories by manufacturers based on the expectation of "more destructive, more deadly war abroad."

NO SOLUTION

But even a growth in the export trade will not solve the nation's economic problems to any great extent, the report warned, pointing out "it would be false to place our hopes for employment and recovery on exports."

Unemployment during February was estimated at 11,880,000, a less than seasonal decline of only 35,000 from January; and the Outlook quoted "many government economists" as convinced "that only an extensive Federal works program can turn the nation toward recovery again. As yet, however, the federal administration has shown no sign of presenting a recovery plan."

Though steel and airplane exports are up, the war "has seriously cut down exports on agricultural products," it was pointed out, leading to the general conclusion that "no probable increase in exports could increase domestic production sufficiently to make a serious dent in our unemployment problem or to raise industrial production to prosperity levels."

Washington, Apr. 13.—The CIO presented a two-point WPA program to Congress today, urging passage of a $150,000,000 deficiency appropriation and allotment of funds for 3,000,000 WPA jobs during the 1941 fiscal year.

The CIO position was outlined to a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee by Unemployment Director Ralph Hetzel, who said there is no prospect of any substantial decrease in unemployment below the present 11,880,000 level.

The $150,000,000 deficiency appropriation to be used for WPA between now and the end of the fiscal year on June 30, would keep WPA employment at the February level, Hetzel pointed out, and "seems to us a minimum program for the current months." For the next fiscal year, he added, an average of 3,000,000 WPA jobs should be provided.

LOW RELIEF RATES

Unless Congress takes such action the CIO official pointed out, "those persons and families who are not provided with work through the program of the federal government will be thrown back upon states and cities whose level of relief is brutally low and whose ability to finance such a relief burden is progressively declining.

"The current available appropriations for WPA work to June 30 make a cut which would result in the lowest percentage of unemployed on WPA since WPA got under way. Other public work and armament expenditures give absolutely no indication of being able to absorb any substantial number of the unemployed."

Lewis Asks All Unions To Join Drive

Washington, Apr. 13 — All CIO affiliates were urged by President John L. Lewis to "mobilize labor's full strength against the amendments to the Wagner Act" in the Norton bill and the Smith bill recently offered to Congress in a letter describing the proposed changes and calling on CIO members to oppose them.

President Lewis' letter was accompanied by a copy of a new CIO pamphlet entitled, "Save the Wagner Act", which describes the proposed bills as "a double barreled shotgun levelled at the heart of the Wagner Act."

Lewis called particular attention to the craft unit amendment proposed in the Norton bill, which he declared "must be vigorously fought as a threat to the very existence of our organization's" and which "constitutes a declaration of war on the industrial unions of the CIO.

"No industrial union, no matter how long established as the workers' respresentative, would be safe from this form of invasion," Lewis said.

Unions Launch Drive

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 13—Events moved fast here in the fight to save the Wagner Act from crippling amendments as the CIO, led by Pres. John L. Lewis, mobilized labor's full strength to oppose the Norton and Smith bills recommended to Congress by narrow majority votes of the Smith Committee and the House Labor Committee.

In Washington, representatives of CIO national and international unions came together at Pres. Lewis' call to map out an intensive campaign against the two anti-labor bills. Meeting under the direction of John T. Jones, state CIO president for Maryland and the District of Columbia, they concentrated their main effort on the craft unit amendment of the Norton bill that would open industrial unions to endless raids by craft splinter groups.

REPORT ISSUED

At the same time an almost 50 per cent minority of the House Committee issued a report sharply condemning the craft unit amendment in the Norton bill, declaring that it would take many years to undo "the evil which it will work upon organized labor and the public welfare" if passed.

Seven of the 15 Committee members who voted when the Norton bill came up signed the minority report, led by Rep. Frank Fries of Illinois. The majority report was passed in the first place by the narrow margin of nine to six — indicating that the majority had shrunk by one as the implications of the proposed craft amendment became clear.

SMITH GROUP MINORITY

Another Congressional minority, this time the two liberal members of the five man Smith Committee, blasted at enemies of the Wagner Act in a report that carried inclusive criticism of the Smith ripper bill, describing it as "destructive to the vital provisions of the Act," and declaring that the bill "cannot find support in the testimony developed by our investigation."

Political repercussions were registered throughout the nation — with particular sharpness on Wagner Act foes — as Senator Burke of Nebraska went down to defeat in the primary vote for 1940. Burke was the leading Senatorial enemy of the Act and at the last session placed the open Natl. Association of Manufacturers amendments before the Senate.

Burke's defeat by labor and farm voters reminded observers

Pact Lifts Wages 15%

Adrian, Mich., April 13.—Wages zoomed upward an average of 15 per cent for employes at the Gerity-Adrian Manufacturing Co. today as the firm signed its second agreement with the CIO National Association of Die Casting Workers.

The contract, hailed as the best ever won by a union in this city, also guaranteed the union shop and vacations with pay. The company's 400 employes were also assured of full seniority rights if they are called to military service.

How Craft Unit Rule Would Aid Splitters

SAN FRANCISCO, Apr. 13.—A graphic description of the way the Norton Bill's craft union amendment to the Wagner Act appeared recently in the daily labor column written for the San Francisco Chronicle by Arthur Eggleston.

Discussing how the Labor Board would have to function if the amendment were passed, Eggleston wrote:

"The old familiar illustration comes to hand.

"Here is an orchestra which has bargained collectively for half a century. In the presence of the law which forbids the Labor Board to use its own best judgment and its knowledge of the history of bargaining in that particular case, what is to prevent the trombonists from splitting themselves off and forming a separate 'craft' bargaining unit?"

The Republic Steel Decision

The refusal of the U. S. Supreme Court to review a lower court's decision in the Republic Steel Corp. case is more than a great legal victory for the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

It means reinstatement and the payment of millions of dollars in back wages to thousands of workers who were unjustly deprived of their jobs.

It means that the Supreme Court has once more upheld labor's rights as embodied in the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

It means that no matter how great and powerful a corporation, it is not above the law that protects its employes.

It means vindication for the CIO in connection with the "Little Steel" strike of 1937. The Labor Board found that Republic Steel caused the strike by its lawless anti-union activities. Its findings have now been upheld to the highest court.

The Supreme Court decision is not only a great legal victory, but also a great moral victory for the CIO. Besides the immediate benefits it brings to the workers in jobs and back wages, it will encourage all of them to exercise their right to organize without fear of lawbreaking employers.

It brings measurably nearer the inevitable day when Republic Steel, the Ford Motor Co., Bethlehem Steel, and other holdout corporations will finally accord to their workers their full collective bargaining rights.

Welcome CIO!

When the CIO first came to Flint, Michigan, no welcome signs were hung out.

It was an anti-union, corporation-controlled city. Organizers of the United Automobile Workers were trailed and spied upon, and as the union grew it had to overcome all sorts of hostility.

The welcome accorded John L. Lewis, Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray, when they visited Flint on April 7, was in startling contrast to this early hostility.

The main streets of the city had banners stretched across them reading, "Welcome CIO". Every lamp post carried pictures of the CIO leaders on signs about "CIO Day".

The largest auditorium in the city was packed to the rafters, with all standing room taken and a large overflow crowd. The meeting was the largest and most enthusiastic ever held in Flint, and a great parade through the city took place after it.

Significance: The practical benefits which the CIO has brought to Flint have overcome all hostile propaganda. A great union has become firmly established. It has raised wages and improved conditions. It has won the firm loyalty of the auto workers and the respect of the whole community.

That is why Flint is voting CIO in the coming General Motors election; and that is why the CIO is going over the top everywhere that the workers have come to know and benefit from it.

A Word to the Wise

The recent primaries have given a pretty clear indication as to how American voters feel about the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Two outstanding leaders on opposite sides of this issue sought renomination.

They were Sen. Edward Burke of Nebraska, sponsor of the destructive amendments sought by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and supporter of the closely similar amendments sought by the AFL leadership; and Congressman Frank Fries of Illinois, a House leader of the fight to defend the Act and outspoken opponent of both the Norton and the Smith amendments.

Burke was snowed under in the primaries. Fries won renomination by a vote of nearly four to one.

A word like this to the wise members of Congress should be sufficient.

Attempting A Blitzkrieg

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Who's Going To Be The Goat

THE Norton bill to amend the Wagner act is a good example of the policy of appeasement. This policy, contrary to popular impression, did not originate with Chamberlain and his umbrella. It has its roots away back in folklore and heathen rites.

When the weather was bad, or the enemy was winning too many battles, or a plague was spreading, the boys would get together and decide that what the tribe needed was a good old-fashioned sacrifice.

So they would pick out a comely damsel, doll her up no end, and proclaim their undying love, devotion and respect for her, while the butcher knife was being sharpened.

Then they would place her on an altar, and as the boys went through their roll-call votes and other ritual, proceed to carve her up with the greatest impartiality and objectivity.

This was supposed to appease the gods and square all accounts.

Other tribes, more economical of their supply of comely damsels, would substitute a goat — whence the modern slang expression about making someone "the goat."

But whether human or animal, the chosen sacrifice was given every assurance that there were no hard feelings.

The Norton Plan

High Priestess Mary Norton of of the House Labor Committee has decided on this simple, if old-fashioned, solution for all the complicated fuss about the Wagnes act.

She proposes to take the CIO and its industrial unions, place them on an altar (butcher's block, to you), and then have them carved to pieces with craft knives.

All of this is to be done legally (if her amendments are passed), with due decorum, and with assurances of impartiality, love for labor, and an ardent desire to save the Wagner act.

By letting her carve them up, she indicates, the unions will be saved from the knife of that wicked old witch-doctor, Howard Smith.

The acceptance of this formula, Priestess Norton contends, will appease the gods of Wall Street, foil Doc Smith and his dervishes, relieve the Democratic party of embarrassment, and be perfectly satisfactory to Bill Green.

The only hitch to applying this old heathen solution to a modern problem, is that American industrial workers do not have requisite maidenly meekness, and do have a constitutional aversion to being made the goat.

They will not place their organizational necks on the chopping block to win a smile from Mary Norton — nor even to make a holiday for Bill Green and his union-busting pals of the Union League Club.

A Counter-Proposition

If anyone is to be made the goat, American labor has a counter-proposition to make.

It proposes to let some nice, fat Congressmen and Senators nominate themselves as volunteer sacrifices.

All they have to do is to vote for the destruction of American unions and the Wagner act, by supporting the Norton or Smith amendments; place their political heads on the next election block, and the voters will do the rest.

As a matter of fact, this process is already under way. First volunteer to step up to the block has been Senator Edward Burke of Nebraska.

Burke stuck out his political neck as leader of the fight against the Wagner act. He introduced the amendments in the Senate which embodied the program of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers.

Because the amendments proposed by the AFL leaders so closely resemble those of the NAM, Burke supported both alike. But the rank and file of the AFL have no more use for enemies of the Wagner act than have the members of the CIO, and Burke was defeated in the recent Democratic primaries by an overwhelming majority.

In contrast, Congressman Frank Fries of Illinois, who has been a courageous defender of labor's rights as embodied in the Wagner act, and who led the fight in the House labor committee against the Norton amendments, won renomination in the primaries on the same day by a nearly four-to-one majority.

'Move Over, Bossy, This Pasture Belongs to Me'

CINCINNATI, Apr. 13. — Hungry? Under-nourished? Longing for a good steak dinner?

Forget about it—eat grass instead.

That was the advice given America's low income families today by three Kansas City chemists reporting to the American Chemical Society. They indicated that what this country needs is a bigger and better supply of lawns to feed the hungry.

Warming up to their subject, the trio of scientists said grass is full of vitamins, and that 12 pounds of grass will take the place of 340 pounds of vegetables, many of which are not now available for low income groups.

Text Of House Labor Group Minority Report

WASHINGTON, Apr. 13.—A almost 50-50 split on the proposed Norton craft unit amendment to the Wagner Act was revealed here in publication of a minority report by seven members of the 15 on the House Labor Committee who voted when the bill was before them, the seven including one of the nine who originally voted for the bill.

The seven to eight minority was headed by Rep. Fries of Illinois and included Reps. Randolph of W. Va., Gerald Landis of Indiana, John Lesinski of Michigan, Kent Keller of Illinois, Thomas D'Alesandro of Maryland and Matthew Dunn of Pennsylvania.

Text of the minority report which sharply condemned the proposed craft unit amendment follows:

A deep regard for the welfare of organized labor and the public interest compels us to record our opposition to the passage of H. R. 9195, as reported, to amend the National Labor Relations Act. We do so because in our view Section 2 of this bill would constitute a serious threat to the growth and maintenance of labor unions; by inviting raids by both great labor organizations on the membership of the other it is bound to provoke the most violent dissensions among such labor organizations and among workers and thus promote further division in the ranks of labor; and it will of necessity disturb the most settled collective bargaining relationships.

The most perplexing and most troublesome problem that the Labor Board has had to face is determining the appropriate bargaining unit. Numerous factors that are involved are the desires of the employes themselves, the history of collective bargaining in similar plants in the industry, the mutual interests of the employes, conflicts in the interests of the employes, the functional coherence of the various operations of the plant, geographical location of different units of the business, and many other similar factors.

In our opinion the application of the "Globe Doctrine" in cases of conflict between craft and industrial unions has been eminently fair to craft unions. The "Globe Doctrine" permits the employes in the craft group, by vote or other expression of their wishes, to decide for themselves whether they desire to be in a separate craft unit or to be part of a larger unit including the craft group. If a majority of the craft employes express their preference for the craft union, then the Board holds the craft unit to be appropriate. On the other hand, if a majority of the craft employes express a preference for the union claiming the larger unit, then the Board includes the craft employes in the larger unit.

DECIDED FOR AFL

In 81 cases out of 100 the Board decided that the craft unit was appropriate. In most of the 19 cases turned down by the Board the craft unit had no members, or substantially no members among the craft employes, and the craft employes had indicated no desire to be included in the craft unit, or the craft unit had never been historically considered a separate craft group.

This amendment would establish a hard and fast rule which the Board would be required to follow regardless of other circumstances. It would also require the Board to establish craft units not only among groups of craft employes who have historically organized along craft lines but also among many other groups of so-called craft employes among whom there has been no history and no real development of craft organization.

While the amendment purports to grant free choice to the workers to decide which form of unionism they wish, its actual operation, in fact, nullifies any free choice of the majority. The majority is not ascertained until an election is held, and no election can be held until the unit for that election is determined by the Board. Under this amendment, the Board is required in every case to establish the craft type of unit, whether or not the persons seeking it have any history of collective bargaining or can show any craft union membership sufficient to warrant such a unit election, and even if 99 per cent of the workers in the plant have chosen an industrial union and enjoyed an industrial contract for many years.

ARBITRARY CLAIMS OF CRAFTS

Thus it becomes clear that the effect of the amendment is arbitrarily to impose upon every industrial situation the multiple claims of the craft units as the prescribed form of organization, endowed with the authority of the Federal Government, even though such craft units have never historically been considered as separate crafts, or have never bargained on a craft-unit basis. Under this law, unions such as those in the mining industry, the machine-making industry, the clothing industry, the hotel industry, and others that have established industrial unionism for many years, and administered contracts which have eliminated disputes and stabilized their industries, will find their form of organization proscribed and thwarted by the dictate of Federal law.

The danger of this section of the bill is not confined to any particular body of organized labor. Two-thirds of the membership of the American Federation of Labor are embraced in industrial unions. Indeed, in the monthly Journal of the International Association of Machinists for March, 1940, there appears an editorial by its general vice president vigorously protesting against the raids on its membership and plants carried out by craft unions.

SHOULD BE LEFT TO WORKERS

We do not urge that industrial type of organization should by law be declared superior to that of craft unions. But by the same token, we are unable to understand how this committee or Congress can be expected to decide completely and arbitrarily in favor of one form of organization as against the other. It is our position that the choice of the type of organization should be left as a matter to be determined by the workers themselves and thir bona fide labor organizations.

We insist that governmental authority should not be invoked in favor of one form of labor organization as against another, whether it be craft or industrial. The only possible result of section 2 of H. R. 9195 will be to produce bitter internal dissension among workers, cause industrial disputes, and bring about the nullification of the purposes of the act. If the bill, as reported, should be passed, we will spend many years undoing the evil which it will work upon organized labor and the public welfare.

here that the openly big-business amendments endorsed by him were accompanied by a covert NAM bill in the amendments backed by Wm. Green and other AFL topshots, which were exposed as written by NAM attorneys in Lewis' testimony before the Senate Labor Committee earlier in the session.

Further political effects of the fight to save the Act were seen in the successful primary campaign of Rep. Fries of Illinois, leader of the liberal forces in the House Labor Committee who issued the minority report.

JONES' STATEMENT

CIO intentions to keep up the fight against crippling amendments were made clear in a statement issued by John T. Jones on the summoning of CIO representatives to Washington.

"The representatives of the CIO unions who will stay in Washington until the Wagner Act is out of danger will inform the people back home as to how every member of Congress stands on this vital issue," he said. "Our representatives will oppose all efforts to steamroller through Congress under a gag rule this vicious amendment and the other amendments embodied in the Norton bill. All of the unions represented at the conference are emphatic in supporting the position of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League against all amendments which have been introduced in Congress."

This stand was reaffirmed by Pres. Lewis in a letter to all CIO unions urging them to write and wire to their Senators and Representatives in protest against the plot to destroy the Act. Lewis urged CIO members to "mobilize labor's full strength against the amendments" in declaring that "action to save the Act is now imperative."

A similar call for a barrage of labor and progressive protests was issued in a CIO pamphlet, "Save the Wagner Act — Your Unions and Your Jobs Are at Stake."

While labor mobilized to defend its vital rights against reactionary attack, aid came from a group of 50 employers in New Jersey that wired to Rep. Norton sharply opposing her bill, first of a series expected from employers who do not want to see orderly labor relations destroyed by legalized craft unit raids.

Defeat Of Burke Shows CIO Strength

CHICAGO, Apr. 13.—The power of CIO voting strength was amply demonstrated in two mid-West primary elections this week.

Sen. Edward Burke, Nebraska's gift to the National Association of Manufacturers and an ardent foe of labor and the Wagner Act, was defeated for renomination in the state Democratic primaries.

In the 21st Illinois district, Rep. Frank Fries, Democrat, who has been a faithful friend of the workers during his two terms in the House, won a 4-1 renomination victory as thousands of soft coal miners and other union groups turned out in force to vote their appreciation of his services.

A member of the House Labor Committee, Fries supported the minority dissent opinion which severely criticized the Norton Bill to amend the Wagner Act as hostile to the cause of labor.

CIO VICTORY

Burke's defeat was recognized as a clear-cut victory for the CIO. He trailed Gov. R. L. Cochran, liberal, by more than 20,000 votes, with some outlying precincts still unheard from. Elected in 1934 when he pretended to espouse the cause of progressiveism, Burke quickly became the Senate sounding board for the NAM and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. His drastic anti-union amendments to the Wagner Act, became, at the last session of Congress, the rallying point for all foes of labor.

Supreme Court Upholds NLRB in Republic Case; $13,000,000 Suit Filed

Pittsburgh, Pa., Apr. 13.—Millions of dollars and the lives of a number of workers could have been saved if the Republic Steel Corp. had abided by the law and not chosen the way of industrial strife instead, Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee said today in commenting on the refusal of the U. S. Supreme Court to review the Republic Steel case.

The Supreme Court, in declining last Monday to consider the case, automatically upheld a unanimous decision of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals backing an order of the National Labor Relations Board which required the company to reinstate with back pay 5,000 CIO workers fired during the "Little Steel" strike of 1937.

HITS FAKE UNIONS

The Board also ordered Republic to stop discouraging membership in the Steel Workers Organizing Committee or any other labor organization and to withdraw all recognition from company union plans. The order affected the company's plants at Massillon, Canton, Youngstown, Warren, Niles and Cleveland, O.

"It is exactly three years ago since the Steel Workers Organizing Committee first requested conferences with the Republic Steel Corporation," Murray declared in his statement on the Court's decision.

"Had Republic Steel adopted a responsible attitude at that time all this industrial disturbance could have been avoided — there would have been no strike; there would have been no loss of life; millions of dollars could have been saved.

"But Republic Steel, as the Labor Board declared, 'had chosen the way of industrial strife'.

"The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in refusing to review the Labor Board's decision which found Republic Steel guilty on all counts, is a complete victory and a confirmation of the position taken by the SWOC three years ago.

"In addition the decision destroys the case of Republic Steel against the SWOC in its contention that the strike was a conspiracy for the purpose of interfering with the business of the Corporation.

"The Third Circuit Court specifically upheld the Labor Board's findings that Republic Steel must accept complete and full responsibility because of its own lawless activities for the strike which resulted.

AIDS DAMAGE SUITS

"Added support is also given the hundreds of members of the SWOC who have initiated individual damage suits against Republic Steel for assault and battery and false arrests which they suffered during the strike at the hands of the Corporation. Some $2,000,000 are involved in these individual damage suits.

"The action of the Supreme Court also assures eventual victory in similar cases at the Chicago, Buffalo and Monroe, Mich., plants of Republic Steel, for the issues there are exactly the same as in the so-called Ohio case.

Suit Says Girdler Policies 'Illegal, Wasteful, Improper'

NEW YORK, Apr. 13.—The ghost of their violent opposition to CIO unionism in 1937 came back to haunt Tom Girdler and 15 of his executive associates at Republic Steel today, for the second time in a week.

Less than 24 hours after the Supreme Court of the United States had upheld National Labor Relations Board and CIO arguments that the company's illegal anti-labor activities were responsible for the 1937 strike, a stockholder in the corporation filed suit in New York State Supreme Court asking that high officials reimburse the company some $12,850,000 for losses and damages.

Filed by Minnie Friedman of New York, the suit charged the Republic Steel executives with lacking "ordinary prudence and business judgment" both in fighting the Steel Workers Organizing Committee during the strike and in appealing the subsequent Labor Board decision to the U. S. Circuit and Supreme Courts.

The executives' conduct during the strike, the suit charged, was "illegal, wasteful, ultra vires, improvident and improper" and their acts were "conceived and done faithlessly, recklessly, imprudently, improvidently and defiantly in violation of law and of their trust and duty as directors and officers of Republic and its stockholders."

BREAK-DOWN OF EXPENSES

The plaintiff declared that "only by means of this action" will the exact amount of "injury, loss and damage sustained and the liabilities incurred, by Republic by reason of the illegal and wrongful acts of said individual defendants" be known.

Certain estimates of the expense incurred by the Republic officials in their anti-union fight were contained in the suit, however:

Espionage, strikebreakers, "police" officers	$ 200,000
Munitions, tear gas, machine guns, etc.	300,000
Anti-union advertising	100,000
Liability for back pay services for employes	7,500,000
Loss of profits during strike	2,500,000
Liability for damage suits filed by strikers, sympathizers and others	2,000,000
Legal expenses for fighting NLRB in courts	250,000
	$12,850,000

Pamphlet Describes Danger to Labor Act

WASHINGTON, Apr. 13.—The Norton and Smith bills now in the Congressional mill are "a double-barrelled shotgun levelled at the heart of the Wagner Act," the newest CIO pamphlet, entitled "Save the Wagner Act—Your Unions and Your Jobs Are at Stake," declares.

"The enemies of labor are in full cry after the Act," the pamphlet says. "For two years their drive against labor's rights has been held off — by the strength of the CIO and the protests of millions of workers. Now they have teamed up for an anti-labor offensive on two fronts. They are determined as never before to destroy the Wagner Act by crippling amendments."

SAVE the Wagner Act

Your Union and Your Jobs Are at Stake

"The two fronts, the pamphlet says, are represented on one side by the "open reactionaries led by the three to two majority of the Smith Committee" who "frankly propose to tear the heart out of the Act," and on the other side by the "self-styled friends of labor" in the nine to six majority of the House Labor Committee "who would destroy the Wagner Act while pretending to save it from its out-and-out enemies."

The pamphlet analyzes the two bills, with particular attention to the proposed craft unit amendment in the Norton bill, which would force the Labor Board to certify craft splinter groups against the will of the industrial workers in an industrial plant.

The pamphlet urges all CIO members and friends of labor to write and wire their protests to their Senators and Congressmen, to the President, to Rep. Norton of N. J., who sponsored the bill, to Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Rayburn of the House, to Senator Thomas of the Senate Labor Committee and to Senator Robert F. Wagner.

The pamphlet can be obtained from the Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C. Price, 100 for $1.50, 500 for $5.00.

sitdown strikes of 1937, to find the streets decorated with American flags and signs announcing "Welcome to the CIO."

At IMA Hall there, 11,000 General Motors workers filled every seat and all available standing room, while 5,000 who couldn't get in stood outside and heard the program over a public address system. The hall was filled long before the meeting started.

UAW-CIO Regional Director Arthur Case opened the Flint meeting, introducing President Thomas as chairmman. Rev. Harry Brewer of Trinity Methodist Church delivered the invocation and Father Neil O'Conner, Saginaw director of ACTU, spoke briefly, as did Reuther and Addes.

Following the meeting there was a two-mile parade down Flint's main thoroughfare in defiance of a driving rain.

LEWIS CONFIDENT

Lewis told his audiences that he had no doubt as to the outcome of the elections.

"I just came to Detroit to show which side I'm on," he said. "Otherwise Bill Green might come here and tell you John Lewis is not so keen on this CIO proposition. I wouldn't put it past him to say that.

"You have learned the need for unions from bitter experience in your plants when you had no union. You know how powerless your voice was when you were a single individual, unsupported and unaided by the mighty accumulated strength of your brothers," he continued.

The CIO president pointed out that just as no organization left the workers powerless, so did too many organizations, warning his listeners against the AFL efforts to divide them into crafts.

UNSOLVED PROBLEMS

Lewis stressed particularly the problems of unemployment and the fact that none of our "current politicians" are offering any constructive solutions. Quoting from a government survey, he pointed out that 19,000,000 American families have an average income of $69 a month.

"Yet there are people in this country, both in the Democratic and Republican parties, who can't understand what John Lewis is talking about. But you understand it!

"I would like some of our national figures to indicate what they have as an answer.

"I know what labor is going to do about it, as labor organizes. We're going to make plans and offer suggestions and formulate legislative programs until we find the answer."

HILLMAN SEES GAINS

Predicting a landslide victory for the CIO, Hillman declared that enlightened employer-employe relationships would result from the elections. He cited the substantial gains of GM workers under CIO leadership in contrast with the AFL's 50-year record of unbroken failure to organize the mass production industries.

"Nothing constructive can be expected from the disowned leadership in autos which has been taken over by the AFL," he said.

MURRAY NOTES INCREASES

Murray listed in his speeches the great gains made by the CIO in the steel industry, which in wages alone amount to an average increase of $1.75 for each 8-hour day for 400,000 workers.

"The CIO is an American institution dedicated to perpetuating democracy in our country," he said.

WIN BY DEFAULT

Thomas said his only concern about the election was that the AFL wouldn't even put up a fight and that the CIO would win by default.

"Wherever I have spoken," he said, "GM workers have told me they are anxious to vote. They don't want a technical knock-out. They want to go into the polling places and give the old American Separation of Labor the worst licking it ever got."

Supplementing that statement, Reuther declared that a survey had shown that the AFL would not win in a single GM plant. The UAW-CIO GM Director outlined the demands that will be negotiated as soon as the elections are over and announced the union goals of a 30-hour week and a guaranteed annual wage in GM plants.

Addes reported to President Lewis that the UAW-CIO has "more members, more power more influence and more respect than ever before in the history of our great organization.

CIO Gaining In Hoffman's Bailiwick

Allegan, Mich., Apr. 13 — Republican Rep. Clare Hoffman, most bitter — and most uninformed — foe of labor in the House of Representatives, today had a new worry on his sloping shoulders.

The United Automobile Workers, CIO, announced it was initiating contract negotiations with the Blood Bros. Machine Co., auto parts makers, which is located here in Hoffman's own home town.

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

Contributions are received from a number of sources, and do not always reflect the views of the Committee.

By MICHAEL J. QUILL
President, Transport Workers' Union

The Government's low-rent, subsidized housing program is swinging into its stride!

In scores of American cities from New England to California evil slums are being abolished, and modern, sanitary, comfortable homes in sunlit, pleasant surroundings are taking their place.

Many of thousands of workers in the industries supplying building materials and on the site of construction are being given regular full-time employment in jobs they are accustomed to do.

Yet a handful of reactionary politicians in the United States House of Representatives are trying to block the program by the undemocratic procedure of bottling up necessary legislation in committee. These Congressmen want to prevent the extension of this program which would provide good jobs and decent shelter for thousands of Americans.

In the last two years a large majority of all our States have enacted enabling legislation permitting their people to take advantage of the program of the U. S. Housing Authority and to accept loans and subsidies from the federal government. Hundreds of local housing authorities have been set up in cities, small and large, all over the land. They have made application to the United States Housing Authority for loan and subsidy contracts. They are waiting for funds which will not be forthcoming unless Congress takes the necessary action to continue and expand the program of the U. S. Housing Authority.

HELD UP BY REACTIONARIES

Congress has time and time again indicated that it knows the American people are behind this program and want to see it get ahead. Congress will vote for this program by an overwhelming vote if the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives gives it the chance.

A tiny clique of conservative politicians who are more interested in blocking the New Deal than they are in the welfare of the American people have got the housing legislation tied up, and are refusing to give Congress a chance to pass it.

The CIO is on record in support of this legislation. The only thing wrong with it from the CIO point of view is that it does not go far enough. It is essential that all CIO organizations make their views known to their Congressmen, and particularly to the Congressmen who are on the Rules Committee of the House, demanding that this bill, (S. 591), be reported out for a vote and passed by the House.

There is no time to be lost.

Last year the bill passed the Senate and was reported out by the Committee which considered it in the House. It was turned over to the Rules Committee and popular pressure forced its submission to the House. But by that time, however, the session was about to adjourn, and the bill was sent back to the Rules Committee for consideration this year. Three months have passed and no action has been taken. Unless the Rules Committee is forced to act within the next few weeks, the bill may fail again to come up for a vote in the House.

It is important that all CIO national and international unions and organizing committees bring this issue to the attention of their local organizations with the request that those organizations get in touch immediately with their representatives in the House, addressing them at the House Office Building, Washington, D. C. The National Organizations, themselves, are asked to do likewise.

WRITE TO CONGRESSMEN

Each Regional Office of the CIO and every State and Local Industrial Union Council should also get in touch with its representative in the House and with the members of the Rules Committee. Local Industrial Unions should likewise write in.

All regional organizations and offices should pass the word along to their affiliated bodies. Local organizations are asked to lay the matter before their membership at the earliest opportunity. Individual letters from CIO members to their Congressmen and to the members of the Rules Committee will be invaluable.

The members of the Rules Committee are as follows: Adolph J. Sabath of Illinois, E. E. Cox of Georgia, Howard W. Smith of Virginia, J. Bayard Clark of North Carolina, Martin Dies of Texas, Lawrence Lewis of Colorado, John J. Delaney of New York, William M. Colmer of Mississippi, William L. Nelson of Missouri, John J. Dempsey of New Mexico, Hamilton Fish of New York, Leo E. Allen of Illinois, Earl C. Michener of Michigan, and Charles A. Halleck of Indiana.

Non-Union 82 Years, Firm Signs with CIO

Williamsport, Pa., Apr. 13 — Breaking an 82-year-old precedent, Sweet's Steel Co. here signed a union agreement with a union of employes.

A smoothly-functioning strike, called after an announced 10% wage cut, not only won a restoration of pay but a closed shop and the check-off as well, it was revealed today by Jack Lever, representative of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

On July 1, wages will be further increased for all company employes. In addition, the 8-hour day takes the place of working hours stretching from 10 to 14 hours daily, all at straight time.

Unique feature of the agreement is the establishment of a joint management-employes "production committee" whose duty is to eliminate waste, make it easier for employes to do their work, and to improve the conditions of labor. Increased earnings resulting from the plan will be shared by company and workers.

AFL Paper Socks AFL Union

Binghamton, N. J., April 13.—Its news when an AFL official publication raps an AFL union that is in competition with the CIO, and the AFL Triple Cities Labor Herald made news here when it condemned the AFL Boot and Shoe Workers Union and praised the CIO United Shoe Workers.

The AFL shoe union, the paper says, has acted in a way that "can only be characterized as treason to organized labor," and former AFL workers who left in a body to join the CIO after the election campaign "were wise."

And what is more, "while we have disagreed with the CIO on many major questions, they do represent a national organization of working men and women . . . Since shoe workers have been betrayed by Boot and Shoe (the AFL rump outfit), they were wise to affiliate with a national group"—i.e., the United Shoe Workers, CIO.

Weak Kneed Mothers Cut War Profits

Toronto, Canada, April 13. — Only the silly weakness of American mothers for their children stands in the way of immediate U. S. involvement in the mass slaughter now going on in Europe, Jules S. Bache, one of Wall Street's biggest mining tycoons, told a stockholders' meeting of one of his Canadian companies here.

"Professional isolationists," he said, are "simply after the votes of parents who do not want their sons to go to war," and if the Allies fail in defeating their Nazi trade rivals, "the U. S. will have to get in on their side."

Bache added that neither he nor other members of the company "had a single hair of neutrality on their heads," which was more than a figure of speech, since Mr. Bache has very little hair of any kind, neutral or unneutral.

CIO Leaders Discuss Job Loss Problem

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 13.—The grave problem of technological unemployment, estimated to have thrown 2½ million workers out of their jobs during the past decade, was discussed at length this week by two CIO vice-presidents testifying before the Temporary National Economic (anti-monopoly) Committee.

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and R. J. Thomas, head of the United Automobile Workers, were the two witnesses, practically the first representatives of organized labor to appear before the committee during the 18 months of hearings.

Reporting an overwhelming trend towards machine displacement of workers in the auto industry, Thomas said that "more efficient production has meant a greater and greater accumulation of wealth in the hands of the most powerful" and warned "the situation will be unchanged so long as increased power to produce is unmatched by increased ability to buy the products of industry."

UNION ACTIVE

The UAW-CIO is doing everything in its power to "fight against unemployment," Thomas told the committee, estimating that the union's gain of the shorter work week has saved the jobs "of at least 100,000 workers since 1937."

He illustrated the ruthless attack on employment by citing a photo-electric automatic inspection device at Ford's River Rouge plant which permits six men to do the work formerly handled by 118.

Introduction of plastic bodies for automobiles, Thomas predicted, will come about within the next ten years, "causing tremendous technological displacement among men now engaged in stamping, finishing and painting car bodies."

MURRAY OFFERS PLAN

The same trend is clearly evident in the steel industry, it was shown by Murray when he took the witness stand a day later. Some 30,000 workers have been displaced in the last few years, and an additional 40,000 are scheduled to lose their employment in the steel mills.

To offset, at least in part, the dangerous effect of these actions by industrial management, Murray offered a 5-point program:

1. Adequate dismissal wages to all workers displaced as the result of technological changes.

2. The federal government to conduct large-scale training programs for displaced workers to adapt them to other jobs in industry.

3. Measures designed to have industry re-absorb workers displaced by technological changes.

4. Passing on to consumers the economic benefits of technological improvements.

5. Reduction of the workweek to a maximum of 30 hours, with pay remaining at least at the present level.

DISMISSAL WAGES

Murray also urged that Congressional action be taken to provide industry with definite incentives to keeping workers on its payroll, and suggested that where workers cannot be re-absorbed, they should be paid a dismissal wage of 10 per cent of their 10-year earnings, with a minimum payment of $500.

Though labor has sought to cooperate with industry in advancing technology, its reward has been only "a lower annual income, a greater number of men thrown out in the streets and a shorter work year for the workers still employed," he asserted.

"Out of this situation there may develop the greatest prosperity of the craziest national economy ever recorded in the history of any civilized nation."

In recent years, the SWOC chairman charged, the steel industry has failed either to absorb new workers or to plan for continued employment of its present working staff.

"Even if the hand-mill workers donated their labor to the hand-mill companies, they still could not successfully compete with the automatic strip mills," Murray pointed out.

CIO Contract In Harding's Home Town

Marion, Ohio, Apr. 13. — The first CIO contract to be signed here here has been negotiated with Moores & Ross by the United Dairy Workers, George DeNucci, CIO field representative, announced today.

The agreement gives employes pay increases ranging from $8 to $39 a month, vacations with pay, and other benefits.

'Organize' Slogan Stirs Longshore, Wire Union Meets

CHICAGO, Apr. 13.—Complete unionization of the unorganized in the communications industry was the keynote struck by President Mervyn Rathborne in his address to the fifth national convention of the American Communications Association, CIO, now in session here. More than 200 delegates heard the stirring opening speech of their leader.

Inspirational addresses by John Brophy, CIO national director of industrial unions, and Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, were also greeted with loud applause.

"Our contracts have resulted in an upward trend of wages, have eliminated part-time work, speed-up and split tricks, have guaranteed full payment of pensions and have generally raised living standards," President Rathborne told the delegates.

NON-UNIONISTS SUFFER

"During the period in which we have had contracts with other companies, the unorganized workers in Western Union have suffered a decline in minimum wages, have lost many of their pension rights, and have seen a marked increase in split tricks and part-timing," Rathborne pointed out.

Brophy lauded the ACA for its rapid strides of the past and reiterated Rathborne's assertions that organizing the unorganized must come first.

"When I addressed your third convention in New York in August, 1937," Brophy said, "you had 4,200 members. When I spoke to the fourth convention in July, 1938, your membership was 13,000. Today you are somewhere near 20,000 members. This is real and steady progress for the American Communications Association."

SISTER ORGANIZATIONS

NMU President Curran told the convention of the kindred problems that face the NMU and ACA as sister organizations and passed on some advice on overcoming certain conditions as the maritime group did.

Reemphasizing statements on the war situation made by Rathborne, Curran said that "labor stands to gain nothing from this war—the first World War taught us that. It created some 30,000 new American millionaires—one millionaire for every two American soldiers who died in France."

Other speakers scheduled to address the convention later are Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, NYA Administrator Aubrey Williams, CIO Secretary James Carey and Morris Watson, vice-president of the American Newspaper Guild.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in its history, the Associated Press, nation's largest wire news service, has signed a union contract with editorial employes. Longshoremen Meet In West

NORTH BEND, Ore., Apr. 13.—Discussion of a wide-spread organization drive together with plans to promote long term contracts in the water front industry, remained high spots of the proceedings as the third convention of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union entered the second week of its session here.

Speaking of the future organizational program, ILWU President Harry Bridges declared that it "showed and must necessarily be the main problem of this convention for the reason that only by adoption and proper planning and financing of such a program can the ILWU, in my opinion, maintain for its local unions and members the conditions and contracts already secured, and gain additional improvements, especially the renewal of the longshore contract.

HOSTILE EMPLOYERS

"The Pacific Coast employers in the past three years have built up a powerful and efficient union-wrecking machine," Bridges continued. "Under the slogans of fighting communism and of costly and repeated trouble on the waterfront, they have organized, especially in California, the agricultural and small business interests in the rural areas into one large anti-labor employers' machine.

"Our only possibility of supporting the conditions established on the waterfront, getting a renewal of our longshore contracts, and improving our longshore conditions lies in our ability and determination to spread our activities into areas removed from the waterfront, and to combat the employers' machine that has formed a united front with inland interests.

MANY RESOLUTIONS

Some 75 resolutions were introduced at the convention, ranging from questions concerning opposition to any involvement in the war, support for the CIO legislative program and demands for strict preservation of civil liberties to resolutions demanding congressional action on Alaska fishing measures and a memorial to union members killed in the 1934 strike.

The convention was opened last week with a speech by Oregon Governor Charles A. Sprague. Mayor Stanley Emery of Marshfield and Major L. A. Cutlip of North Bend also addressed the convention.

Tire Plant Closed By Strike

Akron, Ohio, Apr. 13.—The General Tire & Rubber Co. plant here was closed today following a strike voted by members of Local 9, United Rubber Workers, CIO, against repeated company violations of the union agreement signed last June.

Joseph Childs, president of the local, charged the company with failure to settle grievances as called for by the contract and declared that the company had been chiseling on rates for months before the strike was voted.

The vote was taken two days after workers in the tire building department, refused to work at the rates set by the company. When the company ordered the men to leave the plant they complied, but workers on other shifts refused to come to work.

Furniture Strike Enters 2nd Month

Bloomington, Ind., Apr. 13.—Still refusing to accept the terms of the company which they declare would destroy the union and all the rights of labor, workers at the Shower Brothers Co. here and at Bloomfield entered the second month of their strike this week.

Declaring that as married men with children to support, they can not exist on the 32c an hour offered by the boss, the workers are striking for an increase of 5c an hour, and continuance of the closed shop contract. They belong to Local 496, Unitel Furniture Workers, CIO.

Company resistance to the union demands that the firm, if its story were to be believed, "can operate at a loss longer than any company I have ever heard of. They have told the employes that for the last 15 years they have been operating in the red," a strike leader said.

It is recalled that when the union sought a 3-cent increase in 1937, company spokesmen predicted they would face immediate bankruptcy. But when the increase was won, the company seemed quite able to stay in business—and profitably, at that.

Win Contract After 3-Year

Trenton, N. J., Apr. 13—A three-year struggle conducted by Lodge 2040, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, at the Florence Pipe Foundry & Machine Company has finally ended in a victory, it was announced here today at the SWOC district office.

The firm has signed a closed shop contract with the union calling for a 2½c an hour pay increase for all night work.

Pay Boost At Macy's

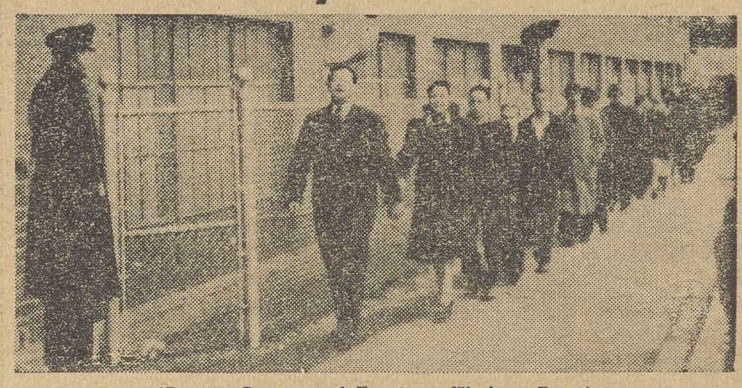
New York, Apr. 13.—CIO workers in the world's largest department store, R. H. Macy and Co., have won a new contract with the closed shop, checkoff, and close to $250,000 in wage increases.

The contract, signed by Samuel Wolchok, president of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes and by Leonard Geiger, business agent of Macy Local No. 1, covers 2,300 workers in the warehouses, delivery, shipping and receiving Departments of the store.

The contract was a renewal of one signed last year,

New Tanker Pact Brings Wage Boosts To 10,000 Unionists

NEW YORK, Apr. 13.—A two-year contract providing a flat $5 monthly wage increase has been signed with a group of companies operating tankers, the National Maritime Union announced this week.



NMU President Joseph Curran said that the increase in all probability would be adopted by the entire tanker industry within a few months.

"Our experience has shown that an increase won by the workers in one section of the industry," he said, "is soon put into effect in other sections."

Eight companies taking part in the negotiations were: Sinclair Navigation; Pennsylvania Shipping; Kellogg Steam ship; Gulf Oil; National Bulk Carriers: Pan American Petroleum Transport; Commercial Molasses, and B L Shipping.

There are some 10,000 unlicensed seamen employed in the tanker industry throughout the country, the NMU statement said. The main unorganized concerns are Standard Oil, Tidewater, Cities Service and Texas Oil. The NMU is now carrying on a re-organization drive among employes of the unorganized companies.

PICKET LINE of strikers which helped bring victory to CIO Furniture Workers Local 154 at Seibert Co., Gardner, Mass. At head of line, Ben Shouse, local president and UFWA regional representative.

Gardner, Mass., April 13.—The Massachusetts State CIO made a major contribution to the recent strike victory of the United Furniture Workers at the O. W. Seibert Co. here, and has earned the lasting gratitude of that union.

The State CIO convention was in progress during the Seibert strike, and a delegation of strikers went there to ask for assistance. They were pledged financial aid by every union represented at the convention, and there was 100 per cent fulfillment of the pledges immediately after the convention.

The action demonstrated the great solidarity that exists throughout the CIO, and it showed the newly organized furniture workers at Gardner one of the many advantages of affiliation with CIO. It did a material service to the cause of union organization throughout New England, and will go down as such in the annals of labor history in this part of the country.

Auto Union Beats AFL By Over 3-1

DETROIT, Apr. 20 — A flood of workers' votes pouring from 61 General Motors Co. plants today had given the CIO United Automobile Workers a decisive mandate to represent them in future negotiations with the nation's biggest auto manufacturer.

Complete unofficial returns showed the CIO had polled 83,000 votes to only 26,000 for the AFL.

The CIO won 49 plants, employing some 160,000 workers, while the AFL carried but five plants in which about 5,000 workers have jobs. One small plant voted for the Mechanics Educational Society of America, one voted for neither union, and in three plants run-off polls between the CIO union and "no union" will be necessary.

The CIO also swept five out of nine small craft unit polls in which the AFL Patternmakers offered the opposition.

UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas said the results are a "decisive and democratic expression of preference for the policies of the CIO."

Big Southern Shipyard Signs First Contract With CIO Affiliate

By SAM KRAMER

NEW ORLEANS, La., Apr. 20.—Some of the best conditions in the ship repair industry will go into effect on April 22, at the Todd-Johnson Drydock, largest in this city, which normally employs close to a thousand men.

The conditions are provided by the terms of a pact signed Monday, April 15, between the plant and Local 29 of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, following several weeks of negotiations after the union defeated the AFL in a recent Labor Board election, here.

Terms of this agreement, which was negotiated under the personal direction of John Green, IUMSWA national president, provide for establishment of seniority rights, vacations with pay, rotation of work, establishment of a preferential hiring list for employes on the NLRB eligibility list (assuring job security to regular employes), double time for overtime, a 40-hour week, and many other improvements.

The agreement with the CIO shipyard workers marks a new line in the Todd-Johnson Corporation's labor relations. This contract, the first in the plant's recent history, ends several years of unsettled conditions caused by a representation dispute, and the underhand methods of the AFL.

Negotiations were opened immediately after the Labor Board certified Local 29 as sole bargaining agency. In addition to President Green, a six-man negotiating committee represented the union in the conferences.

With the CIO union recognized as sole bargaining agency in the new contract, Todd-Johnson workers know for the first time the meaning of job security and protection. Grievance settling machinery is provided in the contract, along with the recognition of shop stewards, and other union representatives.

Sign Contract For Big-Scale Home Project

Los Angeles, Apr. 20 — A closed shop contract with the Whaley Construction Co., building a 400-unit low cost dwelling project in San Pedro, was announced today by Dan L. McCombe, representative of the CIO United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

McCombe said the project is the first in the local low-price field to be built entirely under union scale conditions. Despite that fact, advantages of CIO industrial unionism in the building field were evidenced by the fact that costs for each home has been cut an average of $300.

Privately-financed, the project will cost in excess of $1,000,000 and provide jobs for 1,000 men over a period of 90 days. Five different types of homes all two-bedrooms in size, will be built for sale at prices ranging from $2850 to $3250.

Northampton, Mass.—The general executive board of the CIO American Federation of Hosiery Workers, meeting here, decided to hold the union's next convention in Milwaukee, Wis.

Negro Paper Hails Lewis Call to Action

CHICAGO, Apr. 20.—"John L. Lewis has taken the lead in a direction with which Negro America can certainly find no fault."

This was the reaction of the Chicago Defender, leading Negro weekly paper in the mid-West, to the CIO president's speech in Monongah, W. Va., when he warned the Democrats to work out a program suitable to the common people or face the pros-pect of an independent convention of American progressives determined to solve the nation's big problems.

Discussing the Lewis proposal, the paper declared:

"We can only say 'amen' to this."

Unemployment and apparent unwillingness of the politicians to face the issues of the day "are facts for Negroes to ponder," the editorial continued.

'KLAN RIDES AGAIN'

"The Ku Klux Klan rides again, and the government sees no evil, although the murderous hooded gangsters are directing their attacks at black and white women who are seeking to exercise their constitutional rights.

"Peonage stinks to high heaven in the South, particularly in Georgia, and the FBI and the other sections of the Dept. of Justice close their eyes.

"America is as much in need of a party which moves in the direction of the people as it was just before the Civil War. Then neither the Democrats nor the Whigs had a program to meet the needs of the moment. The Republican party owes its birth to the bankruptcy of the two old parties.

NEGROES' DEMANDS

"Today, Black America is offered very little hope for a brighter day. Political bankruptcy is evident on all sides. The bankruptcy of an economic program is clear as we gaze at the millions of unemployed of whom the Race furnishes so large a quota.

"The people demand a return to a strengthened New Deal program. The party that stands for jobs, relief, social security, peace and democracy is the party that the masses of the people will support."

Textile Union Calls Trade Conference

Springfield, Mass., Apr. 20. — Delegates representing 90 per cent of the carpet mills in the United States assembled here today to attend a trade conference called by the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO. The conference will survey technological, wage and union trends in the carpet industry.

Emil Rieve, president of the TWUA; George Baldanzi, executve vice-president and William Pollack, secretary-treasurer, are among the union representatives present.

ENTERTAINMENT

Local 2188, representing the workers of the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Thompsonville, Conn., the host of the conference, will present a musical revue this evening.

Delegates have come from towns in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and North Carolina.

Quarry Union Wins Wage Increases

Barre, Vt., Apr. 20—Wages increases for workers in special classification employed by granite quarry and manufacturing companies in Concord, N. H., are provided in a new closed shop contract announced today by the Quarry Workers' International Union of North America.

Members of the union's Concord branch covered by the agreement will receive an hourly pay increase of three cents and time and a half for overtime with double time for Sundays and holidays. The contract, effective to April 1, 1942, also provides preferential union hiring.

Form Council In Indiana

Peru, Ind., Apr. 20.—A city CIO Industrial Union Council was set up here at a meeting atended by delegates from locals of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the United Federal Workers.

Lawrence C. Cover, UERMW Local 905 was elected president; Esther Bishop, ACW Local 373, recording secretary; Orval Crippen, UE Local 905, financial secretary; and Fred Siler, UFW 309, treasurer.

Plans were made to complete organization in Peru and to help finance the Council. President Cover said that the Council was planning to become the mainspring for all locals in Peru and hoped to "make Peru an organized town."

Work With Labor for Peace, Lewis Urges West Coast Youth

LOS ANGELES, Apr. 20.—Youth must cooperate with labor in a tremendous effort to keep the country out of war, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis told members of the California Youth Legislature in a telegram sent to their recent meeting here.

"Doubtless your convention will wish to proclaim unquestionable and intense desire for American youth and American labor to avoid participation in any European war," Lewis declared. "This position cannot be too frequently stated nor too greatly emphasized."

Declaring that the existence of a group of four million jobless young people "is a great economic, social and political tragedy," the CIO president went on:

"The progressive labor movement of the country, as exemplified by the CIO, recognizes that the providing of jobs and opportunity for American youth is one of the paramount problems which our country faces.

"The recent working arrangement consummated between Labor's Non-Partisan League and the American Youth Congress marks a forward step in the cooperation of the country's citizens, and is a beginning of a tremendous crystallization of public thought."

$1,600,000 In Pay Boosts

New York, Apr. 20—Wage increases totaling $1,600,000 were won for 14,500 workers between August 1 and March 15, James Matles, director of organization for the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers revealed today.

Other indications of the union's rapid progress:

In the quarter ending January 31, the union signed 37 agreements, 14 of them new, which covered close to 9,000 workers.

During the same period, the union participated in eight Labor Board elections, covering 9,180 workers, and won each poll.

Initiation fees during the three-month period totaled 21,735, running as high as 8,756 in the month of November.

To Push Leather Campaign

Boston, Mass., April 20—Plans to speed up the organizing drive now in progress in leather centers throughout the country will be one of the main problems to be taken up at the annual convention of the Leather Division of the International Fur & Leather Workers Union, which convenes here at the Bradford hotel, April 27-28.

This is the first convention of the organized leather workers since the union merged a year ago with the CIO fur union, to form the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union.

Thousands of newly organized leather workers have been brought into the union during the past few months, Secretary-Treasurer Daniel J. Boyle of the Leather Division, said in announcing the convention. The convention in Boston will undoubtedly accelerate the organizing campaign for the coming year," Boyle declared.

Delegates will hold a banquet Saturday evening, April 27, to which Allan Haywood, CIO national director of organization, and other CIO guest speakers have been invited.

CIO Local Buys Ball Franchise

TACOMA, Wash., Apr. 20—Members of Local 25, CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, today were launching a new kind of union drive.

Sixty members of the union reported for places on the union's baseball team, which hopes to capture first place in the city's semi-pro baseball league.

Franchise for the team was purchased by Local 25 from the Model Lumber Co.

FDR Heeds Pressure, Revises WPA Figures

WASHINGTON, Apr. 19. — Pres. Roosevelt, apparently recognizing the extent of opposition to his budget proposal for only a billion-dollar WPA appropriation for the next fiscal year, today urged Congress to increase—in effect—WPA funds by 33%.

The President asked the House to allot the $975,600,000 asked in the budget, with the understanding that the funds may be spent in eight months, at which time he can ask for a deficiency appropriation.

If Congress accepts the Presidential suggestion, WPA spending during the 1941 fiscal year is expected to continue at approximately the same rate as in the 12 months ending on June 30.

'STILL MORE NEEDED'

Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, welcomed the President's upward revision of WPA financing demands, as "a more realistic approach" to the relief problem, though he pointed out that a billion dollars for eight months is still far less than needed to provide 3,000,000 WPA workers with adequate jobs in line with CIO demands.

At present, less than 2,200,000 workers are employed by WPA, their number having been cut drastically in recent months.

Of more immediate importance than the 1941 appropriation, Hetzel warned, is the need for speedy passage of an adequate deficiency appropriation to finance WPA employment until the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

"The CIO will insist upon immediate action to spare thousands of WPA workers further insecurity and suffering," Hetzel said. "Reports to the CIO indicate that the 'war boom' has failed to lighten the burden of unemployment, and it is imperative that the Administration move at once to provide aid for the nearly 12,000,000 jobless."

Urge 40c Minimum In Leather

WASHINGTON, Apr. 20—A minimum wage rate of 40c an hour for workers in the leather industry was recommended by members of Industry Committee No. 10 acting under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The recommendation, adopted after a motion to recommend a 37½c minimum was defeated 20 to 3, is the highest rate that can be ordered under the Act. If it is approved by Col. Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the Wage and Hour Division, U. S. Dept. of Labor, it will increase the hourly wage rates of some 3,000 employes now receiving less than 40c an hour.

The Leather Industry Committee is composed of 24 members, with eight members each representing the public, the employers and the employes. Five of the labor representatives are from the International Fur & Leather Workers Union, CIO. They are:

Daniel Boyle, secretary-treasurer, Leather Division, IFLWU; James J. Chenery, chairman of the IFLWU executive board; Joseph F. Cunningham, Local 30, Leather Division; Thomas Galanos, Local 27, Leather Division; Augustus J. Tomlinson, executive board, Leather Division.

Join Union For Security, Utility Workers Advised

Pittsburgh, Apr. 20. — Rumors have been heard that the Duquesne Light Co. is worried by the fact that a majority of its linesmen are reaching middle age, leaders of Utility Workers Organizing Committee Locals 110 and 117 said today.

In 1930 and 1931, they explained, the company fired large numbers of its elder employes, retaining what it considered "the cream of the crop"—those aged between 25 and 35 years old. Now, a decade later, these men are becoming "old" in the eyes of the management, and the workers are once more getting worried.

"Without genuine organization," a UWOC official said, "they have absolutely nothing to say about any action which the company may take in regard to its employes.

TWO PROPOSALS

"UWOC Locals 110 and 117 make the following proposals:

"1. That the retirement age should be lowered.

"2. That the easier jobs should be reserved for the older men, and not for the favorites.

"Jobs on service crews, trouble shooters, meter setters, fusers, night inspectors, could very easily be filled by the older men at no reduction in pay.

The union pointed out that though the men of 45 may not be as fast as some of the young employes, they are "much safer," and asserted that "the reason that the Duquesne Light Co. has such an enviable safety record is because of its older and more experienced linesmen.

"The older men are now becoming wise to the fact that their seniority can be protected only through a strong labor organization able to win a contract to give them security. The UWOC is that organization and is progressing constantly in the utility field."

CIO Groups Visit Capitol, Warn Congressmen Against Amending Wagner Act

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 20.—The Congressmen are getting acquainted with a new kind of "lobbyist" these days—the kind that comes straight from the factory and the shop to tell them the voters back home want the Wagner Act left alone, that they don't want the crippling Norton amendments or the ripper bill proposed by tory Smith and his banker friends.

This new type of lobbyist represents the organized workers and the organized voters, not the big boys with an anti-labor scheme to push, and the Congressmen are listening with respect to their views. Two million workers have already been represented, in large delegations that have come from eight industrial states. More will be heard from as the week progresses.

The eight states, whose delegates were brought in at the call of Labor's Non-Partisan League, are Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, New Jersey, Maryland, Massachusetts, and New York. Pennsylvania and Missouri are scheduled for later in the week.

UNANIMOUS

The views of these delegations, expressed to the Congressmen from their states first in a general meeting and then in private interviews, are unanimous—they are opposed to all the amendments to the Wagner Act now up for consideration in Congress.

Gustave Strebel, president of the New York CIO Council, with 800,000 CIO members, expressed this unanimous feeling of workers throughout the nation against amendments to the Act when he said: "Our people feel that all attempts to amend the Wagner Act are attempts to weaken and emasculate it, and are detrimental to labor and to industry both."

Strebel cited the General Electric plant in Schenectady, N. Y., now under industrial union contract to the CIO Electrical and Radio Workers, as an example. Under the proposed Norton craft unit amendment, he pointed out, the Board could be forced to certify 36 separate crafts in the one plant. Industrial chaos would be the result, he warned.

"We are convinced that the

Kennedy Warns of Craft Raids Under Norton Bill

Washington, Apr. 20 — Craft raids disrupting industrial stability and leading to "jurisdictional disputes, corruption and graft" would result throughout industry from passage of the craft unit amendment proposed in the Norton Bill to amend the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the United Mine Workers of America warned Congress on behalf of its more than 600,000 members.

The warning was contained in a letter signed by Thomas Kennedy, UMWA secretary-treasurer and sent to all Congressmen, urging them to oppose the Smith and Norton Bills and all other amendments to the Act now in Congress.

"The United Mine Workers of America now has union shop contracts for practically all of the coal mines in the Nations," Kennedy said. "These contracts establish a collective bargaining relationship between the United Mine Workers of America and thousands of coal operators.

"The craft amendment contained in the Norton Bill would merely be an invitation to craft unions to initiate raids among the workers in the coal mines. Thus, where the United Mine Workers of America has finally stabilized an industry through national collective bargaining, Congress is requested to adopt an amendment which would bring about industrial chaos.

"This result would be duplicated in the other mass production and basic industries where CIO industrial unions enjoy sim-

Leaders Hail Results; Three Run-offs Slated

By EDWARD LEVINSON

DETROIT, April 18. — The United Automobile Workers, CIO, this week crushed the AFL in the largest labor board election in history, held among 136,000 workers in 59 plants of General Motors.

The CIO won 49 plants, including all of the large key plants of the corporation. The AFL won five small plants employing 5,000 workers, as against the 160,000 employed in plants won by the CIO. Two of the plants which voted AFL, those in Norwood, Ohio, had decided prior to the election to hold switch to the union which emerged strongest from the NLRB poll.

Following tabulation of returns R. J. Thomas, president and Walter P. Reuther, director of the GM department of the CIO-

Lewis Hails GM Victory

WASHINGTON, Apr. 20.—CIO Pres. John L. Lewis hailed the election victory at General Motors as "a triumph for industrial unionism."

His statement in full:

"The General Motors election is a triumph for industrial unionism. The results are entirely satisfactory. They definitely establish the CIO as the recognized bargaining agency in the industry. The miscellaneous plants will all in due time join the majority plants under the CIO."

UAW, announced that petitions for elections in additional GM plants will be filled immediately with the NLRB.

Thomas added: "The result of the election is an endorsement by the overwhelming majority of 136,000 GM workers of the policies of the CIO nationally and in the automobile industry. William Green made CIO policies the issue, and we gladly met his organization on that ground. To date in the last year, 236,000 workers have voted in the auto industry. Plants employing 220,000 had voted CIO by an average majority of better than 80 per cent.

"The vote is a decisive and democratic expression of preference for the policies of the CIO in the major industry of the Nation.

"Once again, I want to cite the important contribution to peaceful labor relations made through the machinery of the Wagner Act. The overwhelming number of eligible voters who took advantage of their right to vote should be a salient indication to politicians bent on destroying the Act that the masses of workers are solidly behind the Act."

Walter P. Reuther declared: "This ends the AFL in the auto industry. It clears the path for constructive labor relations between one union, the UAW-CIO, and General Motors Corporation.

"Two of the plants carried by the AFL—those in Norwood—voted before the election to affiliate after the poll, with the Union which emerged strongest. I don't think that the AFL will hold the Kansas City and Meriden plants either, in the face of this great vote by the majority of GM workers for the CIO."

The CIO carries all 28 plants in Michigan including those in

Haywood Sees Vote Answering Splitters

Washington, Apr. 20.—Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, today issued the following statement on the CIO victory in the General Motors Labor Board election:

"This victory proves that the auto workers can't be deceived with slander and clouding of issues.

"If we could have arranged for Mr. Green of the AFL to make a few more speeches, I'm sure that the few plants in which the CIO didn't win, would have voted with us. He spoke in Flint, Mich., and in Anderson, Ind.; in both places the auto workers gave decisive answers to AFL craft unionism and AFL propaganda.

"We in the CIO are happy about the results, and particularly pleased with the outcome in the eastern plants of General Motors. The CIO United Automobile Workers will easily win the run-off elections at Baltimore and Anderson, Ind.

CONGRESS TAKE NOTE

"This victory should convince the members of Congress how the workers feel about the AFL-Norton and Smith amendments to the Wagner Act, both of them designed to cripple unionism and articularly to destroy industrial unionism. The auto workers, by voting more than three to one for industrial unionism, have plainly indicated their belief that that is the best form of organization for mass production industries, and in effect, have told Congress that amendments designed to smash these great unions into craft units will bring nothing but chaos.

"This inspiring victory at General Motors signals the start of a campaign in every Ford plant to bring Mr. Ford out of his non-union isolation into the pale of modern collective bargaining. In this, as in the recent drive at General Motors, the United Automobile Workers can look forward to the complete and wholehearted support of every affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations."

A Decisive Victory

In the biggest Labor Board election ever held, the CIO has scored one of its greatest triumphs. The more than three-to-one majority for the CIO United Automobile Workers in the General Motors election is so decisive as to settle once and for all a number of questions.

(1) The automobile workers of America are definitely and conclusively CIO. The General Motors election is simply the latest and largest of a whole series of auto company elections in all of which the CIO union has won equally decisive majorities.

The AFL leaders who hoped to split the auto workers industrial unity with rump and craft unions may as well silently fold their tents and steal away. What toehold they still retain on the fringes of the industry will soon be lost to them, as the workers join up with the majority union which alone can make their collective strength effective.

(2) American workers in the mass-production industries definitely prefer industrial unionism. They bitterly resent the attempts being made in Congress, through the Norton craft unit amendment to the Wagner Act, to split up their industrial unions. They will vote in political elections, as in the recent poll, against all who would divide and destroy their unions by amending the Wagner Act.

(3) Collective bargaining has come to stay in the auto and all other big industries. Nearly all the auto manufacturers must now bargain with the CIO union, and Henry Ford will also soon be compelled to see the light. Republic Steel, Bethlehem Steel and a number of other holdouts had also better begin adjusting themselves to bargaining with the CIO union of their employes' choice.

(4) This triumph of one of the giant new unions which the CIO has brought into being is decisive evidence of the permanent strength and solidity of the CIO. It will reinforce the confidence of the whole movement and spur it to new advances in bringing the benefits of collective bargaining to millions more of the still unorganized.

Youth and the CIO

There are some corporations whose favorite pastime is to notify all young people applying for jobs that the cupboard is bare simply because of "labor union restrictions".

The falsity of such statements is made clear in the CIO's new pamphlet Jobs For Youth.

"The future of our young people is profoundly important to the labor movement," said President John L. Lewis in San Francisco. That is the spirit in which the CIO is approaching youth's problems. For labor realizes that youth's problems are labor's problems and that American youth is, after all, in large part the sons and daughters of America's workers.

The fact that representatives of American youth stood on their feet and cheered themselves hoarse at President Lewis' invitation for youth to join with labor in solving their common problems, is an effective answer to those who want to turn young people against labor.

The fact, too, that Sec. James B. Carey of the CIO has recently been awarded, by vote of a distinguished jury, the annual Parents' Magazine award for his outstanding service to the cause of youth is further indication of labor's desire to help young Americans solve their problems.

Young people do not want to attack the standards attained by organized labor in industry. Young people do not want to throw their fathers or their mothers or their sisters or brothers out of jobs so that they can have one themselves. Young people want what labor wants—enough jobs for all. Daily more young people throughout the nation are realizing that the CIO's program offers them the only leadership which will provide a solution to their problems.

The CIO has already made clear the strength of its hand in support of increased NYA appropriations and of the American Youth Act. These are only a beginning.

In return labor will expect youth to understand and join in the common principles of organized labor. It is a hard and simple truth, after all, that the problem of young people is part and parcel of the problems of labor.

Spring Housecleaning!

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

The General Motors Election

A LOT of little Caesars who imagined they could divide nd conquer the CIO industrial unions are now retreating in all directions as a result of the General Motors election.

The original Caesar bragged, "I came, I saw, I conquered." Little Caesar Green's version is now: "I came, they saw me, the CIO conquered."

In fact, Bill Green has come under suspicion among his own followers of being secretly in the pay of the CIO.

For everywhere he shows up in a Labor Board election campaign, the AFL is sure to lose. And the more he talks the more votes the CIO seems to get.

Another sufferer from what R. J. Thomas called "political halitosis" or bad breath, is Gerald L. K. Smith.

The original Caesar said something about all Gaul being divided into three parts. But this little Caesar's gall is undivided and unmitigated.

His daily radio rantings against the CIO won it votes. And the AFL withered away under his reeking kisses.

Green's speech at Flint was as wild in its ravings as any one of Smith's. In fact, Smith is reported to be indignant at Green for trying to muscle in on his racket.

In contrast to Green's torrents of abuse, John L. Lewis in his Detroit and Flint appearances made only one slight reference to Green — and that a humorous one.

He did not waste any ammunition either on the vanishing AFL, beyond offering the constructive suggestion that it might do better if it "deloused itself of its white-slavers, kickbackers, panderers and racketeers."

Among the people who are taking — or should be taking — careful note of the General Motors election results are the members of Congress.

There are amendments to the Wagner act under consideration that would deprive labor of the very thing the auto workers have been voting for in such overwhelming numbers.

The auto workers never had any use for the type of union division offered by the AFL. They did not become organized until the CIO brought them the strength and unity of a single industrial union.

By conspiring with a discredited and rejected leader, the AFL leaders tried to split away a minority in a dual organization. This they hoped would be an entering wedge for eventual division of the workers along AFL lines.

This plot has been knocked on the head by the democratic vote of the auto workers, in election after election, for one strong CIO industrial union.

The craft unit amendment in the Norton bill is designed to impose dictatorially from above the type of craft division which the auto workers have democratically rejected.

Members of Congress should reflect on the huge numbers of votes cast for CIO industrial unity. The votes of these same workers, and many others, will be cast in the next congressional elections against all politicians who would deny them the right to industrial unionism by amending the Wagner Act.

The General Motors election marks one of the biggest and most spectacular defeats yet inflicted on AFL plans to raid and disrupt established CIO industrial unions.

Auto manufacturers and other employers who played around with the idea of using the AFL to divide and destroy the unions chosen by their employes, should get wise to themselves now.

American workers know what they want. Attempts to impose on them AFL and other forms of organization which they do not want are not only illegal, but are also bound to lead to trouble and eventual failure.

The General Motors election will help the auto manufacturers, and other employers as well, to recognize that the CIO is entrenched so securely in the loyalty of the workers that it cannot be dislodged.

So they may as well proceed to bargain collectively in good faith with the union chosen by their workers. For the Bill Greens and the Gerald Smiths cannot deliver on their promises of union-busting.

Leaflets On Youth, Security

Washington, Apr. 20—Problems of American youth and security for the aged and the unemployed are the subjects of the two newest CIO publications, released here this week. One, titled "The CIO Wants Jobs for Youth," a four page leaflet, deals with the CIO's program of jobs and training for the 4,000,000 unemployed young people and the other, "Security for the People," a 16 page pamphlet, outlines the CIO plan for real social security.

Orders and queries on both these publications, "The CIO Wants Jobs for Youth," and "Security for the People" should be sent to the Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C.

CIO Sweeps GM Poll By 3-1 Margin

Detroit, Flint, Pontiac, Bay City and Saginaw. GM workers to the number of 83,000 gave their votes to the CIO while some 26,000 cast ballots for the AFL.

The huge Detroit Ternstedt plant gave the CIO 7,465 votes and the AFL only 243. The great Buick plant in Flint gave the CIO 9,000 as against some 2,000 for the AFL. Chevrolet Gear and Axel, Detroit, voted 5,000 to 300 for the CIO, while Chevrolet Forge, Detroit, voted 2,000 to 100 for the CIO.

CIO WINS FIVE CRAFT TESTS

Similar landslide majorities were given the CIO in Cleveland, Toledo, Muncie, Buffalo, Bristol, Linden, St. Louis, Atlanta, Janesville and South Gate, California.

Despite an intense craft appeal made by the AFL patternmakers union, the CIO which addressed its appeal to all of the workers, won 5 out of 9 patternmakers' craft elections.

The CIO was on the ballot in 59 plants, of these, it won 49, five went AFL and one was captured by "neither." In three plans, no union received a majority and run-off elections will be required. One plant was won by the Mechanics Educational Society of America, an independent union.

The results of the voting made public, the UAW-CIO pressed General Motors for an immediate conference, looking to a revised agreement. Demands of the CIO in behalf of the GM workers are for a general wage increase, shop steward system, improved seniority system, vacations with pay and joint adjustment on disputes production standards.

Kennedy Warns Of Craft Raids

ilar collective bargaining relationships.

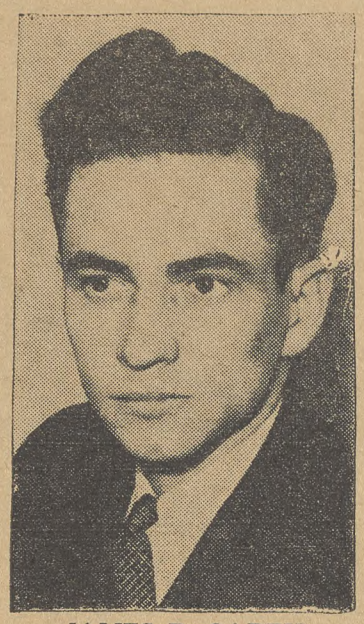
"The proposed craft amendment would legalize attempts by craft unions to enter and bring in their wake the jurisdictional disputes, corruption, and graft which now accompany the craft unions in the building trades. Under the guise of preserving existing craft unions which are not endangered, the amendment actually is intended to destroy existing industrial unions."

Kennedy's letter also warned of dangers to orderly labor relations in the Smith Bill proposals, pointing out that they "are intended to destroy the National Labor Relations Act and the legal protection afforded by this legislation to the workers of the nation."

"The National Labor Relations Act has established certain basic and fundamental rights for workers under which they have obtained concrete benefits," Kennedy wrote in concluding his letter. "The proposed amendments to this legislation would deprive the workers of these benefits."

"Save the Wagner Act," the CIO's newest pamphlet, should be on every labor bookshelf. Order yours from the CIO, 1106 Connecticut Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Carey Wins Award For Aid To Youth



CHICAGO, Apr. 20.—The annual Parents' Magazine award to the person who has done most to advance the interests of American young people has been awarded to Secretary James B. Carey of the CIO.

Carey, 28-year-old head of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, was named by a jury of three youth leaders, and was presented with the citation by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt at a mass meeting here held under the auspices of the Chicago Youth Congress.

In making the award, which is given to persons under 30 years of age, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

'LEADERSHIP'

"The Parents' Magazine 1940 Youth Service Award, consisting of a gold Service Award and a $100 check, is awarded to James B. Carey, 28 years old, President of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, an organization of 178,000 members, for his outstanding contribution to the improvement of the working conditions of young people, and the leadership he has provided in bringing together all types of young people to work for their common welfare.

"Not only was the selection of Mr. Carey on the unanimous vote of the Award Committee, but his selection has also been approved by the Right Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan, D. D., Director of the Department of Social Action, National Catholic Welfare Conference, a number of labor leaders, and the labor relations directors of several of America's nationally known firms who have come into personal contact with Mr. Carey.

'TRIBUTE TO HONESTY'

"My own personal contact with Mr. Carey over a period of the past few years makes me particularly glad to have this opportunity of paying tribute to his tact and honesty and desire to promote the welfare of industry as well as of the workers.

"This is the basis of successful collective bargaining, and I believe that collective bargaining between men and women of good will and honesty is the basis of understanding and cooperation at home and very possibly the basis for future ability to establish peace between the nations of the world. For this reason, every individual who successfully promotes good understanding and reasonable solutions between groups with varied interests is rendering a service to society as well as to his organization and to youth, and so I gladly give this award to James Carey with my good wishes.

"May you be successful in your efforts to promote settlements which will give us all in fuller measure the things our forefathers desired — life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Carey has been active in affairs of the American Youth Congress, and is a member of its national board. He is married and has one child.

CIO Leaders Give Views On Jobless Problems

WASHINGTON, Apr. 20.—CIO union leaders again this week told the Anti-Monopoly Committee the facts about technological unemployment and its social consequences as Philip Murray, CIO vice-president and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and James B. Carey, CIO secretary and president of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, testified.

Murray, winding up his testimony on technological advances in steel production, brought a dramatic note to the hearing room when he introduced a displaced steel worker from one of the "ghost towns" made desolute by the new continuous strip mill process of making steel.

"I live among steel workers," he told the Committee, "and I could take you to a half dozen desolated towns and show you the figures of thousands of steel workers walking the streets looking for jobs. These are human figures — not statistics.

"Labor and government and industry must put their hands together to solve this problem," he declared, in reminding the Committee of repeated CIO appeals to the President of the United States to call a broad conference that would work out a solution to America's No. 1 problem.

LOST INCOMES

The contention that price cuts make up for the unemployment that comes in the wake of technological improvements is false, James B. Carey indicated, in asking: "What good is a 10 per cent price cut, if whole areas of purchasing power are wiped out? A 10, 20 or even 50 per cent price cut means nothing to the family that has lost its income; the 12,000,000 jobless cannot buy goods, whether at the full price or the cut price."

In the industry under jurisdiction of his union, two-thirds of which is covered by UERMW contracts, employers are getting 37 per cent more production out of each man-hour worked than they got in 1929, "with the result that even though hours worked per week are now about 25 per cent under 1929, employment is about 16 per cent less," he said.

Despite these small concessions to the workers and to the consumers, the national purchasing power of the nation has suffered serious declines as the result of uncontrolled technological advances, Carey explained, which in turn brings about further unemployment and impoverishment.

ACA REPRESENTATIVE

Similar conditions exist in the communications industry, according to testimony of Daniel Driesen, who appeared for the American Communications Assn., CIO.

"The number of workers employed in the telegraph industry has dropped by 31,600 during the past decade," he said. "This is almost one half the total number presently employed in the radio and wire telegraph companies."

The ACA, Driesen said, calls for a program of no lay-offs, shorter work week, elimination of speed-up and part-timing, guarantees of collective bargaining and increased wages to repair the social damage already done in these industries and to prevent further deterioriation of working and living standards.

Shows Jobless Problem

TECHNOLOGICAL UNEMPLOYMENT and its effects on workers received a thorough airing when CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray (right) testified before the U. S. Temporary National Economic Committee in Washington. Looking over Murray's testimony is Michael Russel, former hand roller in the Carnegie steel mill at New Castle, Pa., a highly skilled worker now out of a job because of the introduction of high speed continuous strip mills throughout the industry.

Workers Pay Visit To Congress

Wagner Act is helping us to bring about peaceful and orderly labor relations. We're also convinced that the Norton and Smith bills would disrupt those peaceful, orderly relations. We're convinced that any of the amendments proposed to Congress would throw industry after industry into confusion and chaos."

AUTO WORKERS SPEAK

The delegates, workers from auto plants, textile mills, rubber factories, steel plants, coal mines, clothing factories, transport systems, from ships and offices and warehouses and tobacco plants and scores of places that make the products all America uses, spoke up in turn to defend the Act and their unions.

From Michigan, an auto worker warned his Congressmen: "We can't look kindly on Congressmen who vote to pass these crippling changes. We can't tell our workers back home to support a Representative who disregards the interests of labor. And I hope you Congressmen here will tell your colleagues this is the way we feel."

The Congressmen learned something else too, when they found out that workers of all organizations are opposed to the Norton and Smith bills — despite Wm. Green's endorsement of the Norton amendments and his faint criticism of the Smith proposals. They learned that the issue is not, as frequently pretended, a dispute between the CIO and the AFL, but that it is an issue on which workers of all kinds are united.

To date, no delegations, letters, messages or wires from AFL rank and file members in favor of either of the two proposed bills to cripple the Act have been received in Congress. Top leaders of the AFL, whose own amendments were shown in testimony of John L. Lewis earlier this session to have been written for them by agents of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers, have come out for the Norton bill but their membership has failed to follow them.

AFL MEMBERS OPPOSED

On the contrary, as the worker delegates have reminded the Congressmen, more than 2,000,000 members of the AFL are on record through official statements as opposed to all attempts to emasculate the Act through amendments.

The Congressmen have been listening to this new kind of lobby — and have been listening even more intently to the primary voters who repudiated Senator Burke in Nebraska last week, largely on the basis of his bitterly reactionary attacks on the Act. Even closer to home was the overwhelming majority for renomination won by Representative Fries of Illinois, whose voters showed their approval of his defense of the Act in the House Labor Committee.

Texas CIO To Query Politicians

Corpus Christi, Tex., Apr. 20—A legislative program which will be presented to candidates for state and local offices so that labor may know how they stand, will be drafted at the annual state convention of the Texas Industrial Union which opens here today.

Seventy locals with a total membership of more than 20,000 throughout the state will be represented at the convention, Maurice J. Dineen, CIO regional director, announced.

Allan Haywood, CIO national director of organization, is scheduled to address the convention during the two-day sessions. Other speakers will be Nat Wells, Labor Board representative, Dr. Elliott and Sidney Reagan, president of the governing body of the University of Texas.

Longshoremen End Meeting; Members To Vote On Drive

NORTH BEND, Ore., Apr. 20.—Plans for a giant organizing drive adopted during the closing sessions of the third convention of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union here, will be submitted to a referendum of the membership.

A resolution on a national organizing campaign unanimously approved by the delegates, instructs the ILWU officers to begin union drives in Alaska, Hawaii and British Columbia and maps out plans for speedng up West Coast organization.

The program calls for a 15 per maps out plans for speeding up cent increase in per capita tax to be used solely for organizing and instructs the organizing committee to "concentrate its efforts in organizing the 2,000,000 workers in the wholesaling and distribution field throughout the nation."

DRIVE IN ALASKA

Organization in Alaska, the resolution states, is to be carried out jointly with the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, and other CIO unions active there. A portion of the organizing funds are to be allocated for work in Hawaii.

Other important resolutions passed condemned the sale of ships to foreign interest and asked for a congressional investigation of the problem looking toward enactment of legislation to stabilize the intercoastal trade. Red-baiting was condemned as "a detriment and disruptive measure that can block the protecting and securing of further improvements in our hard-won conditions, most especially the longshore long-term contract."

Officers were instructed to work with the Marine Firemen, Oilers & Wipers, an unaffiliated union, in securing a pardon for Earl King, Ernest Ramsay and Frank Conner, now in prison on a framedup murder charge, and $200 was ordered donated for the defense fund.

The convention also issued a charter to the ILWU Council of Ladies' Auxiliaries and voted to send a telegram to President Roosevelt urging him "to keep this country from being involved in any imperialist war."

Wire Union Backs CIO Political Program

CHICAGO, Apr. 20.—Pledging an energetic campaign for the support of the CIO's political program, more than 200 delegates attending the fifth convention of the American Communications Association which ended its sessions here this week, denounced the abandonment of New Deal liberal principles and heartily endorsed CIO President John L. Lewis' stand calling for a platform satisfactory to labor and the masses of the people.

In a resolution passed by an overwhelming vote, the convention declared that "the present administration and Congress have made unwarranted reductions in the social welfare items in the national budget and have seriously crippled the proper administration of the NLRA, WPA, the Fair Labor Standards Act and other agencies which in the past have served the interests of the great majority of the people."

THE REAL BUDGET

James B. Carey, CIO national secretary and president of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, told the delegates that "the budget of the nation which must be balanced is the budget of the American family."

He commended the ACA for its support of President Lewis' speech before the United Mine Workers at Monongah, W. Va., and said that "labor's job is to bring happiness and prosperity to all members of the great American family."

Earlier in the week the convention passed resolutions condemning attacks on the Wagner Labor Relations Act and asking additional appropriations to carry on the necessary work of the Labor Board. The removal of Board Member William Leiserson was demanded, and NLRB officials in the New York area were condemned for open collaboration with employers and reactionary AFL leaders in an attempt to force the CIO out of the maritime field.

The anti-labor stand of the Federal Communications Association was condemned, and the FCC recommendation to bar non-citizens from jobs was denounced, as well as its plan for mergers in the communications industry, which it was declared would result in a mass layoff of workers.

The union's Postal Telegraph negotiations committee was authorized to take a nationwide strike vote in July if necessary, calling for "necessary action up to and including full stoppages of work."

CIO Organizing Drives Move Into High Gear

COMPLETE ORGANIZATION of the communications industry in five years, in line with CIO's campaign for 10,000,000 members, was planned as the American Communications Assn. held its fifth national convention in Chicago last week.

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing. Contributions are received from a number of sources, and do not always reflect the views of the Committee.

By THOMAS HUMPHRIES
Special Contributor, CIO Committee on Housing

A new housing pamphlet has just come off the press—one that should be of interest to all CIO members.

Sporting an introduction by Michael J. Quill, Chairman of the CIO Committee on Housing, the pamphlet is entitled "The Amazing Case of Mr. Binns." It is written by Bernard Childs and published by the Tenants League of Philadelphia.

LIKE A DETECTIVE STORY

And who is Mr. Binns? And why is his case amazing? And what has it to do with housing, anyway?

If you read the booklet, you will find these questions answered in true detective story fashion.

It seems that there was, and is, a Philadelphia builder by the name of Binns, who "has been making a comfortable living by remodeling old houses and renting them at a profit" to well-to-do people. It seems that about a year ago Binns went off the beaten path, remodeled a row of run-down hovels and rented them at a much lower price than his other houses.

Then, almost overnight, Binns became a business man's hero. He was hailed from coast to coast as the "miracle man" who had found out how to provide good homes for low-income workers and had thereby proved there was no need for government-aided, low-rent housing and slum clearance.

WHY THE BUILD-UP?

Yet the Binns project itself was nothing much to write home about.

As the pamphlet shows, it is full of rats and insects. It is sadly in need of major structural repairs. It is located in a bad slum neighborhood, alongside railroad tracks, a factory and a slaughterhouse. . . .

And the rents? Well, rent-plus-utilities in the Binns homes cost more than $32.50 a month—as contrasted with $20 a month for rent-plus-utilities in the well-built homes constructed by the Philadelphia Housing Authority with federal aid!

So why the build-up?

Because, as the pamphlet points out, those interests that reap profits from renting slums and firetraps would stop at nothing—not even phony build-ups based on misleading photographs—to discredit a movement that might take their tenants away by offering them good housing at lower prices.

REMODELING NO SOLUTION

Since many people think that the slum problem can be solved by modernizing slum houses, the following quotation from the Tenants League booklet is of special interest:

". . . The problem of remodeling old homes is not the basic problem. After all, if every old house in the country were remodeled, the present acute housing shortage would not be relieved one iota. Rehabilitation and modernization never add to the number of houses. They only redistribute the existing supply of houses—and always in the wrong direction, always taking homes from the lower income groups and giving them to the higher income groups.

LABOR AND TENANT ORGANIZATION

In his introduction to the pamphlet, Michael Quill has this to say about tenant unions and tenant leagues:

"Labor needs the tenant union to see that the wage increase won in the factory is not stolen from the worker by greedy landlords. . . . Labor needs the assistance of the organized tenant in steering its way clear of imaginary cure-alls of the Binns variety. . . . What we have still to learn is the necessity of getting the American worker into that fight (for better housing) not only as a member of his labor union, but as a housing consumer. Time spent in aiding tenant organization is time well spent. . . ."

Barber, Beauty Culturist Campaign Launched

NEW YORK, Apr. 20.—An aggressive campaign to enlist thousands of non-union workers was launched today at a meeting of the National Organizing Committee of Barbers and Beauty Culturists of America, CIO.

Chartered last November by the CIO, the committee has set a quota of 250,000 members in five years, Sec.-Treas. P. Charles Di Neri, anonunced.

Head of the committee is Mario Arcario, who said the organization "has found the solution for the inception of a solid progressive union in which all the barbers and beauty culturists may unite under the banner of militant and worth-while unionism.

"We are optimistic as to the result of this campaign in view of the enthusiastic and militant interest of the entire committee," which is guided by CIO Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas, Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, Gustave A. Strebel, head of the New York CIO Council, Adolph Germer, CIO regional director, and Pete Mosele, assistant regional director.

Form CIO Auxiliary

Cincinnati, Apr. 20—Representatives of five CIO women's organizations today formed the Cincinnati CIO Council of Women's Auxiliaries, and in their first move endorsed the candidates for office supported by Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Mrs. Clara Fuller, wife of Paul W. Fuller, CIO regional director, said the new organization has applied for a charter from the National Co-ordination. Committee of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO. The local group plans for immediate expansion, and will seek enrollment from other organizations throughout the Cincinnati area.

Los Angeles Labor Board Hearings Expose Open Shoppers' Dirty Linen

Employer Groups 'Take To The Hills'

By GORDON L'ALLEMAND
(Special to The CIO NEWS)

LOS ANGELES, Apr. 20.—This city, the nation's number one open-shop "white spot," began a rapid metamorphosis last October 16, 1939. On that day began the most amazing industrial revelations in American history.

The National Labor Relations Board brought to trial the following powerful employer organizations: Merchants & Manufacturers Association (M&M); The Neutral Thousands (TNT); Southern Californians, Inc. (SCI); Employes Advisory Service (EAS); and four canvas manufacturing firms — the Sun Tent-Leubert Awning companies. Maintaining the open shop was the avowed aim of these groups.

The charges: organizing company-dominated unions; coercing employes; impeding the organization of workers; maintaining a vast spy system with intent to blacklist workers engaged in organizational activities; threatening assault.

Within two years prior to November, 1939, M&M, SCI, TNT and the EAS had set up 434 company unions. SCI the fund-raising body, had gathered $523,325 from employers,—paid Paul Shoup its president $72,000 a year, and Frank Patridge, secretary $18000 a year. The money for anti-union activities was disbursed through the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Labor strife, anti-communist agitation, waterfront strike troubles, and the plague of anti-picketing propositions in California of late years have all been traced to these groups which paraded as democratic, civil-liberty-supporting 100 per cent Americans.

The hearing is history-making: Los Angeles is the nation's open-shop hotspot; and the NLRB seeks to limit what incorporated employer groups can do to circumvent the Labor Act.

TNT'S BACKERS

TNT was hatched in 1937 in the Los Angeles Times office of Harry Chandler, labor's bitterest foe in the Southwest. Chandler and Byron Hanna, the latter president of the Chamber of Commerce, quarreled over which of two women should head TNT. Hanna won. Mrs. Bessie Ochs took the helm. Chandler sulked. Now he's glad.

The present trial soon disclosed that Mrs. Ochs had built up her huge membership of 109,000 anti-labor, anti-union women by mass forgery—copying names from lists of womens' clubs, churches, voters, teachers. Board attorney David Sokol proved that only 200 of these were bona fide.

TNT radio, newspapers and mail publicity had claimed its aims were to "protect helpless women", to "bring industrial peace to California." They would "fight labor racketeers, self-seeking labor organizers, and trouble-making radicals". TNT generously added "We favor no class, creed, race or political party". And it was "for the open-shop to protect the bread winners' earnings."

With TNT working up steam among women of Southern California, SCI gathering hundreds of thousands of dollars from anxious employers, the M&M breaking strikes by furnishing thousands of strike-breakers through its "free employment agency", and the EAS setting up company unions right in employers factories, the Open-Shoppers sailed serenely into the Fall of 1939. Labor unrest was at fever heat.

For months David Sokol, NLRB attorney, had been gathering evidence of employer anti-labor activities in Southern California. The government served subpoenas on the above mentioned groups to appear for trial on Oct. 16, 1939.

Consternation reigned. Testimony during the trial showed that the M&M, SCI, TNT, EAS and the Chamber of Commerce began farming out or destroying records. But Sokol and the LaFollette Committee had obtained plenty of material.

PANICS TORIES

As the trial progressed with managers, secretaries, attorneys, and other employes of the defendants testifying, despite storms of objections from a battery of seven attorneys, Sokol revealed amazing evidence of employer-financier illegal activities—from using the mails to defraud, forgery, transporting strike breakers across state lines—down to SCI threats to use customer boycott on employers who refused to join the anti-union front or donate money to SCI.

TNT was revealed as a company union factory operating under orders from the M&M, SCI and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Sokol paraded the blue bloods of Southern California's industrial and financial leaders on the witness stand. When cross-examined these men said "I don't remember" and "I have no recollection" so often that hardened newspaper reporters wondered how they conducted their businesses.

The "check off"—unions collecting dues at the plants— "is vicious" and "has to go" said TNT. But the trial developed that TNT told its 434 company union heads that the check off was alright for them.

OPEN FILES

Clay Rittenhouse, ace company union organizer for EAS, turned government witness for immunity. For two years he worked with EAS's company union factory and M&M's strike-breaking employment agency. He told about bribery of Los Angeles police officials. The workings of SCI, M&M and TNT were an open book to him. His private files of documents, photostats, letters and contracts were given to the government.

When the company union manufacturing began to stink too much and Los Angeles Big Business feared a collision with Federal labor laws they decided to liquidate TNT, EAS, and Rittenhouse. They gave the latter $100 and a train pass to West Virginia.

SPILLS BEANS

Rittenhouse was displeased. When Sokol contacted him, he agreed to spill the beans on the Open Shoppers. His most valuable testimony was in proving that individuals working for defendant groups had been involved in anti-labor activities.

A startling confession was that he personally organized the spy system called secret protective societies. In this way men were to spy into every union, into democratic groups, seek communist activities, spy on womens clubs and even Federal government officials. Information collected by these spies was to be turned over to SCI for "proper use." The American Can Company was one employer group which had these Secret Societies working when the trial started.

Since the defendant groups were in constant contact with like employer groups throughout the U. S., one can readily imagine what such a nation-wide spy ring would do to civil liberties.

Rittenhouse testified that TNT was to act as a central body to handle material for this spy ring; to set up company unions; to advise employers on labor relations. The M&M would break strikes, and SCI would collect money to finance activities.

From Fred R. Fysh, M&M manager, Sokol extracted testimony proving that the M&M "free employment agency" was nothing but a labor espionage setup and an agency to supply thousands of strike-breakers to employers. A tabulation of 800 employe cards from M&M files disclosed that workers who would take strike-breaking jobs had 2.5 times as much chance to obtain work as those refusing.

Humorous aspects of the lengthy hearing:

Mrs. Ochs once stated: "The closed shop is alright for Independent unions but not for CIO or AFL unions."

Attorney Sokol uncovered quite a racket among anti-labor attorneys. TNT and the M&M developed labor trouble for employers then called in their selected lawyers to handle the cases.

Hanna, Partridge and others of the Open Shop inner circle stressed SCI's activities of "educating" the public in "Open Shop Philosophy." It was disclosed that out of more than $500,000 collected only $9,000 was used for "educating" the public.

Between Sokol and Rittenhouse and a mass of damming evidence, the trial daily uncovered the illegal workings of Southern California Open Shop interests.

BREAKING UP

Apparently recognizing the inevitable, the battery of defendant lawyers made a last grandstand effort to force the return of Rittenhouse's exhibit files. But Trial Examiner Myers overruled their objections. All exhibits are now Federal government property.

Presaging an impressive victory for the NLRB, these anti-labor groups are breaking up. TNT has closed its doors. Employers Advisory Service is gone. The Merchants & Manufacturers Assn. has let out all industrial relations men and closed its employment agency. Southern Californians Inc. has admitted that it will close its doors at the termination of the hearings.

Exposure has made it impossible for these groups to get money from employers.

CIO Victory

KANSAS CITY, Kans., Apr. 20 — The vote was small, but the margin of victory was big when the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee won a Labor Board election at the Morris Feed Yard in nearby Turner.

The PWOC picked up 29 votes, while only 2 workers voted against the CIO union.

Intl. Harvester Co. Signs 2nd CIO Pact

Richmond, Ind., Apr. 20—Product of three years' struggle, a CIO contract was in effect today at the local plant of the powerful Intl. Harvester Co.

Basis for the contract lay in the victory of the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee in a National Labor Relations Board election here three months ago—an election which sounded taps for IHC's notorious company union.

Ratification of the pact, which gives the FEWOC sole bargaining rights, seniority and grievance systems, came quickly from Local 118 of the CIO union. The plant is the second owned by IHC to sign with the FEWOC.

Best Argument for Ending the Poll Tax

SMITH COX DIES BURKE FRIES

EFFECTS OF POLL TAX: Three leading Congressional Tories—Rep. Howard Smith of Virginia, Rep. Eugene Cox of Georgia, and Rep. Martin Dies of Texas—come from states where poll taxes effectively keep majority of voters away from the polls. All are foes of progressive legislation; all three were elected by the votes of only 10 per cent of the population of their districts. Where there's no poll tax, as in Nebraska, Sen. Edward Burke, reactionary, lost his fight for renomination in Illinois and Rep. Frank Fries, outstanding friend of labor, won a 4-1 contest for return to the House.

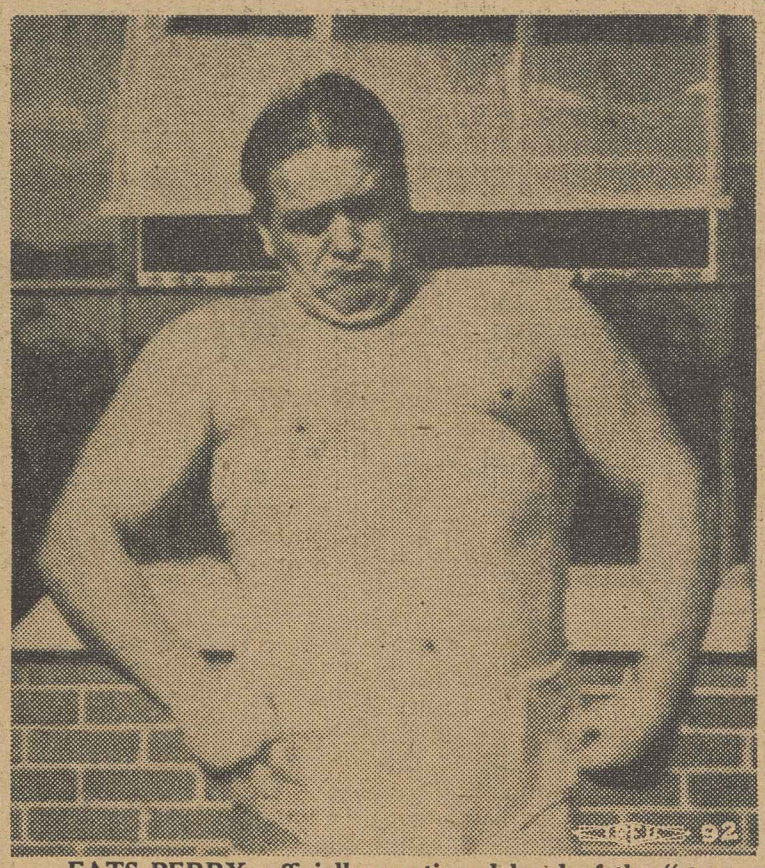
LEWIS ADDRESSES NEGRO CONGRESS

Hire Union Workers, Firm Told

Washington, Apr. 27. — Finding that 42 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, were refused employment by the Milan Shirt Manufacturing Co., Milan, Tennessee, because of their union connections, the Labor Board this week ordered the company to stop its discrimination.

The workers were all formerly employed by a company which occupied the present Milan plant from 1932 to 1938, when a change of ownership took place. None of the former company's employes who retained their membership in the Amalgamated were hired.

The company's contention that this was a "mere coincidence" was dismissed by the Board.



Insurance Agents To Vote May 2

New York, Apr. 27—Some 1,050 industrial insurance agents of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. will vote May 2 to determine if they wish the CIO as their sole bargaining agency.

The election, to be conducted by the New York State Labor Relations Board, will give the agents a choice between Local 30 of the United Office & Professional Workers or no union.

In October, 1938, the company's 70 agents in Boston voted overwhelmingly for the UOPWA, while earlier in the same year New York agents of the Metropolitan Life had taken a similar stand.

'The Ford Way Of Doing Business'

FATS PERRY, officially-sanctioned head of the "strong arm squad" at Ford's Dallas, Tex., plant in 1937, displays a bit of the muscle used to beat a score of workers and professional people suspected of union membership or sympathies. The brains that guided Fats' muscles were located in Ford headquarters at Dearborn, Mich., a Labor Board trial examiner this week reported in a scathing attack on Ford brutal anti-labor policies.

Invites Group To Affiliate With Labor League

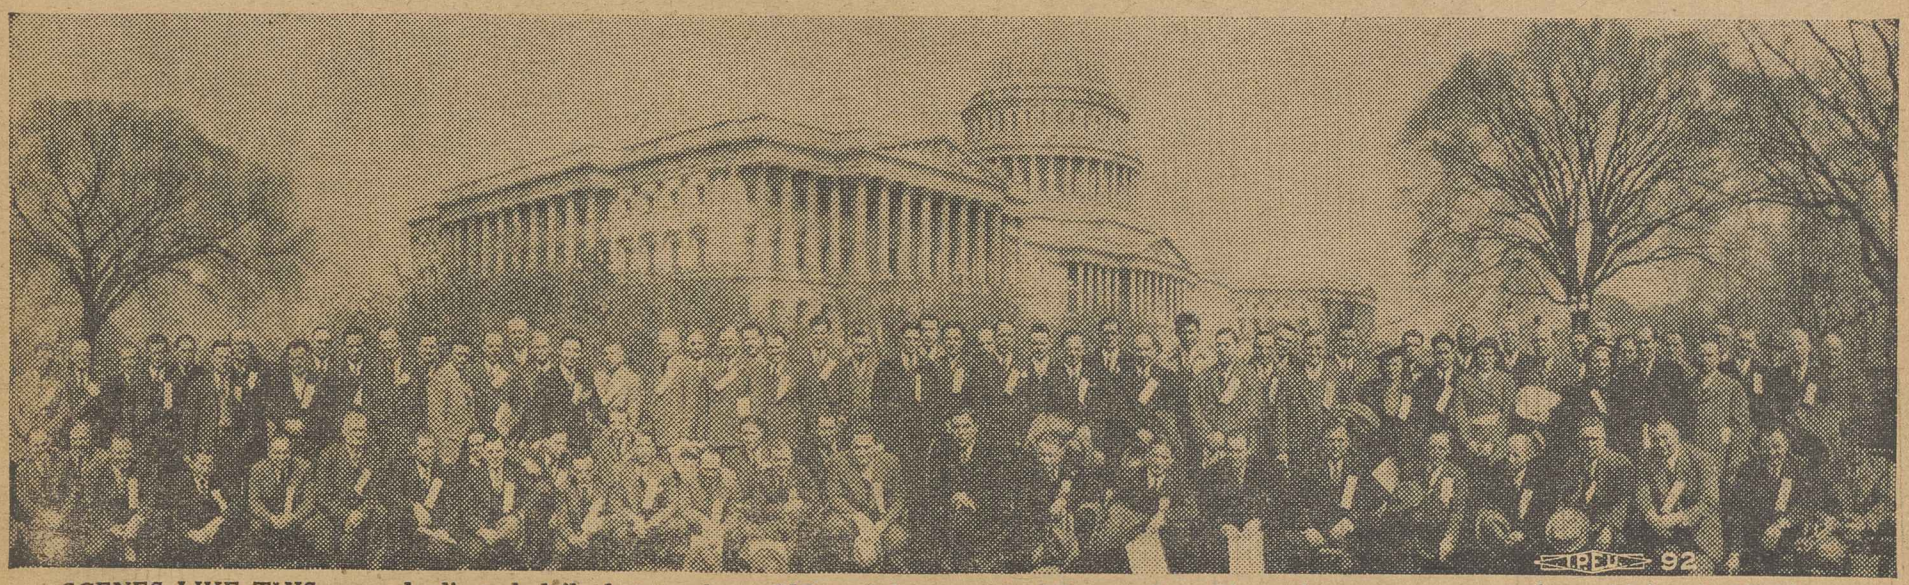
WASHINGTON, Apr. 26.—CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, in a stirring half-hour speech, today invited the National Negro Congress to affiliate with or reach a working arrangement with Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Lewis' speech, which was broadcast over a nationwide radio hookup, was delivered in the same auditorium where two months ago he made an historic address to the American Youth Congress.

The CIO leader discussed major problems facing American workers, both Negro and white: unemployment, war, insecurity and the poll tax.

Two Glass Workers Get $2,250 Back Pay Award



PITTSBURGH, Apr. 27.—A Labor Board stipulation today spelled out a major victory for the CIO Federation of Flat Glass Workers when the Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. paid $2,250 in back wages to two discharged employes and made plans for their reinstatement.

The two men, Evan L. Atkinson and William Vincent Allman, were employed in the company's plant at Clarksburg, W. Va., until the date of their dismissal for union activities.

At the same time the stipulation calls for a Labor Board election at the plant on June 11 to determine whether the workers wish to be represented by the CIO union or by the American Flint Glass Workers Union, an AFL affiliate.

Between the date of the stipulation and June 15, the company agreed to suspend its closed shop contract with the AFL union, to withdraw recognition of that organization as sole bargaining agency and to discontinue the check-off system contained in the AFL contract.

Unionists Rally to Defense of Wagner Act

SCENES LIKE THIS were duplicated daily last week as CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League state delegations visited their Congressmen to stress workers' bitter opposition to Smith and Norton proposals to strangle the Wagner Act. Shown here are representatives of labor in Michigan and New Jersey. Other states which sent delegations included Massachusetts, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Conventions Dot CIO Calendar

Aluminum Union Holds 3rd Meeting At Maryville, Tenn.

MARYVILLE, Tenn., Apr. 27.—Storms weathered by the three-year-old Aluminum Workers of America have increased its strength for the struggles yet to come, President N. A. Zonarich told delegates to the third national AWA convention in session here.

"In meeting with many attempts at union disruption, the Aluminum Workers of America has successfully emerged a stronger organization," Zonarich said. He reported that the CIO international now has affiliated locals in 14 states and sole bargaining rights in practically all organized plants.

John Brophy, CIO national director of local industrial unions, one of the principal speakers at the convention, outlined the legislative program of the CIO and stressed the importance of the unemployment problem.

Delegates cheered an announcement of the winning of a Labor Board election at the plant of the Aluminum Company of America at Badin, N. C. In spite of the fact that Badin is a completely company controlled town, Local 3 of the AWA won the election by a vote of 339 to 327, it was reported.

The election victory will automatically bring the Badin aluminum workers under the terms of the agreement signed with the giant corporation last November and now operating in five plants.

ZONARICH CITES GAINS

In his report to the convention, Pres. Zonarich said that the agreement with the ACA provided for vacations with pay, seniority rights, overtime pay for overtime work and other benefits.

"It must be remembered that a few years ago not a single contract of collective bargaining was heard of in any of the aluminum factories," he declared.

"Since the birth of the Aluminum Workers of America, it has established a collective bargaining set-up that affects over 25,000 workers in all classes of employment in the aluminum industry."

To Form Council In Tennessee

JELLICO, Tenn., Apr. 27—William Turnblazer, CIO regional director in Tennessee, announced here this week that a call was to be sent out for a state-wide convention to set up a State Industrial Union Council. The meeting will open May 25, at the Farragut Hotel, Knoxville, Tenn.

Iron, Steel Assn. Holds 65th Confab

Pittsburgh, Pa., Apr. 27 — The oldest union in the CIO, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, is holding its 65th annual convention here in this city where the national union was born in 1876.

Lee Pressman, general counsel for the CIO, addressed the delegates the opening day of the convention. Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, and other SWOC officials are scheduled to speak at later sessions.

M. F. Tighe, former international president of the union for many years, was one of the main speakers at the earlier sessions.

Present AA officers are B. Frank Bennett, president; Louis Leonard, secretary-treasurer; William Grey, assistant secretary-treasurer; Thomas G. Gillis, Joseph K. Gaither and Ward Walcott, district vice-presidents, and John Sandor, Con O'Fallon and Thomas J. Dyess, trustees.

Two Languages

SIGNS IN ENGLISH AND FRENCH were used by the Textile Workers Union in Biddeford, Maine, recently to win an important Labor Board election victory. The signs—plus organization—apparently did the trick, for the CIO won by an overwhelming majority.

Dyers Federation Opens 3-Day Parley

NEW YORK, Apr. 27.—The seventh annual convention of the Dyers Federation of the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, opened here April 26 at the Park Central hotel, for a three-day session.

Main item on the agenda is the determination of methods and policies to renew and improve the general contract with the dyeing and finishing industry, covering 30,000 workers. This agreement expires in August.

President Emil Rieve of the TWUA opened the convention, with Joseph Knapik, president of the buyers, presiding. Speakers scheduled to address the delegates include Leo Krzycki, member of the general executive board, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; George Baldanzi, TWUA executive vice-president; William Pollock, TWUA secretary-treasurer; and Eli Oliver of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Pennsy CIO Opens Meet

Reading, Pa., April 27—Allan Haywood, CIO national director of organization, will speak at the third annual convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council which opens here April 29.

John A. Phillips, President, and Lester Thomas, Secretary, head the Pennsylvania Council which represents hundreds of locals affiliated with CIO national unions in the coal, steel, textile, aluminum, shoe and other industries.

The convention held last year at Harrisburg was attended by more than 600 delegates.

Alabama CIO Raps Foes of Wagner Act

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Apr. 27.—Attacks on the National Labor Relations Act and other efforts of enemies of labor to destroy the power of the trade union movement were denounced by CIO leaders at the second annual convention of the Alabama Industrial Union Council in session here last week-end.

More than 400 delegates from 189 CIO locals affiliated with 11 international unions and organizing committees attended the convention.

John Brophy, national director of local industrial unions, who spoke at the opening session, outlined the legislative program of the CIO. "We hear a lot these days about balancing the budget," Brophy declared.

"LIFT PURCHASING POWER"

"The CIO takes the position that you can't balance the budget until you first balance the national income, and you can't do that until the purchasing power of the masses of the people is raised."

A joint report of progress made by the CIO in Alabama drawn up by William Mitch, president, and Yelverton Cowherd, secretary-treasurer of the State Council, pointed out that Birmingham now has the largest organized group of any city in the deep South.

Visiting CIO speakers to the convention included Martin Wagner, president of District 50, United Mine Workers; R. R. Lawrence, regional director of the Textile Workers Union in Atlanta, Ga.; and G. R. Hathaway, representative of the Quarry Workers Intl. Union.

NAME OFFICERS

President Mitch and Secretary-treasurer Cowherd, were re-elected at the Sunday session, and three vice-preisdents were chosen. They are: J. A. Parson, United Mine Workers; Cecil Pegues, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and J. E. Robbins, Dairy Workers Union.

CIO Hosiery Union Meets June 17

Northampton, Mass., Apr. 27—The executive board of American Federation of Hosiery Workers in session here last week announced that the 29th annual convention would be held in Milwaukee, Wis., the week beginning June 17.

William Smith, general secretary-treasurer of the Federation, will send out the official call to all branches immediately, the Board stated. Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers' Union of America, to which the Federation is affiliated, made a short talk to the Board.

Federation President Alexander McKeown and Vice-Presidents Alfred Hoffmann and Edward F. Callaghan also spoke.

URGING THAT NATION STAY OUT OF WAR, New York college students assembled at Lewisohn Stadium on April 19 to stress the need for peace. Other student groups, working with the United Student Peace Committee, held similar demonstrations throughout the nation.

Texas Council Maps Plans

Corpus Christi, Tex., Apr. 27—A program to unite labor in the state on a political and economic front was drawn up at the fourth annual convention of the Texas CIO Industrial Union Council held here last week. Some 200 delegates from affiliated locals and auxiliaries attended.

Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to CIO President John L. Lewis, in his keynote address stressed the importance of strengthening the Oil Workers International Union, the largest labor group in the state.

DRAW UP PLATFORM

A ten-point platform was drawn up at the convention which the delegates voted to submit to state political candidates in the coming election, as a test of their fitness to be supported by labor.

Lewis Urges Unions to Push Legislation

WASHINGTON, Apr. 27.—Action by all CIO members on nine major issues now before Congress is urged by President John L. Lewis in a report issued by him as Chairman of the CIO Legislative Committee.

The nine issues on which action is urged are WPA appropriations, amendments to the Wage Hour law and to the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act, the Walter-Logan bill just passed in the House, amendments to the Social Security Act, the LaFollette Oppressive Labor Practices Act, anti-alien and other proposals to curb civil liberties, the Anti-Lynching bill, and the bill to outlaw poll tax restrictions on voting.

Current amendments proposed for the Wagner Labor Relations Act and the U. S. Housing Act are not considered, since special reports were sent to all CIO affiliates on these two issues earlier in the session.

The report urges defeat of the proposed Norton, Barden and Ramspeck amendments to the wage-hour law, describing them as attempts to weaken the act coming from "reactionary Garner-Democrats in Congress."

It calls for passage of an amendment to the Walsh-Healey Act to take government contracts away from violators of the Wagner Act. Opposition to the Walter-Logan bill to turn over administrative procedure to the courts is also recommended.

NO WPA LAYOFFS

A major section of the report calls for action to stop mass layoffs of WPA workers and for relief funds to employ 3,000,000 jobless workers. Social security is dealt with in the report in urging action to secure passage of a national health bill, of $60 monthly pensions for workers of 60 and over, and for increased unemployment compensation.

On civil rights, Pres. Lewis' report calls for passage of the LaFollette bill to stop anti-union employer violence, passage of the anti-lynch and anti-poll tax acts, and for opposition to all pending anti-alien and other anti-minority bills.

The report reminds all CIO members to be "ready for quick action" to impress labor's will for progressive legislation on the Senators and Congressmen.

Fur Verdict Endangers CIO Unions

Washington, April 27—Analysis of the "anti-trust" sentence against Ben Gold, president of the Intl. Fur and Leather Workers Union, CIO, and 10 other defendants shows that the trial was directed against the organizational efforts of the CIO union, it was revealed here.

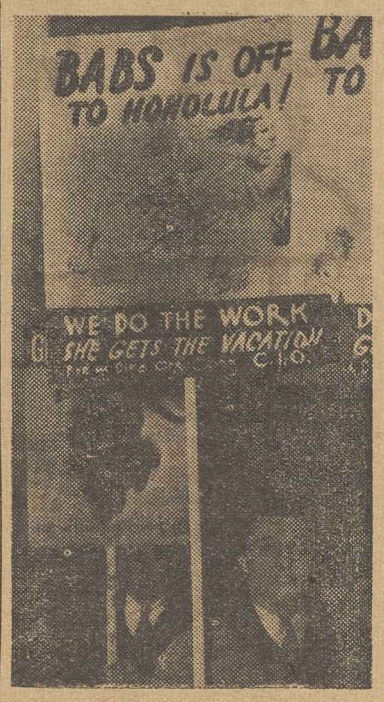
The original indictment was obtained in 1935, seven years before the case came to trial, it was pointed out. During that time the indictment was allowed to lie dormant, and not until the CIO union had organized the overwhelming majority of the fur workers in the industry was the case brought to trial.

The government, in carrying through the trial and sentence, claimed that the Fur Workers Union had engaged in a combination in restraint of trade, as a result of their activities in organizing the unorganized workers across state lines.

BLOW TO UNIONS

This contention of the government was seen as endangering every union that seeks to organize an entire industry, and as an attempt to thwart the Natl. Labor Relations Act and other labor legislation through court action.

The conviction, it was pointed out, was not based on any attempt to prove that Fur Workers leaders conspired with employers to fix prices or build up a monopoly. None of the racketeering practices of the AFL building in collusion with employers were cited in the trial, on the basis of which a number of indictments of AFL top officials have been handed down.



3 Building Firms Sign With CIO

Washington, Apr. 27—Wage agreements were signed this week by the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee and three large midwest contractors who will employ more than 1,000 men on river projects running upward of $1,000,000 over the next three years.

The three firms have contracts covering revetment work on the Missouri River, from its mouth at West Alton, Mo., westward about 70 miles to Washington, Mo. These three firms are among the largest doing river work in the United States.

Negotiations of this contract was carried on by James T. Nash, UCWOC organizer in that area, with the assistance of John Doherty, CIO Regional Director.

Picket 'Babs'

PICKETS from the CIO Five and Dime Organizing Committee were on hand when F. W. Woolworth opened a new store in New York. Public was reminded that while clerks are underpaid, Babs Hutton, heir to the Woolworth millions, was preparing for another episode in her perpetual vacation, this time in Hawaii.

Supreme Court Bars Anti-Picketing Laws

WASHINGTON, Apr. 27.—The U. S. Supreme Court this week struck a blow for labor's civil rights by declaring unconstitutional anti-picketing ordinances in California and Alabama. Both decisions were read by Justice Frank Murphy, while Justice McReynolds dissented from the majority opinions in the two cases.

Murphy's decision held that peaceful picketing does not constitute an "aggravated danger" to an employer which would justify the limitations contained in the "sweeping laws" in both states.

The California case involved members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers who were arrested while picketing the Shasta Dam project. Their case was argued before the high court by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel. The Alabama law was tested by the American Federation of Labor.

"The safeguarding of . . . rights to the end that men may speak as they think on matters vital to them and that falsehoods may be exposed through the processes of education and discussion is essential to freedom," the majority decision said in the Alabama case.

Sen. Guffey, Renominated

Philadelphia, Pa., Apr. 27—With a plurality nearing 100,000 Senator Joseph F. Guffey, CIO-supported candidate, won the Democratic nomination in the primary elections this week, handily defeating Walter A. Jones, put up by tory interests to oust Guffey.

Members of the United Mine Workers, whose membership runs into scores of thousands throughout the Keystone State, rallied strongly for Guffey, who sponsored the bituminous coal stabilization act which bears his name. UMW Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy and other UMW officials campaigned for his renomination.

Senate Group Restores Bulk Of NLRB, Wage-Hour Funds

Washington, Apr. 27.—The weight of labor pressure on Capitol Hill was recognized today by the Senate Appropriations Committee as it counteracted the anti-labor handiwork of reactionaries in the House of Representatives.

In quick succession the committee over-rode House slashes in the appropriations for the National Labor Relations Board and the U. S. Wage-Hour division. Restored to the NLRB was $228,000 of the $337,000 cut by the House, while the Wage-Hour division was given back all but $35,000 of the $1,080,000 slash voted in the House.

Action on the committee recommendations must now come from the Senate, and, then, if accepted, from a joint House-Senate committee.

LAUD WAGE LAW

In granting the additional million dollars for salaries of inspectors, pay-roll examiners and other administrative personnel, the committee mentioned it was "impressed by the desire of the present administrator to clean up the backlog of complaints placed at 21,000 and to get a start on routine periodic inspections.

"With the funds now recommended in the bill, it should be possible for the administrator to recruit a force of 1,096 inspectors and 203 pay roll examiners during the next fiscal year."

The Senate Committee's action followed vigorous protests from labor unions throughout the country complaining against the slashes of labor's two most important government agencies at a time when farm and military appropriations were being maintained or increased.

Rep. Norton Raps Norton Bill, Hails Act

WASHINGTON, Apr. 27.—Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee whose name is on the Norton bill to change the Wagner Act, has told the CIO that she believes "no amendments should be passed this year to the National Labor Relations Act."

Rep. Norton's sensational statement was made in a letter to the District of Columbia Council, United Federal Workers, CIO, which had written to her protesting against the Norton bill and the Smith bill and all other attempts to emasculate the act. Her statement was seen in Washington as directly due to the fighting campaign the CIO has been waging to defend the act.

Rep. Norton disavowed authorship of the bill, explaining that all proposed measures bear the name of the chairman of the committee from which they come.

"As chairman of the committee, all committee bills bear my name," she wrote. "This is the usual procedure in all committees. However, I am entirely in accord with you that no amendments should be passed this year to the Natl. Labor Relations Act.

"I shall take this position on the floor when the rule comes before us. The only way all amendments can be defeated is to vote down the rule when it comes up for adoption."

THE SITUATION

Mrs. Norton's reference to voting down the rule concerns the situation on the Wagner Act in Congress this week, as the CIO met the reactionary drive to destroy labor through making craft unionism compulsory. According to Congressional procedure, the Norton bill can now be brought up by majority vote for an "open rule" for discussion. House reactionary strategy is understood to include a motion to substitute the Smith ripper bill for the Norton bill, since the tories feel the craft union amendment does not go far enough. If the Smith bill is defeated, the Norton bill then comes up.

This situation gives point to the CIO campaign of urging all Congressmen to vote against considering any amendments at the present time, since Congressional enemies of labor are looking forward to a field day against the Act as soon as it is opened up on the floor of the House.

MISSING FILES

Tactics of the Smith Committee axemen were clearly seen in a story of Labor Board files seized from the Board and handed over to the American Potash and Chemical Corp., against which a Board case is pending in the courts. The files were taken while Edmund Toland was counsel for the Smith Committee — the same Toland who once acted as attorney for the corporation involved.

Congressmen and Senators continued to be bombarded by protests against emasculation of the Act from CIO leaders and members, plus a growing protest movement among other organizations and progressive groups. In Washington, CIO vice-president Philip Murray wrote to all Congressmen pointing to the great CIO victory in General Motors as clear indication of how the workers feel about the Wagner Act.

PEACE AT GM

"The industrial form of organization has finally been established in the automobile industry," he wrote. "These elections should lead to a very peaceful relationship between the CIO and General Motors. The amendments to the NLRA now pending in the House and particularly the craft amendment in the Norton bill, endanger this peaceful relationship.

"It behooves any member of Congress to refrain from helping the passage of these amendments which would bring about industrial chaos in place of the industrial peace now established."

Defend the Wage-Hour Law

The present Wage-Hour law (Fair Labor Standards Act) does not establish an adequate minimum wage. It does not decree, as it should, that all American workers are entitled, in return for their labor, to at least a health-and-decency standard of living.

All it does is to outlaw, for some of the workers, the most extreme forms of brutal and heartless sweatshop exploitation and degradation.

The present minimum wage, for the workers covered by the law, is no more than $12.60 a week — when they are lucky enough to obtain a full week's employment.

How an American family can keep body and soul together on a wage like this, is one of those mysteries whose solution is written in malnutrition, stunted growth, pitiful scrimping and endless spiritual misery.

Yet this weak law is under attack in Congress at the present time by sweatshoppers and their political stooges, who are trying to weaken it still further.

The attack follows two lines: (1) To cut appropriations, as voted by the House, so that it may be impossible to enforce the law effectively; and (2) to amend it in such a way that a million or more of the most exploited workers may be deprived of the law's protection, and otherwise to emasculate it almost out of existence.

The CIO, in urging enactment of the present law, pointed out that it did little more than put a necessary principle upon the books, and that it would be necessary, to expand and strengthen the law later to make it really effective for its stated purposes.

Efforts to emasculate the Wage-Hour law at the last session of Congress were halted largely by CIO efforts. The exposure which Pres. John L. Lewis then made of the reactionary conspiracy led by Vice-President Garner against this and other labor legislation is one that will long be remembered.

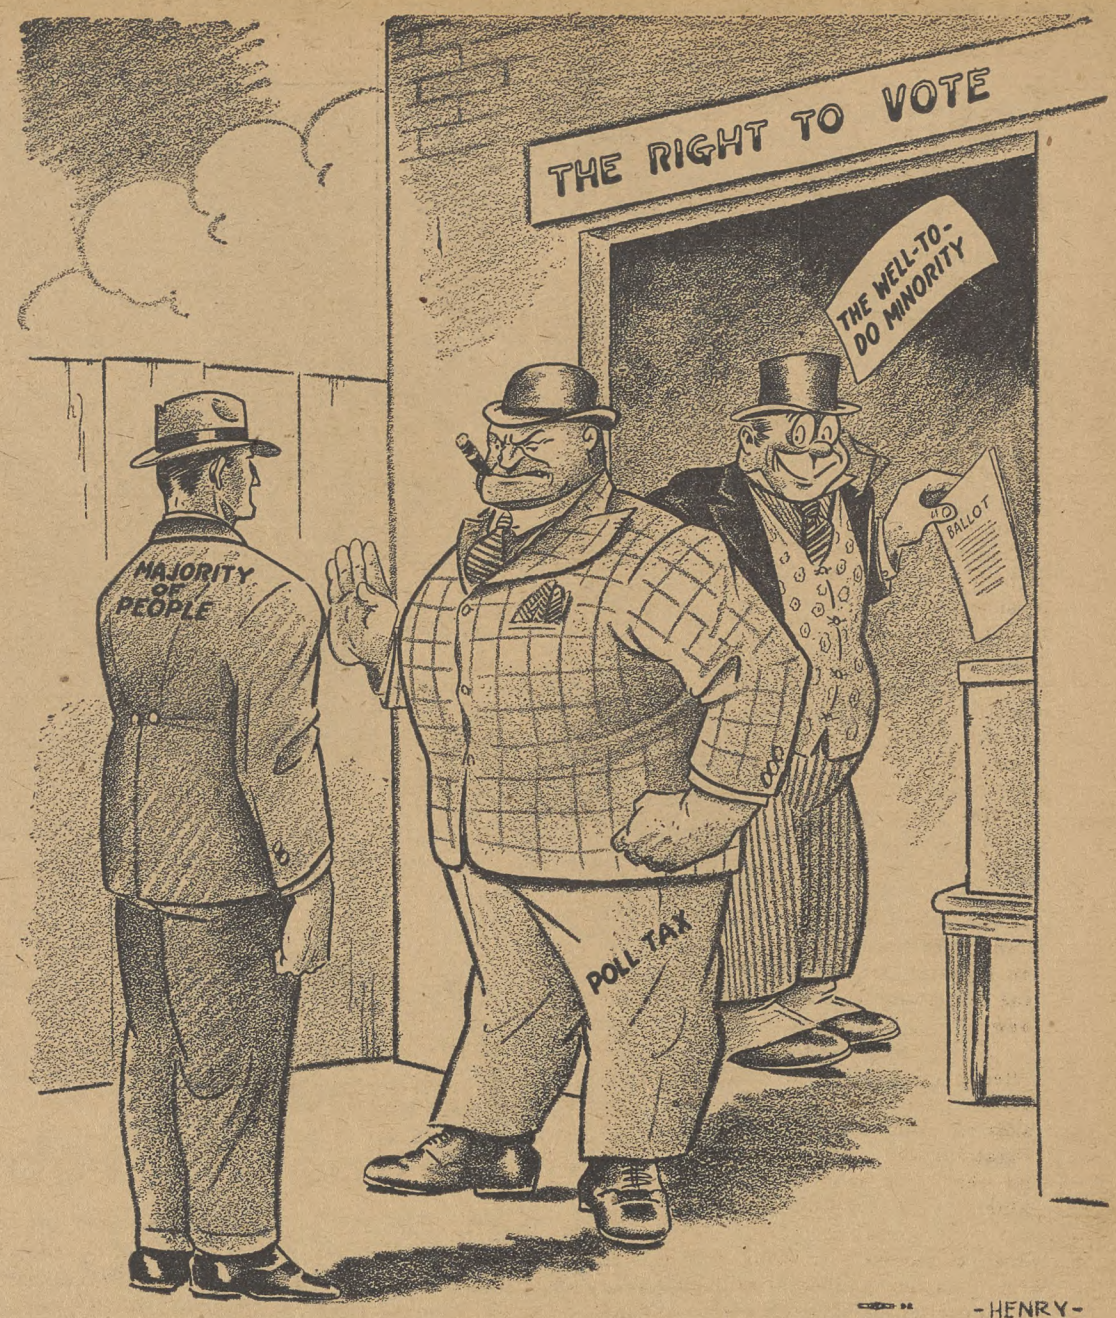
Now once more the heat is on, and the CIO calls on all decent Americans to let their Senators and Congressmen know that they are opposed to all weakening amendments and appropriations slashes for the Wage-Hour law.

Canadian Mine Union Joins Labor Congress

TORONTO, Ont., Apr. 27. — Districts 18 and 26 of the United Mine Workers of America have affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labor, a national union centre, it was announced today by the Canadian CIO office here.

The move follows several months of negotiations between the ACCL and a committee of the Canadian CIO for the establishment of a new congress of labor in the dominion. The question of the new congress arose after the AFL body here, the Trades and Labor Congress last fall expelled CIO affiliates from its fold and began splitting local central labor bodies on similar lines.

out to call a convention of all the



In view of the increased cost of living due to the war and general need for coordination of drives to organize the unorganized, the CIO unions felt their members would benefit tremendously from the formation of a new congress which would undertake not only to protect labor's legislative but also economic interests, and move to give impetus to the organizing of the unorganized.

Other CIO affiliates are considering the move of the UMW. The plan is that after affiliation is complete a program will be worked out to call a convention of all the affiliates of the two centres.

Lauds CIO Mackay Pact

Washington, Apr. 27 — Safeguards against machine displacement of Telegraph workers written in a CIO contract were praised here as "The most comprehensive single statement that has ever been written into a labor contract" by Dewey Anderson, economist of the Natl. Economic Committee here.

The contract that drew this praise was signed by the American Communications Assn., CIO, with the Mackay Radio Corp., and in addition to preventing machine displacement, won wage boosts of $55,000, closed shop, union hiring, no split tricks or part time,

Is This Democracy?

Looking Ahead — By LEN DE CAUX

Our Rights - And How To Get Them

THE Supreme Court has come out in favor of the constitution again, and everybody's quite excited.

It has ruled that workers have some rights under the constitution which are no less important than the rights of business.

It has held that anti-picketing laws are unconstitutional because they violate the free speech of workers who want to publicize the facts of a labor dispute in this way.

Under the constitution all American citizens, including workers, are supposed to have the right of free speech, free press, free assemblage, the right to vote, the right to organize, and a lot more liberties.

But somehow most of this freedom has been monopolized by the wealthier classes.

Labor and the common people have had to fight a long and uphill battle for every bit of the freedom which the constitution proclaims to be theirs. And they have a whole lot more fighting to do to get their fair share.

So the recent Supreme Court decision is a great victory for labor, even if it does no more than to proclaim a right which should be obvious under the constitution.

After all, labor for a very long time has had the right to organize. But when the Wagner Act was passed, to make it possible for workers to enjoy this right without being fired, it was no mean triumph.

Under the fundamental freedoms of speech, press and assemblage, American workers have always and obviously been entitled to distribute union literature, to hold meetings and parades, to picket and to carry on all other normal union activities.

But there are a lot of states, cities and employers who never set much stock by the constitution. State laws and city ordinances were passed denying to workers these rights. And in many cases the local bulls and bosses have gotten away with denying these rights even without any laws.

It is only recently—since CIO organization has become strong enough, in fact, to assert and protect rights which the workers have always enjoyed in theory — that courts and legislatures have increasingly upheld the workers' constitutional rights.

With the addition of the Supreme Court's picketing decision to quite a list of earlier decisions on labor's rights, unionists now have a legally watertight case for exercising their full cvil liberties in organizing work.

If you want to know what your rights are, and how to assert and defend them without landing in the hoosegow, an excellent guidebook is the CIO pamphlet, "Your Civil Liberties and How To Protect Them"—which is obtainable from CIO headquarters.

The recent report of Pres. John L. Lewis on behalf of the CIO Legislative Committee indicates what a lot of fighting still remains to be done to win for all American workers even the minimum of democratic rights to which they are entitled.

Of nine main legislative issues dealt with, three relate to the bare right to exist and eke out a living, without which one cannot enjoy any liberty except the right to starve to death.

These issues are WPA jobs for the unemployed; opposition to Wage-Hour amendments which would legalize starvation wages for more than a million of the most sweated workers; and demand for Social Security amendments to provide at least a minimum of economic security for needy Americans.

Three more of these nine issues relate to the right of Americans to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness without being terrorized and shot up by anti-union employers; persecuted and discriminated against on account of being foreign-born; or lynched by lawless mobs.

These issues are passage of the LaFollette Oppressive Labor Practices Act; Opposition to anti-alien bills; and support of anti-lynching legislation.

Another of the nine issues relates to special privileges for lawbreakers if they happen to be big employers. This is the CIO demand for amendment of the Walsh-Healey Act to forbid government business going to violators of the Labor Relations Act.

Finally, there is the demand for one of the simplest and most obvious of democratic constitutional rights—the right to vote. This right is denied to the majority of the people in eight states by poll tax laws, and labor joins in the demand that such restrictions on voting be abolished.

All in all, it will be seen that American labor is still having to fight with all its energy for a bare minimum of the rights supposed to be granted to all Americans under the constitution. If that be radicalism, make the most of it!

CIO Heads Testify At TNEC

Washington, April 27. — Technological change "is closing the economic scissors that cut the lifeline of employment on which hundreds of thousands of coal miners precariously hang," Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America told the Temporary Natl. Economic Committee here in testimony this week.

Kennedy's testimony, together with evidence by Lewis Merrill, president of the Office and Professional Workers and Emil Rieve, head of the United Textile Workers, wound up appearances of CIO officials in which the Committee learned at first hand what technology does to the workers' jobs and their standards of living.

"One blade of these scissors continually cuts the number of men needed to produce each ton of coal," Kennedy testified, "while the other blade cuts the number of tons needed to carry on industry, transportation and the generation of heat, light and power."

SUGGESTS REMEDIES

Remedies suggested by Kennedy included legislation to equalize taxes on other fuels, and possible "taxation and regulation within the realm of labor-saving machinery." In addition, Kennedy said, "Congress should do that which is necessary to bring about a national economy that will put our unemployed back to work on a basis of hours geared to the trend of modern industry, and wages . . . to provide for continuing steady employment and prosperity in this nation."

NEED FOR BARGAINING

Collective bargaining plus Federal action are needed "to reduce the shock of technological change and unemployment on textile workers and communities, Emil Rieve, TWUA president, told the Committee.

"The social and economic problems created by technological changes are national in character and must be dealt with by the Federal government," Rieve said. "They relate to the absolute number of jobs in this country.

"Higher wages and shorter hours constitute significant means of increasing national income, distributing work more widely and facilitating greater balanced in our economy," he added, in pointing out that collective bargaining was the surest means by which such gains could be made.

WHITE COLLAR PROBLEMS

Technological unemployment among white collar workers is as high or higher than among any other section of the population, UOPWA President Merrill testified, yet they receive the least amount of protection from social laws.

He called for increased government protection of office workers' rights to close the gap between progressive social policy and regressive social practice in the U.S., and pointed out that the role of the UOPWA is to aid the office worker in his struggle against displacement and lost jobs.

Correction

In its tabulation of votes in the GM elections last week, THE CIO NEWS erroneously stated that the CIO vote at the Pontiac Motors plant was 2,709. The correct vote was 3,709.

Rieve Testifies

EMIL RIEVE, CIO vice-president and head of the Textile Workers Union of America (left), accompanied by Solomon Barkin, TWUA research director, this week described to the Temporary National Economic Committee in Washington effects of machine displacement of labor in the textile industry.

Union Leaders Blast Dies Witnesses' Fables,

NEW YORK, Apr. 27. — Charges whooped up before the Dies Committee against two CIO affiliates — the Transport Workers Union and the American Communications Assn.— brought quick denials from leaders of the organization and counter-charges that both the complaining witnesses are employer agents expelled from the labor movement sometime ago.

Pres. Michael Quill of the TWU asserted that statements made before the committee by Thomas O'Shea were "outworn piffle," while Pres. Mervyn Rathborne of the ACA said that witness Fred A. Howe "was expelled almost one year after having been tried and found guilty by an elected trial committee of his own local members of violating the Constitution of the ACA and being an agent of the employers.

QUILL WIRES DIES

In a strongly-worded telegram to Rep. Dies, Quill demanded an opportunity to appear before the Committee and answer the accusations against himself and his union. His wire said:

"Your Committee has heard and given wide publicity to a series of unfounded and lying slanders against my organization, the Transport Workers Union of the CIO, against myself as President and against a number of its elected and trusted leaders.

"These vicious lies were spread on the record by a discredited former member of our union, who was expelled on proof of his acts as an employer agent within the organization. In the name of decency and American justice I demand of your Committee the right to be heard immediately and to refute the slanders of the witness chosen by you.

"Your Committee has frequently stated its policy of affording full and prompt opportunity for reply to all persons and organizations attacked by your selected witnesses. The members of the Transport Workers Union expect that this policy will now be carried out by you."

The charge that the TWU has been organizing "gun clubs" was branded by Quill as "Mr. Dies' obvious maneuver to create hysteria and in a manner repay his Christian Front supporters who are on trial for sedition in Brooklyn Federal Court." Charges of maintaining gun squads for seditious purposes are lodged against 16 Frontists members on trial.

"There are no gun clubs in the Transport Workers Union," Mr. Quill said.

Rathborne declared that "the American Communications Association is not a Communist-controlled organization. It is a democratic trade union of, by and for communications workers. Its officials are chosen by the membership through direct nominations and secret ballot. Its policies and program are formulated by that membership.

"It is revealing that Howe did not spin his hoary yarn until such time as the ACA was preparing to enter into negotiations for new collective bargaining agreements with some of the major communications companies."

Lewis Invites Natl. Negro Congress To Join Labor League

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 26.— Labor in America will not rest until unemployment, the threat of war, and the injustices of the poll tax and lynch law are wiped out and all Americans enjoy equal rights, John L. Lewis told a cheering audience today of more than 2,500 at the Natl. Negro Congress here. His speech, which was the main event of the meeting, was broadcast over a national radio hookup of the Natl. Broadcasting Co.

Lewis' speech contained an invitation to Negro organizations to "make common cause with Labor's Non-Partisan League for the promotion of a just and sensible program for public welfare."

Lewis praised the "great contributions made by Negro leaders" and the work of the Natl. Negro Congress, pointing out that many thousands of Negro wage-earners are "active and effective" members of the CIO, where they enjoy equal rights with all other workers.

He hit sharply at the Administration and the Dept. of Justice for its failure to do anything about the particular oppressions felt by the Negro workers, in the poll tax and in the terror waged against them by lynchers and "white-robed riders." He reminded his hearers that he had called on the President and the Department to outlaw the un-American poll tax and upon Congress to pass the anti-lynch bill, but; "There has been no reply. Nothing has been done."

SCORES FBI

He accused Chief G-Man Hoover of frightening "a hall-full of elderly ladies with fantastic stories of plots against our country by foreign powers," while ignoring Ku Kluxism and vigilantism.

"Let him turn his face to cabins where American people are being lashed by white-robed riders," he said. "Let him look to cities where American workers who seek their rights are cruelly maimed and killed. Let him seek the dark night trails of lynching parties, who thrust aside the fundamental principles of American justice."

HITS POLL TAX

Lewis was equally sharp in attacking the poll tax used to disfranchise Negro and white workers in eight Southern states, which he described as a means for perpetuating the rule of a handful of Southern Bourbon Congressmen and Senators.

"In this great capital city today many of those who are in the forefront of the fight to strike down the rights of labor and the common people are men who have been sent to Washington by a small minority of citizens in their states—men who would not be here if the citizens they are supposed to represent could cast a vote," he said.

WAR MONGERS BOLDER

Politicians who want to get us into war are growing bolder, Lewis declared, as they turn away from knotty domestic problems they are unwilling to solve to the "dishonorable formula of a foreign war. Mark you, they will soon have worked up their courage to talk about going to war to save Iceland and Borneo," he warned.

"The best way to stay out of war, and the best defense against external or internal attack is to create within our borders a prosperous, happy nation. That is labor's answer to those who want war."

NO. 1 PROBLEM

Unemployment is still the "first problem" of all Americans, he declared, with 12,000,000 men and women out of jobs, yet to date the leaders of Government have refused to reply to the CIO request for a national conference of government, labor, business and farm representatives to work out a solution.

"It is not sinful to ask for security," Lewis said, in urging adequate care for the aged, the unemployed and the disabled. "Those who cry aloud that security is an unworthy aim have never known insecurity."

Pres. Lewis Discusses Major U. S. Issues At Natl. Negro Congress

THE CIO NEWS presents, in abridged form, the text of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' speech to the Natl. Negro Congress at Washington on April 26:

I appreciate deeply the honor of being invited to address this assembly of American citizens. The Negro people have a growing importance and place in American life. The great contributions which have been made by Negro leaders to American life in the past and the even greater contributions which will come in the future emphasize the significance of your fine gathering. I am glad to have this opportunity to pay tribute to these accomplishments.

It is fitting indeed that you asked to appear before you a representative of organized labor. Most of the Negro people in this country are wage earners. Many of them are members of the CIO, active and effective in their union membership. They are American workers, and, as such, they have a common stake in the growth and power of organized labor. Within the CIO all American workers have equal rights, as the CIO Constitution says, "regardless of race, creed, color or nationality."

Not Yet a Fact

You know full well, some of you from bitter experience, that these rights are not yet a fact in our nation. You know that the iniquities of the poll tax have held from millions of American citizens their right to cast their vote. In this great capital city today, many of those who are in the forefront of the fight to strike down the rights of labor and the common people are men who have been sent to Washington by a small minority of citizens in their states—men who would not be here in Washington if the citizens whom they are supposed to represent could cast a vote.

I have publicly urged the President and the Attorney General of the United States to instruct the Civil Liberties Bureau of the Department of Justice to bring into the Federal courts of this country a judicial proceeding to attack and strike down the cowardly restraints inflicted upon the citizens of the Southern states by poll tax laws. There has been no reply. Nothing has been done.

Let there be no mistake about it, labor will not rest until the right to vote becomes the right of every citizen, unhampered by such devices as the poll tax.

Stop Lynching

Last week the chief of our national police force frightened a hall full of elderly ladies with immoderate and fantastic stories of plots against our country by foreign powers. Let him turn his face to cabins where American people are being lashed by white-robed riders. Let him look to cities where American workers who seek their right to organize are cruelly maimed and killed. Let him seek the dark night trails of lynching parties, who thrust aside the fundamental principles of American justice.

Let those who are responsible in this country rout out these evils. So let them use this influence and high office to enact Federal anti-lynching legislation, so long delayed by the cowardly tactics of those who would knife it behind the scenes. We will not need to fear the plots of foreign powers if our people have faith in their government.

Save America First

There are people in this country who want to get us into war. They are growing bolder. Mark you, soon they will have worked up their courage to talk about going to war to save Iceland and Borneo. We must not go to war.

If it is our mission to save Western civilization, then let us begin by saving it right here in our own country. Our responsibility is to preserve American civilization. We will defend our country—let no one doubt that the sons of American working men and women will be the first in line should the integrity of our nation be attacked. We must not send them to die in foreign fields. There is work to be done at home.

There is an ancient and dishonorable formula well known to the practitioners of politics, through all the centuries of recorded history, which teaches that the failure to solve domestic problems can often be obscured by the excitement of a foreign war. Somehow it is easier to interest the rich and the powerful in sending other people's sons to Borneo than it is to get them to concern themselves about providing jobs and education for other people's sons.

Some politicians tire too quickly of wrestling with the knotty questions which are attendant upon getting full employment and decent security for our people. They recoil from the necessity of thinking and acting in new ways. How much easier it is for them to forget these troubles, to mount a reviewing stand and wave a silk hat while other people's children march off to the sound of a military band.

The temptation is strong to forget the hard difficulties of unemployment, of the aged, of ill health, of housing and dream of the rule of saviours of the world. Only the voice of the American people lifted unceasingly against war can keep politicians from dreaming these dreams.

The CIO office has a staff which follows very closely the journals of trade and industry. They tell me that increasingly these papers report that economic recovery depends upon the outbreak of more deadly, more destructive war abroad. I do not believe for one minute that the majority of American business men want to make profit out of war. I know too many who have told me of their horror of such commerce. Yet our failure to determine upon and to take domestic measures that will bring internal prosperity leads them more and more to cast their eyes abroad.

We Cannot Forget

We cannot forget the years between 1914 and 1917, when the economic powers of this country became persuaded that American prosperity was dependent upon the European war. We cannot forget that the few in this country enriched themselves on the basis of foreign debts to our government, debts which were never repaid and now lie against the account of this United States as a bar to expenditures for our unemployed, our ill and our aged.

The Way to Stay Out

The best way to stay out of war, the best defense against external or internal attack, is to create within our borders a prosperous, happy nation. That is labor's answer to those who want war.

There are almost 12 million unemployed today. But even this startling figure includes only the outside boundaries of the real problem. Unemployment cannot be measured alone by those who are completely out of work, but must also encompass those whose incomes do not provide a livelihood.

Leaders of CIO unions have just been engaged in presenting a series of notable statements to the Temporary National Economic Committee proving that it is now the trend of American industry to throw out upon the streets hundreds of thousands of workers replaced by machines each year. In steel alone within three years the automatic strip mills will have thrown out more than 80,000 workers, leaving ghost towns and gutted homes in once prosperous cities. I could tell the same story in the coal industry, and in the auto industry, in textiles and many others.

Seek Conference

We in labor have cried aloud during the past two years asking that the President of these United States call together in this city a working conference of the nation's leaders in industry, in government, in labor and in agriculture. We have asked them to lay before that committee this problem of unemployment and tell them that they must sit about a table until they can agree upon proposals. We are sincere about this proposal. We believe it is an honest and sensible American way to proceed. Yet we have had no reply.

Let me read you a statement: "We believe that unemployment is a national problem, and that it is an inescapable problem of our government to meet it in a national way . . . where business fails to supply . . . employment, we believe that work at prevailing wages should be provided in cooperation with the state and local governments on useful public projects, to the end that the national wealth may be increased, the skill and energy of the worker may be utilized, his morale maintained, and the unemployed assured the opportunity to earn the necessities of life."

Not Fulfilled

That is taken from the platform of the Democratic Party in 1936. Most of us supported that party, that platform, in 1936. We believe that the party should meet its obligations as set forth in this platform. Yet at no time since 1936 has even this obligation to the unemployed been fulfilled. And right now the provision of work through WPA and PWA for the unemployed is lower than at any time since 1936 and it is going down.

A recent poll in a national magazine of some repute indicated that the American people wanted money first spent for work to end poverty and unemployment. That is a common plank upon which we as American citizens can join.

I know the problems of the men and women who work for a living, and I know only too vividly how great is the terror that lies in their hearts when they think of the day when they are old and can no longer work for their bread.

But as yet the best that unemployed old people can hope for is an average of $10 to $15 a month for single people, and $15 to $20 a month for married couples at the age of 65. What a pittance! It cannot be dignified with the name of old age security. The CIO calls upon the government to set up at least a minimum system of old age security to pay $60 a month to all over 60 years of age and $90 for each married couple.

Program for Youth

In the same way we speak for a real program to give jobs and education to young people. Out of the 12 million unemployed more than five million must be young people between 16 and 25 years of age, most of whom have never had the chance to lay their hand to work in industry.

It is on the basis of such principles that we of labor call upon other groups of American citizens interested in the common welfare to join in demanding that the political leaders of the nation stand by and deliver or give way to those who can.

It is not sinful to ask for security. Those who cry aloud that security is an unworthy aim have never known insecurity.

Invitation to Join

No group in the population feels more heavily the burden of unemployment and insecurity than the Negro citizens. Among the unemployed and among the low income families the proportion of Negroes is far greater than that of any other group. The denials of civil liberties lie with heavy discrimination upon Negroes. Only when these economic and political evils are wiped out will the Negro people be free of them.

In this same hall in February, I extended an invitation to the American Youth Congress and the millions of young people affiliated with it to make common cause with Labor's Non-Partisan League for the promotion of a just and sensible program for public welfare. To the National Negro Congress and to your affiliates I would extend that same invitation to affiliate with or to reach a working agreement with Labor's Non-Partisan League that our common purposes may better be attained.

CIO Polled 10,000 Votes At Con-Edison

New York, Apr. 27.—Casting of nearly 10,000 votes for the CIO in the Labor Board election at Consolidated Edison Co., big New York utility firm, was hailed today by Director Harold J. Straub of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee as "the beginning of a fight, rather than the loss of an election."

In the election for production workers, the UWOC polled 6,188 votes, some 3,700 less than the independent union. In the election of clerical and other white collar workers, the CIO received 3,541 votes, with the independent union getting 2,700-vote majority.

Results of the election, held on April 4-5, were delayed by a recheck of the voting lists following strong CIO complaints about the handling of the election by Mrs. Elinore Herrick, CIO regional director.

Straub said he was gratified by the fact that "nearly 10,000 men and women have voted for the CIO in the face of Consolidated Edison's aggressive support of its company union.

"When 10,000 employes show their desire for honest unionism in an election whose machinery was controlled by the company, labor has reason to be encouraged."

MineMustPost Bond for Pay

Washington, April 27—Strengthening of National Labor Relations Board enforcement procedure against corporate flouters of the Wagner Act was seen here in action taken recently by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the sixth circuit.

The case involved the Good Coal Co. of Harlan County, which in 1937, fired more than 130 of its workers due, according to an NLRB decision, to their union membership.

Attempting to appeal the board order, which called for payment of some $150,000 back wages, the company was forced by the court to post bonds for the amount in question. Board attorneys, in demanding the bond be posted, charged mine executives are moving equipment and squandering the company assets.

Issue New Pamphlet: 'CIO & Negro Worker'

Washington, Apr. 27—Full rights for all members and absolute lack of discrimination and exclusion against workers on grounds of race or colar are one basic reason for the success of the CIO, the "CIO and the Negro Worker," newest CIO publication, declares.

The leaflet, in eight pages, starts with the first objective as stated in the CIO constitution, to organize "regardless of race, creed, color or nationality," and shows how the failure of AFL craft unions to organize industrial workers can be traced to their almost universal policy of excluding Negro workers as well as to their policy of splitting them into small, ineffective crafts.

"The CIO and the Negro Worker," should be ordered from the Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington, D. C. Quantity prices on application.

Labor and the Law:

Supreme Court Outlaws Anti-Picket Ordinances

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

The Supreme Court of the United States has upheld the right to peaceful picketing as an exercise of fundamental civil liberties protected by the Constitution and laws of the United States. As a result the host of state and local laws prohibiting picketing are now illegal.

This decision of the Court was handed down in two cases, one involving a statute from the State of Alabama, and the other an ordinance from Shasta County in California. Both laws prohibited peaceful picketing, both were declared invalid, and the convictions of workers in the State courts reversed.

BASIS FOR DECISION

The Supreme Court placed its decision upon the broad ground that the right of workers to organize is just as important as the right of the employer to conduct his business, that the exercise by workers of civil liberties is indispensable to our democratic institutions, and that the publicizing of the facts of a labor dispute in a peaceful way is an exercise of these fundamental civil liberties. The Court said:

"It is recognized now that satisfactory hours and wages and working conditions in industry, and a bargaining position which makes these possible, have an importance which is not less than the interests of those in the business or industry directly concerned."

* * * *

"Free discussion concerning the conditions in industry and the causes of labor disputes appear to us indispensable to the effective and intelligent use of the processes of popular government to shape the destiny of modern industrial society."

* * * *

"Publicizing the facts of a labor dispute in a peaceful way through appropriate means, whether by pamphlet, by word of mouth or by banner, must now be regarded as within that liberty of communication which is secured to every person by the Fourteenth Amendment against abridgment by a state."

LABOR'S LONG STRUGGLE

This decision represents the culmination of the long struggle on the part of organized labor to win recognition of its fundamental rights. Its full significance can only be realized if we check into the other recent decisions of the Supreme Court protecting the rights of workers. Within the last two years, the court has protected the distribution of union literature and the holding of union meetings and street parades. It has enjoined local officials from making unlawful arrests and raids. It has prohibited local officials from running union organizers out of town and from committing other acts of violence and intimidation against unions, their officers and their members.

The CIO has been at the forefront of this defense of civil liberties. The first decision protecting workers' civil liberties came in the now famous case of the CIO vs. Mayor Hague. One of the picketing cases was a test case brought by the CIO.

On the basis of these decisions labor can now move to the vigorous enforcement of its constitutional rights. Under the Federal civil rights statutes, workers have legal remedies both by injunction actions and damage suits in the Federal courts against and deprivation of their civil rights committed by public officials. The Federal civil statutes passed in the 1870s were designed expressly to give the people a way to enforce rights which were protected by the Fourteenth Amendment to the constitution and the laws of the United States.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTION

The decision also gives strong support for the demand on the part of the CIO that the Department of Justice bring criminal prosecutions against such lawless officials. In order to make the benefits of these decisions available to workers everywhere the CIO has issued a pamphlet entitled "Your Civil Liberties and How to Protect Them."

The decision of the Supreme Court in the picketing cases and the recent civil liberties cases establish a charter of civil liberties for modern times. In so doing these civil liberties decisions affirm the basic wisdom of the National Labor Relations Act, because this Act is in essence only an application of fundamental civil liberties to the right of workers to collective bargaining and to freedom in choosing their representatives against interference by employers. The fundamental right to freedom of association is just as important as any other civil liberty.

It has taken a long time for labor to win the National Labor Relations Act and these decisions in the Supreme Court and even with this victory in the Supreme Court the struggle is by no means over. On the contrary, we can only make the judicial decisions real and meaningful by using them not only in the regular way, to get protection in specific cases, but as a foundation for building a powerful movement supported by progressive and liberal people everywhere in defense of our democratic institutions and civil liberties.

Southern Liberals Flay Poll Tax, Amendments To Cripple Wagner Act

By CARL G. THOMPSON, JR.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Apr. 27.—The Southern Conference for Human Welfare took firm stands this week against "crippling amendments" to the Wagner Act, supported extension of wages and hours, and urged the President to solve the vital problem" of unemployment.

Concluding its three-day session, the Conference re-elected as chairman, Dr. Frank P. Graham, president, University of North Carolina, and elected William Mitch, president, District 20 United Mine Workers, Birmingham, as vice-chairman, and R. R. Lawrence, Southeastern director, Textile Workers Union, as a member of the executive committee.

MISS LEWIS SPEAKS

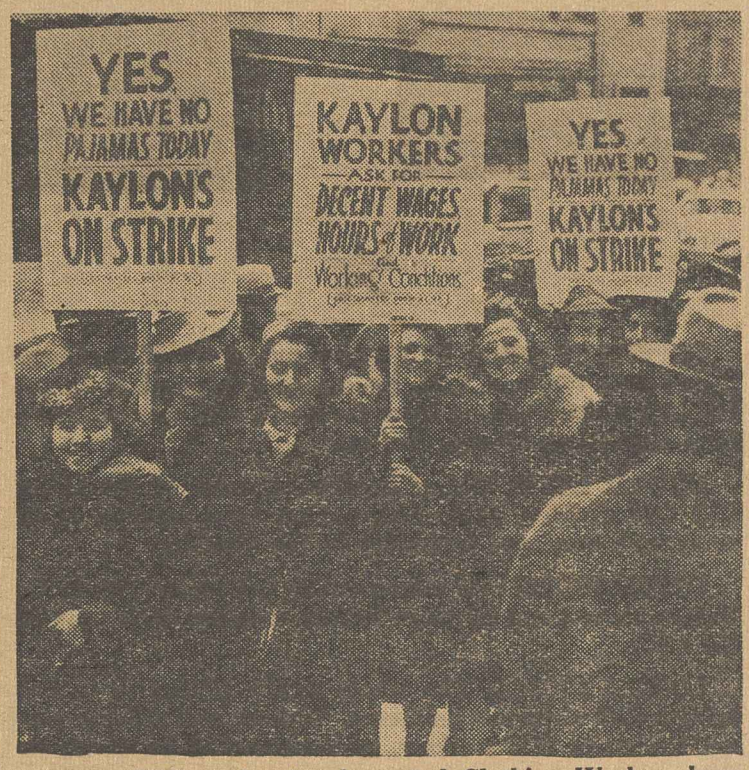
Among the many speakers who addressed the Conference on problems of the South were Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Mr. Mitch, Miss Kathryn Lewis, administrative assistant, CIO, Mayor Maury Maverick of San Antonio, Texas; Barry Bingham, publisher, and Mark Etheridge, general manager, Louisville Courier-Journal; Harry Koger, president, District 8, UCAPAWA, Longview, Texas; H. E. McConnell, of Greenville, S. C., president, Woodside Local, TWUA.

Dr. Will W. Alexander, administrator, Farm Security Administration, of Atlanta and Washington, was awarded the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Award for service to the South at the concluding session of the Conference. Dr. Graham made the presentation.

Resolutions prepared by a committee headed by Mr. Mitch were read to the Conference by Alton Lawrence of Spartansburg, S. C., Southern representative of Labor's Non-Partisan League, and Bernard Borah, Southern Representative, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, was chairman of the nominating committee, whose report was read by Miss Lucy Randolph Mason, public relations director for the CIO in the South.

CONDEMN POLL TAX

The Conference voted to "continue its battle against the poll tax, "this undemocratic restriction on the franchise of a free people," and instructed the Civil Rights Committee to continue its campaign.



Calling attention to unemployment as one of the nation's and the South's major issues, the Conference urged the President to call a conference on this problem and protested the discharge of WPA workers, while endorsing a deficiency appropriation.

RESOLUTIONS

Other labor resolutions urged increase in appropriations for administration of the Wages and Hours law and extension of the coverage and protection of the Act; condemned the use of Sehrman Anti-Trust laws against organized labor; opposed any "crippling amendments whatever" to the NLRA, mentioning particularly the Smith Committee proposals and the Norton compromise amendments; and resolved to "spread the use of union-made products."

The Conference also: condemned aggression by all "fascist, nazi, communist and imperialist powers"; urged heavy tax on war profiteering, expressed the Conference's intention of organizing opinion in the South "to stay out of war"; urged more labor participation in political activities.

Picket for Pact

MEMBERS of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers keep up their picket lines at the Kaylon pajama plant in Baltimore after they went out on strike for a union contract and better wages.

Goobers Stay Union

Suffolk, Va., Apr. 27—The Planters Nut & Chocolate Company, largest peanut concern in the world, this week signed a new contract with Local 232, United Cannery, Agricultural Packing & Allied Workers, CIO. The agreement, third signed by the company since collective bargaining relations were established with the CIO union in 1937, covers about 1,000 employes, 650 colored and 350 white.

Pay increases of ten and eleven per cent for about ninety per cent of the employes in the plant is the highlight of the new contract. Remaining employes will receive increases averaging five per cent. The increases will add around $50,000 to the pay envelopes, according to estimates of the union and the company.

The wage raises are hailed by the union as "an unprecedented economic concession for this area of Jim Crow Southland, where plantation relationships still dominate, and which held sway as a "dime-an-hour" belt until the advent of the federal Wage-Hour law.

Picket Office Of Struck Company

New York, Apr. 27—Showrooms of Kaylon Inc., pajama manufacturers, whose workers are on strike at two of the company's plants in Baltimore, were picketed here by 300 young members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO.

Carrying placards charging the firm with sweatshop conditions and with violating the Wage-Hour act, the picketers marched in front of the firm's showrooms at 180 Madison Ave.

Union officials declared that Kaylon Inc. operated at a competitive advantage over other pajama firms by paying in many cases forty per cent less wages than union firms for similar operations. Charges of violation of the Wage-Hour act and of doctoring its records to conceal the evasion, have been filed by the ACW.

Launch Drive

Akron, O., Apr. 27—Members of the Goodyear local of the United Rubber Workers laid plans today for a renewed drive to gain 100 per cent organization and a contract from the last big anti-union holdout in the rubber industry.

The local heard Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, urge the campaign in conjunction with the URW national office and the CIO.

Charter New CIO Barbers' Locals

New York, Apr. 27—Co-operation from CIO local groups is helping organization of locals affiliated with the National Organizing Committee, Barbers and Beauty Culturists of America, committee leaders said today.

Help from Aliquippa Lodge 1211 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee was instrumental in building a local in the Pennsylvania town. Similar aid is paving the way for locals in Cleveland, Lorain, Barberton and Akron, Ohio.

ON WEST COAST

In San Francisco, directors of the committee said, Harry Bridges, CIO regional director, said efforts are being made to swing a number of barbers and beauty culturists' locals into the CIO.

Plans for organization in southern New Jersey have also been worked out by Victor Osuchowski, district representative of the South. Jersey Industrial Union Council in conference with John Tartamella, general director of the NOCBBCA.

Reports from this section are optimistic and have encouraged Tartamella to intensify activities in Camden, N. J., and Philadelphia.

FORD: Labor Board Official Attacks Anti-Labor Policies at Dallas in Blistering Report

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 27.—The Ford Motor Co.'s labor policy enforced by "black-jacks, loaded hose, cat-o'-nine tails made of rubber stripping and electric light wire"—today was under scathing attack from a National Labor Relations Board trial examiner.

Robert Denham, who presided at hearings this spring in Dallas, Tex., reported to members of the NLRB that he knew of no case in Labor Board history "in which an employer has deliberately planned and carried into execution a program of brutal beatings, whippings, and other manifestations of physical vio- by the un-contradicted wholly credible evidence."

The report urged the Board to force Ford to end discrimination against union members, rehire two employes at the Dallas plant, and individually notify its several thousand employes throughout the country that it will no longer discourage workers from joining a union.

PLANNED AT TOP

That these attacks were no accident, but the work of a special squad appointed to do the dirty work, was clearly shown in the report.

Similarly, "it is uncontroverted that senior officials of the Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn (Mich.) knew of, helped him plan and subsequently approved the program of terrorism that was carried out in Dallas." Further on the report charged that "there was no limit of brutality to which this squad and those who were directing it were unwilling to go if necessary; for at one state, even murder was planned."

Through the 88 pages of the report ran a story—uncontested by the company—of the wild rampages of the Dallas Ford management's strong arm squad: beatings of union organizers and members, of liberal professional people in the community and of CIO members visiting the city on pleasure trips.

Close to 20 sluggings and whippings are listed during the second half of 1937 when the goon squad's activities reached its height.

Here, in sample form, is a brief section of the violence during 1937:

June 23—Baron De Lous and Leonard, Gumpelein, United Automobile Workers organizers, attacked and beaten in drug store near Ford plant.

July 5—De Louis and George W. Chandler, the latter a Ford employe in Dallas, trapped and beaten by the "squad"; De Louis knocked unconscious.

trapped at home of Fowler, a

Mid-July—Two men charged with making "pro-union remarks" during a July 4 fishing expedition, beaten by "inside squad" of strong arm men.

Mid-July—The Fowler House attack: two union "suspects" Ford employe, and beaten.

ATTORNEY BEATEN

July 10—The Houston attack: W. J. Houston, attorney for the UAW representatives, slugged on a down-town street; required hospital treatment for injuries.

August 2—The L. E. Shepard incident: Shepard, an assistant foreman at the Ford Kansas City plant, visited Dallas, was taken for ride as a "union suspect," averted beating only by convincing squad of his hostility to union.

August 4—The Lewis slugging: A. B. Lewis, twin brother of a liberal local attorney who had no connection with the Ford union, attacked and badly injured. Case labeled one of mistaken identity.

August 14—The Phillips incident: Phillips, a CIO member in California, was visiting the Dallas Exposition. Goon squad, informed of a "Join the CIO" sticker on his car, sent to wait for Phillips return from the Exposition. Phillips managed to fight off the thugs. Not content with eliminating suspected members of the auto union. Ford's goon squad attempted to "mop up" organizers of unions in other industries. Thus, an organizer for the United Hat, Cap & Millinery Workers, an AFL affiliate, was whipped so badly he lost the sight of one eye.

"An effort has been made," Denham's report to the Labor Board pointed out, "to give the appearance that the vicious and brutal attacks of the strong arm squad were no more than spontaneous reactions of its employes arising from outraged indignation against the CIO." But, in the face of the attacks on the hat workers' organizer and on two representatives of the textile workers union, "such a position becomes absurd," the NLRB official said.

To Celebrate GM Victory

Southgate, Calif., Apr. 27—To celebrate the overwhelming victory of the CIO United Automobile Workers in the recent General Motors election, the Ladies Auxiliary of Local 216 here is planning a dance on May 3.

Profits from the dance will be used to aid the auxiliary and to help fellow unionists, Mrs. C. H. Ford, head of the auxiliary said.

Die Casters To Convene In Capital

Washington, Apr. 27—Officers, committee members and delegates representing a membership which has doubled in the last year, are arriving here in the nation's capital for the seventh annual convention of the National Association of Die Casting Workers. The convention opens Monday at the Raleigh hotel.

In a 60-page printed report, President George C. Peacock and Secretary-Treasurer E. T. Cheyfitz, list the achievements and growth of the CIO die casters and outline the perspective for the coming year.

CIO speakers who will address the convention include CIO Secretary James B. Carey, who is also president of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Allan Haywood, CIO director of organization; Ralph Hetzel, unemployment director; Len DeCaux, publicity director and editor of the CIO NEWS; Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers and Edward Lamb, NADCW attorney and candidate for attorney general in Ohio.

Negro Congress Accepts Lewis' Invitation

Going Up!

LIVING COSTS GO UP: Plight of Canadian workers was demonstrated by pickets from the Steel Workers Organizing Committee when they struck at the Ontario Malleable Co., Oshawa, Ontario, for wage increases. After three weeks of strike the men won a 7½c hourly wage boost and promises of further increases on Dec. 1 to cover any rise in food prices.

Group OKs Labor Bid

WASHINGTON, May 4. — By an overwhelming vote, the National Negro Congress voted to achieve a working agreement with Labor's Non-Partisan League in accordance with the invitation voiced by CIO President John L. Lewis in his speech to the Negro convention on April 26.

The Congress, to which are affiliated hundreds of organizations, clubs and unions, cheered Lewis enthusiastically when he recalled the CIO's opposition to racial discrimination and warned that all workers, regardless of race or color, must cooperate to fight restrictions on their liberties.

Predict Pay Increases

WASHINGTON, May 4. — Chairman Philip Murray of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee predicted today that some 200,000 employes of the Bethlehem and Republic Steel companies would benefit by the U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Walsh-Healey law case.

An 8-1 decision read by Justice Hugo Black sharply condemned the lower courts for attempting to tie U. S. administrative agencies in red tape, and proclaimed the right of the federal government to set up wage and hour standards for contractors attempting to sell products to the government.

The Dept. of Labor, acting on an SWOC petition, decided more than a year ago that the prevailing minimum wage in the steel industry is 62½c an hour. Under the Walsh-Healey law, the government may now ban bids from steel firms whose basic wage is less than that figure in the east, or less than 45c an hour in the South — where Republic has been paying as little as 30c.

Lee Pressman, CIO and SWOC general counsel, said the court's decision "vindicated" the union's position.

Give 18-Month Term To Klan Flogger Of CIO Organizer

ATLANTA, Ga., May 4.—Henry Cawthon, Ku Klux Klan member, today had received a heavy sentence for his part in the flogging of Pierce S. Toney, local organizer for the CIO Textile Workers Union.

Cawthon was sentenced to a year in the workhouse and six months in jail, and fined $1,000 for attacking Toney. The CIO official was taken from his home by a hooded gang, led to a secluded spot near the city and beaten almost to the point of unconsciousness.

Meanwhile a series of articles written for the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain by Thomas L. Stokes indicated that the Klan is playing along with southern anti-labor or manufacturers, who hope to use it as a means of protection for their open shop, low-wage policies.

Using Communism as an excuse, James A. Colescott, head of the Klan, has instructed its members to join CIO and AFL unions, as well as the Workers Aliance, in order to wrest control away from the workers' chosen leaders.

In a recent issue of the Fiery Cross, official Klan magazine. Colescott called for the elimination of "every Communistic leader, lieutenant, organizer and officer therein," adding that "there is a job to be done. The Klan is the organization that will do it. The job will be done."

From other writings in the official magazine, it was clear that the Klan's definition of "communistic" will be applied to any progressive spokesman of the workers who fights wage cuts and the speedup."

SEEK REPEAL

San Francisco—Following a U. S. Supreme Court decision holding California and Alabama anti-picketing ordinances illegal, CIO officials here announced a drive for repeal of 31 such laws in counties throughout the state.

For 'Employment Week':

Stop WPA Cuts, CIO Leader Urges

WASHINGTON, May 4.—An end to WPA cuts and attacks on the Wage-Hour and Wagner Acts was suggested by the CIO today as the ideal way for government and business to commemorate National Employment Week.

Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, declared:

"The CIO wholeheartedly endorses the high principles of National Employment Week—to return workers to private industry. It is ironic, however, that the National Employment Week should be celebrated by the firing of 200,000 workers from WPA rolls in May. National Employment Week might with better grace be signalized by an end of WPA cuts and by stopping the emasculation of the National Labor Relations and Wage-Hour Acts.

"Under present domestic policy there is no sign on the business horizon that industry can be expected to hire additional workers. There were in March 11,577,000 unemployed, according to CIO estimates. Employment in private industry is increasing less than usual at this season.

"The most practical kind of observance which could be made of National Employment Week would be the calling of a national conference of labor, industry, farmers and the government to determine upon a sound policy to put the unemployed back to work."

Gravy for Big Business

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Memo to those chronic objectors who complain that workers' wages are too high:

Profits of 250 corporations during the first quarter of 1940 were 50% greater than in the same three months of 1939.

Excluding the earnings of American Telephone and Telegraph, the increase was 60%.

Eight steel companies reporting, according to the Associated Press survey, showed quadrupled profits, while 26 steel firms had increased their profits by nearly 400%.

Railroad equipment earnings were up 124%, electrical equipment and auto accessories profits each increased 67%, chemical products up 45%.

Employer Raps Changes In Wage Law

Washington, May 4 — A prominent New Jersey manufacturer today fully endorsed the CIO stand in opposition to Wage-Hour Act amendments.

In a wire to Pres. John L. Lewis, Robert W. Johnson of New Brunswick, N. J., head of the Johnson & Johnson textile products company, declared:

"Wage hour amendments aimed toward weakening the law should be defeated. We should now strengthen the wage-hour law. The time has arrived to consider the six-hour day, the 30-hour week with a minimum wage of 55c.

"There are millions of unemployed in America and more millions who are underpaid. It is only through federal and state wage and hour laws that we will solve this problem. One or two competitors in any given industry can lower the wage level for the entire industry."

CIO Die Casters Double Membership, Push Drive At Industry's 'Big Four'

WASHINGTON, May 4.—With a membership doubled during the past year, delegates representing almost every die casting plant in the country from the largest one in the world to small shops employing only a few men are attending the seventh annual convention of the National Association of Die Casting Workers, now in session here.

Outstanding in the business being conducted by the convention is the formulation of an organizing drive which will focus on the four big die casting plants not yet unionized. These are the Precision Die Casting Co., with plants in Cleveland, Ohio, Syracuse and Fayetteville, New York; the Stewardt and the Paragon die casting companies of Chicago, and the Alemite, in Woodstock, Ill.

Amendments to the national constitution to enable the CIO die casters' union to carry on its increased activity more efficiently are also being considered.

REPORT GAINS

In a 60-page report presented by President George Peacock, and Secretary-Treasurer E. T. Cheyfitz, the union's achievements since the last convention are listed. The officers reported doubling of the membership since the last convention; called for the establishment of a research department; and noted adoption of a uniform system of bookkeeping and increases in every contract negotiated.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO national director of organization and Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers, are scheduled to address the delegates.

John Brophy, national director of local industrial unions, also attended the convention and conferred with the delegates on various problems.

Lee Pressman, CIO legal counsel and Eli Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, spoke at the convention banquet.

CIO OFFICIALS SPEAK

Earlier in the week, delegates heard talks given by James Carey, CIO national secretary; Len DeCaux, CIO publicity director and editor of The CIO NEWS; Ralph Hetzel, director of unemployment, and Cecil Owen, president of the Washington District Industrial Union Council.

Two government officials also addressed the delegates—Michael Riley, legal division of the Department of Labor, and Morris Robbins of the Social Security Board.

Election of national officers will be held at a closing session of the convention. Both President Peacock and Secretary - Treasurer Cheyfitz have been nominated for re-election.

Pennsylvania CIO Reviews Big Gains

READING, Pa., May 4.—Pride in the great gains won by the CIO in the few years of its existence and confidence of continued growth and greater achievements in the future were expressed by the CIO leaders who addressed the third annual convention of the Pennsylvania CIO Industrial Union Council which met here this week.

The Keystone State Council is one of the largest of the 30 state groups now affiliated with the CIO, representing a total membership of more than half a million CIO unionists in the coal, steel, aluminum, textile, clothing and other industries.

KEYNOTE SPEECH

Allan S. Haywood, director of organization, who was introduced to the delegates by Council President John A. Phillips, gave the keynote speech, extending the greetings of CIO President John L. Lewis and the CIO to the state convention.

Paying tribute to the workers of Pennsylvania for having given to the labor movement such leaders as John Siney, Philip Murray, Thomas Kennedy and others, Haywood pointed out that the state had long been the seat of entrenched corporate control through the grip of the coal and steel barons.

"Not until the CIO was created and shook off the buggy age craft unionism defeating the policies of the AFL and set forth to organize workers under an industrial form of organization", Haywood declared, "was there any hope of overcoming this stronghold of reaction and special privilege."

John Brophy, director of local industrial unions who spoke on Wednesday, told the delegates that sentiment and action was growing throughout the country in support of the social gains made in recent years.

"Our CIO Councils and various other CIO units in recent weeks have contributed much to the return of progressive sentiment in the country," he declared.

Earlier, Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union, gave a slap to the state's tory Governor James and his aspirations for presidential nomination on the Republican ticket, and praised the gains won by labor under the New Deal.

RE-ELECT OFFICIALS

President Phillips and Secretary-Treasurer Lester Thomas of Wilkes-Barre, were unanimously re-elected by the delegates and a number of vice-presidents were chosen for the various industries. They were:

Kansas CIO Forms Council

TOPEKA, Kan., May 4.—Representing a membership of some 35,000 CIO workers throughout the state, delegates from 118 locals attended the first constitutional convention of the Kansas Industrial Union Council held here last week.

A constitution for the new Council was adopted unanimously by the delegates. The convention was marked by the harmonious atmosphere which prevailed at all the sessions.

ELECT OFFICERS

Officers elected to head the Kansas Council were: Henry Allai, United Mine Workers, Pittsburg, Kans., president; Steve Hanes, International Oil Workers, Coffeyville, vice president; and C. N. Stover, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Kansas City, secretary-treasurer.

Kansas Governor Payne H. Ratner was one of the main speakes. Others who addressed the convention were:

Jeff Robertson, state labor commissioner; Chester Newell, director of unemployment compensation; John Morrison, member of the Labor Advisory Commission; Charles D. Garrison of the Social Security Board and Erskine Wyman, Commissioner of Workmen's Compensation.

The convention pledges support to President John L. Lewis and the CIO on the principles and policies on labor and political questions and to Labor's Non-Partisan League, and instructed the Council's officers to get in touch with the League to outline the policy to be followed by the Kansas Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Other important resolutions were passed opposing amendments to the National Labor Relations and the Wage-Hour laws; urging Pres. Roosevelt to call a conference of labor, industry and agriculture to discuss unemployment; Denouncing the Smith Committee investigating the NLRB; calling upon Congress to appropriate funds for 3,000,000 WPA jobs; demanding an expansion of the U. S. housing program and urging an increase in the minimum standards under the Wage-Hour law.

Zonarich Re-Elected By Aluminum Union

MARYVILLE, Tenn., May 4. — President N. A. Zonarich and Secretary-Treasurer G. E. Hobaugh of the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO, were assured of re-election when they were nominated as unopposed candidates at the last session of the third national AWA convention, which closed here last week.

W. B. Gravatt of Local 2, incumbent, and Harry D. Williams, Detroit Local 11, were nominated as candidates for Vice-President. Three general auditors and members of the executive Board from the various districts will also be elected by referendum from candidates nominated at the convention.

Delegates voted in favor of deferring any endorsement for U. S. president, in line with the recommendation made by CIO President John L. Lewis, and backed the work of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

RESOLUTIONS

Resolutions were also passed at the convention endorsing expansion of a low rent housing program; a national conference on unemployment; extension of wage-hour law; and discontinuance of the poll tax.

A program for a renewed drive to organize the unorganized workers in the aluminum industry, drawn up at earlier sessions, was one of the main points on the agenda.

Eau Claire, Wisconsin, was chosen as the place for the next convention, which will be held in 1942.

To Organize Tennessee Council

Knoxville, Tenn., — May 4—A state convention to set up a Tennessee CIO Industrial Union Council will be held here at the Farragut hotel, Saturday, May 25, William Turnblazer, CIO regional director, announced this week.

The Tennessee League for Progressive Democracy is being asked to meet in Knoxville the day before the convening of the CIO state convention, Turnblazer said, for the purpose of working up a report on political action to be presented to the convention.

All local organizations in sympathy with the CIO program as well as those already affiliated with the CIO, are being invited to send delegates to the state con-

Tories Assail Pay Law

Washington, May 3 — Congressional tories, aiming at destruction of the wage hour law, spent the legislative week here in parliamentary maneuvering designed to weaken the act, in a determined effort to deprive millions of American workers of the protection of the law.

By Thursday night the Tories, their Barden bill defeated, had added so many destructive amendments to Rep. Norton's so-called moderate bill that she was forced to call for its defeat.

Out of the welter of amendments and counter amendments offered in Congress one fact emerged as stated in the CIO Legislative Program — the fact that all attempts to amend the wage hour law in this session of Congress are a mask for attempts to destroy it.

Other bills to amend the act were offered during the week in Congress, all of which met with concerted labor resistance. The Barden bill,—designed to cut off close to 3,000,000 workers from the protection of the act, drew the most fire from labor and professive circles.

While Congressional tories centered their fire on the wage hour law, CIO and progressive forces continued their campaign to defend the Wagner Labor Relations Act from crippling amendments. CIO delegations from unions all over the country continued to visit Congressmen to tell them how the voters back home feel about proposed amendments. Letters, wires, and resolutions poured in from CIO affiliates urging that the Wagner Act be left untouched at this session.

Insurance Agents Win Election

New York, May 4.—Turning out to vote nearly 100 per cent, more than 1,000 agents of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. cast their ballots in a Labor Board election won this week by Local 30, Industrial Insurance Agents. The Union is affiliated with the CIO United Office and Professional Workers.

Out of a total of 1,025 agents eligible to vote, 1,005 went to the pols. The final vote was 505 for the CIO local and 479 against. This is the second Labor Board election for employes of a major New York insurance company won by Local 30. In a 1938 poll, some 2,600 agents of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. selected the CIO union. Previously the union had won a poll at the John Hancock office in Boston.

Murray Hails Supreme Court Ruling in Steel Pay Case

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, May 4. — Leaders of the CIO today hailed the U. S. Supreme Court's 8-1 decision upholding the federal government's right to set minimum wage standards for corporations bidding on federal work—a decision which spells wage increases for an estimated 200,000 employes of Little Steel.

The court's strongly-worded ruling, Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee declared, "eliminates the unfair competitive advantage which such companies as Bethlehem and Republic Steel, both non-union mills, held over union mills paying higher wages.

"As a practical result of the decision raising the base labor rate, semi-skilled and skilled workers will be able to get increases on a proportionate basis—again up to the rate paid in union mills."

Bethlehem Steel, largest vendor of steel products to Uncle Sam, is located principally in the industry's northeastern region, and henceforth will have to pay the 62½ cents hourly minimum in order to be eligible for government purchases. Republic Steel, whose southern mills pay as little as 30 and 35 cents an hour, will be forced to lift that amount to 45 cents to qualify.

"VINDICATION"

Lee Pressman, general counsel for the CIO and the SWOC, described the court's action as a "clear-cut vindication of the union's long struggle to make Little Steel conform to the laws of the United States.

"We set out to put Bethlehem Steel in the East and Republic Steel in the South on an equal basis with the majority of large and small steel corporations with which we have union contracts. The Supreme Court now backs up our view and clearly shows the justice of our campaign."

At hearings before the Labor Dept.'s Public Contracts Division nearly two years ago SWOC spokesmen argued that under the influence of union contracts, 62½ cents had become the prevailing minimum wage in the eastern steel area, and urged that all companies seeking government orders should be forced, under the Walsh-Healey Act, to pay that minimum.

The CIO argument was upheld by the Department, only to be contested in the courts by seven independent companies obviously acting as a front for Bethlehem Steel. It was on their case that the high tribunal ruled this week, and the decision read by Justice Hugo Black was a scathing criticism of judicial interference in the work of government administrative agencies.

LANGUAGE SHARP

As such, it was a tip-off on the high court's reaction to the CIO-opposed Walter-Logan bill, through which reactionaries would tie the administrative agencies with even more red tape than they are now bound.

"Like private individuals and businesses," he continued, "the govenment enjoys the unrestricted power to produce its own supplies to determine those with whom it will deal and to fix the terms and conditions upon which it will make needed purchases."

The Walsh-Healey Law, Justice Black pointed out, was intended to impose obligations on those firms receiving government business and to eliminate "the possibility that any part of our tremendous national expenditures would go to forces tending to depress wages and purchasing power and offending fair social standards of employment."

Justice McReynolds, as is customary, dissented.

Even 'Pinks' Benefit

WASHINGTON, May 4—(FP)—Employes of Pinkerton's National Detective Agency, the nation's most hated labor spy and strikebreaking outfit, learned first hand what union labor fought for as the U. S. Wage-Hour Division forced the firm to pay $8,000 in back wages due 1,000 guards and watchmen under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Guards and watchmen employed in Chicago worked as long as 84 hours a week for as little as 20 cents an hour, the division found. The company, after paying the back pay, agreed to pay 30 cents an hour

Negro Group Accepts Bid, Joins League

WASHINGTON, May 4. — Unanimous acceptance of John L. Lewis' invitation to join with Labor's Non-Partisan League to make "common cause for the promotion of a just and sensible program for the public welfare" marked the closing session of the National Negro Congress here. The opening session was addressed by Pres. Lewis in a broadcast speech in which he made the invitation and pledged the aid of organized labor in working out the problems of the Negro people.

"Whereas, long has the Negro worker awaited the extended hand of organized labor," the resolution said. "And whereas, the Negro people should be happy to accept the invitation of John L. Lewis to come to a working agreement with the mighty forces of labor and to go forward to victory, therefore;

"Be it resolved that the delegates to this conference unanimously and enthusiastically accept the invitation of Mr. Lewis to arrive at a working agreement of the Natl. Negro Congress with the forces of progressive labor."

Earlier, John P. Davis, re-elected secretary of the Congress, declared in urging acceptance of Lewis' invitation; "The possibility is before us to march forward to the accomplishment of those objectives which will advance the cause of our people. We have before us the extended hand of organized labor, the millions of organized youth, the organizations and forces of millions of Americans, willing to march side by side with us."

Negroes Honor Lewis For Service

Washington, May 4—"I am one American who believes in equality of opportunity for the Negro people," John L. Lewis told the Natl. Negro Congress session here in accepting a plaque presented in tribute to his "distinguished services" to Negroes.

"I do not try to conceal the fact," Lewis said. "I am rather anxious that a great many people find out out about our views in this country, and I am doing what I can to educate them on that particular point.

"I want the help of the Negroes of this country," he continued. "I want their help and their cooperation with the labor movement that stands for the principle of protection and security that affects every American."

Enforcing The Law

Citizens' associations interested in law-enforcement ought to present some kind of a first prize to the CIO.

While ambitious district attorneys and inflated federal flat-feet have been headline-hunting, with a few sideswipes at criminal small fry, the CIO has been methodically working to bring some of the biggest and wealthiest corporations under the law.

It has notably succeeded in making most of them obey the law relating to collective bargaining—after they had thumbed their noses at Uncle Sam.

Recently it has been three times upheld by the United States Supreme Court—in its efforts to bring to justice two of the biggest "bad men" still playing outlaw, namely, Republic and Bethlehem Steel; and in its appeal against lawless officials who interfere with picketing.

The Court told Republic Steel it had to take its punishment for the lawbreaking of which the CIO had it convicted.

In its latest decision, the Court has brought to a successful conclusion the long fight of the CIO to have Bethlehem Steel and other low-wage companies obey the Walsh-Healey Act.

There is still a lot more law-enforcement to be done on the big-shot corporations. Violators of the Wagner Act have an "in" with the authorities and are still getting government contracts. There are still a few Henry Fords and Tom Girdlers running hog-wild.

But at the present rate of progress, it shouldn't be long now before the CIO succeeds in bringing "law and order" to the remaining bad lands of American industry.

Equal Opportunity

The National Negro Congress enthusiastically accepted the invitation of CIO President John L. Lewis to associate itself with labor and other progressive movements through Labor's Non-Partisan League.

"I am one American who believes in equality of opportunity for the Negro people," Lewis told the delegates. And his words had back of them the record of both the United Mine Workers and the CIO, under his leadership.

Labor and the common people, he added, "ask for no special privileges; they seek merely for an equality in participation and an equality of opportunity under the law and before the flag."

This democratic and truly American aim is what is drawing closer together the organizations of youth and aged, Negro and white, farmers and industrial workers, in a common struggle for their common progressive political purposes.

Guildsmen See It Through

One of the longest and best-fought strikes in recent times has come to an end with the agreement signed between the Chicago Herald-American and the American Newspaper Guild.

The newly-organized newspapermen showed a tenacity, a loyalty and a resourcefulness that won the admiration and sympathy of the whole CIO and the general public.

They buried once and for all the old-fashioned myth that "white-collar" workers are any whit behind their industrial brothers when it comes to union stick-to-itiveness.

Congratulations, Guildsmen, on your settlement!

CIO Backs Bill to Stop WPA Cuts in May, June

Washington, May 4. — Vigorous support of the Pepper resolution (S. J. R. 250) to stop further WPA cuts was called for today by Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director.

The resolution provides that the WPA rolls be kept at the level of April 1, 1940. This would guarantee that 2,120,000 would be employed for the rest of the fiscal year, until June 30, 1940.

If this resolution is passed, Hetzel said, the vicious cuts scheduled for May and June will be stopped. Otherwise, WPA rolls will be slashed to about 1,500,000 by June.

Other Senators who joined with Sen. Pepper in sponsoring the resolution are Hill, Lee, Ellender, Mead, Murray, Guffey, Schwartz, Wagner, Minton, Green and Schwellenbach.

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

U. S. Ambassador to Washington

THERE is an old story about a visiting Englishman who attended a big diplomatic reception in Washington. The ambassadors of nearly every important country were pointed out to him. It was explained how these ambassadors kept our government in touch with the sentiments of their respective countries.

The English visitor listened attentively, and finally blurted out: "But where is the ambassador from the United States?"

If ever a country needed an ambassador in Washington to tell the government and Congress what the people are thinking, it is the United States.

Take the question of war. In Washington the private gossip in official circles is becoming a public scandal.

"Neutrality" is a word that is only uttered with tongue in cheek. "How can we help our side win?" is the prevailing question.

Discussion usually revolves around the question of how soon "measures short of war" will merge into a shortage of peace; and how soon it will be necessary to send the U. S. Navy and air forces to back up present aid to the allies.

After being in Washington, anyone who visits the American people in their native haunts will find himself in a different country.

He will find himself among a people who are as peace-loving as the Washington upper crust are belligerent — a people who want definitely to stay out of the present war—a people who are deeply suspicious of the finaglings of politicians who talk peace but take measures which may involve us in war.

True, there is a Trojan horse in every picture today—to mystify most of the public, who want to know what kind of a nag that is anyhow.

The original Trojan horse was a big affair made of wood and full of Greek soldiers. The dumb-cluck Trojans took it as a gift from the Greeks besieging their city, only to find they had hauled a platoon of invaders into their midst.

Today's Trojan horse is full of fat clubmen, bad-tempered ex-brass hats, Wall Street financiers and a flock of gentry who specialize in clipping coupons and having other people work and fight for them.

Most of the American people wouldn't take this bunch as a gift, from the Greeks or anyone else—regardless of whether they were packed into the rear end of a wooden horse or driven in singly in limousines.

But unfortunately our Trojan horse is purely symbolic and has long been in our midst almost undetected. The enemy it contains own a lot of newspapers as well as a lot of stock in other concerns.

The theme song of this crowd used to be: "Oh, how we hate Roosevelt!" But now they are purring like the fat cats they are, in close unison with every warward noise that comes out of Washington.

It is this type of combination that has produced the defeatist reaction so often heard from the man in the street: "We don't want to go into this war. We know that about 99 per cent of the people are against going in. Yet it looks as if we are going to be dragged in."

One ambassador the American people have in Washington today —a man who in speech after speech expresses their demand that we set our own house in order, find a solution for unemployment and insecurity here, and not go around trying to get into other people's wars.

That ambassador is John L. Lewis, who speaks with all the authority of the four million CIO members who have elected him their spokesman and instructed him to express their opposition to any involvement of the United States in the war.

But he also speaks for many millions more of the plain people of America who find themselves unrepresented or misrepresented by the war-mongers of Washington and Wall Street.

When Lew Lehr described monkeys as the "cwaziest people," he overlooked AFL leaders.

After the General Motors workers had chosen the CIO to represent 129,000 out of 134,000 employes, and the AFL had been generally mopped up and washed out, the AFL news-sheet proudly announced the results as a "stunning defeat" for—(guess who)—the CIO!

Stun us some more, boys! We love it!

Big Bill Hutcheson, than whom no AFL boss is bigger or bossier, went militant on the AFL in a recent radio speech. He publicly attacked big business—no kidding!

With all the fervor of an Emile Zola defying reaction single-handed, Big Bill accused business of—failing to resist high taxes; not fighting New Deal encroachment on the profits of private enterprise; and failing to propagandize the public!

Chairman Hook of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers quailed before the onslaught. "I fully agree with Mr. Hutcheson," he meekly said in a later speech.

Who says "monkeys is ze cwaziest people"?

Newspaper Guild Contract Ends 17-Month Chicago Hearst Strike

Nationwide Support Helps Bring Victory

CHICAGO, May 4.—The 17-month strike against the Chicago Hearst papers has ended in a major victory for the American Newspaper Guild.

The struggle for decent working conditions, which won unprecedented support from every part of the nation, was terminated on April 26 by a contract which called for:

1. Reinstatement of the eight Guild members whose dismissal led to the strike on Dec. 5, 1938.

2. Rehiring of 115 of the 167 active strikers—a high proportion in view of the fact that the Herald-Examiner, Hearst's morning paper, had folded in August, 1939.

3. Payment of $24,000 in severance indemnity to the 52 workers not rehired.

4. Halting by the Hearst management of court attacks on the Guild and the removal of $5,500 fines levied against the union

5. Recognition of the Guild as bargaining agent for its members in the editorial and commercial departments.

6. Exclusive bargaining rights to the winner of an election—to be held not sooner than three months nor later than six months—between the Guild and two AFL unions covering the editorial and commercial departments.

7. Some salary increases, and a reopening, on May 7, of minimum salary rates in the commercial department.

KAUFMAN PLEASED

Milton Kaufman, executive vice-president of the ANG, said the "17-month strike of the Chicago Newspaper Guild will long remain an epic in the history of labor's fight to establish organization. It was a tremendous struggle and one whose significance was widely recognized by our brother unions, as shown by their great support.

"Having won, the Guild hopes there will be industrial peace and that the American Newspaper Guild, a CIO union, will find the place in Chicago it occupies in the major cities of the United States."

APPROVED BY STRIKERS

Terms of the settlement which had been the subject of negotiations for two months, were approved by the strikers at a meeting on the night of April 26: The next day they were given official sanction by the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board, whose decision in the Hearst case two weeks previous had helped speed termination of the nation's longest newspaper strike. To help effect peace at the strike-torn plant, the Guild agreed to drop charges that the AFL Editorial Associates union was company-dominated and asked the NLRB to delete the section of its decision bearing on that subject.

RUNS EIGHT MONTHS

The new Guild contract runs for eight months, and will expire simultaneously with the AFL agreement. By that time, the election will have determined which union shall henceforth be esole bargaining agency.

Settlement of the dispute was reached in the office of Gerald Patterson, NLRB regional director. Assisting in the parleys was Ray Edmundson, district president of the United Mine Workers, who was asked to enter the situation by CIO Pres. Lewis after the negotiations had twice broken down. Also participating were V. A. Olander, head of the Illinois AFL federation and leaders of the Chicago Printing Trades Unions.

HEARST SUFFERED

Numerous violations of an earlier contract with the Guild, plus the firing of many Guild members, led to the strike in 1938. The Hearst management retaliated with a reign of terror directed by goon squads, and by a long-continued flank attack in the courts.

Guild appeals to advertisers resulted in the withdrawal of an admitted four million lines of advertising copy from the morning Herald-Examiner — which went out of business seven months, to the day, before the strike settlement—and two million lines from the evening Herald-American.

In all, the management's stubborn resistance to the strike is estimated to have cost the Hearst organization between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

Guild Wins In California

Los Angeles, May 4.—Smashing a united publishers' attack, the Guild today won its seven-month strike against the bi-weekly Huntington Park Bulletin, gaining all its original demands.

Publisher H. C. Seybold attached his signature to a contract providing for $10 weekly salary increases, the Guild shop, severance pay, the 40-hour week and discharge of strikebreakers.

Victory for the Guild in its fight against the suburban paper was significant because of support given the paper by the California Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Merchants & Manufacturers' Association.

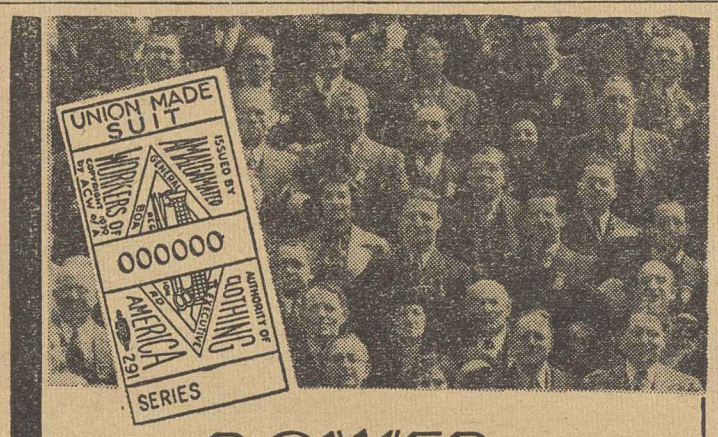
Strike Papers In Louisiana

Monroe, La., May 4.—The second week of the CIO Newspaper Guild's first strike in the deep south found the two affected papers, the Monroe News-Star and the World, suffering circulation losses and an estimated 40 per cent drop in advertising lineage.

Open Parley With GM

Detroit, Mich., May 4 — Demands being made in negotiations with the General Motors Corporation for an agreement covering 140,000 GM employes in 52 plants center around pay increases, improved seniority clauses and establishment of a recognized steward system, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, declared this week.

At a preliminary conference held April 25, Walter P. Reuther of the Union's General Motors department said that the ground was explored on the procedure for negotiating a contract, and also for handling grievances awaiting disposition under the old contract.



UAW NEGOTIATORS

Regular hours for daily conferences were agreed upon for discussions on the contract, which are expected to continue for some time. The union negotiators include Pres. Thomas, Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes, Reuther, and the executive committee of the union's international GM Council — William Stevenson and George Merrelli of Detroit; Arthur Johnstone of Pontiac; Ed Geiger of Flint and John W. Livingston of St. Louis.

Besides negotiations for a satisfactory GM agreement, the UAW faces two other major tasks — organization of the Ford Motor Co., and of the aircraft workers.

Negro Congress to Work with League

which it described as "an imperialist war between equally imperialist rivals and in no sense a war for the protection of the rights of small nations" The Negro people "have everything to lose and nothing to gain by American involvement," the resolution declared, in demanding that the Administration take "no further steps which might involve our country in war."

"We have a war of our own against hunger, against lynching, against peonage, against Jim Crowism, for the right to vote and the right to work," Davis said in his report to the Congress. "The enemy of American democracy is at home. Let us fight that enemy here."

Sharp condemnation of the un-American Dies Committee was voted in a resolution that pointed to Dies' illegal raids on private offices and homes, his refusal to investigate Ku Kluxism and lynching, and to the fact that 96 per cent of his constituents cannot vote because of the poll tax as grounds for demanding the immediate dissolution of the Committee.

DEMAND ANTI-LYNCH ACTION

The Congress demanded immediate action to pass the Federal anti-lynching bill, passage of the Geyer anti-poll tax act, freedom for the remaining Scottsboro boys an end to Ku Klux terror, and similar measures. In addition, the delegates voted unanimously to defend the Wagner Act against all proposed amendments and to uphold the wage and hour law.

Dr. Max Yergan of New York was elected president of the Congress. The retiring president, A. Philip Randolph of the AFL Sleeping Car Porters, did not run for re-election. Henry Johnson, assistant national director of the CIO Packinghouse Workers union, was elected vice-president.

Seamen Accuse Oil Firm Of Frame-up Try

NEW YORK, May 4. — Charges that the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey conspired with the Philadelphia police to frame John Murray, union agent, and railroad him to prison on trumped up charges and false testimony were made last week by the National Maritime Union, CIO.

Joseph Curran, NMU President, accused the police of having persuaded Robert Wade of New Mexico, to confess to an assault on a Standard Oil employe during the 1939 tanker strike and to name Murray as instigator.

GRILLED BY DICKS

Murray was arrested in Philadelphia April 9 and held incommunicado overnight while he was grilled by Labor Squad detectives. An NMU attorney had to get a writ of habeus corpus before he could get in to see Murray.

The case grew out of the beating last May of Joseph Ramsey, a fink-herder employed by Standard Oil during the tanker strike. The police arrested Hubert Maguire who pleaded guilty and was sentenced to six months in jail. Later Maguire was approached by the police, Curran said, and promised quick release from prison if he would implicate the 'higher-ups' in the NMU.

Wade, a 19-year-old youth who has never been a seaman, was arrested in Raton, N. M., in March and brought to Philadelphia, where a "confession" was obtained from him in which he claimed that he went to Curran during the tanker strike asking to join the union and that Curran sent him to Murray in Philadelphia who made him "head of a goon squad."

Both Curran and Murray deny ever having seen Wade.

Dairymen Get Pact

Indianapolis, Ind., May 4—A contract to run continuously with provision for 60-day notice of desire to change or amend has been signed between the City Dairy Co., South Bend, and Local 1039, United Dairy Workers, CIO.

The agreement announced here by CIO Field Representative C. E. Whitman, provides paid vacations, full seniority rights and machinery for settling grievances.

Lorillard Still Unfair

Middletown, Ohio, May 4—Pioneer Tobacco Workers Local Industrial Union 55, embracing employes of the P. Lorillard Co. plant here, wish to remind CIO members throughout the country that the firm is still unfair to labor.

Management of the corporation, which manufactures Old Gold cigarettes, Between the Acts cigars and a number of other tobacco products, has consistently refused to bargain collectively with the union.

Labor and the Law:

High Court Stops Wage Chiseling by Bethlehem

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

On July 5, 1938, acting on behalf of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Chairman Philip Murray requested Secretary of Labor Perkins to determine the prevailing minimum wages for persons employed in the iron and steel industry under the Walsh-Healey Act. The purpose of this proceeding lay in the fact that the Walsh-Healey Act authorizes the Secretary of Labor to fix the prevailing minimum wages in an industry, and after such determination any person or corporation seeking a government contract for the supply of goods or materials must agree to pay such minimum wage fixed for his industry.

It has been notorious in the industry that the Bethlehem Steel Company, whose plants are located primarily in the east, has always and consistently paid a lower wage to its employes than the other major steel producing companies.

By the summer of 1938 the SWOC, through collective bargaining agreements with the major steel producing companies in the country, had stabilized a wage structure for the industry. The Bethlehem Steel Company, however, determined to flout the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act; having refused to negotiate a contract with the SWOC, it continued to pay a lower wage to its employes, thereby threatening the wage scales agreed upon under the contracts which the SWOC enjoyed elsewhere in the industry. Furthermore, as a result of such disparity in wages the Bethlehem Steel Company was in a position to underbid its competitors for government contracts. An unfair percentage of government contracts was thereby going to the Bethlehem Steel Company solely as a result of its depressive wage policy.

Following the request of the SWOC, hearings were held on the Walsh-Healey Act for the steel industry to determine the prevailing minimum wages, and resulted in a determination fixing the prevailing minimum wages in the iron and steel industry. Such determination was based primarily upon the wage rates set in the collective bargaining agreements which the SWOC had obtained for such industry.

WAGES SET IN THREE AREAS

A minimum wage of 62½c per hour was fixed for the Chicago, Pittsburgh and Eastern areas; 60c per hour for the West Coast; and 45c per hour for the South. This determination by the Secretary of Labor made it mandatory that all persons seeking government contracts in the steel industry agree to pay such minimum wages to their employes. The industry understood that where companies had to raise the minimum wage to meet this determination, they would also have to raise the wages for the other classes of work in their plants as well.

This determination procured by the SWOC meant that the Bethlehem Steel Company in the East would have to raise the wage for its common labor from 3 to 6c an hour, and for its other employes a proportionate wage increase was in order. The Republic Steel Corporation for its Southern plant would have had to raise the wage rates for its common labor from approximately 25c an hour to 45c an hour.

The Bethlehem and Republic Steel Corporations, immediately following the determination of the Secretary of Labor, initiated a law suit to enjoin the government officials from putting this determination into effect. Although not appearing directly in the law suit, these two large corporations caused seven small steel corporations ostensibly to start the suit.

The lower Federal District Court dismissed the bill of complaint of these steel companies, but on appeal the Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, D. C., enjoined the government officials from putting the determination of the Secretary of Labor into effect in any government contract. In other words, this Court did not grant relief to the seven small steel companies who appeared as plaintiffs, but actually, in effect, set aside the entire order of the Secretary of Labor.

THE SUPREME COURT'S DECISION

The SWOC persuaded the United States Government to seek an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court from this abominable decision. As a result, on April 29, the U. S. Supreme Court, through an opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Black, upheld in full the order of the Secretary of Labor and set aside all previous injunctions. The opinion of the Supreme Court severely criticized the lower courts in their interference with the activities of the government officials who had sought to carry out the legislative policy of Congress in establishing fair wage standards for corporations seeking government contracts.

The situation at present is that the determination of the Secretary of Labor, fixing the prevailing minimum wages at the level set in the collective bargaining agreements of the SWOC, is now in full force and effect. Every corporation seeking a government contract in the iron and steel industry must agree to comply with such wage determination. The Bethlehem Steel Company must now pay the same wage to its employes as that enjoyed by the employes of its competitors.

For any violation by the Bethlehem Steel Company of this provision certain penalties may be imposed upon the corporation. Suits may be brought by the United States Government against the company in the event it does not pay to its employes the proper wage minimum. In addition, if the Bethlehem Steel Company violates this agreement with the government, any outstanding contracts entered into under the wage determination may be set aside and cancelled. Finally, if the company is found to violate any such agreement, it may be placed upon an ineligible list and may not obtain any government contracts for three years thereafter.

The Bethlehem Steel Company will undoubtedly attempt to take advantage of the situation in one way or another and not really give the benefits to its employes which they deserve. Only through the organization of the Bethlehem Steel Company employes into the SWOC and with the obtaining of the execution of a contract between the company and the SWOC definitely covering wages, hours, and working conditions will the employes actually achieve real protection.

Emil Rieve On MBS May 13

Washington, May 4. — CIO Vice-Pres. Emil Rieve will discuss "Labor and Civil Liberties" over a nation-wide hook-up of Mutual Broadcasting System stations on Monday, May 13, from 10:15 to 10:30 p. m., eastern standard time, it was announced today.

CIO unions were asked to contact their local Mutual outlet to make certain that it will carry Rieve's speech. leges," he said. "They seek merely for an equality in participation and an equality of opportunity under the law and before the flag. And if there be those in America so powerful and privileged that they can deny the merit of that position, let them do so at their political peril—at their political peril."

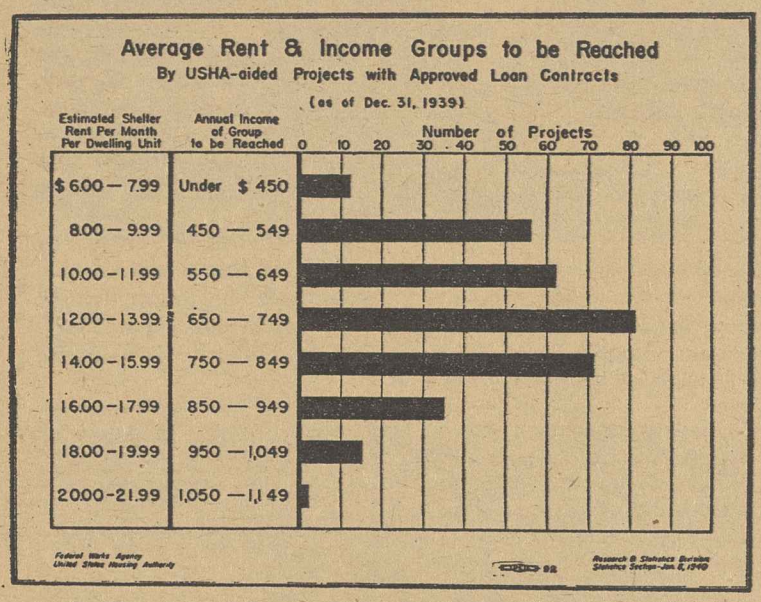
No man, whether white or Negro or Christian or Jew can achieve his rights if he stands alone, Lewis declared, in calling on his audience to "carry the word of organization back among your people.

"Organize, organize, organize —and exert your strength collectively and join with the labor movement in demanding that participation and that degree of protection which you know as Americans is your right," he concluded.



New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing. Contributions are received from a number of sources, and do not always reflect the views of the Committee.

By JOHN GREEN
President, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers of America

It is one of the ironies of the CIO's wonderful success in recent years that union workers have become "too rich" to live in the decent, comfortable, and modern homes provided by the Federal Government.

The following chart, published in the March 12, 1940, issue of "Public Housing Weekly News," indicates the average rent and income groups to be reached by federal housing projects, which have been approved as of December 31, 1939:

It will be noted from this chart that the overwhelming number of new projects are designed to reach families lying within the $450 to approximately $1,000 annual income group. This is eminently satisfactory, and unquestionably consistent with the policy of the USHA to maintain rents in public housing projects at the lowest level able to provide for the needs of the minimum income groups, who otherwise would have to live in substandard homes with all the resulting evils of such an environment.

Shipyard workers—to take a typical example—who have played a prominent part in their various communities in bringing about public housing projects now find themselves left out in the cold. The union has raised the wage in the industry to an average of 82 cents an hour. In the most densely populated portion of the country, from Maryland to Massachusetts, the minimum wage in our industry is five dollar a day, or very close to it.

Such workers, though the lowest paid in the industry, earn well in excess of the $1,149 maximum annual income allowed by the USHA in its loan contracts. They may be "ill-clothed and ill-fed." They certainly are "ill-housed." In this group of unskilled labor will most likely be found the foreign-born or colored workers with the largest families. Yet, by virtue of the fact that their wages are above the starvation level, they cannot be housed in the decent homes provided by the Government.

SKILLED WORKERS' PROBLEM

At the other extreme is the skilled worker. His wages range from $1,600 to well over $2,000 per year. He and his family are certainly ineligible for the government housing projects. Yet, he too finds it difficult if not impossible, to obtain comfortable, modern housing within the limits allowed by his income.

Let us analyze the problem concretely. Today, a worker wants the modern conveniences of living in his home. He seeks modern kitchen appliances, tiled bathroom ad shower, an oil burner or coal stoker to fire his furnace, and the numerous other conveniences which will free him and his wife from many of the chores of housekeeping. These are not extravagant desires. They are the very features provided by the government in its housing for the lowest income groups.

Where can the worker get such a home? By far the greatest number of homes are provided by private interests. In a subsequent article it will be shown how private interests have failed to answer the need for modern comfortable housing for workers in the middle income group, the ones who earn too much for government aid in housing.

I will also indicate what I think is a solution of the housing problem, from labor's viewpoint—an opinion which, I am glad to see, other observers concur in and some unions are putting into practical application.

CIO Local Wins 7c Wage Increase

Greensburg, Pa., May 4 — Wage increases running up to seven cents an hour were gained by Local 606 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in a new contract here with the Porcelier Manufacturing Co.

Working conditions, including the union ship, remained unchanged from an earlier agreement. Minimum wages for men were lifted from 53c an hour to 60c for men, and from 43c to 45c for women.

The company manufactures porcelain household appliances, including teapots, coffee percolators and lighting fixtures.

Ford Again Runs Afoul Of Labor Board; Must Rehire 94 at St. Louis

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, May 4. — Distribution of anti-union pamphlets by the Ford Motor Co. among employes of its St. Louis, Mo., plant was followed by an "active and open campaign to crush" the United Automobile Workers, CIO, the Natl. Labor Relations Board charged this week in a decision directing the company to post notices in the plant informing the workers that it will not interfere with their right of self-organization.

The Board found that the firm refused to bargain with the union, discrimination against 94 employes because of their union membership, and dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the St. Louis division of a stooge organization known as the Liberty Legion of America.

THE BOARD'S ORDER

The Board ordered the company to:

1. Bargain upon request with the union.
2. Reinstate the 94 employes with back pay.
3. Refuse recognition of the Liberty Legion as a collective bargaining agency for any of the employes.
4. Post notices that it would not distribute "among its employes, statements or propaganda which disparages or criticizes labor organizations or which advises its employes not to join such organization."

On the basis of lack of evidence, 108 other alleged cases of union discrimination were dismissed by the Board.

PAMPHLET UNDER FIRE

The anti-union pamphlet called "Ford Gives Viewpoint on Labor" which was distributed at the St. Louis plant in July 1937, was declared by the Board to restate and emphasize Henry Ford's intention never to "recognize the United Automobile Workers Union or any other union," and clearly manifested the company's "open and active hostility to labor organizations."

In rejecting the company's contentions that it was "exercising the right of free speech guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution", the Board declared that on the contrary the company was issuing a "stern warning that it was bitterly opposed to the union and that it would throw the weight of its economic power against the effort of its employes to form or carry on such an organization."

WAS 'INTERFERENCE'

The systematic employment of unfair labor practices that followed the company's distribution of the pamphlet, showed that the pamphlet was aimed not merely to influence the workers, but constituted "interference, restrain and coercion, expressly forbidden by the Act," the Board said.

Textile Firm Hit for Anti-Labor Policy

Washington, May 4—An order directing the Empire Worsted Mills, Inc., Jamestown, N. Y., to stop discouraging membership in the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, was issued this week by the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

Finding that the firm had discriminated against 18 union employes the Board also ordered the workers reinstated with back pay. The CIO textile union began an organizing drive at the Empire in April, 1937, and by June sought to bargain with the company on the basis that it represented the majority of the employes.

A company official told the union representatives that as long as he was connected with the Empire Worsted he would "never recognize the CIO as collective bargaining agent of the help."

Honor Dalrymple

Portland, Ore., May 4—Newly elected members of the executive board of the Oregon Industrial Union Council today paid tribute to the services of William Dalrymple, CIO regional director here for the past few months.

"The CIO in Oregon considers itself fortunate in having such a man as Dalrymple here to give counsel and assistance in the organizing drive, which is moving ahead rapidly in spite of the continued fight of the reactionary forces within the AFL," declared a statement signed by Pres. John Brost and Sec.-Treas. Ralph Peoples.

Watchmakers Win Increase In Jersey

New York, May 4 — Watch & Watchcase Workers Local Industrial Union 47 has renewed, for a two-year period, its contract with the Jacques Kreisler Sales Corp., manufacturers of watch bracelets and accessories.

The firm, which employs about 200 people, is to move its plant from this city to North Bergen, N. J., in July.

The agreement provides for pay increases for all production and toolroom employes, a guaranteed 10% increase in the amount of earnings for all employes during 1940-41 and the first six months of 1942 over employes' earnings in 1938.

On The Dotted Line

CIO Moving Ahead, Ohio Officials Told

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 4.—The CIO is destined to live, to thrive and become a great power in the economic affairs of the United States, declared Vice-President Philip Murray here recently.

"We are going to use these powers in a sane manner, and we are going to apply intelligence and reason through the processes of good, sound collective bargaining to help this country and its millions of people," he said.

"You have probably read in the newspapers that the CIO is subversive and is working to the detriment of the nation. But we are actually striving to make this nation a better place in which to live, and when you do something to increase wages and make things a little easier for the great mass of working people, you are doing something that is a great service to the nation and its people."

Mr. Murray was the featured speaker at a testimonial dinner given in honor of President John L. Mayo and Vice-President John W. Pollock of the newly-formed Mahoning County Industrial Union Council.

350 PRESENT

Over 350 persons attending the banquet heard addresses by various municipal officials, and local business leaders. David J. McDonald, international secretary-treasurer of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, was toastmaster.

The banquet was one of the most important affairs ever sponsored by labor in the Mahoning Valley. In addition to a testimonial to Mayo and Pollock, it served as a victory celebration for thousands of Republic Steel Corp. employes affected by the recent Supreme Court decision upholding the Labor Board and SWOC.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

Drawing a contrast between the district before and after the CIO began to expand, Mr. Murray pointed out that "there are about a thousand communities throughout the United States just like Youngstown where we could not have held social affairs three or four years ago."

"In these communities there was no economic freedom or justice; people were not privileged as members of labor unions to enjoy occasions such as this.

"But today things are different. Those dark days are gone forever, and it is a remarkable tribute to John Mayo, John Pollock and the othere leaders and members of the CIO."

At the speakers' table with Murray were John Owens, Ohio CIO director, who traced the growth of the CIO in the state; Rev. Maurice P. Casey, of St. Patrick's Church, who delivered the invocation, and Rev. L. C. Gobrecht.

Turn of the Political Wheel

AS MAYOR OF DETROIT, Richard Reading used to say "this is the death of the CIO" and tried his best to smash it. Defeated by workers' votes in the last election, Reading was thrown out of office, later indicted by a grand jury for "graft and corruption" while mayor. He's shown here being fingerprinted by a deputy sheriff—who is a member of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers.

CIO Marine Unions Urge Law Revision

NEW YORK CITY, May 1.—Failure of the U. S. Bureau of Marine Inspection & Navigation to enforce navigation laws, thus endangering the safety of passengers and seamen, is charged in a 48-page pamphlet issued jointly this week by the National Maritime Union and the CIO Maritime Committee.

The NMU announces that 50,000 copies of the pamphlet, entitled "Who's Guilty?" are being distributed. It is described as "a record of certain activities of the U. S. Bureau of Marine Inspection & Navigation with regard to safety-at-sea and the collective bargaining rights of seamen."

In the preface the pamphlet "purports to show that the Bureau is delinquent in enforcing the Navigation Laws of the United States and that its delinquency operates in favor of the shipowners, against the seaman and against safety of life and property at sea."

MISUSE OF LAWS

Legislation passed after the Morro Castle and Mohawk disasters aimed to promote safety-at-sea, has been used solely for strike-breaking purposes, the pamphlet charges. Under the authority granted it under the Morro Castle statutes, the Marine Bureau has revoked or suspended certificates of more than 200 seamen, "all as a result of strikes or other labor disputes on ships tied up to the docks or at anchor in a safe harbor."

Recommendations made in the pamphlet for improving the situation include:

An immediate investigation into the personnel, make-up and activities of the Bureau; consideration of proposals to bring the navigation laws up to date; an end to the intervention of the Bureau in labor disputes; appointment of inspectors in accordance with civil service regulations; and the immediate removal of Commander R. S. Field, director of the Bureau.

Seamen Gain $10 Monthly Pay Boost

New York, May 4.—Seamen employed on eastern deep-sea vessels have won a $10 monthy wage increase, it was announced today by Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union.

His announcement followed union wage negotiations with representatives of the shipowners' association.

Magazine Takes Smith Committee for Ride

WASHINGTON, May 4. — Only under star chamber proceedings of an earlier age or in the courts of dictatorship governments can anything be found comparable to the inquisition conducted by the Smith Committee in its investigation of the National Labor Relations Board, Merle D. Vincent, president of the Washington chapter of the National Lawyers Guild, declares in the current issue of Equality magazine.

"Probaby no Congressional committee ever before attempted such an invasion of the civil rights of lawful organizations and of citizens by excursions into fields wholly unrelated to the purpose for which the committee was created," he writes.

In its report and recommendations to Congress, Vincent points out, the Smith committee ignored the important administrative acts of the Board and the fact that it has been repeatedly sustained by the Supreme Court. Its obvious object, he believes was "to complete what the Liberty League had failed to do — that is to discredit the act and defeat its administration."

Reviewing the Liberty League's former widespread resistance to the National Labor Relations Act, both before and after its constitutionality was upheld by the Supreme Court, Vincent writes: "Whether or not this revolutionary resistance to an act of Congress and the Smith resolution are component parts of a common purpose appears to find an answer in the nature and character of the committee's procedure."

800 Attend Mass Meeting

New York, May 4—More than 800 members of all United Construction Workers Organizing Committee locals in New York City braved stormy weather to attend the first UCWOC joint get-together here.

Twelve locals have already been chartered in the city, and three more are being formed at present.

Union Leader Hits Layoffs by State

NEW YORK, May 4. — Pres. Abram Flaxer of the CIO State, County and Municipal Employes today accused Gov. Culbert Olson of California of violating a pledge to end political spoils in the California State Relief Administration.

Flaxer's charge was based upon the "outrageous dismissal" of a score of seasoned welfare workers" from the Alameda County SRA staff. The SCMWA has a large membership throughout the state.

The wire sent to Gov. Olson asked that he reinstate those dismissed or be stigmatized as "selling down the river the good government and progressive forces which elected you."

Flaxer said that reinstatement and the "setting up of an impartial appeals board which you promised at my meeting with you three weeks ago following earlier dismissals of hundreds of experienced SRA employes to make room for political hacks, can save your administration from the stigma of stabbing the merit system in the back."

Win Walkout In Indiana

Bloomington, Ind., May 4—A six-week strike of the United Furniture Workers at the Showers Bros. plant ended in victory today as the 600 employes returned to their jobs with 5 cents increases in minimum pay, the closed shop and other improvements.

A strike of 200 UFWA members at the Bloomfield plant of the company continued in force, however, when management countered the union wage demands with an offer of a one-half cent hourly increase, which later was raised to three-quarters of a cent.

LABOR GIRDS FOR WAGNER ACT TEST; WAGE-HOUR LAW SAVED

Bad Taxes Seen as Wage Cut Device

Washington, May 11.—Bad taxes are a wage cut and sound taxes are a wage raise, Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, told a radio audience in a broadcast discussion of taxation problems here.

"We believe," he said in outlining the CIO taxation program, "that the government should levy taxes as much as possible upon money that is idle or going to be idle, and use the money so collected to give income and services and jobs to people who need them.

UNFAIR TAXES

"The tax system in this nation today is still unfair and uneconomic, bearing with excessive weight on wage earners, small farmers and small businessmen. When money for taxes is taken from people who would otherwise spend that money buying things, the consuming power of the country is damaged.

"In a nation whose economy is featured by unemployment and a vast unused capacity to produce, such a policy is vicious. Even within the past ten years the percentage of federal taxes bearing on consumption has grown with great speed."

Hetzel called for increased taxes on great incomes and accumulations of wealth that now have many avenues of escape or are subject to comparatively light taxation, and end to taxes on consumption, and the use of revenue raised from proper taxes for public works and job programs.

Furriers Win 'Best Pact'

New York, May 11.—The "best contract in our union's history" has just been won for members of the Intl. Fur and Leather Workers Union employed by the United Fur Manufacturers Assn. here, union officials announced. The contract was won after a six month's strike forced on the workers by the stubborn refusal of the Association to negotiate.

The contract gives the members the closed shop, a minimum wage scale of from $36 to $60 weekly, unemployment insurance paid for by a one per cent tax on payrolls, and full pay for 10 legal holidays.

In addition, the contract contains a clause guarding against layoffs for 11 months out of each year.

Amendments Due To Reach House Floor This Week

WASHINGTON, May 11 — Fresh from a victory over reactionary forces who sought destruction of the federal wage-hour law, organized labor rallied today for a final defense of the Wagner Act, amendments to which are expected to reach the House this week.

Twice the political strength of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League halted the Tories in their efforts to undo gains made under the Fair Labor Standards Act. First the Barden bill and then the Norton bill, heavily laden with drastic amendments at the last moment, went down to defeat.

That the Wagner Act amendments will encounter heavy weather was freely predicted here as a result of the whirlwind CIO campaign to save the Act.

Presence of labor delegations in the Capital, large volumes of correspondence from back home, and the defeat of foes of the Act — notably Sen. Edward Burke of Nebraska — have served to remind Congress that the nation's workers will remember them at the polls.

Form Local At U. S. Navy Supply Depot

New York, May 11.—Formation of a local of the CIO United Federal Workers at the Iona Island Ammunition Depot of the Navy Dept. was announced today. The depot is located on the Hudson River in upstate New York.

The local has already established a policy, new in depots of this sort, of negotiations between the commanding officers and union committees. Arrangements have also been made for the use of bulletin boards to post union notices.

The union is now engaged in fighting prejudicial efficiency ratings and is protesting the dismissal of probational employes while temporary workers are still retained.

SIGN PACT

Detroit, Mich., May 11—After several weeks of negotiations the Detroit Lubricator Co., here has signed an agreement with the Society of Designing Engineers, an affiliate of the CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.

Push Plan To Benefit Farm Labor

By KARL PRETSHOLD

Sikeston, Mo., May 11.— A campaign aimed at abolition of child labor in the cotton fields of Southeast Missouri during the coming cotton chopping season has been undertaken by the Missouri Agricultural Workers' Council, a union of tenant farmers, sharecroppers and farm day laborers affiliated with the CIO United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers' Union it was said here by John Day, organizer. The campaign against child labor, he said, is part of the union's general program for the Southeast Missouri cotton country.

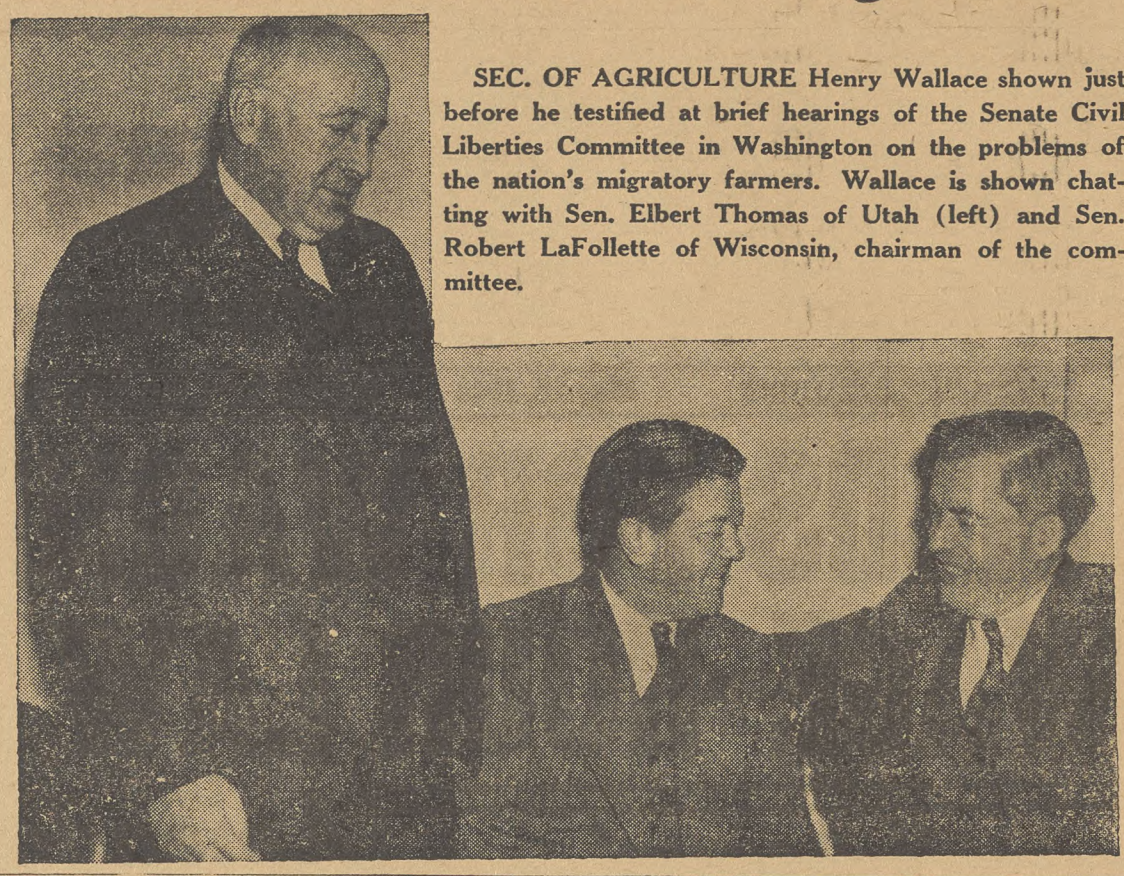
Other points in the union's program which is being pushed by all locals in the seven Missouri counties where cotton constitutes the chief crop are:

1. A fixed wage rate for day laborers.
2. The orderly assignment of available day laborers to available jobs during the cotton chopping season.
3. Establishment of a Farm Security Administration camp, or camps, for homeless and dispossessed tenants and sharecroppers.
4. Extension of the Farm Security Administration program; particularly the extension of resettlement projects.
5. Abolition of discrimination against Negro families in need in distribution of direct relief, WPA aid and social security benefits.
6. Extension of state social security benefits, such as aid to dependent mothers and old age pensions, to include all qualified tenant farmers and sharecroppers.

900 HOMELESS FAMILIES

There are approximately 900 tenant and sharecropper families in Southeast Missouri who are without homes for the coming cotton growing season. They are all families which had formerly worked cotton farms for landlords, but who, at the end of the last cotton season, were told they would not be given land to till this year.

Early in January, Governor Lloyd C. Stark appointed a commission made up of landowners, officials of state and federal agencies and representatives of tenants and sharecroppers to conduct a survey to determine how many families would be homeless this year. The commission was also charged with the task of suggesting a program of aid to the homeless.



900 HOMELESS

"A survey conducted under direction of the governor's commission has listed about 900 families as without farms on which to settle and work during the cotton season which will open soon," Day declared. "There is dispute as to exactly how many of these families should be classified as entitled to aid under the plans of the commission.

"Members of the commission and state officials hold that of the 900 families registered, only 320 are entitled to be classed as tenants or 'croppers. The state-federal employment agency which registered those without homes tried its best to discourage registration.

"They particularly tried to bar Negroes from registering and tried to insist that only those families which had worked a farm last year were entitled to be considered as qualified for aid under the governor's program. The union fought this stand and by union action got many who otherwise would not have been listed as homeless and dispossessed on the rolls.

Win Contract In Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., May 11. — CIO workers in the Kentucky Rock Asphalt Co. near here have just won a contract through their union, the United Asphalt Workers, Local Industrial Union 430, according to an announcement by Peter Campbell, CIO regional director in Kentucky.

The contract wins raises in almost all departments, sets hours at eight a day and 40 a week, provides for overtime at time and a half, and for arbitration machinery on disputes.

CIO Die Casters Map Organizing Drive

WASHINGTON, May 11.—An intensive drive to organize the big Precision Co., second largest die casting concern in the country, was voted as the union's next No. 1 job at the seventh annual convention of the CIO National Association of Die Casting Workers held here last week. President John L. Lewis pledged the full support of the CIO to the drive, in a message to the Convention.

At the final session delegates unanimously re-elected President George Peacock and Executive Secretary Edward T. Cheyfitz and voted in an executive board of seven members by acclamation. A number of changes were made in the constitution to enable the union, which has doubled its membership in the past year, to carry on its increased activities more efficiently.

Allan Haywood, CIO director of organization, who addressed the convention on Saturday morning, described the hardships and difficulties the United Mine Workers of which he is a member, had to contend with in the early days, and outlined the achievements won by the CIO.

PROUD OF CIO

"You should be proud to belong to the CIO," he told the delegates. "It's a movement that reaches out to the most humble member and gives him hope, encouragement; fights with him, loses with him, but never gives up.

"It takes losses as temporary setbacks and goes on, and that's why we are going to win. Nothing can stop us," he declared, as the convention broke into thunderous applause.

Greetings to the delegates from CIO President John L. Lewis were brought to the delegates by his daughter, athryn Lewis, who later was presented with a set of union-made aluminum ware for the Lewis family, as a token of esteem.

The convention closed with a banquet marked by lively speeches and attended by a number of CIO officials, including Director Haywood, Len DeCaux, CIO publicity director, Lee Pressman, general counsel and others.

Mooney Flays Frame-up Of Seamen's Official

PHILADELPHIA, May 11 (FP)—Tom Mooney's Moulders' Defense Committee has come to the aid of John Murray, business agent of the National Maritime Union, arrested on charges of violence arising from last year's strike on tankers of the Standard Oil Co.

The resolution, sent by Mooney to the Murray Defense Committee, Mayor Robert Lamberton and Director of Public Safety James H. Malone, condemns "the Gestapo actions used against John Murray" and asks an "immediate investigation of the Philadelphia police department.

"This is an insult to common decency and it is an inexcusable violation of civil liberties, the purpose of which would only further the anti-trade union fight that Socony Vacuum Oil Co. has waged against the NMU," the resolution concluded.

In an accompanying letter to the mayor, Mooney said:

"I know that the despicable methods that are employed by the police to accomplish their purposes. I know all their dirty, rotten tricks and they will not hesitate to use them to railroad an active labor union official to prison if some corporation is interested in accomplishing this task; and it goes without saying that the Standard Oil Co. is one of the most powerful corporations in America and one of the most bitterly anti-union corporations at the same time."

A number of Standard Oil attorneys took notes in the courtroom when Murray was arraigned. Now free on $5,000 bail, Murray is charged with conspiracy, assault and battery with intent to kill, and carrying concealed weapons. The complaint was based entirely on the uncorroborated word of Robert Wade, a criminal with five aliases.

CIO Backs Wagner Bill For Disabled Jobless

Washington, May 11 — A bill introduced by Sen. Robert Wagner of New York to provide insurance benefits for wage-earners permanently and totally disabled for causes not arising out of their employment, today won support from the CIO's Social Security Committee.

Joseph Kovner, executive secretary of the committee, said that the New York senator's proposals is in line with recommendations made by the CIO in its convention at San Francisco last fall.

Sen. Wagner explained that his bill, by "providing systematic insurance protection for wage-earners totally and permanently disabled before they reach the retirement age, would meet the economic needs of those who have hitherto been the forgotten men of our social security system."

The bill, he added, would aid those persons of whom the Advisory Council on Old Age wrote: "No other group in our population is more completely dependent or in a more deseperate economic situation."

Warn CIO Locals Of 'Peace Plah'

Milwaukee, Wis., May 11 — A warning to CIO locals throughout the state of Wisconsin to beware of labor "peace at any price" proposals was sounded today by officials of the Milwaukee and Wisconsin Industrial Union Councils.

"Every CIO member should be on his guard when certain irresponsible movements coming from dubious sources suddenly arise with the professed aim of bringing unity on a local scale.

"Strangely enough, these schemes seem always to consist of the CIO unions going back into AFL councils, contributing to AFL enterprises, refraining from organizing the unorganized or, in one way or another, going back on a local scale under the domination of the AFL.

CLEARLY 'INSINCERE'

"It is clear that these movements are thoroughly insincere and are actually a new variety of schemes by AFL forces to weaken the CIO."

The letters, sent out by President Harvey Kitzman and Sec. Walter Burke of the state CIO council, and by Pres. Harold Christoffel and Sec. Meyer Adelman of the Milwaukee Industrial Union Council, asserted that labor peace can only come on a national scale.

Those interested in finding the real AFL attitude towards labor unity should write to Pres. William Green and urge his acceptance of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' most recent peace offer, CIO unions were told.

Reach Accord On Allis-Chalmers Pact

West Allis, Wis., May 11.—Complete agreement on all points for a new contract were reached today by Local 248 of the United Automobile Workers and the management of the Allis-Chalmers plant here.

Signing of the contract, however, will be delayed pending the conclusion of negotiations at other company plants in LaPorte, Ind., Pittsburgh and Boston.

$50,000 WAGE FUND

A $50,000 fund for wage increases at the West Allis plant, to be given to lower-paid workers, improved grievance committee machinery and the reinstatement with back pay and full seniority of five UAW members fired a few weeks ago, were arranged in the union-management discussions.

The company also promised to take decisive action against anyone attempting to undermine Local 248.

Reaching of the agreement folowed a fortnight of discussions, during which members of the local voted for a strike if the firm refused to consider the union demands.

Labor Saves Wage Law, Girds For Defense of Wagner Act

'Dies Fears Truth'--Quill

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, May 11—Refusal of the un-American Dies Committee to continue hearing testimony by Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, was described by the fighting CIO leader as due solely to the fact the Committee "fears to hear the truth."

Quill's statement came when Dies announced an indefinite postponement after a stormy session in which Quill was gavelled down and finally ejected for his criticism of Committee methods and purposes.

The Committee's part in the session was devoted wholly to trying to pin the label "Communist" on the Transport Union and its leaders through familiar red herring tactics and through dragging the European situation into every question. Quill repeatedly tried to bring the subject back to the union, but was banged down by Dies each time. Dies finally had three policemen hustle Quill out when he bluntly charged the Committee with "whipping up a war hysteria" and with "war mongering."

STOCK QUESTION

Just before the cops were called, Rep. Thomas had asked the stock question of whether Quill would be willing to fight in the U. S. army or not, supposing the U. S. got into war with Russia.

"I am an American citizen," Quill answered, "and as such would be willing to defend its flag. I'm opposed to sending American soldiers overseas," he added when Thomas suggested U. S. troops invading Russia. "That's what this committee is trying to do. You're trying to work up a war hysteria. You're trying to involve this country in war."

Earlier in the session, Quill was shouted at in typical Dies manner, when he described one Thomas O'Shea, committee witness who had made fantastic accusations against the Transport Workers, as a "stoolpigeon" who had been expelled from the union for conspiring with employers and for attempted sabotage

Clothing, Steel Unions Set for Conventions

New York, May 11. — One thousand delegates representing nearly 260,000 members will attend the Silver Jubilee convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America which opens here May 13. CIO President John L. Lewis will address the convention on May 17.

Sidney Hillman, ACWA president and vice-president of the CIO Senator Robert F. Wagner and Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, will be the principal speakers at the opening session which will be held at Madison Square Garden starting at 10 a. m. Subsequent sessions will be held at Manhattan Center, 311 West 34 street.

The other CIO vice presidents have also been invited to speak at the convention. They are Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union of America; Sherman Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, and Reid Robinson, president of the Mine Mill & Smelter Workers.

Chicago, May 11. — Adoption of a wage policy for future wage agreements and plans for pushing the union drive in every steel plant in the United States and Canada will feature the Second International Wage and Policy Convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee opening in Chicago on Tuesday, May 14.

Nearly a thousand delegates from Steel Union Lodges in every steel center are expected to take part in the sessions which will be held in the Terrace Casino of the Morrison Hotel.

CIO President John L. Lewis will address the convention, it was announced, along with several other CIO leaders.

Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC, and a CIO vice-president, will preside over the convention.

The new drive in steel, particularly on mills of the Little Steel segment of the industry, is expected to be reviewed at the convention, and means of "mopping up" in those plants will be given impetus by several major victories of the SWOC in the last few weeks. Outstanding among the developments that are spurring the Little Steel campaign are the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court against Republic Steel Corp., and the decision of the court to uphold an order of the Secretary of Labor establishing minimum wage rates based on those set up through SWOC contracts in the industry.

Steel union delegates moved into Chicago from steel mills up and down the West Coast, from most of the steel districts in Canada, from the South and Southwest, and from the great steel producing areas in the East and Midwest.

CIO Board To Convene June 3

Washington, May 11. — Pres. John L. Lewis today announced that the next regular meeting of the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations will be held in Washington on Monday, June 3, starting at 10 A. M.

WASHINGTON, May 11— Continued campaigning against amendments to the Wagner Act by CIO members and progressive groups showed results in Congress and in a growing respect for CIO's determination to protect social laws in conservative newspaper and business circles.

Newspaper observers, as well as union leaders here, recognized the sharp defeat of Tory attempts to wreck the Wage and Hour Act as evidence of CIO's strength in Congress, when the House voted 205 to 175 to shelve proposed Wage Hour amendments for this session. The vote came after prolonged and bitter attacks on labor and on progressive laws by Congressional reactionaries, led by troop of Bourbon Democrats from the poll-tax Southern states.

The vote also came in the midst of the continued CIO drive against the Norton and Smith proposals to amend the Wagner Act, and was seen as an added explanation of Congressional slowness in taking up either of the two sets of crippling amendments.

MORE DELEGATIONS

Latest in the series of large union delegations that have been telling Congressmen the facts about labor's wishes was the visit of 100 Labor's Non-Partisan League members from Pennsylvania, who called on their Representatives with the same hands-off message that has come from nearly a dozen other populous industrial states.

Led by John Philips, president of the Pennsylvania CIO Industrial Union Council, the delegates told their Congressmen that "any changes will destroy the Wagner Act and create industrial strife, chaotic employer-employe relations and unnecessary conflicts which will bring hardships to whole communities."

The delegates cited figures to show that strikes in Pennsylvania had been cut by 50 per cent since the enactment of the law, and pointed out that this record would be destroyed if the Norton craft

Local Quits AFL for CIO By 800-2 Vote

New York, May 11. — Another large AFL union has decided—by a vote of 800 to two—that its future lies away from craft union restrictions and with the industrial unions of the CIO.

The union is Local 1010 of the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which has just voted to join with the CIO's United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America.

The decision was taken at a membership meeting here attended by 80 per cent of the union's 1,000 members. Only two members dissented when the vote came up. Following the vote, a charter in the Electrical and Radio Workers was presented by Julius Emspak, UERMW secretary-treasurer.

The newly affiliated group brings contracts with 17 New York plants and electrical shops as a sendoff for its future in the CIO.

Farmers Hit Wage-Law Amendments

St. Paul, Minn., May 11. — Organized farmers joined with the nation's industrial workers in opposing crippling amendments to the Wage-Hour Act. The amendments, embodied in both the Barden and Norton bills, went into the legislative scrap-heap last week.

Among farm protests against weakening the act was one sent to Rep. Mary Norton, head of the House Labor Committee, by M. W. Thatcher, chairman of the National Farmers Union Legislative Committee and president of the National Federation of Grain Cooperatives. He wired:

"Representing an unduplicated membership of 350,000 farm families, our joint national legislative committee has determined to vigorously oppose the Barden amendments to the Wage-Hour Act. We consider these proposed amendments against the public and farmers' interest.

"Labor represents the bulk of the farmers' market and farmers are genuinely interested in protecting low income wage earners."

One Battle Won

The Wage-Hour Act has been saved from amendment by something more important than Congressional maneuvers.

When the House voted by 205 to 175 to recommit the Norton bill, after rejecting two other bills to amend the act, it put the kibosh for this session of Congress on all attempts to deprive sweated American workers of such meager protection as they enjoy under the present law.

Despite the most strenuous efforts of the sweatshoppers and their Congressional representatives to destroy or seriously weaken the Wage-Hour Act, a close majority of the House decided to let it ride for another year.

This happens to be election year. Members of Congress who hope for re-election are correspondingly more sensitive to what the voters are thinking.

A sufficient number of them got the idea that a Congressman who voted to cut the wages of a million or more Americans below $12.60 a week would not be popular with the labor and progressive voters back home.

How did they get this correct idea? Chiefly through the efforts of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Resolutions, letters, wires, telephone calls, delegations informed the members of Congress how progressive labor and its friends were thinking.

The result is an encouraging victory for the CIO, for Labor's Non-Partisan League, for millions of underpaid workers, and for all Americans who hope to establish an American standard of living above some of the present starvation levels.

Now Is The Time

The defeat of all weakening and destructive amendments to the Wage-Hour Act will lend new courage to progressives, in and out of Congress, for the crucial battle which impends to preserve the basic labor law of the land—the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Amendments are before the House in the Smith and Norton bills that would rip the heart out of this law and make it into an instrument for the destruction of industrial unions.

If the anti-union manufacturers and their stooges, in and out of Congress, have their way, this charter of labor's rights would be turned through the subtle processes of amendment into a sentence of slow death for labor organization.

The CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League have waged one of the greatest campaigns ever conducted by American progressives to preserve the Wagner Act.

They and the millions of workers they represent, and the millions of other fair-minded Americans who stand up for labor's rights, have been successful so far in defending the Act from all amendments.

But some of the worst amendments ever proposed will probably come before the House for action in the coming week.

Now is the time to remind your representatives in Congress that labor and most of the rest of their constituents want no monkeying with the Wagner Act.

Wagner Act Test Coming In Congress

unit amendment is written into the Act.

From Washington, David Lawrence, publisher and newspaper columnist, told a big business audience which subscribes to his "Business Executive" that the successful defense of the Wagner and Wage Hour Acts demonstrates the political strength of the CIO and the "decline in power of the AFL."

"Congress still is bending before labor pressure," he wrote, "is obviously affected by concern over CIO voting power. AFL influence is not measuring up to conservative expectations . . .

"Notable developments in Congress is the decline in power of the AFL," he added. "Tangle over proposed changes in Wagner Labor Relations Act is revealing apparent weakness of the more conservative labor organization. Reason: AFL leaders appear not to have backing of the rank and file membership; appear to be fearful of CIO political power."

CIO officials leading the organized fight to protect the Wagner Act urged all members and progressives to give Columnist Lawrence and his "business executive" readers still more "notable developments" to think about by keeping up their pressure against any and all amendments.

One More to Go!

Looking Ahead — By LEN DE CAUX

The Spirit Of The CIO

THE spirit of the CIO is something very real to millions of American workers. But it is something you experience, live through, feel.

It is made up of the emotions, hopes, enthusiasms shared in common by large numbers of people who find a new purpose in life in this new movement to improve their lot through organization.

But it is not the sort of thing you can write down on paper very well, or put in a picture to hang on the wall. There is too much movement, living reality and individual experience about it for that.

Yet I have seen and heard and felt—in a darkened room in a Washington hotel — some of the spirit of the CIO reproduced by one of the most popular of modern arts.

How can this be? After all, this spirit of the CIO comes to us through sight and sound and feeling of what goes on around us.

It lives in the songs of men and women who glory for the first time in the strength that comes from "sticking together"—

In the stirring words of a union leader, or the halting phrases of a new recruit, trying to tell how he feels about the union—

In the lunch-hour conversation of Bill and Joe, when they figure out that a union is worth even the risk of their jobs—

In the talk Bill has with his wife, when they think of all their family has at stake, and resolve to stick it out.

The spirit of the CIO lives in the sight of marching workers, with banners flying—

In the tramp of pickets and the placards that tell their story—

In the union meeting, where new members grapple with parliamentary law and learn to conduct their business in democratic fashion—

In board meetings, union conventions and wherever the American workers assemble to work out a new destiny for themselves through organization.

The spirit of the CIO is found in the hearts and homes of countless union members—

In long periods of loyalty and persistence, as well as in brief periods of courageous struggle—

In heartaches and discouragement, as well as in the soul-filling satisfaction of victory and solid achievement.

How could any part of all this be reproduced in a darkened room?

What I saw and heard was "United Action," the latest sound film to be produced by the Motion Picture Department of the CIO United Automobile Workers of America.

It deals with one of the great struggles of a union that was born of struggle—the General Motors tool and die strike of last year.

Through this movie, you see and hear workers on the job consulting together — union leaders conferring, addressing meetings—

Strike scenes of all kinds—picket lines — women's auxiliaries — strike kitchens—

Personal and family problems—the wife who fears for her family's security—

John L. Lewis speaking—negotiations—agreement—victory.

And through it all the stirring spirit, the songs, the purposefulness of labor on the march.

I saw this movie at the convention of another CIO union, the Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers.

The audience found itself, almost unconsciously, becoming part of the scenes it witnessed.

It joined in the union songs, applauded the speakers, shouted words of encouragement, indignation, or approval.

This is but one of a number of movies produced by the UAW Motion Picture Dept., and more are in preparation.

To meet their director, you don't have to crash a dozen locked Hollywood gates, nor quiver at the thought of approaching a few hundred thousand dollars worth of brooding genius on the hoof.

Michael Martini is to be seen nearly everywhere there is a convention, mass meeting, strike, demonstration or other event affecting the UAW.

You can't fail to see him, for he seems to have an extraordinary faculty for being in half a dozen places at the same time.

The floodlights are on at a mass meeting, and there is Martini perched precariously over part of the audience, grinding away.

While you worry what a misstep might do to him and his camera, you suddenly become aware he is on the platform taking some close-ups. And no matter how fast you leave the hall, you will find him ahead of you on a truck or something, taking pictures of the crowd as it leaves.

This working director does not have to wheedle high-priced stars. His actors are the auto workers themselves. His scenes are from their daily lives. And his continuity is labor history in the making.

P. S. — For particulars about showing these movies at union meetings and affairs, address Motion Picture Dept., UAW-CIO, 281 West Grand Boulevard, Detroit, Mich.

Sen. Norris Flays FBI Policies

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, May 11—The policies of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and its publicity-loving chief, J. Edgar Hoover, came in for more scathing criticism this week from Nebraska's veteran Sen. George W. Norris.

In a three-hour speech on the Senate floor, the veteran liberal expressed disappointment at the Dept. of Justice's final report on the arrest last winter of 17 persons alleged to have recruited volunteers for the Spanish loyalist government. The report, submitted to Atty-Gen. Robert Jackson by a special investigator, whitewashed the FBI of any misconduct — a point on which Norris violently disagreed.

He pointed out that the arrested victims had been seized late at night, humiliated in a number of ways, chained and handcuffed, questioned at great length and only belatedly allowed a few minutes to consult an attorney.

THIRD-DEGREE METHODS

"I do not think that can be considered to be anything except third degree methods," Norris commented, "and using third degree methods, the Supreme Court has held in a very recent case, does not necessarily mean that the prisoner is subjected to whip or to club. He may be subjected to mental distress, and everyone knows that mental punishment is worse than any other kind."

Norris continued:

"I believe that the methods being pursued by the Federal Bureau of Investigation are wrong, and, if continued, mean the destruction of human liberty in the United States. I think the methods employed constitute a serious danger and they ought to be corrected, and corrected now."

Expressing sorrow that he had to disagree with Atty. Gen. Jackson on the FBI's conduct, the Nebraska Senator warned "that unless there is a rein put upon that Bureau, it will eventually mean the destruction in the United States of the liberties and privileges we all like to say are guaranteed to every citizen under our flag by the Constitution of the United States."

'DEPLORABLE'

The FBI's actions in the Detroit case, he went on, are "deplorable and . . . detestable; and if the FBI pursues those kinds of methods in arresting anybody against whom a charge is made, then the FBI ought to be reformed; and it seems to me that that reform is up to the Attorney-General of the United States."

Sen. Norris cited two specific examples of FBI deception. In the Detroit case, he pointed out, Hoover's agents forced their way into the home of a doctor under the pretense that they were seeking care for an injured man. "Mr. Schweinhaut (the Attorney-General's investigator in the Detroit case) thinks the FBI was justified in using means of that kind and practicing that kind of a deception," he said. "Personally, I do not believe it."

He described another case, during June, 1939, when a citizen of Omaha was seized and arrested by the FBI, held for some time, and allowed to go free only after making a trip, at his own expense, to Sioux City, Ia., to prove his innocence.

DANGER TO LIBERTIES

This type of procedure, Sen. Norris warned, if allowed to reach its natural conclusion, "will destroy every vestige of freedom, and . . . tyranny will take the place of liberty."

Turning his attention to the FBI's boss, the Senator charged J. Edgar Hoover with "being the greatest hound for publicity on the American continent today. Mr. Hoover has an organization, maintained at public expense writing speeches for him or for anyone else to make who will take the speeches. When he makes a speech, a copy is sent to practically every newspaper in the United States."

A midwest newspaper editor told him, Norris asserted, that everytime the FBI gets a favorable mention, the "editor receives a letter of approval from Mr. Hoover."

Unless we do something to "step this furor of adulation and praise as being omnipotent," Norris concluded, "we shall have an organization — the organization of the FBI — which, instead of protecting our people from the evil acts of criminals, will itself in the end direct the government by tyrannical force, as the history of the world shows has always been the case when secret police and secret detectives have been snooping around the homes of honest men."

'Outlook' Sees Drop In Business

Washington, May 11.—Most important economic information of the past month was brought out in testimony on technological displacement of workers by machines before the Temporary National Economic Committee, the Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, declares in its current issue, released today.

At the same time, the CIO Outlook declared that the index of industrial production "is continuing to drop slowly," and is expected to reach "about 101 on the Federal Reserve Board index for April, compared to a revised level of 103 for March."

Unemployment for March is estimated by the CIO at 11,577,000, "a decrease of less than 2.5 per cent from the revised February figure of 11,871,000."

Testimony by eight CIO union leaders at recent TNEC hearings shows, the Outlook declares, that such changes, introduced usually without thought for their effect on workers and the public would have been much more damaging if the unions had not shortened hours and raised wages in industry, that improvements in machinery do not cause more jobs to be created, and that jobs formerly open in clerical and agricultural work are now closed to displaced industrial workers.

CIO PROPOSALS

Testimony of CIO leaders bringing out these facts about technological change was accompanied by four major proposals for remedying the social distress that results, the CIO Outlook declares, These were:

Raising of wages and cutting of hours through union organization, provisions in union contracts to prevent layoffs through such changes, as already provided in an agreement won by a CIO union, dismissal wages for displaced workers, and a joint effort by government, labor and industry to find a program "for passing the benefits of technological changes to workers and the general public."

Utah CIO Backs Murdock In Senate Race

OGDEN, Utah, May 11.—CIO unions throughout the state are faced with the biggest job in the labor history of Utah, A. M. Petersen, president of the Utah CIO Industrial Union Council told delegates to the fourth annual state convention held here the end of April.

"The major concern of the Utah Council this year," Petersen said, "will be the formation and carrying through the CIO political and legislative policies." President Petersen, who also serves as secretary of the Council, was re-elected for another term.

Ray Maki, president of the Wyoming CIO Industrial Union Council, urged CIO unionists to work for the election of Abe Murdock for U. S. Senator, and R. H. Rassmussen, board member of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, called for the active support of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

BAC LEAGUE PROGRAM

Delegates adopted a resolution recommended by the committee on legislation urging the officers of the Utah Non-Partisan League to call a state convention within 60 days for the purpose of drawing up a practical political program in line with the policy formulated at the CIO national convention.

James Morgan, CIO regional director in Utah and Wyoming, who spoke the opening day, said that the big challenge before the country today is to find a solution to the unemployment problem. "I have no sympathy with people who want to balance the budget at the expense of the working classes," he declared.

RESOLUTIONS

Resolutions were passed by the delegates endorsing the candidacy of Murdock; opposing any action by the government that would involve the country in war; calling for legislation to provide for the setting up of a silicosis hospital in Ogden and referring all resolutions on the subject of endorsing a presidential candidate to Labor's Non-Partisan League.

At the final session delegates voted in favor of holding a huge Labor Day parade in Salt Lake City with every CIO local in the state invited to take part.

Three new pamphlets off the CIO press are recommended to all labor readers for their own reading and for their friends and fellow workers. These are No. 44, "Security for the People;" No. 45, "The CIO and the Negro Worker," and No. 46, "Equal Opportunity," John L. Lewis' historic speech at the Natl. Negro Congress. Order from CIO Publicity Dept., 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C.

BIG PAY BOOSTS

Sandusky, Ohio, May 11—Pay increases ranging from five to 15 per cent were obtained for practically all the members of Local 710, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, in a new agreement signed with the Holland Reiger Co. here.

Labor Showing Strength At Polls

Primary Results Show Liberalism Still Pays in Votes

By I. MUFSON

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Scattered returns now available from the earlier primaries refute the widely propagandized notion that the American voters are turning away from liberalism. Results from some of the most important sectors in the primary battles show that many of the staunchest supporters of labor and social legislation were nominated with greater pluralities than in previous elections. On the other hand, some of the bitterest foes of labor went down in bad defeats.

Of greatest significance in these primaries is the political awakening of the southern masses. Marching ahead with the growth of CIO unions, organized workers, together with southern progressives, are participating directly in political activity as they have never done before.

Labor received some setbacks, as was to be expected. But in many instances where the CIO unions working through Labor's Non-Partisan League had effective organizations and applied themselves energetically to the task, their candidates, pledged to support the CIO legislative program, and especially the Wage-Hour and Labor Relations laws, came out victorious.

BURKE DEFEATED

Of special satisfaction to labor was the defeat of Senator Edward R. Burke of Nebraska. As an outstanding opponent of the CIO, who bragged about his efforts to emasculate the National Labor Relations Act in order to weaken CIO unions, his inability to carry the voters with him in his hostility to labor is serving as a warning sign to other labor baiters that their attacks on unionism aren't popular.

The Illinois primaries were also extremely favorable results. Congressman Frank Fries of the 21st district of Illinois, who has taken a most active part in fighting off amendments to the Wage-Hour Act and the Wagner Act, was renominated with a comfortable majority whereas in 1938 he won by a very narrow margin. Kent E. Keller from the 25th district, who stood shoulder to shoulder with Fries on all labor matters, was so popular that his nomination wasn't even challenged.

The Illinois primaries were also responsible for burying the little Garner presidential boomlet. In addition, Richard Lyons, who ran as an out and out employer representative was defeated for Congress on the Republican ticket in the Chicago district. On the other hand, Representative McKeough, who received labor support in the same district, came out victorious.

GUFFEY EASY VICTOR

Turning to Pennsylvania, the victory of Senator Joseph E. Guffey on May 7, by more than 100,000 plurality, is more significant of labor political effectiveness than elsewhere up to the present time.

Guffey was opposed by the entire Democrat state machine, and his handsome victory is conceded by everyone to have been due to the united support of the CIO unions in the state working through Labor's Non-Partisan League. F. Claire Ross, the only other state candidate to receive labor's endorsement, ran away with the nomination for auditor-general.

William Leader, president of the Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers of Philadelphia, almost succeeded in being nominated for Congress from the first district. He lost by 800 votes out of a total of 18,000 cast.

Many of the pro-labor Congressmen in the Pennsylvania delegation were given the voters' approval, including Leon Sacks and Michael J. Bradley.

FRIEND OF WAGNER ACT

Maryland labor, which had put up an active campaign to return Cong. Thomas D'Alesandro to the House of Representatives, had its efforts rewarded when D'Alesandro won the primaries by a majority of 2,000. Two years ago, he barely squeezed through with less than 100 votes. D'Alesandro is a reliable labor supporter.

In Florida, Senator Andrews beat a wide open field running on a progressive platform. His closest opponent is Bernarr McFadden, the anti-union magazine publisher and reactionary. A run-off election will be necessary there as Florida laws require the successful candidate to have a majority of the votes.

STARNES HARD-PRESSED

All eyes were on the primaries in Alabama, where Representative Joe Starnes was hard-pressed by a liberal, Judge A. E. Hawkins. The interest in this contest lies in the fact that Starnes is the member of the Dies committee. The close race shows that membership on the Dies committee is not a national badge of political preferment.

In North and South Carolina labor is taking an increasingly effective part in politics. Numerous labor members have filed petitions for local offices through Leagues for Progressive Democracy, affiliates of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

SOUTH CAROLINA

In South Carolina the League participated in precinct elections for the State Democratic convention, and gained control of local party organizations in many places. In Spartanburg County 34 precinct officials were elected; in Greenville county several committeemen and delegates were elected; in Cherokee county, 28 out of the 31 delegates elected were labor representatives. Scattered delegats were elected from other counties. In Jonesville, S. Carolina, labor elected a mayor early in April.

Local officials supported by labor, were elected in many localities of many states One of the most interesting contests was the re-election of George J. Coyle, Democrat, as mayor of New Britain, Conn. He had decided not to run again for fear of defeat. A delegation of CIO union leaders held a conference with him, assuring him their support if he ran on a prolabor platform, including more money for WPA, Housing, etc. Due to labor's efforts Coyle won by a 1,500 majority.

Labor won a significant victory in St. Paul, Minn., when John J. McDonough, labor-supported Democratic candidate for mayor, and three labor-supported councilmen, received majorities in the bienniel city election.

Clothing Union Meets

tive Board points out that in a quarter-century of progress and achievement, the Union has brought workers in the Men's Clothing Industry from "The Industrial Jungle of the Sweatshop" to a leading and powerful position in the American Labor Movement, boosting wages from an average of less than 25 cents in 1910 to 77 cents in 1939.

The benefits obtained for Men's Clothing Workers have also been spread in recent years to those employed in the shirt and cotton garment, glove, neckwear, laundry and cleaning and dyeing industries, the report declares.

The Union's pioneer work in unemployment insurance, labor banking, cooperative housing, life insurance and recreational and cultural work is stressed in the report, and a vigorous defense is made of the National Labor Relations Board, which the report states "has had a more perfect court record than that of any other federal administrative agency."

Similar denials of fantastic "red plot" yarns from expelled union members came when Mervyn Rathborne, president of the CIO American Communications Assn., exposed testimony of Fred Howe, expelled ACA official, as a mass of lies and fabrications.

Unions, Employers Join Drive To Save Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, May 11. — CIO unions in every industry and section of the nation are up in arms to defend the Wagner Act against the crippling amendments now in the Congressional mill, as a quick preliminary survey of official union publications shows. Here are a few samples:

The UE News, official organ of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, devotes its entire front page to an urgent warning that the backers of the Norton bill are "after your union contract and your pay envelope," and an appeal to put all possible pressure on Congress to stop the bill.

The Guild Reporter, organ of the American Newspaper Guild, carries a front page spread on the attacks on the Act, warning members to fight "the reactionary orgy that threatens to wipe out all of the social gains of the past seven years" now under way in certain sections of Congress.

The United Mine Workers Journal, official publication of more than 600,000 UMWA members, tells its readers that "It is the duty of every member of organized labor to protect the Wagner Act from its enemies."

"Stormy weather" for labor's rights is forecast in Office and Professional News, paper of the United Office and Professional Workers, which calls for protests from "an indignant labor movement" to "blow the Tories down."

"Do not delay, act now" is the call in the United Rubber Worker, monthly publication of the CIO's rubber workers, in urging every member to write to his Congressman at once. Textile Labor, organ of 400,000 CIO textile workers, tells its readers to "Stand up and Fight" for the Act. Employers who can't rule the Labor Board are the forces trying to ruin the Act, according to the Shipyard Worker, paper of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of the CIO.

CIO papers published in the middle and far west join in the appeal to defend the Act, as seen in the Michigan edition of The CIO News, which declares that the only way to stop a reactionary politician is let him know "that the people who elect him and whom he represents will not stand for any attack on labor or labor's rights."

Another CIO News edition, put out by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers declares in Pres. Reid Robinson's column that the CIO and all its affiliates "must strain every sinew and spare no effort to see to it that no amendments of any kind are made to the Act unless they strengthen it."

"Your Wagner Act is in real and immediate danger," the Furniture Workers Press of the United Furniture Workers warns, in promising that "we'll do what we did before, and more," in defending the Act.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Employers now enjoying peaceful labor relations are no less insistent that the Wagner Act be left alone than organized workers, it was learned here when the Clothing Manufacturers Assn. of the U. S. wired its protests to Congress against the craft unit amendment proposed in the Norton bill.

Desire to continue the orderly relations only possible under industrial unionism was the reason for the clothing employers' strong opposition, which followed a similar position taken last week by more than 50 silk manufacturers in New Jersey and other employer groups throughout the east.

"For upwards of twenty years approximately 90 per cent of our industry continuously and uninterruptedly maintained harmonious relationship through collective bargaining agreements with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union," the association wrote.

"These agreements covered all the workers in our cutting rooms and factories. The making of a coat involves 92 operations; as many more operations are involved in the making of a vest and pants. A majority of workers employed in each of these operations under proposed amendment two would have the right to require the Board to designate it as a craft unit and compel the employer to bargain collectively with 180 units and perhaps as many unions. Chaos to our industry is the only conclusion."

The statement was accompanied by a unanimous resolution of the Board of Directors of the Association, which declared:

"RESOLVED that the Men's and Boys' Clothing Industry inform the Congress of the United States of the irrevocable injury that will be perpetrated upon the employers engaged in the manufacture of men's and boys' clothing, if amendment (2) (of the Norton bill) requiring the Board to designate a craft as an appropriate unit whenever a majority of employes of a particular craft so decide, is adopted."

LNPL, Negro Group in Pact

Washington, May 11—Organized Negro groups have joined with organized labor "to make common cause for the promotion of a just and sensible program for public welfare," in a signed pact between the Natl. Negro Congress and Labor's Non-Partisan League.

The pact, which followed an invitation to the Negro Congress extended by CIO President John L. Lewis at the recent meeting of the Negro Congress here, provides for active cooperation between the two groups to defend the Wagner Labor Relations Act and to promote all other progressive legislation of importance to Negro and labor organizations alike.

The agreement was based on four points, covering the need for protection of Negro rights along with the rights of all workers, the need for unity of Negro and white workers to achieve mutual aims, the recognition of common opponents, and the need for mutual action to achieve common aims.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The agreement, signed by Eli Oliver for Labor's Non-Partisan League and John P. Davis, Henry Johnson and Max Yergan for the Natl. Negro Congress, pledged mutual action in combatting attempts to amend the Wagner Act and in pushing for immediate action on the anti-lynching and anti-poll tax bills now current in Congress

CHARGES MADE

Charlotte, N. C., May 11—Charges of refusal to bargain collectively have been filed by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers against the Nebel Knitting Co. here, following a series of fruitless conferences.

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing. Contributions are received from a number of sources, and do not always reflect the views of the Committee.

By JOHN GREEN
President, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers of America

In a preceding article, I took up the problem of the union worker in the middle income group, who finds himself in the "No-Man's Land of Housing" by virtue of having too large an income to be eligible for government housing, and too small an income to purchase one of those glittering bungalows which fill the real-estate pages of the daily newspapers.

In many suburban and urban areas, such a modern home as provided by private interests—which, we have seen, offer the minimum conveniences standard housing should provide—is out of the reach of many of us. For one thing, private building is a drop in the bucket, compared to the many older homes which are constantly deteriorating. Therefore, new homes generally fetch a price all out of proportion to their real value, since they are seized upon for home replacement by the upper middle income group.

JOHN GREEN

Adding to the factors placing such homes out of the reach of workers is the fact that private building is in the nature of a speculation, generally in the wake of an acute need for housing in the community. This lack of a planned program to provide housing needs in turn makes construction employment also a speculative venture, and the result has been a rocketing of labor costs, since a high daily wage is the building trades' solution to their intermittent employment.

Secondly, to acquire such a home, the worker has to go in for the poor economic practice of buying it. That is, if he has the down payment. He then is tied down to the area in which he owns his home, and is likely to take either a substantial loss in his investment if he moves to a new area to get a job, or else compete in his home area's labor market for a job, if he elects to remain.

The alternative is to rent, and when he does so, he is generally faced with a choice of houses built during either the war boom, or the ones in the late 1920's. Such homes may have been "renovated" and refurbished, as the real-estate operators glowingly declare. They may be all that the ads picture them to be. But they are also from at least 10 to 25 years old, and therefore uneconomical to maintain.

Built also during boom years, investment in them is based on inflated values, gauged by present standards, and their owners must rent them at an income to show a profit on these values, if they are to retain the houses. Such rentals, too, are frequently in excess of what a worker's budget allows for rent.

'NO-MAN'S LAND'

Analyzing the three ways in which a Union worker can obtain a home, one is left with the conclusion that he is in a "No-Man's Land" of housing.

It is almost no exaggeration to say that the very ones who produce the wealth of the nation are those who are disregarded, at least when it comes to housing, in sharing that wealth.

True, there have been various efforts by limited dividend corporations to provide modern housing for the "middle income" group. Unfortunately, such housing projects, for that's what they are, are few in number. And even those that are built, or being built, do not solve the problem, for they reach, first, only the higher brackets in the middle income group, and, second, seem designed more for white-collar workers than for the wearers of the denim work-shirt and overalls.

Otherwise, with the $30 to $35 a month which the worker can spend for housing, he can buy a jerry-built, gaudy and flimsy home, which is likely to cost him as much in maintenance and repair as in rent.

CO-OPERATIVE PROJECTS

In the matter of housing union workers, we face a real problem. The only answer we can see is that of unions taking the lead in establishing cooperative housing projects for their members. Bad as such a cooperative would be, in financial terms, during periods of industrial depression, it still might be more advantageous than buying or renting from private interests.

Such a cooperative would make it possible to build homes on a large scale, taking advantage of all the technical improvements learned by the USHA in the government projects. By eliminating the profits of the builder and investor—by providing homes at the cost of construction, maintenance, and facilities supplied to the inhabitants—it might be possible to do so at a cost able to be borne by the union worker.

Such a cooperative should be entitled to the municipal tax concessions enjoyed by local housing authorities, for the purposes of both are identical, to provide decent, comfortable, and modern housing to those who are otherwise unable to obtain them.

Housing remains a problem for the labor movement. The government is not answering it. We must do so ourselves.

Labor Board Again Raps Ford, Orders 38 Rehired

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Undenied testimony revealing the Ford Motor Company's open "hostility" to the United Automobile Workers, CIO, at its plant in Buffalo, New York, was cited by the National Labor Relations Board this week in an order directing the company to stop its unfair labor practices.

Officials of the plant pursued a "consistent course of anti-union action which paralleled closely the activities of the service men" in spying upon union activities, the Board declared in its decision.

This is the third time in less than a month that the NLRB has cracked down on Ford for the reign of terror conducted against CIO unionists. Last week the Board found the company guilty of firing 94 workers at its St. Louis, Mo. plant for union activity and recognizing a stooge outfit called the Liberty Legion as a bargaining agency.

The previous week the Board issued a report made by a trial examiner on anti-union activity at the Ford plant in Dallas, Tex. which disclosed an amazing array of evidence of brutal attacks on union members and sympathizers by Ford goon squads including attempted murder.

FIND DISCRIMINATION

In its decision involving the Buffalo plant, the Board cited 38 cases of discrimination against union members accompanied by the distribution of pamphlets "upbraiding the union." Atop the whole anti-union campaign, the Board declared stood the "pronouncements of Henry Ford himself, urging the workers to shun unions."

Finding that the identity of union members was obtained by the spying of servicemen, the Board ordered the company to stop engaging in any form of surveillance, and to reinstate with back pay the 38 union members.

FORD ADMITS ERRORS

Counsel for the company conceded, the Board stated, that it did not have the "right to tear down union banners" which were exhibited in a filling station across the street from the company's plant.

The Board ordered the company to stop intimidating, directly or indirectly, members of the union from displaying notices of union meetings or giving out union literature in the vicinity of the plants, and to post notices that it would cease its unfair labor practices.

In rejecting the company's contention that the service men were needed to protect property, the Board found that these men were really engaged to spy upon the employes at the plant for the purpose of "ridding the plant of union men."

Push Coast Drive

SEVERAL THOUSAND CIO auto and rubber workers gathered in Huntington Park, Calif., to hear Harry Bridges, CIO regional director, and Lt. Governor Ellis Patterson discuss organizing and political plans of labor. Efforts by Tories to bar Bridges from speaking ended in failure. Expect New Pact Soon With General Motors

DETROIT, May 11.—Leaders of the CIO United Automobile Workers were deep in conferences with the General Motors Co. today for a new contract, expected to materialize in the next few weeks.

After a preliminary meeting with company officials, the CIO representatives announced that both sides have agreed to do all they can to conclude the negotiations within three or four weeks.

Subjects to be negotiated include a general wage increase, improved grievance machinery, an improved seniority system, vacations with pay, joint adjustment of disputed standards of operation and other points set forth in the program of the UAW-CIO.

Murray, Hillman Present

Sitting in with representatives of the union at the first parley on May 2—a week after the CIO's trumphant sweep in the big GM Labor Board election—were CIO Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman.

Hillman, pressed by union business in New York, returned to the east almost immediately after the first session, but Murray remained here for a conference with UAW officials and members of the union's General Motors council executive board.

Speaking for himself and Hillman, Murray told the auto unionists that "the obtaining of a constructive, new agreement with GM will have much to do with blocking the efforts of certain reactionary elements in the nation to halt the tide of labor progress, both in industry and politically.

"The millions of the CIO are watching these negotiations, and you must not let them down. The GM workers want a new contract. They have voted for it. The GM workers must be served.

"The CIO has complete confidence that the expressed wish of the GM workers will be consummated by the joint endeavors of the negotiators and of the men and women in the GM plants and in the GM local unions."

Map Plans For Ford Drive

Detroit, May 11—Moving quickly to the organization of the last big open shop in the auto industry, the United Automobile Workers, CIO, today announced formation of a revamped Ford Organizing Committee.

The group will be headed by UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas. Other members are CIO Vice-Presidents Murray and Hillman, UAW Sec.-Treas. George Addes, and Delmond Garst, Richard Leonard and George Burt, the last three all UAW officials.

The board is making plans for an organizing staff to conduct the campaign.

Met. Life Co. In Contempt Proceedings

NEW YORK, May 11.—The New York State Labor Relations Board today ordered formal hearings to determine whether the billion-dollar Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. should be judged in contempt of court for refusal to bargain collectively with industrial insurance agents.

The hearings followed complaints by Local 30, Industrial Insurance Agents, CIO, which won an election at Metropolitan nearly two years ago. Subsequent orders from the SLRB to the company to bargain with the union have been ignored, the union charges.

"The officials of Metropolitan," declared Leon Berney, general organizer for the CIO union, "by their arrogant disobedience of the orders of the highest courts of New York State, are solely responsible for placing this great $5,000,000,000 public institution in the position of outlaw and law-breaker.

"The measure of the great need and desire for organization among insurance agents is demonstrated by the fact that despite management's three years of uninterrupted intimidation, coercion and firings, the union of Metropolitan agents is stronger than ever."

Order John Hancock Life To Re-Hire Agent, Pay $4,000

Boston, Mass., May 11—An industrial insurance agent fired by the John Hancock Co., for union activity was ordered reinstated this week by the State Labor Relations Board. In announcing the union's victory, Local 41, of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers, hailed the decision as setting a precedent, as this is the first case affecting an insurance agent which has been decided.

The board ordered the company to reinstate Jacob Krauss of Dorchester, with full seniority rights and awarded him back pay totaling about 4,000. He was discharged August 24, 1938.

The company was also ordered to stop interfering with the right of its employes to organize. During the hearing, the Board rejected the company's contention that it did not come under the Board's jurisdiction.

'IMPORTANT MILESTONE'

Gerald J. Connor, president of Local 41, hailed the decision as "an important milestone in the organization of industrial insurance agents. All over the country they have had their eyes on this case for months," he said.

"This decision demonstrating that the agents are protected by law in their efforts at trade union organization will give impetus to the building of a nation wide insurance agents' union which will negotiate wages, hours and conditions peaceably over the table in a democratic American way."

Last week the Industrial Insurance Agents local in New York won an election giving it bargaining rights for some 1,000 agents at the John Hancock office there.

Win Raises At Baltimore Radio Station

Baltimore, May 11.—The American Communications Assn. this week signed a new two-year contract with radio station WCAO, bringing a $2.50 weekly wage increase to the 14 employes under ACA jurisdiction.

Gerald Mathison, secretary-treasurer of the local, said the new contract sets a 40-hour week with time and a half for overtime and seven holidays a year, guaranteed departmental seniority and job protection during possible war service.

Engineers will receive a minimum of $40 a week under the new agreement, and announcers $35.

Gary CIO Sets Pace In Sports

Gary, Ind., May 11 — Men's and girls' basketball teams representing the Club Vida-CIO here have given midwest competitors something to worry about.

The girls' team — many of its members in their first year at the sport — wound up the season with 25 wins and only five defeats. In the course of the season, they cleaned up city and county championship tourneys, and came in third in the Calumet area competition, losing only to a couple of the best teams in the Chicago District.

The men's team won five straight games to cop the Lake-Porter AAU championship and then won three games to snatch the trophy in Indiana state competition, coming from behind in their final game to win.

At the national tournament in Denver, Colo., the Club Vida-CIO won a 69-50 victory over the Minneapolis Young Americans, composed of veterans of last year's University of Minnesota quintet. University of Montana proved too strong for the Gary boys, however, toppling the CIO team by a 42-39 margin.

Plan Labor Sports Day at World's Fair

NEW YORK, May 11. (FP) — Organized labor will take over the Sports Arena at the World's Fair on June 30 and July 7 to give visitors from all over the country a chance to see union athletics.

The plans, discussed at the second annual convention of the Trade Union Athletic Assn., representing 56 CIO and AFL locals, were approved by the fair's special events division.

The June 30 show, named "Peace & Progress for Labor Day," will start with a race from New York City Hall to the fair in which leading marathon runners will take part, and will be followed by a track meet for union members.

On July 7, "End Discrimination in Sports Day," a union athletic carnival and a beauty pageant will be staged.

"As the only organization of its kind in the city, we have a chance to show the world at the fair how labor can put over a big sports carnival," Jack Roth, retiring TUAA president, told the convention.

The TUAA has set up the Labor Sports Center at Seward Park High School, where workers can use the gym, track and pool for nine months a year, four nights a week, for 50c. It also has conducted inter-union baseball, football and basketball competition, and plans to extend its program to other sections of the country.

First Lady Hits Bata Methods

Washington, May 11.—The German-owned Bata Shoe Co.'s efforts to import concentration camp factory methods into the United States today bumped into opposition from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

The first lady said she had ony scant knowledge of the company's methods but could predict it was in for trouble "unless they allow unionization and pay union wages after workers pass the apprentice stage."

Mrs. Roosevelt, in expressing doubt about Bata methods, joined the United Shoe Workers, CIO, and numerous Congressmen who have been alarmed by Bata's threat to wage standards in the shoe industry. The company, which is operating a new plant at Belcamp, Md., is already at sword's point with the Wage-Hour Division and the Immigration Division of the Dept. of Labor.

The government maintains that more than 100 Czech workers were brought to Maryland under the false pretense that they were specialists and instructors, and that deductions for food and rent were forcing employes' wages below the 30c hourly minimum set up under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Push Drive At Cat's Paw

Baltimore, May 11 — A drive to organize the Cat's Paw Rubber Co., employing about 500 workers, has been launched by CIO forces here it was revealed today by Frank Bender, regional director. The firm is the largest of three rubber companies in the city.

Bender said that the Cat's Paw Co., which manufacturers heels and soles for shoes, gave almost every worker a 2½c wage increase in a vain effort to head off CIO organization. The firm pays a bare 30c-an-hour minimum, as set up by the Wage-Hour Act, with a few workers getting more.

CLOTHING, STEEL UNIONS REPORT GAINS

Unions Convene

Conventions Meet at New York, Chicago

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Two of the CIO's largest affiliates—the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers—met in Chicago and New York this week to hear reports of record-breaking gains, predictions of continued growth, and pledges of faithful support to the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

In Chicago the SWOC revealed that its number of contracts is nearing 700, that its membership at an all-time high, and that union contracts are near with the last remaining anti-union holdouts of Little Steel.

In New York the Amalgamated Clothing Workers announced to its Silver Jubilee meeting that membership now stands at 260,000. Pres. Hillman, in his opening address, pointed out that "it is because of the existence of CIO and the powerful constructive organizations it has built that we can look more hopefully to the future."

Robinson Accuses FBI Of Strike-Breaking

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 18.—Bluntly-worded charges of strike-breaking by the Federal Bureau of Investigation were made here today by Pres. Reid Robinson of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

Following settlement of the nine-month strike of three Ducktown Basin locals at the Tennessee Copper Co. plant, and completion of arrangements for the release on bail of 22 union leaders and members on whom G-men are desperately trying to pin charges of dynamiting U. S. power lines, Robinson said:

"The FBI Broke This Strike"

Blasting of a TVA power line feeding the plant brought FBI agents flocking into the area. The bombing coincided with attempted reopening of the plant, at a time when the strikers were receiving renewed support from CIO unions and a pledge of assistance from Pres. John L. Lewis.

TWENTY-TWO ARRESTED

Twenty-one members of the locals and International Representative M. C. Anderson, who was in charge of the strike, were seized by the G-men, held incommunicado, grilled for hours at a time and denied the right to consult attorneys.

A vacant YMCA building in Copperhill—where the plant is located—had been turned into a concentration camp by Hoover's men, and the union men, seized without warrant, were held without legal arraignment for six days. Anxious to pin the boming on union members, the FBI men refused to let the "prisoners" see their families or their lawyers during the entire period.

DISOWN 'CONFESSIONS'

Under the strain of days of third-degreeing, five of the men finally signed "confessions," which they promptly disowned after finally getting their freedom and having an opportunity to consult with union attorneys.

Robinson, flying here after a hastily-adjourned meeting of the international executive board in Denver, arranged for lowering of bail for the defendants. Anderson had been held in $25,000 and the other unionists in $3,000; these amounts were cut to $5,000 and $1,000 respectively.

TERMS OF PACT

Under the contract signed with the company, most of the strikers will be placed on a preferential hiring list, while the union will be recognized as sole bargaining agency provided the Labor Board makes no new certification within the next year.

In accepting the terms of the settlement, the Ducktown Basin workers realized they were giving up many of their demands, union officials said, but recognized their efforts must now be directed to winning acquittals for the 22 men arrested on the frameup.

Thomas Raps 'Sabotage' by State Board

Detroit, Mich., May 18.—The Michigan Unemployment Commission "is determined to do everything in its power to sabotage the administration" of the State unemployment compensation act, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers charged in a letter made public today.

Thomas' blast was made public after it became known that the commission had forbidden its counsel from representing it in state circuit courts over the award of almost $3,000,000 in benefits to Chrysler employes laid off during the dispute last fall.

The commission originally refused benefits to the laid off workers, but both the referee and the appeal board granted benefits to a large number of their group. Under the law the commission had to make payments, but was enjoined by two circuit court judges on petition of the Chrysler Corp., the Michigan Manufacturers Assn. and other corporate interests.

Telegraph Union Asks Job Security

Washington, May 18.—Protection of jobs of all telegraph employes and a guarantee of collective bargaining are essential elements of any proposals for legislation aimed to improve conditions in the wire communications industry, the American Communications Association, CIO, declared in a memorandum submitted this week to Senator Burton K. Wheeler.

The Wheeler Committee which is making an investigation of the telegraph industry, had requested interested parties to submit their views on the situation for inclusion in the interim report of the committee.

The ACA memorandum submitted by President Mervyn Rathborne, sharply criticized the Federal Communications Commission as "delinquent in obtaining information regarding hours, wages and working condition of employes in the communications industry."

The report also criticizes the FCC's recent recommendation for consolidation of the wire companies as intensifying the evils it would aim to correct "unless accompanied by specific and complete safeguards for labor and the public."

Employment in the two major telegraph companies has declined 33.7% during the past decade, the ACA estimated, a figure far in excess of the general decline. "This drastic decline in employment," the union's statement pointed out, "is due to the policy of the communications companies of solving their problems at the expense of and with complete disregard for the welfare of their employes."

The memorandum compared the average monthly wage rate of $105 for telegraph workers with the minimum monthly budget of the WPA of $112.36 needed to maintain an average American family on a subsistence level.

Squash McNutt Claim Of CIO Support

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 18 — Efforts by Paul McNutt, campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination, that he has the support of labor leaders, both CIO and AFL, today brought forth an immediate and indignant denial.

McNutt made his claim to labor support at a press conference in Detroit. Informed of the McNutt statement, John Bartee, secretary of the Indiana Industrial Union Council, declared:

"You can say that we stand 100% behind Pres. Lewis' statement on McNutt at the United Mine Workers convention."

At that time Lewis compared McNutt to ancient kings who sent out soldiers to protect strikebreakers, and added:

"Just like in Indiana a few years back when the governor, whose name was McNutt, sent troops into the coal mine area to protect the jobs of mine workers whose children were hungry and whose wives were sick."

Wage-Hour Chief Sets Clothing Industry Pay Base

WASHINGTON, May 18. — Hourly wage rates of about 200,000 garment workers located in practically every state will be increased under the minimum wage recommendation approved this week by Wage-Hour Administrator Col. Philip B. Fleming. This is the largest number of workers to be given increases by an industrial wage order under the federal wage-hour law.

The wage order which establishes minimum wage rates of 32½, 35, 37½ and 40 cents an hour for 26 divisions of the industry, will become effective July 15. The rates were recommended by a committee of 48 members equally representing the public, the employes and the employers.

"The apparel wage order will have more widespread effect than any order yet issued," Col. Fleming declared. "Wage competition has prevented even the socially-minded employers in certain sections of this industry from paying what America considers a decent wage.

REVIEWED EVIDENCE

"Before deciding to issue the order I carefully reviewed the extensive evidence on the economic and competitive conditions in the industry. The evidence leads me to believe that the prices people pay for clothes, even the lowest priced garments, will not be materially affected. From now on economies effected by the industry will not be accomplished by cutting wages."

The order will bring the number of workers in the apparel industry getting above 30 cents an hour to more than 500,000, and will increase the payroll of cut-and-sew garment establishments by an estimated $10,000,000 a year. Including the wage orders previously issued for the textile, hosiery, millinery, shoe, knitted underwear and knitted outerwear industries, the Wage-Hour Administration estimates that payrolls have been increased more than $25,000,000 a year.

36c Minimum Set for Wool Industry

Washington, May 18.—Approval of the 36-cents hourly minimum wage recommended by the Wool Industry Committee was announced this week by Col. Philip B. Fleming, Wage-Hour administrator. It goes into effect June 17.

Some 11,000 workers in the industry which employs a total of 140,000, were making less than 36 cents an hour in 1938, a study of the industry's wage structure disclosed.

Petition Uncle Sam For Five-Day Week

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Acting in the belief that working conditions in government should at least be on a par with those in private industries, the United Federal Workers, CIO, have embarked on a whirl-wind campaign to bring some 130,000 of Uncle Sam's nephews under the five-day week.

The drive, centering on passage of the Mead Bill (S. 3859) is taking form of petitions, on which 40,000 signatures have already been placed, UFWA leaders said. The bill would give government departments permissive power to institute the five-day week provided no additional expenditures are involved.

Arrangements for radio broadcasts and the distribution of two-inch lapel buttons with the slogan "I want the five-day week" are being made.

U. S. SHOULDN'T LAG

Pres. Jacob Baker of the UFWA, commenting on the union drive, pointed out that "the five-day week is becoming standard in private employment and there is no valid reason why the federal government should lag behind.

"In those agencies where the five-day week has been established, it has been conclusively shown that employes have been so stimulated that there has been no slump in production and indeed there has been a sharp rise in some places.

"Here in Washington, when the thermometer invades the sweltering brackets, workers' energies are sapped. Weekends off during the summer months should prove beneficial to the public service as well as to the employes."

CIO Clothing, Steel Unions Meet, Plan Big Organizing Campaigns

Hillman Lauds CIO Progress

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

New York, May 17. — The powerful Amalgamated Clothing Workers, assembled here for its Silver Jubilee Convention, today was making plans to spend close to $1,000,000 on intensive organizing campaigns during the next 2 years.

In speaking of future organization plans of the Amalgamated, Pres. Sidney Hillman praised CIO organizing campaigns as a benefit to all the nation's workers, adding that it is because of the progress of the CIO that "we can look more hopefully to the future."

BACKS CIO

The veteran president of the men's clothing union said the organization has supported "in every way" the CIO organizing plans, and would continue to do so.

Speaker after speaker told the delegates that the Amalgamated, despite its tremendous strides, must not be content to rest on its laurels, but should press forward to 100 per cent organization of the industry and its various subdivisions.

Changes in the constitution approved by the delegates included strengthening of the general executive board's powers to root out racketeering wherever it may appear, and provided for a $12,500 annual salary for the president. The increase was voted unanimously.

1,000 DELEGATES

With Pres. Hillman presiding, the 1,000 delegates heard glowing reports of the Amalgamated's progress during the past quarter-century—a period during which it has increased membership to 259,000, practically eliminated the sweatshop from all phases of the men's clothing industry, raised wages and helped to stabilize what was once a chaotic situation.

The convention, after opening day ceremonies in New York's huge Madison Square Garden, moved to the Manhattan Center. Hundreds of visitors filled the galleries, while the stage itself was bedecked with floral pieces. At either side of the stage bright neon signs proclaimed the Amalgamated's "Practical Solution for Unemployment—the 30-Hour Week."

Previously a number of speakers —among them Wage Hour Administrator Philip Fleming, Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins, New York State Industrial Commissioner Freida S. Miller, Sen. Robert Wagner and Mayor La Guardia of New York City had hailed the Amalgamated's contributions to the American labor movement and to industrial peace throughout the nation.

Two resolutions were passed

DELEGATES to the second convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, held in Chicago, listen to Chairman Philip Murray's keynote address, in which he said that resistance to the union in Little Steel has crumbled. Murray predicted that contracts will soon be signed with the last remaining holdouts in the nation's No. 1 industry.

CIO Urges Adequate WPA Fund

Washington, May 18.—The WPA bill now in Congress is "in many ways exactly like that passed last year" and therefore inadequate to the needs of the unemployed, Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, wrote to all CIO affiliates in urging their support for a liberalized bill to be offered in the House early this week.

The present bill, Hetzel pointed out, will provide roughly the same number of jobs as were provided last year if the $975,650,000 is spent within eight months as proposed. It also retains other features of last year's bill to which labor took strong exception, including the abandonment of prevailing wage scales, the 18 month automatic layoff, etc.

SUPPORT URGED

In calling for support for a liberalized bill, to be offered by Rep. Casey of Massachusetts, Hetzel pointed out that this proposed measure would raise the number of jobs to three million, set by the CIO as a minimum program, by appropriating two and a quarter billion dollars, and would bring other improvements.

"The CIO will also support moves for restoration of prevailing hourly rates, for elimination of the 25 per cent sponsorship provision, restoration of the Theatre Project, and for increases in monthly wage levels," Hetzel wrote.

"It is most important immediately to communicate with members of the House of Representatives requesting full support of the Casey amendment to crease the funds for WPA," he added.

"Immediate action is necessary."

Swing to CIO

HARTFORD, Conn., May 18. —The effect of the great landslide for the CIO in the General Motors Labor Board elections was reflected here when the Chuck Local 379, voted to leave the AFL and reaffiliate with the CIO United Automobile Workers.

Lewis Explains Stand On Labor Unity, War

New York, May 17. — President John L. Lewis of the CIO dealt vigorously with the question of labor unity and with labor's stand in regard to the war in an enthusiastically received speech at the Silver Jubilee Convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Hailed by Pres. Sidney Hillman for his contribution to making labor "better organized than at any time in the history of this nation," and greeted with a prolonged ovation by the delegates, Lewis spoke feelingly of the achievements of the Amalgamated in advancing its members' interests and "constantly contributing mightily of its strength to all other oppressed and badly circumstanced."

Referring to the existence of 11,577,000 unemployed, Lewis stated: "Perhaps it is now true that some few of these people may find employment by beating their plowshares into swords—which is perhaps contrary to the Biblical injunction—but the beating of plowshares into swords is not the answer to the grave internal problems that affect economic. social and political America. If American labor were united in this year of 1940, it would be better for labor, it would be better for the country" and labor could aid more in solving these problems, Lewis said.

"However, the Congress of Industrial Organizations is not responsible for the division in the house of labor in America."

The CIO leader recounted how the AFL leaders had expelled the

Labor's Candidates Win In W. Virginia, Maine

By I. MUFSON

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Labor-endorsed candidates in West Virginia, Maine and Indiana swept to victory in primary elections this week.

Conspicuous in this regard, added to the earlier defeat of Senator Burke of Nebraska, is the political slaying of that youthful dragon, Rush D. Holt, voted by the Senate press gallery as the most useless Senator in Congress. The name "Rush" fits him perfectly as he always rushed in where even fools feared to tread, let alone angels.

In the West Virginia primaries last Tuesday Senator Holt was thoroughly licked, coming out last in a three-man contest and very far behind even the second contestant. Senator Holt, who is only 35 years old, was first elected to the Senate as the result of labor's backing. It wasn't very long after he took his seat, however, before he began to "act up" and to break one after another the pledges he made to his supporters. He turned against his benefactors with all the fury characteristic of weakness.

The victory in West Virginia is a real labor achievement, where in addition to the defeat of Holt, Judge Harley Kilgore who beat Holt for the Senate, and Senator Neely who is the successful candidate for governor, were both supported by labor. John L. Lewis started off the campaign on April 1 when he spoke at a huge rally at Monongah, West Virginia, on the miners' annual holiday.

GAINS IN INDIANA

More news from Indiana reveals almost a political revolution in that state. The CIO unions have been working in complete harmony through Labor's Non-Partisan League and the result is labor gains all along the political front that highlight the present series of primary contests.

The leading candidate for state senator on both tickets was Chubinski of the Gary Steel Workers. Andrew Chandler of Delaware county led the entire field of candidates for state legislator. Walter Truman, member of the Hosiery Workers, was also nominated for the state legislature.

Labor victories extended to Maine, where a successor to the late Congressman Clyde Smith was chosen. Margaret Chase Smith, the widow of the Congressman, practically had no contest as she won by about 7,600 to 700 votes for her opponent. Mrs. Smith received the endorsement of the United Shoe Workers of America, other labor organizations and Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Little Steel Contracts Seen Near

By LEN DeCAUX

Chicago, Mar. 18. — Charting a course for complete organization of the steel industry, close to 900 delegates at the Second Wage and Policy Convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee enthusiastically received reports of their union's "steady and consistent growth" since the last convention in December 1937.

Philip Murray, fighting leader of this CIO union whose rapid and sweeping success has been one of the miracles of modern times. expressed the delegates' confidence that "Little Steel" will soon be brought into line with "Big Steel." Noting progress made in organizing Bethlehem, Republic and other independent companies, he declared:

"Today I am prepared to say that Eugene Grace and the Bethlehem Steel Corp. are whipped. I know that Grace and Tom Girdler (Republic Steel) can no longer offer any resistance to this organization.

"If all of you delegates go back home and put your shoulders behind this drive, I'll have Grace and Girdler looking me in the eye across a conference table in a comparatively short time."

Noteworthy among the evidences of growth and progress were the following facts pre-

Auto Union Wins 53rd GM Plant

Hyattsville, N. J., May 18.— A 976-318 Labor Board election victory at the Hyatt Roller Bearing plant of General Motors today gave the CIO United Automobile Workers exclusive bargaining rights in its 53rd GM plant.

The UAW-CIO swept 49 plant elections in last month's big NLRB vote, and had previously been certified for three plants of the company in Oakland, Calif. Three other run-off elections are to be held soon.

The Hyatt victory was a tribute to careful organizing work in recent months.

What Labor Wants Today

What's on labor's mind? Much the same problems as are on the minds of most Americans—war and peace, unemployment, how to earn a decent living, how to preserve and expand democracy, and how to make and enforce laws that will bring the greatest good to the greatest number.

What are labor's aims? They are practical, progressive and patriotic—and not at all obscure. For labor organizations, as democratic institutions, are always holding meetings, conventions and other representative gatherings at which resolutions are voted upon and announced to the whole world.

Two big CIO unions, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, have just met in convention. Between them they represent close to three-quarters of a million organized workers. In quoting from some of their adopted resolutions and reports on major issues, we find sentiments expressed that are typical of nearly every union gathering.

WAR. "Labor wants no war nor any part of war"—the historic declaration of John L. Lewis and the CIO convention is re-echoed again and again. For example—

"We are firmly of the opinion that the greatest contribution which this country can make is to remain at peace."—Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

"The bounden duty of labor in America today is to see that its sons are not thrown into this struggle."—SWOC.

UNEMPLOYMENT. Expansion of public works programs, unemployment insurance, and a conference to bring all interests together to work out a solution are repeated demands.

SWOC devotes special attention to technological unemployment, calling for (1) Reabsorption of displaced workers in regular labor turnover; (2) six months notice of displacement and aid in adjusting to other jobs; (3) employment in some capacity of displaced workers for whom there are no new openings until regular jobs open up, at wages charged to original cost of technological change; (4) job compensation payments for displaced workers who suffer a reduction of 10 per cent or more in average daily earnings; and (5) dismissal wages for workers who cannot be reabsorbed in other jobs.

WAGNER ACT. Defense of this basic labor law a major concern of every convention and hundreds of other meetings. All amendments at present before Congress are opposed. For example—

"The Smith bill completely destroys the collective bargaining requirements of the Act, limits collection of back pay. . . . destroys the effectiveness of Board procedure. . . . is 'a concrete weapon for the oppression of labor.'

The Norton bill "holds grave dangers to the rights of labor." Its craft amendment "would convert the Labor Board into an instrument of warefare against every industrial union and would promote rather than lessen, industrial strife."—ACW.

These are but some of the major public issues on labor's mind today. Others include preservation and expansion of wage-hour and social security legislation, civil liberties, guarantees of collective bargaining in government contracts, an adequate public housing program.

In general American workers want peace, jobs, security, preservation and expansion of labor's rights and civil liberties and an expanding public program for social welfare. They are saying what they want specifically, emphatically and unitedly in meeting after meeting, convention after convention.

All who run for public office in the coming elections would do well to study what is on labor's mind and act accordingly. For what labor wants, and is organizing industrially and politically to obtain, is also the desire of the great majority of the American people.

On The Home Front

Looking Ahead

By LEN DE CAUX

Two Giants Of CIO

THOUSANDS upon thousands of New York clothing workers straight from the shops filed past the platform for hours in an almost endless stream, when the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, opened its sessions at the Manhattan Casino.

The day before close to twenty thousand had shouted themselves hoarse at a huge and enthusiastic demonstration in Madison Square Garden.

With flags, banners and bands they celebrated the 25th anniversary, the Silver Jubilee, of their union.

The pride and pleasure in their faces as they looked up to the platform, cheered their leaders and sang their union songs, spoke volumes—volumes more eloquent than all the carefully documented reports which related in black and white the collective success story of the Amalgamated.

On the same day, another CIO convention was opening its sessions, in Chicago. Close to a thousand delegates from the steel mills were meeting for the second convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Here again a collective success story—hundreds of thousands of Americans who had raised their living standards through collective effort, instead of each trying to climb on the shoulders of his fellows.

And here again, the same pride shown in expressions, in bearing and in speech after speech from the convention floor. Here, too, printed reports with pages and pages of facts and figures, telling of wage increases, new contracts and all the improvements won by the SWOC.

"In the past twenty-five years," said the officers' rep[illegible]nting a total annual addition of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, "we have—

"Banished the sweatshop.

"Substantially increased wages.

"Reduced greatly the work hours per week.

"Inaugurated the five-day week, giving the workers two full days for rest, recreation and cultural development.

"Made collective bargaining the rule of the industry.

"Helped ourselves and helped others help themselves."

About 90% of men's clothing is manufactured under Amalgamated Union contracts. There is no excuse for any man to wear clothes that are sweatshop-made. Look for and ask for the Amalgamated label!

As becomes a founding union of the CIO, the Amalgamated has pushed far afield in organizing unorganized shirt workers, cleaners and dyers, laundry workers, neckwear and glove workers.

Its dues-paying membership has increased by close to fifty thousand since its last convention.

If the Amalgamated is a founder, father and generous contributor to the CIO, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee is one of its lustiest, manliest sons.

In but four years of existence, it has performed the miracle of organizing the greater part of the most basic industry of our machine civilization. Its record includes:

Union contracts with 654 companies employing 550,000 steel workers, 75% of them providing for sole bargaining rights or the union shop.

Wage increases averaging 26% won for the steel workers, representing a total annual addition to pay envelopes and purchasing power of $200,000,000.

The record of having, for the first time in American history, warded off wage cuts in a major depression—directly in the steel industry, and indirectly in the other industries that always used to follow the lead of steel in this respect.

Both these giants of the CIO are the children of revolt, as is our Republic itself.

The Amalgamated revolted against narrow and incompetent leadership 25 years ago. It was outlawed by the AFL, but grew and prospered in spite of it.

The SWOC was the first great organizing project undertaken by the CIO when it revolted against the narrow craftism of the AFL and determined upon the industrial organization of the unorganized.

Yet both these CIO unions have a record of concern for and constructive contribution to the stability and prosperity of their respective industries that is hard to match in labor history.

Just as the name of John L. Lewis, president of the CIO, is indissolubly linked with its largest union, the United Mine Workers, so the names of the two senior vice presidents of the CIO, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, are linked with these two unions that met in the same week.

Labor statesmen, whose influence and leadership has spread far beyond the confines of their respective industries, these men have inspired and guided a whole movement. So millions of American workers in all industries follow closely and take almost a personal pride in the achievements of the unions they head.

3 CIO Leaders On Radio Networks

Murray, Pressman Defend Act

By C. W. FOWLER

Washington, May 18.—CIO defense of the Wagner Act against crippling amendments moved along at full speed this week in a continued campaign of letters, wires and resolutions and visits to Congressmen and with coast-to-coast radio speeches urging nationwide support in the fight to save the Act by Philip Murray, CIO vice-president and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

Action on the current proposals to emasculate the Act, the Smith ripper bill and the Norton proposal to force craft unions on industrial workers, was again postponed by Congress, while a House-Senate Conference Committee took a back-handed swing at enforcement of the Act by recommending deep slashes in Labor Board appropriations.

This action brought a quick response from the Steel Workers, now meeting in convention in Chicago, when the delegates wired to President Roosevelt protesting the proposed $350,000 cut and urging him to veto it. The present crisis "is certainly not the time to arouse unrest and anger on the part of workers through such underhand attacks against the Act," the telegram said, in pointing out that the Act was "the most important legislation which labor has ever been able to obtain in this nation."

MURRAY SPEAKS

Speaking over a nationwide network of the National Broadcasting Co., Philip Murray urged his listeners to aid the CIO in its fight to preserve the industrial democracy and the stable labor relations made possible by the Act and by the industrial form of organization which proposed amendments would seek to destroy.

Strategy of the enemies of the Wagner Act and of labor has changed since last year, when they advocated open or very thinly disguised repeal, Murray said, in pointing out that the new tack is to "fill it with such repressive amendments that it will be a virtual millstone around labor's neck.

Pressman's radio speech also dealt with the dangers of meddling with the Act in a period of world crisis, in pointing out that progress "in establishing fair, civilized, democratic and peaceful relations in industry is seriously threatened" by the proposed changes.

"A period of world crisis like this is certainly the worst possible time to take away labor's rights," he declared, "to set union fighting against union, to set employers fighting against workers, and to revive the law of the jungle in the place of the orderly, democratic procedures of the Wagner Act."

EMIL RIEVE

CIO Backs Murray Health Bill

Washington, May 18—CIO support for the Murray Health Bill, (S. 3461), aimed at providing Federal financial assistance to States passing legislation for the control and prevention of industrial conditions hazardous to the health of workers, was voiced at hearings of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor by Dr. Walter N. Polakov, head of the engineering department of the United Mine Workers.

Dr. Polakov, who was delegated by President John L. Lewis to appear before the committee as an official representative of the CIO, pointed out that the bill introduced by Senator Murray, of Montana would make financial aid "available to states which are fully aware of their social responsibilities" and is in line with recommendations of both the CIO 1939 convention and the meeting of the United Mine Workers in January of this year.

Senator Murray's bill "aims to meet our criticism" of the Wagner Health Bill of last year, Dr. Polakov declared, by making more adequate provisions concerning the "study of industrial hygiene. . . . The new bill provides for general welfare by enabling the several states to make more adequate means for the control and prevention of industrial conditions hazardous to employes, and it lays out the way for administration of the plan by state labor departments and the administration of the fund by the Secretary of Labor."

Rieve Hits Foes Of Civil Rights

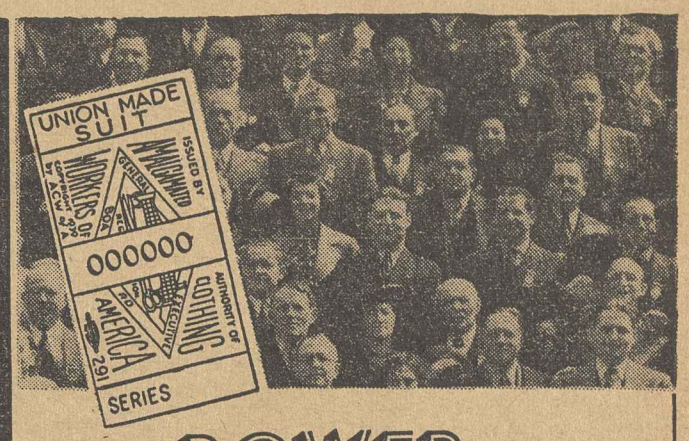
New York, May 18.—Present-day conditions in the United States demand a broadening of our basic civil liberties, CIO Vice-Pres. Emil Rieve told a nationwide audience on May 13 in a speech broadcast over the coast-to-coast Mutual Broadcasting System hookup.

The head of the CIO's powerful Textile Workers Union asserted that "our conception of human rights should encompass more than those precepts formulated by the founders of America." In addition to those fundamental civil liberties listed in the Bill of Rights, he said, must be added:

"The right of a people to live in dwellings fit for human habitation; to be free from disease; to have an education; to be accorded their rightful share of the fruits of their labor. These are now part of the matrix of American liberty by their labor have made it possible to grant each of these to every person in the land."

But while we have the resources for spreading these benefits throughout the nation, Rieve went on, the "answer to our poverty" must be found in faulty "methods of distribution."

TERROR IN SOUTH



Particularly in the South, where the textile union has thousands of members, there is "concentrated a form of civil and industrial suppression more ruthless and un-American that we have known in the last 75 years," Rieve charged.

The poll tax, which bars millions of low-income workers from their right to the ballot, is the method used by autocracy to still the voice of the people, he said, and "democracy is honored in the breach and in the mouthings of the autocratic who retain their seats in the government only by a suppression of democracy to the people who need it most."

Clothing Union In Organizing Drive

during the first five days of the two-week convention with scores to be discussed and acted upon next week.

One urged Congress to pass immediately the Oppressive Labor Practices Bill, whose recommendations for the outlawing of labor spies and industrial munitions were based directly on the findings of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee. The other authorized the union to donate $5,000 to the American Red Cross.

In his keynote speech to the convention, Hillman, a vice-president of the CIO, reviewed the union's activities in the two years since its last convention, pointing out that the ACWA weathered the 1938 depression "because of the power of our organization."

The experience gained by the Amalgamated during its quarter-century of activity, Hillman went on, has demonstrated "that we could not be satisfied merely with bringing organization to our own industry."

"I am sure," the ACWA leader continued, "that the Amalgamated leader will always be proud of the fact that it was one one of the founders of the great movement known as the CIO. Millions are organized today who were helpless and defenseless before we and others undertook the task of bringing organization to American mass-production industry.

"We have done our share in financial contributions and in the time and energy we have given to the task.

"I do not need to repeat to you what has been done by the CIO."

AID TO UNIONS

Recounting his activities in helping to organize the textile workers union and to bring peace to the disrupted automobile union, Hillman emphasized the fact that "it is because of the CIO and the powerful, constructive organizations it has built that we can look more hopefully to the future.

"Your organization in the last two years has given support in every way to complete the great task of the CIO. We do not need to make pledges because we are one of its founding organizations."

Hillman wound up his speech with a call for Pres. Roosevelt's re-election, a sentiment which was expressed by a number of the other convention speakers.

LaGuardia, speaking immediately after the ACWA president, paid tribute both to the union and to its leadership. Reviewing the organization's contributions to the clothing industry, the Mayor remarked that "when the industry wants good sound advice, they have to come to Sidney Hillman and the Amalgamated to get it."

HILLMAN

Lewis Discusses Unity, War

CIO unions for organizing the unorganized, although they desired to stay in the AFL. He declared that the executive council had suspended the CIO unions illegally so that they might not have voice nor vote in the Tampa convention.

AFL LEADERS TO BLAME

"They were too cowardly to face the music," they said. "We left on the toe of the jack boot of the executive council of the AFL," he asserted. "And the executive council, a good many of them, recognized that when we come back they probably won't be there long.

"That is the reason they are not going to let you come back in a hurry. If they were so afraid of a million members demanding industrial organization, you may believe they are not going to be in a hurry to let four million members back."

Relating that these same AFL leaders were the same people who had outlawed the Amalgamated and prevented it for a score of years from becoming part of the AFL, Lewis referred particularly to Thomas Rickert's advertising interests and Matthew Woll's insurance interests.

TURNED DOWN CIO OFFERS

"The CIO has repeatedly made proposals for uniting labor in one great federation of labor," he said. "But it is not responsible for the fact that certain men on the executive council prefer to keep labor divided rather than lose the small emoluments that go with executive council membership."

Lewis related his latest proposal for a joint convention of both CIO and AFL. "Perhaps the fact it would work was the reason it was not accepted," he said. Even his offer to step aside himself did not satisfy the AFL leaders, he declared, because "if John Lewis stepped out, they'd still have Sidney Hillman. If Hillman stepped out, they'd still have Philip Murray, and if Murray stepped out, there'd still be plenty more."

If good faith is lacking on the part of the AFL leadership and it persists in rejecting CIO proposals, "there is nothing for the CIO to do but to organize more new members in all these industries, in the hope that our augmented strength may cause even our adversaries to give real consideration to labor's logical objectives."

WAR PROBLEMS

Turning to the war, Lewis declared that "the soundness of the policy of labor in protesting against any participation in European war is more obvious today than ever." While labor is "fully in accord with the necessity for national defense," he said, "certain aspects should be clarified:

"(1) Will social legislation be protected?

"(2) Will the collective bargaining rights and the wages and hours of the workers be fully protected?"

In this connection, Lewis referred particularly to the aircraft industry, due for great expansion, which, he said, "has denied the right to organize and ridden roughshod over the provisions of the Wagner Act.

"(3) Will labor be given a voice in national defense policies and national defense production?

"I am fully aware that there are great interests in America that will oppose this. But I care nothing for them. If the government and the country want the cooperation of labor, let that cooperation be extended to labor, so that labor will have a voice in determining conditions.

PROTECT CIVIL RIGHTS

"(4) Will the civil liberties of American citizens be protected?"

Lewis called for the establishment by the Dept. of Justice of a "civil liberties division headed by some great lawyer who believes fundamentally and in fact in civil liberties and in whom the people have confidence." He referred to growing Ku Klux Klan activities in the South and to other increasing infringements of civil liberties.

"In the furore, noise and fury of beating plowshares into swords, labor must be alert," he said. "There are many things to do in America in addition to watching events in Europe.

"Seven million Americans are deprived of the right to vote by poll tax laws. They should be set free. There is no question of a racial approach to that question. The white man without a dollar for the poll tax fares no better than the Negro.

"Why not enforce the Constitution?"

Predict Pacts Near With Little Steel

sented in the report of Chairman Murray and the other officers:

The number of companies under contract with the SWOC has increased since the last convention from 445 to 654. These contracts protect the wages and working conditions of 550,000 steel workers.

In the first year of SWOC only 15 per cent of its contracts provided for sole bargaining rights or the union shop. Today 75 per cent of the contracts make such provisions.

Wages have been increased in the steel industry on an average of 26 per cent, due to SWOC, representing a total annual increase of $200,000,000.

Whereas at its last convention this new union in a previously unorganized industry "might have been compared to an army of untrained raw recruits," the officers' report declared that today it is "a unified group, well trained and well functioning. Its officers and members have subjected themselves to a voluntary form of self-discipline.

"The atmosphere of apprehension and fear which existed for so long in the steel industry has been largely, if not entirely, dispelled.

"A growing consciousness of power acquired by voluntary association in a bona fide industrial union has enabled the wage earners in the steel industry to achieve both economic and political freedom."

With a view to formal establishment of single unified steel workers' union on a permanent basis, the convention approved its officers' recommendation that an amalgamation be worked out with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers (at present a part of SWOC but with a separate setup), which has already approved such procedure.

CONVENTION

A joint convention is then to be held in May, 1942, for the drafting of a constitution and the election of officers of the unified Steel Workers Union.

In regard to contract negotiations, the convention made no definite wage pronouncements but authorized its officers "to exercize their best judgment in promoting improvements in the present wage-scale structure and to take advantage of any improved industrial conditions that appear to be of a reasonably permanent character to secure general wage and other improvements in our collective bargaining contracts.'

Appreciative of the benefits won under the National Labor Relations Act, particularly the reinstatement of almost 6,000 members discharged for union activity, the delegates acted at once upon receiving word that Congress had acted to cut $350,000 from the Labor Board's appropriation.

ASK VETO

Noting that this would destroy the Board's economic and research division, which is now primarily concerned with enforcing the Board's order against Republic Steel and collecting workers' claims, the convention wired President Roosevelt asking him to veto the bill passed by Congress.

The convention took a strong stand against United States involvment in the war, approving its officers' report, which stated in part:

"The moral issues involved in the current conflicts are overshadowed by considera - tions of power politics that have dominated the actions of the belligerents for several centuries . . . The bounden duty of labor in America today is to see that its sons are not thrown into this struggle."

NO FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENT

Declaring that "the preservation of American democracy is a matter of domestic concern," the adopted report declared: "The way to destroy democracy is to neglect it at home, while attention is devoted to foreign entanglements which can only bring death to many of our youth and misery to the American people."

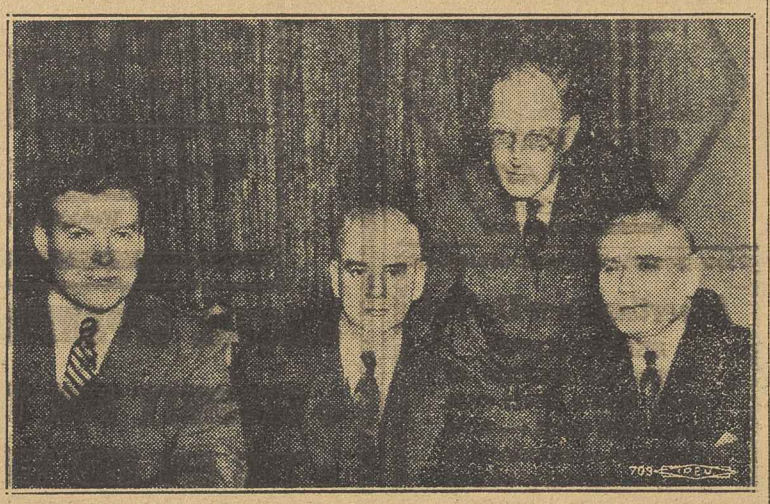
The convention took no action on proposals for a third term for President Roosevelt, referring the whole matter of a Presidential endorsement to the executive officers "for appropriate action at the proper time."

Warns Workers Beware War Propaganda

HIGH POINT, N. C., May 18.—Warning American workers to beware of being frightened or stampeded by war propaganda, the Rev. James Myers, industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, declared in a speech here last week that unemployment acts as a constant war danger.

Speaking at the Carolina-Virginia Workers' Education Conference, Mr. Myers said that "governments which are unable to solve serious domestic problems are always tempted to direct attention to possible foreign foes."

Certain recent statements from high places in Washington, he said "make one wonder seriously if that is not beginning to happen here." Urging the need of solving the unemployment problem, Mr. Myers declared that it was our No. 1 public problem and that we must not be diverted by war hysteria.



"We must stay out of war," he warned. "That is the only way we can preserve our democracy and labor's hard won freedom.

"For every war 'to save democracy' even when 'won', results in less democracy than before. In fact we should undoubtedly have a dictatorship of our own.

"Only by remaining at peace shall we be able to preserve democratic institutions and be in a position to help rebuild a ruined world."

Pointing out that national attention is being directed not only toward Europe but "toward the Far East and the Dutch East Indies where newspaper reports indicate that a large amount of American capital is invested," Mr. Myers called upon American workers to "refuse to allow their lives to be endangered by gestures toward the Far East by any administration, no matter how friendly to labor it may have been in other matters."

A number of Southern CIO members and officials attended the conference which was held under the auspices of the Southern Summer School for Workers directed by Mrs. Louise McLaren.

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

Contributions are received from a number of sources, and do not always reflect the views of the Committee.

By HAROLD J. PRITCHETT
President, International Woodworkers of America

At the beginning of 1937, one of our best informed and most conservative statisticians stated:

"1. If non-farm residential construction averages 800,000 dwelling units a year for the next five years, the period should close with a comfortable supply of housing.

"2. If construction averages 700,000 units annually, the period should close with a housing shortage comparable in magnitude with the present one (estimated at 500,000 units).

"3. If the average is 600,000 units the shortage at the end of the period promises to be very acute, comparable, let us say, with the worst period after the World War."

As opposed to this, we have the startling and disturbing fact to face that in 1939, a comparatively active year, there was only an estimated 475,000 units constructed.

This becomes even more disturbing when we learn that the major number of these units in 1939, were designed for tenancy by persons in the upper income brackets.

Our problem is not that we cannot build enough homes, but that construction has been directed to those whose incomes are far beyond that of the average worker.

OWNERS' AND TENANTS' MARKETS

Real estate dealers figure on a 5% safety line between a tenants' market and an owners' market. An average vacancy of 5% of the dwellings in the United States is considered "safe". As a result of the 1930 census, and a Real Property Inventory in 1933, it was estimated that 7% of the dwellings in this country were vacant. On the face of it, then, it would seem to contradict the much-publicized housing shortage — at least in 1930 and in 1933.

But in 1933 practically all vacancies were in the high rent dwellings. The Real Property Inventory found that about 7% of all families were abnormally doubled up with other families. For the most part, families not only doubled up, but at the same time moved to cheaper and less desirable dwellings, adding greatly to those numbers living in substandard dwellings in districts that breed crime, juvenile delinquency and disease.

It has become increasingly clear that families must live in unsafe, unsanitary dwellings, or pay a disproportionately large percentage of their income for rent, or prompt steps must be taken to avoid a housing shortage verging on panic.

MILLIONS OF NEW FAMILIES

For the past two decades we have not come within 50% of meeting the need for low-cost dwellings. Somewhere that slack must be taken up, and the demand for low-cost housing naturally increasing each year, must be met.

In 1945 the United States will contain 7,000,000 more families than in 1930. All but an infinitesimal number of these families will require houses at low rental. At the present rate of construction we will not have built anywhere near 7,000,000 houses in that period, let alone providing dwellings for families now in houses that are unfit for human habitation.

A gigantic construction program is necessary or these families will be condemned to live in even more sordid slums than exist today. They will be forced to double up and then redouble, with other families in order to keep some semblance of a roof over their heads.

There is a market for millions of low cost homes in the United States. Almost unanimously, authorities on low cost housing declare that government aid will be necessary to meet the market.

The efforts of the United States Housing Authority are deserving of much praise, but if we are to pass the experimental stage, if we are to provide homes for those who need them, if the goal is to be satisfactory homes for all rather than sociological data, housing plans with government aid must be expanded to cover the immediate need.

Fur Workers Start $100,000 Defense Fund

NEW YORK, May 18.—A defense fund of $100,000 to be devoted to the case of the 11 officers and members of the International Fur and Leather Workers recently convicted for alleged violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law and for any "anti-trust" case which may arise in the future, was voted unanimously this week at an IFLWU regional conference of 400 local executive board members and officers held here.

A strongly worded resolution passed at the conference declared that the "anti-trust" prosecutions will not intimidate IFLWU locals or officers from full enforcement of every union agreement and that all speculations of employers to utilize the recent trial as a stepping stone to violating union contracts are futile.

WON'T SACRIFICE RIGHTS

"Regardless of the 'anti-trust' case against IFLWU officers, union does not and will not give up the right to organize and strike in defense of its members' rights and conditions," the resolution stated.

Delegates at the conference represented over 80% of the membership of the IFLWU's fur division. Unqualified support to defend the leadership and to defeat the government's union smashing attack was expressed by every speaker.

A second resolution passed unanimously by the delegates congratulated officers and members of Greek Local 70 upon their victory in winning an agreement settling the six months' strike against the United Greek Fur Manufacturrs Association. The employers signed a closed shop contract which they had been refusing to do for two years, providing 11 months equal division of work.

Auto Workers Plan Camp Sessions

Detroit, Mich., May 18.—A summer camp for auto workers will be held at Circle Pines camp, 150 miles west of Detroit on Chief Noonday Lake for two one-week sessions running from June 30 to July 6 and from July 7 to 13.

John Brophy, CIO director of local industrial unions, will deliver the "commencement" address on the closing day. The program will include both study courses and recreation. A well-equipped labor library will be provided for the camp through the cooperation of the Detroit public library.

Cost for members of the UAW will be $7 a week which will cover room, board, medical care, tuition, recreation and movies for one week.

Anti-CIO Candidate Swamped

Monroe, La., May 18—Of 28 candidates for office in the municipal elections held this week, the one who advertised an anti-CIO program in the local newspapers struck by the Monroe Newspaper Guild, polled exactly 352 votes out of more than 6000 cast in the mayoralty race. No other candidate advertised in the News-Star and Morning World which were struck on April 11, last.

This decisive defeat was administered in a community which has been consistently misinformed by the local newspapers about the character and aims of the CIO, of which the 18 Guild strikers are the only members within 90 miles of this city of 26,000 people.

Guildsmen and sympathizers hailed as virtual victory the 3176 votes polled in the race for the city board of education by Striking Guild Secretary Harold Breard, who was dismissed by the struck papers for union activity. Breard missed election by the narrow margin of 149 votes.

Packinghouse Union Maps Drive at Swift

CHICAGO, May 11.—With close to a dozen Armour agreements tucked in its belt, the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee today launched plans for a sweeping union campaign in the plants of Swift & Co.

Decision to push the Swift drive was reached at a meeting of PWOC district directors called together here by Chairman Van A. Bittner, who declared: "We find favorable conditions for the prosecution of a great organizing drive in all packinghouse centers where there are important Swift plants."

Key plants in the Swift drive are located at Chicago, East St. Louis, Des Moines, S. St. Paul, St. Joseph, Mo., and Omaha. At the Milwauke plant, which has long been a PWOC stronghold, the union will immediately ask for contract negotiations, it was decided.

PREDICT SUCCESS

Both Vice-Chairman Nicholas Fontecchio, who presided in the absence of Bittner, and Director Arthur Kampfert, expressed confidence that the drive will be an overwhelming success.

"Organization of the Swift workers in Chicago and other major Swift plants is proceeding rapidly following the stipulation recently signed by the company withdrawing recognition from the Employes Security League in Chicago and St. Joseph," Kampfert pointed out.

"This is our green light, our signal to push full steam ahead to obtain sole collective bargaining rights and make agreements."

Indict Ex-Pelley Aide On Forgery Charge

WASHINGTON, May 18.—David Mayne, former Washington agent for William D. Pelley, head of the fascist Silver Shirts, was indicted today by a federal grand jury on two counts of forgery and false pretenses.

The case grew out of Mayne's sale of allegedly forged letters linking Pelley and the Dies Committee to Gardner Jackson, legislative representative of Labor's Non-Partisan League, for the sum of $105. The letters purported to show that Pelley and Dies had reached an agreement that the Dies Commitee would not investigate too closely the Silver Shirts' activities.

Conviction on all three counts could carry a maximum penalty of 26 years.

JACKSON PLEASED

Jackson expressed gratification that the indictments had been handed down, adding "we were confident when we filed our complaint against Mayne, immediately after he publicly boasted of his forgery, that the facts themselves were indictments.

"We look forward to the trial of this case so that judicial procedure may develop all the circumtsances inducing Mayne to commit his brazen act on behalf of the Dies Committee. The discovery of these circumstances in court may well have far greater significance than the mere punishment of a misguided individual in these days of war fever, when the poisoning of the public mind proceeds with new and terrifying refinements."

Indiana CIO Charters Two New Locals

Indianapolis, Ind., May 18—Two new CIO unions chartered and an improved contract for a third marked a week's organizing activity in Indiana, as reported from the office of James Robb, CIO regional director.

The two new locals are Lodge 2199 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, chartered in the Kitselman Fence Co., at Muncie, and the United Paper Workers Local Industrial Union 1049 at Elkhart. Negotiations for a contract at the Kitselman Co. are already under way.

The contract renewal brought new gains in the shape of paid vacations to SWOC workers in Decatur, something new for foundry workers in the Fort Wayne area, and retained sole collective bargaining rights and other gains won in the first contract.

Nova Scotia Unions Press Five Cases

Trenton, N. S., May 18.—Applications for five conciliation boards to inquire into labor disputes in Nova Scotia and sent to Ottawa by CIO unions are now before the Federal Department of Labor.

Three of the applications were for investigations into wage disputes between the Trenton steel plant, the Eastern Car Works, also at Trenton, and the Standard Clay Works at New Glasgow, and their employes, who are members of CIO unions.

MINERS INVOLVED

These were forwarded to Ottawa by Silby Barrett, Regional Director of the CIO for Canada. The other two conciliation boards were asked for by the CIO District 26 United Mine Workers of America to probe disputes with the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Corporation and the Sydney and Louisburg Railway.

Establishment of conciliation boards to inquire into industrial disputes is provided for in the Industrial Disputes Act. Findings of such boards are not necessarily binding upon either side.

The last conciliation board which functioned in Nova Scotia unanimously recommended wage increases for UMW members in their dispute with the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

Protest Poll At Utility

NEW YORK, May 18.—Full charges presented by the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee to the Natl. Labor Relations Board accuse Eleanor Herrick, local Board director, of bias against the CIO and of giving "the company complete control over the election" in the ballot held at the Consolidated Edison Co. plants here.

The union charged, in part, that the company was permitted to know election details three weeks before the union heard of them from Mrs. Herrick, that the company's addressing and mailing systems were used by Board officials, that company officials gave instructions to workers on how to vote, and that Mrs. Herrick expressed "contempt and hostility to the Board and to the Act."

UP TO THE BOARD

The union's brief puts the charges up to the Board for action, and was accompanied by a statement by Harold J. Straub, Utility Workers Organizing Committee director, that the union "is renewing its request to the Board in Washington that Mrs. Herrick be removed from office and that it make a thorough investigation of the entire matter."

"What is important," the CIO brief said, "is the extraordinary manner in which the Regional Director, in private conference with the company, arranged basic election details that it was her duty to determine alone. Her partiality makes it unimportant to inquire whether she or the company counsel prevailed in these elections.

"It is enough to remind the Board that almost every one of the decisions reached in this unorthodox manner gave the company control over the elections, permitted it to determine eligibility, to force employes to vote and to assimilate these elections in the employes' eyes to the old company union elections."

Consolidated Edison's long record of violations and defiance of the Wagner Act should have required especially careful precautions in the handling of the elections, the union declared, in order to prevent renewed company interference with the workers' right to a free choice of unions.

Canadian Steel Men To Vote on CIO

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 18.—Members of the Algoma Steel Workers Union will take a vote within two weeks whether they should join the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Silby Barrett, SWOC regional direcor, announced after he addressed the union at a special meeting.

Denounce New Drive On Fur Union

New York, May 18 — New indictments against Ben Gold, president, Irving Potash and other officials and members of the CIO Intl. Fur and Leather Workers Union were denounced in a statement released from the union here as "another outrageous frame-up" and "part of the vicious attack against our union and other unions."

The new indictments, which followed sentencing of Gold and 10 union leaders on "anti-trust" charges, alleged that anti-union testimony of a government witness was repudiated by him as the result of pressure from Fur Workers officials. The witness, George Karpouzas created a sensation when he recanted lengthy testimony while still on the witness stand during the trial.

"It seems that the authorities, in league with unscrupulous employers and stoolpigeons, are bent on smashing our union and destroying the hard-won union standards we succeeded in establishing in the fur industry," the union statement said.

CIO Witness Hits Tax On Voting

Washington, May 18—All civil rights of Americans are in danger "as long as the right to vote is for sale," Dr. Walter Polakov, appearing for the United Mine Workers and for the CIO, told a House committee hearing here on the Geyer bill to outlaw the poll tax that disfranchises citizens of eight Southern states.

"The poll tax," Polakov declared, "is a form of discrimination against those who do not pay or can't afford to pay the price. It is class legislation aiming to suppress the will of the low-income groups of our citizens.

Mothers March for Peace

MOTHER'S DAY parade in Detroit was dedicated to keeping this country out of the European war. Thousands of unionists joined the marching crowds.

To Honor Massacre Victims

CHICAGO, May 18 — Trade unions and other progressive organizations will take part in a memorial service to be held in South Chicago, May 26, in commemoration of the third anniversary of the Republic Steel massacre.

Ten workers lost their lives as the result of a police attack made on a peaceful demonstration of strikers held near the South Chicago plant of the Republic Steel Corp., on Memorial Day 1937.

All lodges of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Chicago area are joining with Republic Steel lodges 1033 and 1303 in the services. A program of speeches, and a parade has been arranged by the committee, according to George Mischeau, SWOC representative.

Construction Union Locals Increase By Four A Week

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Local unions affiliated with the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee mounted toward the 150 mark this week as the organizing drive was speeded by advance of the spring construction season.

Forward march of the UCWOC was marked in Detroit by signed contracts with virtually all the industrial painting firms in that large industrial center. This included the painting contractors who do maintenance work on the big auto factories, already firmly established under the CIO banner.

The Nation's capital saw further advances of the UCWOC with several downtown jobs in progress—one on the State Department building. Another was on a large Washington hotel, a popular consumer-owned gasoline station, many store jobs, and several houses. A $50,000 printing plant built entirely by UCWOC members was nearing completion.

FOUR A WEEK

In Pittsburgh, UCWOC organizers reported formation of a local of about 350 truck drivers, formerly an independent union. Other new locals were established in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, Tennessee, New York, Connecticut and New Jersey. New locals are being set up at the rate of about four each week.

A number of supply houses, including a shale products and a brick and clay plant, were among those organized by the UCWOC in its spring drive. In the case of the brick and clay workers a local of the AFL left the craft union body to affiliate with the CIO union.

Heavy construction work, road and bridge building, under contract with UCWOC in Pennsylvania and Maryland caused increased interest by contractors in the UCWOC program. Many negotiations are in progress covering this type of construction work.

Scores of individual contracts have been signed in recent weeks with general and subcontractors in all parts of the nation from Seattle to the Eastern seaboard.

Another important roadbuilding contractor employing 500 men signed with the UCWOC this week. The firm, the States Engineering Company, of Rapid City, S. D., has a paving contract covering a large section of the Pennsylvania Turnpike running between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg. The contract covers this as well as all other jobs that may be obtained by this firm.

Vote 5-1 For CIO Union

Gustine, Calif., May 18.—Two years in the AFL was more than enough for employes of the Bald Eagle Magnesite Mine near here. This week, they voted by a 5-1 majority to switch affiliation to the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

Canadian CIO Strikes Blow at AFL Splitters

HALIFAX, N. S., May 18—A telling blow is being struck at division in Canadian labor by the swing of CIO unions to affiliation with the All-Canadian Congress of Labor, which is now under way.

First to affiliate were the two Canadian Districts of the United Mine Workers of America. Union of District 18 (Alberta) and 26 (Nova Scotia and New Brunswick) added 20,000 to the Congress membership.

Thousands more are being taken into the Congress with the affiliation of additional CIO organizations. Leaders of both the CIO and UMW in Canada issued statements giving their complete approval.

Commenting in Toronto upon the first affiliations carried out by the UMW, C. H. Millard, secretary of the Congress of Industrial Organizations for Canada, gave his full endorsement.

"All other CIO unions in the Dominion are taking steps to apply for similar affiliation and have been joined by one of the largest independent unions in Canada (Canadian Shoe Workers and Allied Crafts) who voted to join the Congress," he revealed.

"The CIO considers this move as necessary and constructive," he continued. "Particularly at this time Canada's industrial development will be greatly aided by a virile and united labor movement."

Affiliation of the UMW districts was welcomed in a statement made by A. R. Mosher, president of the Congress, in Otawa.

"This is the first step in a development of far-reaching significance to the Canadian labor movement," he said, "as it is anticipated that the Canadian branches of other unions which are affiliated with the CIO will take similar action in the near future.

"These branches have been given full autonomy to deal with all matters affecting the interests of their Canadian membership, including organizing activities, the negotiating of agreements with employers and the general policies governing their activities in Canada.

"It is proposed that at the next convention of the Congress, a new and more inclusive body will be established, with a constitution which will permit of close co-operation between the constituent groups, not only in advancing the interests of Canadian workers, but of carrying on extensive organization in every industry in Canada."

The step taken by Canadian mine workers in affiliating with the Congress was declared "forward and progressive" by D. W. Morrison, president of District 26, in a statement from his headquarters in Glace Bay.

President Morrison said "within the past few weeks officers of districts 18 and 26 met and decided unanimously on this action.

"Following this session district boards in both areas convened and with the new constitution of the All-Canadian Congress of Labor before them unanimously endorsed action taken by their chief officers."

CIO LEADS FIGHT TO SAVE LABOR LAWS

Cudahy Workers VoteCIO By 4-3

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—Workers in the big Cudahy meat packing plant here have shown their preference for the CIO over AFL craftism by rolling up an overwhelming majority for the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, in a Labor Board election.

The vote, 410 to 285, snowed under the Amalgamated Meat Cutters in spite of a "closed shop" contract held by the AFL outfit with the company. According to the PWOC, AFL agents resorted to intimidation as a last resort to win the election.

"The powerful movement into the CIO was a forceful rejection of the AFL outfit which had a closed shop contract with the company for over a year," the PWOC commented.

"Intimidation and terrorism was the one card the AFL could play. Its agents had the run of the plant up until the election to threaten the workers, to fill them with lies and slanders against the PWOC and the CIO as a whole."

Maytag Signs CIO Pact

New York, May 25.—Maytag, the big washing machine concern in Newton, Iowa, that tried to wipe out the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers' local during a bitter 98-day strike in the summer of 1938, has signed an agreement with the union, William Sentner, UERMW vice president, announced here today.

This agreement will replace the one which terminated on May 9, 1938, when the workers walked out in protest against a 10 per cent pay cut, Sentner said. It provides for the continuation of the present wage rates; seniority rights; handling of grievances by shop stewards, and preferential hiring for union members in direct raito of union workers to the total number of employes.

Re-employment of union members who were on the payroll from September 1, 1938 on, is also included in the terms.

The new agreement follows a settlement reached through the National Labor Relations Board and approved by all parties, providing for immediate reinstatement of 36 union employes and payment of $5,000 in back wages.

Speaks At Meeting

CIO POSITION on the question of labor unity and of war was defined by Pres. John L. Lewis in a one-hour address to the Silver Jubilee Convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in New York.

(FOR TEXT OF ADDRESS, SEE PAGE SIX)

Unanimous for CIO!

DETROIT, May 25. — CIO—102; AFL—0.

In this decisive fashion, employes of the Meyer & Stark Manufacturing Co. today gave their answer in a plant-wide election to three years of AFL company unionism.

For the past three years they had worked under an AFL closed shop contract, which guaranteed the employer the right to keep wages and working conditions far below the employes' requirements.

The CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers, Organizer Harry Rothenberg declared, will immediately press for the 40-hour week, 10c-an-hour wage increases and improved seniority rights.

Blocks Attempts To Scuttle Acts In 'Emergency'

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Prompt CIO action blocked attempts to destroy labor protective laws here when Congressional reactionaries tried, under cover of "war emergency" to kill the Walsh-Healey Act covering workers on government contracts, but were forced to withdraw proposed clauses in defense bills calling for removal of the restrictions on employers.

At the same time, a Congressional Committee reported favorably on amendments to the Walsh-Healey Act that would deprive Wagner law violators of profitable government contracts. This measure was long urged and supported by the CIO.

CIO officials, however, warned against a trick clause in the bill as reported that would allow the President to sweep away the entire Act in a time of "national emergency so proclaimed" by him.

They also urged renewed protests against proposed crippling amendments to the Wagner Act, which they warned might be brought up again at any time.

On relief, the CIO urged support for the Murray amendment offered in the Senate to provide 3,000,000 jobs, noting its defeat in the House in favor of the inadequate administration supported bill.

CallingRep.Hoffman— The CIO's in Town

ALLEGAN, Mich., May 25.—Memo to labor-baiting Rep. Clare Hoffman:

The CIO's in your home town.

Following up an intensive organizing drive, the United Automobile Workers today had signed an exclusive bargaining agency contract with the Blood Bros. Machine Co., auto parts makers.

The pact provides for wage increases running up to 12 cents an hour, the 40-hour week, seniority and payment by the company of the entire cost of a group insurance plan under which families of employes will receive $1,000 on death or $10 a week in case of sickness.

UAW officials pointed out, for the Congressman's benefit, that this item alone, formerly paid by the workers, is a $1.20 a week gain, more than the workers pay to the union each month in dues.

"All of Hoffman's anti-union speeches and voting in Congress have apparently been unable to prevent his fellow citizens—and constituents — from taking advantage of the benefits of unionism to win wage increases, shorter hours and job security," a union spokesman said.

Picket Line Poetry

A New High-700 for CIO, One for AFL

NEW YORK, May 25. — AFL craft unionism rated exactly one vote when 700 workers at the Consolidated Film Industries here went to the polls in a Natl. Labor Relations Board election. The CIO United Photographic Employes, LIU 415, rated 700.

Rem-Rand AFL Local Goes CIO

NEW YORK, May 25. — A hardy survivor of James H. Rand's original "Mohawk Valley Formula" today cast its lot with the CIO.

The union, an AFL federal local with 500 members employed at the Remington-Rand plant at North Tonowanda, N. Y., joined the growing swing to the CIO by voting to switch affiliation to the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Composed largely of skilled workers, the North Tonowanda local was organized during the NRA wave of union activity, and is one of the few locals which survived the big strike of AFL craft unions at the Remington-Rand plants in 1936, UERMW officials declared here.

That strike, it is recalled, was broken by the now notorious "Mohawk Valley Formula" originated by the head of Remington-Rand.

IGNORED BY AFL

The local held its own strength, contributing regularly to what its members were told was "a big strike fund" collected by the AFL executive council. Discriminatory discharges led to a strike in the Tonawanda plant a few months ago.

The union immediately appealed for aid to the AFL's new director of organization, Frank P. Fenton, who had been in charge of the disastrous 1936 strike, but was unable to reach him.

Rebuffed by the AFL executive council, given no financial or other aid, the local appealed to the CIO electrical workers union, which promptly sent representatives, helped the local win the strike, and won reinstatement of the discharged members.

On their return to work, the members voted to affiliate with the CIO union. The UERMW has had a Remington-Rand service shop in New York City under contract for some time.

News Guild In National Hearst Parley

New York, May 25.—The American Newspaper Guild's first collective bargaining parleys with the national management of a newspaper chain opened here when union officials met with top executives of the Hearst organization.

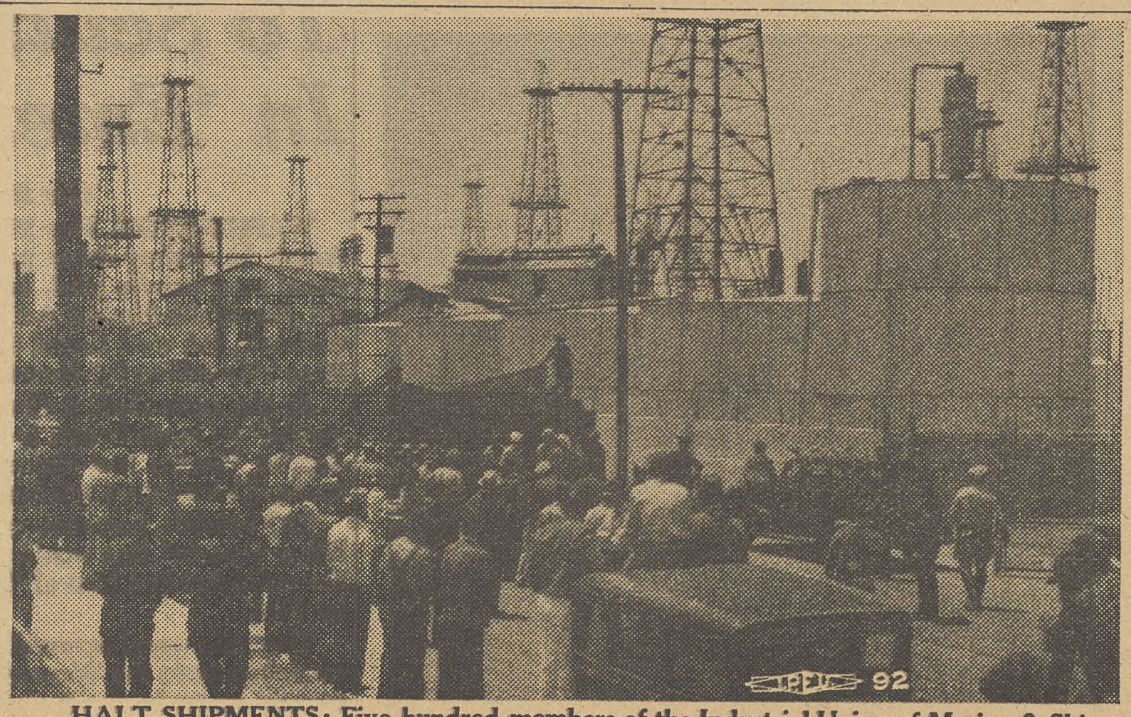
Basis of the Guild's demands was worked out by the union's Hearst Advisory Council last fall in collaboration with representatives of Hearst units of the Guild. The program includes the Guild shop, national severance pay policy, national overtime payment policy, national transfer policy and job security.

Opening of the sessions followed settlement of the 17-month old Hearst Chicago American strike in April. Representing the Guild at the parleys were Vice-Pres. Milton Kaufman, Sec.-Treas. Victor Pasche, Pres. Alice Fahy of the Newark, N. J. Guild, and a representative of the New York Guild.

Workers Use Ballots to Choose CIO Unionism, Survey Shows

NEW YORK, May 25. — The secret ballot allowing workers free choice of the kind of union they want, shows overwhelming majorities for CIO industrial unionism as opposed to AFL craftism, according to a survey just issued by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

The record shows that the UERMW, running in 47 elections in which 26,148 workers voted, in the past two years, won 38, in which 21,929 workers voted for CIO as against nine elections lost in which only 4,129 workers voted for the AFL.



These are elections in which the CIO union took part. The showing of two AFL unions in the industry—the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Intl. Assn. of Machinists—is far below the CIO record. The IBEW, running in 31 elections with 15,079 voters, lost 20, won 11 in which only 463 voted for craft unionism. The IAM, running in 61, lost 30, won 31 in which 4,994 preferred the AFL.

THE REASONS

The reasons behind these figures are told in a little pamphlet also just released by the UERMW, entitled "Your Union at Work." The pamphlet, after a brief history of the run-arounds the electrical workers took from the AFL crafts before they joined the CIO, points out just what the union has won for its thousands of members in every section of the industry covered.

Close to 250,000 workers are getting better wages and job protection through UERMW contracts, the pamphlet says. Of every $5.00 spent for electrical goods in the U. S., $4.00 is spent in UE organized shops.

Over a million grievances have been satisfactorily settled—and has won these gains with recourse to strikes in only seven out of 100 negotiations and contracts.

HALT SHIPMENTS: Five hundred members of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers picket the shipyard of the Consolidated Steel Co. at Los Angeles harbor after the firm signed a low-standard closed shop contract with the AFL. The federation has the pact, but the CIO has the workers—and they turned out to prevent operations at the plant.

Tories Try New Method To Deport Harry Bridges

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Foiled in their effort last year to deport Harry Bridges, Australian-born leader of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union and CIO director for California, Congressional reactionaries today had launched a new ouster move.

A bill introduced by Rep. Ford of California providing for deportation of Bridges, won approval of the House Immigration Committee which sprayed their anti-labor action with a sugary dose of "patriotism." The bill, unique in Congressional history, now goes to the House.

Last year's deportation move was swamped by the trial examiner's report of Dean James Landis of Harvard Law School, who, after sifting thousands of pages of evidence, ruled that no basis existed for the ousting of the union official from the country.

Crawford To Retire As Head of Guild

Washington, May 25.—Kenneth Crawford, president of the American Newspaper Guild since the death of Haywood Broun last winter, will not run for re-election.

Crawford, who is Washington correspondent for the new New York paper PM, announced his intention in a letter to the guild's recent executive board meeting.

Declaring he never considered his function as Guild president as "anything but transitional," Crawford recommended that the ANG alter its constitution to provide for a paid, full-time president.

Frisco CIO Hits Ouster Bill

San Francisco, May 25.—The San Francisco CIO Industrial Union council charged today that the only reason for the new attempt to deport Harry Bridges is his record in organizing unorganized workers.

The council said the bill aimed at Bridges "indicates a state of prejudice and hysteria which might well alarm the American people."

It added: "Our legal and democratic processes have us against bigotry and intolerance.

"Those democratic processes have clearly vindicated Bridges of the accusations made against him, and leave only one reason why certain interests want him deported: he has been successful in organizing unions and waging strikes to raise the wages of American labor."

An amusing echo of the Bridges deportation hearing of last summer was heard in the state's frantic effort to reach John Leach, one of the government's "star witnesses" against Bridges. Leach is charged with defrauding the state by illegally accepting relief funds.

Shipbuilders Strike at AFL Phony Pact

Los Angeles, May 25. — Union leaders are asking CIO-wide support for the strike of shipbuilding workers against the Consolidated Steel Co., shipbuilders at the San Pedro yards, called last week by Local 9 of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers in protest against company refusal to bargain collectively.

The strike was caused, CIO officials declare, when the company signed a contract with an AFL union that has no members in the area, in order to avoid bargaining with the CIO local. Three thousand CIO workers are involved, and it was their union, the CIO Council points out, that brought the government contracts to San Pedro that Consolidated is now working on.

"The AFL is attempting to take the building of these ships away from the legitimate shipbuilders of the community," the Council statement said. "If the AFL is to build ships, it will have to import the workers. There are no AFL shipbuilders here."

Montana CIO Drafts Program

BILLINGS, Mont., May 25. —An eight-point state legislative program designed to protect the rights of workers, preserve their civil liberties and improve their working and living conditions was adopted at the convention of the Montana CIO Industrial Union Council held here. Delegates also endorsed the CIO national program.

Michael P. Widman, assistant CIO director of organization, the main speaker at the convention, explained the aims of the CIO, outlined gains made under its program, and pointed out the need for further organization among the 40,000,000 unorganized workers.

DEFENDS WAGNER ACT

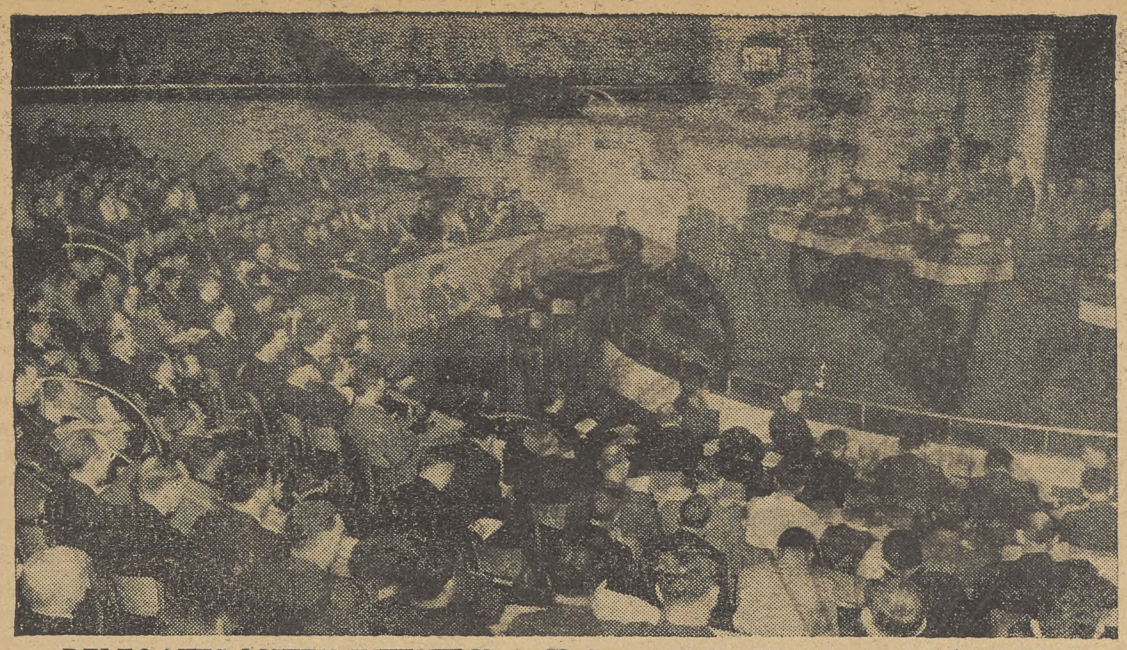
Observing that strenuous objections have been made by anti-union employers to the Wagner labor relations act on the basis that it is one-sided, Widman said: "Certainly it is one-sided. It is intended to be one-sided to protect labor just as the law that protects the banker from the burglar is one-sided."

The CIO will be judged in the end, Widman declared in conclusion, "not only by what someone says about it but by what it does."

The state legislative program adopted by the convention advocated higher unemployment compensation; a state labor relations act and wage hour law; legislation to curb loan sharks; workmen's compensation to cover occupational diseases and a referendum calling for a bond issue of $500,000 for improvements and additions to the state hospital at Warm Springs.

CIO Sweeps Another Poll At Westinghouse

BELLEVILLE, N. J., May 25 — By a 101 to 44 vote, the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America won a Labor Board election in the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company's lamp works here. The UE's opponent was "no union."



Belleville will be the seventeenth Westinghouse plant where the UE is exclusive collective bargaining agency.

Protest West Coast Drive On Labor

New York, May 25.—Protests against anti-union prosecutions and Ku Klux Klan terror against workers belonging to the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers in California were circulated by the union's national office here today.

All CIO affiliates were sent copies of the SCMWA's resolution of protest and asked to co-operate.

The resolution was accompanied by a detailed account of intimidation against leaders of the union in California, who refused to hand over membership lists to the state's "Little Dies Committee" headed by Assemblyman Yorty, and attacks planned by Associate Farmers and other vigilantes groups throughout the state.

DELEGATES LISTEN INTENTLY as Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee delivers the closing speech to the union's second convention, held last week in Chicago. SWOC will press forward to bring Little Steel under contract.

Steel, Clothing Conventions End; Big Drives Planned

By VIN SWEENEY

Chicago, Ill., May 25.—Unless steps are taken to evolve a broad national program designed to solve the problem of technological unemployment, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee will demand the institution of the 30-hour week in the steel industry.

This fact was made known at the SWOC's Second Wage and Policy Convention in Chicago recently, where 46 resolutions were presented calling for the 6-hour day, 30-hour week and $6 daily wage.

Indication that the 30-hour week would be a major goal of the steel union came when the recommendation, embodied in the Wage Scale and Policy Committee report, was adopted by a unanimous vote of the 834 delegates.

The recommendation was also supported in addresses by SWOC officers to the convention.

MAIN ACTIVITY

"There are many economic problems that must be solved," said Philip Murray, SWOC Chairman, "and the energy, the effort of the SWOC during the next two years should be directed toward solution of the economic ills of this nation."

"We occupy a mighty important part today in the life of America. You and I are trying to build an institution in the United States that will be of value and service to this great Republic of ours.

"This country may in a comparatively short time enter into one of those periodic war booms," Murray cautioned. "When this war boom comes — and God forbid that it does come — America must face its own economic ills once again. It must be prepared now, not then, to solve those economic ills."

Referring to the "economic doldrums" and "economic ills", Mr. Murray said a crusade is now under way to stop application of social legislation, such as the Wagner Act, the Wage-Hour Act, Social Security Act, and others.

"It seems to me to be the duty of this great organization to throw its weight behind these laws and say to those enemies who would destroy them—Thou Shalt Not Pass."

He repeated again that labor wants no part of war "unless

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

NEW YORK, May 24—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers today ended its two-week Silver Jubilee Convention with a strongly-phrased plea for support of labor and democratic rights throughout the nation.

Voicing approval for the country's new defense program, Pres. Sidney Hillman warned that "the first thing today is to defend ourselves and put ourselves in a position where we will not be even challenged because they know how well we are prepared . . . but let me say to you that I believe that in order to keep ourselves out of war the progressive legislation enacted in the last seven or eight years must be preserved."

Hillman's declaration, which brought applause and cheers from the delegates, followed passage of a resolution which "reiterated" the union's "opposition to American participation in the war," approved the Presi-

CIO Wins Parmelee Terminal Polls

NEW YORK, May 25.—With the New York taxi strike at the peak of its effectiveness, more than 2,100 Parmelee and Terminal drivers cast their votes for the CIO Transport Workers Union in elections conducted here for two days this week by the State Labor Relations Board.

The TWU agreed to the vote as a means of bringing the strike to a successful conclusion by proving that it was the collective bargaining agency favored by the majority of the drivers. Results of the elections, both won by the CIO union, doom the hope of the operators to revive company unionism in the taxi fleets, union officials declared.

In the Parmelee poll, the TWU won 1,775 to 1,572 for no union. The vote in the Terminal election was 612 for the TWU to 398 for the "independent."

New York — (FP)—Vigorous consumer action is required if consumer rights are to be maintained, the League of Women Shoppers was warned at its third annual convention.

CIO Fights Attacks On Labor Laws

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Labor won important rounds in the fight to save social laws from attack under the smokescreen of "national emergency" here in Congress this week, though the need for continued watchfulness was pointed up by tory attempts to turn labor's victories into defeat. Two of the most important concessions came in protection of the Walsh-Healey Act that fixes wage and hour standards on goods for public purchase, and a third in the continued campaign to save the Wagner Act from crippling amendments.

First victory came when a subcommittee of the House reported favorably on labor proposed amendments to the Walsh-Healey Act which would take government contracts away from violators of the Wagner law. This bill, S1032, was originally proposed by the CIO two years ago and has been backed consistently ever since. The bill passed the Senate last year but has been held up in the House by a reactionary bloc of Republicans and tory Democrats.

THE JOKER

An attempt to slip in a joker on this bill was seen, however, in an added clause allowing the President to suspend the whole of the Act "during any national emergency so declared by Presidential proclamation." CIO officials pointed out that a "limited state of emergency" has already been declared by Roosevelt, and that such a clause could be used to scrap the entire law.

Second item on the labor credit side came when determined efforts to remove Walsh-Healey restrictions from contractors working on defense orders were defeated — again in response to a wide CIO and general labor protest.

This provision was inserted in the Vinson Bill (HR 9822) after Navy brass hats had told Congress that "national defense" required removal of restrictions on hours and working conditions applied by law to corporations profiting from juicy government orders.

LABOR ALERT

Immediate protest followed from organized labor, taking the lead from CIO Pres. Lewis' Amalgamated Clothing Workers' speech, in which he warned: "Labor must be on the alert. Labor must unceasingly make its demands for protection of its rights. There are many things to do here in America in addition to watching affairs in Europe."

Attempts of enemies of the Wagner Act to proceed with plans for emasculating it through passage of the compulsory craft unit amendment in the Norton Bill and other proposed changes were still stymied in the House by organized labor's campaign to save the Act.

CIO officials, however, warned that continued vigilance was more than ever necessary, pointing out that amendments could be brought up at any time in the immediate future. CIO members and friends of progress were urged not to relax the stream of letters, resolutions and other protests that has kept the Act intact to date.

Defense Seen No Excuse for War on Labor

Washington, May 25.—Defense of the nation provides no excuse for a blitzkrieg on labor and its progress during the past few years, the United Shoe Workers executive board declared in a resolution passed at its meeting here.

Pointing out that labor legislation passed by Congress since 1933 "has set only a minimum standard for health and decency for millions of American workers," the USWA leaders called upon "members of Congress to resist every effort to eliminate parliamentary democratic procedure in an effort to amend these laws quickly under the war hysteria."

"Millions are still unemployed and receive inadequate income to maintain human existence on any scale approaching an American stand," the shoe workers said. "With these millions of unemployed anxious and willing to work if opportunities for employment are available," efforts of "anti-labor, anti-New Deal forces to relax and eliminate the labor laws are condemned and opposed by every trade unionist."

After the meeting adjourned, members of the board moved in a body to Capitol Hill, where they presented their views to some 30 Senators and Representatives.

The board meeting earlier had heard Pres. Frank McGrath and Sec. Treas. James J. Mitchell review progress during the past few months and urge intensified organizing activity.

Big Gains In New Pact With General Electric

NEW YORK, May 25.—Sweeping gains were won by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in negotiations for a new contract with the General Electric Co., largest firm in the nation's electrical industry.

At the end of a one-day session here, UERMW Sec-Treas. Julius Emspak revealed that the union had won two weeks' paid vacations for employes with five years or more of service, a 10 per cent bonus for workers on the third or "night" shift, and closer consultation with the union on personnel matters.

LOCALS TO ACT

Changes negotiated will now be referred to the affected locals of the UERMW for ratification. The new provisions are retroactive to May 1, of this year.

The union's national contract with General Electric, covering 40,000 employes, renews itself automatically unless either party dissents, and any change or new provision in the document can be negotiated on 30 days' notice.

Previously GE employes got two-week vacations only after ten years' service.

LEADERS CONFER

A two-day meeting of union delegates from all UERMW locals with membership among the company's employes preceded the negotiations with the company. Emspak announced that approximately 250,000 workers in the nation's electrical manufacturing industry are now covered by the organization's contracts.

Vote Ordered In Bay State

Pittsfield, Mass., May 25.—More than 4,000 General Electric employes will cast their ballots here June 4 in the largest collective bargaining election ever held in Western Massachusetts.

Members of the United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, who have carried on an intensive organizational drive at the GE plant during the past year, look forward to another sweeping victory for the CIO.

The GE plant here is the last major objective in the UERMW's drive for complete organization in the electrical industry of Western Massachusetts.

CIO Wins Poll At GE Plant

Philadelphia, Pa., May 25.—By a vote of 784 to 625 the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers defeated an "independent" union, at the General Electric Company's plant here in an election conducted by the Labor Board.

The election will bring up to 14 the list of General Electric plants in which the CIO electrical union is already certified as sole bargaining agency.

National Defense

While expressing labor's accord with the necessity for national defense, Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO had four very pertinent questions to ask about the national defense program, in his recent speech at the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' convention:

(1) Will the social legislation now in effect be protected?
(2) Will the collective bargaining rights and the wages and hours of workers, both in national defense and in other industries, be fully protected?
(3) Will labor be given a voice in the determination of national defense policies and in the discussion of national defense production?
(4) Will the civil liberties of American citizens be fully protected?

An alert labor movement which demands the answer "yes" to these four questions, is not only defending the interests of American workers, but is also showing its patriotism and its concern for defending American democracy.

CIO Vice-President Sidney Hillman, at the same convention, pointed out that there are elements at work "who, under the mask of national defense, will try to emasculate and destroy progressive legislation."

The Wagner act, the Walsh-Healey act, the Wage-Hour act, are all under attack by these elements. Big employers, in the aircraft and other industries, seek to deny workers the right to join a union. The Ku Klux Klan is riding again, and other attacks on civil liberties are rife as war hysteria is whipped up.

Labor must be alert and firm, in the country's interest. For, as Hillman said: "Part of national defense, probably the major part of our national defense, is a vital, a well-protected, a contented population in our country. They who are trying to undermine the welfare of labor are no friends of national defense."

Why They Turn to the CIO

Among a number of recent switches of organized workers from AFL to CIO affiliation, one of the most significant is the decision of the North Tonowanda AFL federal local at the Remington-Rand plant to leave the AFL and join the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union.

This local is one of the few to survive the big general strike of AFL craft unions in Remington-Rand plants in 1936 — a strike which was broken by the notorious "Mohawk Valley" formula.

It was the boast of the AFL that its combination of craft and federal unions at Remington-Rand plants was a satisfactory equivalent in modern mass-production industries for the industrial unionism offered by the CIO.

In the event, this form of organization proved a poor substitute indeed. The strike was lost at a time when CIO industrial organization was achieving some of its most sweeping successes in automobiles, rubber, steel and other previously unorganized modern industries.

This particular local found itself deserted by the AFL in a more recent strike situation, but with the aid of the CIO union won its demands.

Now, like the New York radio local of the AFL Electrical Workers which also recently voted to switch to the UERMWA, the Remington-Rand workers have also learned that CIO industrial organization offers strength, solidarity and success in improving conditions such as the decadent craftism of the AFL can never supply.

Seamen Urge 'No War'

New York, May 25.—Members and leaders of the National Maritime Union are loyal Americans and as such are opposed to involving the United States in European wars, NMU President Joseph Curran declared in a telegram sent to President Roosevelt this week.

"We reaffirm our support of our government in building the national defense so that the American people will be assured of adequate protection of our American democracy and American institutions," Curran wired.

"Our union, its leaders and members support this program but in order to insure its fulfillment labor must, because of its importance, be represented on all boards and commissions dealing with completion of this defense program. All present protective labor and social legislation must be guaranteed."

Labor's Defense Plan

Looking Ahead — By LEN DE CAUX

The Blitz Boys In America

OUT of the hellfire of war in Europe have come words and ideas that have bitten deep into American soil like spattering shrapnel.

Blitzkrieg, parachutist, fifth columnist, Trojan horse—these are a few samples of the verbal ammunition now used over here for purposes of domestic annihilation.

One of the advantages of this new type of invective is that most people don't know the origin of the terms. So if you can get in first and outshout everyone else, you can apply them to almost anyone you don't like—and people will say, "Tsk, tsk, is he as bad as that!"

* * *

Take the expression "fifth columnist." Our "information please" department received this one:

"My local paper has six columnists. How am I to know which is the fifth, since they frequently appear in a different order?

"Or does the expression refer to the order of the draft? If so, why shouldn't newspapermen be in the first column sent over, instead of the fifth? Or am I wrong?"

This was a puzzler. To be pedantic and purely technical, the term "fifth column" came into general use in the civil war in Spain. Franco had four columns attacking Madrid, and the name "fifth column" was given to Franco supporters behind the Loyalist lines.

In the present war, it has been applied to the military leaders and other high-placed people in Norway who betrayed that country from within; to the people who did a similar job in Holland; and to others of the same ilk elsewhere.

So maybe the questioner was right in applying it to some newspaper columnist in America, particularly those who are working so hard to involve the United States in the war.

And is he so wrong in suggesting that such columnist be given an opportunity to quench their bloodthirstiness in the first draft?

As for our old friend, "Trojan horse," that dates back to a trick used in the siege of Troy more than 1,000 B. C. It has nothing to do with a race-horse that doesn't show.

The term doesn't refer to "working like a Trojan" or "working like a horse." But it will probably be applied increasingly to workers who organize—just like the old word "agitator"—by the people who can outshout everyone else because they own the most papers, politicians and radio stations.

Actually the people who can do most harm by attacking us from within (like the Greeks did to the Trojans when they jumped out of their wooden horse) are not workers at all.

They are the financiers, industrialists and politicians who pounce out from behind on the American people (while our minds are fixed on defending this country) and attack labor's rights, civil liberties and democracy itself.

As for blitzkriegs and parachutists, we have many domestic varieties. And we don't have to go to an amusement park either to shoot the chutists.

The essence of a blitzkrieg is surprise and speed. Our own American blitz-boys are trying to hustle us into increasing participation in the war, while we are blinded with hysteria and fear.

Meanwhile from a beclouded sky drop union-smashing employers, labor spies, profiteers, sweatshoppers and other saboteurs. They disguise themselves as patriots while they go about their vile work of destroying the right to organize, attacking social legislation and otherwise seeking to demoralize the American people.

Let's not be tricked by the name-calling propaganda which people in the phony uniform of patrioteers import from Europe.

American labor is the most genuinely patriotic element in our country today. It has most at stake in preserving our peace, welfare and democratic institutions.

While firmly opposing United States intervention in the European war, the CIO, as John L. Lewis recently declared, "is fully in accord with the necessity for national defense."

But labor's conception of national defense includes defense both of this country and its institutions.

That is why Lewis at the same time called for defense of existing social legislation, such as the Walsh-Healey, Wagner and wage-hour acts; preservation of collective bargaining and labor conditions; a democratic voice for labor in national defense policies; and defense of American civil liberties.

dent's defense program and "declared its conviction that an essential element of national defense in the maintenance and enforcement of all legislative measures for the protection of the rights of labor."

PLEA FOR DEMOCRACY

Previously the Amalgamated had reaffirmed "its faith in and steadfast devotion to the principles of American democracy embodied in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States and the Bill of Rights."

In other major resolutions the convention had called for stern defense of the Wagner Act against crippling amendments; called for a big organization drive throughout the unorganized garment centers of the South; "deplored and denounced" the activities of the Dies Committee; criticized the Ku Klux Klan's renewed attack on civil rights and demanded defeat of anti-alien bills now pending in Congress.

A resolution calling for re-election of Pres. Roosevelt won the convention's approval after a one-hour demonstration by the delegates.

Declaring that "we in America can best make our contribution to the nation and to the world by demonstrating for all to see that the problems which beset us are susceptible of a peaceful and a democratic solution," the union's statement of policy said the President "has sought to preserve intact our traditional loyalties to the ideals of freedom, democracy, peace and international good faith."

MUCH TO BE DONE

"We do not wish to minimize the tasks that lie ahead," the resolution pointed out. "We still face the crucial problem of unemployment. . . . The working conditions and living standards of our workers must be improved."

A briefly-worded statement which won the delegates' approval called for resumption of unity conferences between the AFL and the CIO, but specified that labor peace must be on a basis which will sacrifice none of the great gains of the CIO organizing campaigns.

Passage of the resolution followed shortly after Pres. Hillman had read a lengthy review of CIO progress and the course of previous conversations between CIO and AFL unity committees.

Stressing his belief in the need for labor unity, Hillman expressed a belief that "some progress" had been made in the previous conference, but added: "By that, I do not mean for one moment to imply that peace terms acceptable to the CIO were proposed by the AFL committee."

Problems directly affecting the Amalgamated and the clothing industry were discussed at length during the second week of the convention. The delegates approved plans for a big organizing campaign and called for expansion of the ACWA's industry stabilization plan, which during its brief existence in some sections, has brought considerable improvement for both workers and employers.

Other resolutions supported the Wage-Hour law, called for passage of the Child Labor Amendment to the Constitution, urged extension of the Food Stamp Plan and the federal housing program and urged additional federal financing of clothes purchases for the jobless.

RENOMINATE HILLMAN

Pres. Hillman, a veteran of the union, since its birth in 1915, was nominated without opposition for another term as president. Joseph Schlossberg, another ACWA veteran and its secretary-treasurer for many years, was given a tremendous ovation by the convention when his retirement from office was announced. Now 65 years old, Schlossberg was made an officer emeritus in accordance with the ACWA constitution. Jacob Potofsky, now assistant president of the union, was nominated to succeed Schlossberg.

CIO LEADERS SPEAK

During the week a number of CIO officials addressed the convention, among them Pres. Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers; Pres. Samuel Wolchok of the United Retail & Wholesale Employes; and Pres. Sherman Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers; and Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union.

something should develop when America will have to protect its own shores."

"When that day comes organized workers of this nation will stand as one man against all nations in the universe."

America need not be afraid of labor, Mr. Murray declared. "Industrialists and leaders of finance and exploiters of the workers of this nation, for years and years have controlled the destinies of the people of this nation."

"Under their leadership," he asserted, "they have created the craziest economic situation that a nation could experience."

"The day must come in America when labor in America shall enjoy participation in the affairs of government. Labor can do no worse."

CIO to Continue Drive for WPA Jobs for 3,000,000

By RALPH HETZEL
CIO Unemployment Director

The fight for 3,000,000 WPA jobs will be carried forward in the Senate. Senator Murray of Montana has just announced that he will ask for sufficient funds to provide 3,000,000 WPA jobs.

A strong showing was made in the House of Representatives by proponents of the Casey Amendment providing 3,000,000 WPA jobs. At least 10 Congressmen spoke in support of it and it received the full backing of the Public Works Committee of the House Conference on Unemployment.

The CIO is urging full support of Senator Murray's amendment.

The Murray amendment will very likely be introduced in the middle of next week and quick action on its behalf is essential.

INADEQUATE

The WPA bill as it now stands provides $975,650,000 which may be spent in eight months and will take care of somewhat less than 2,000,000 unemployed. Casey's amendment asked for an appropriation of $2,232,000 which would have insured 3,000,000 WPA jobs for the full fiscal year. Murray's amendment asks for a billion and a half for the next eight months and will also provide for 3,000,000 WPA jobs during that period.

The Casey Amendment, which was vigorously supported by the CIO, received the full backing of the Public Works Committee of the House Conference on Unemployment.

In presenting the amendment Casey said: "You have unemployment and insecurity in millions of homes of families in America. Our job is to live up to the promise made by so many of us in the campaign that if private industry cannot give a citizen who needs work and wants to work an opportunity to work, then the Government ought to do it. I say economically it is sound, and from a humane standpoint it is sound."

Immediately following the defeat of the Casey amendment in the House, Senator Murray of Montana, issued a statement that he was going to introduce an amendment in the Senate to provide a billion and a half dollars for the WPA for the next eight months so that three million jobs would be assured.

Senator Murray, in announcing his amendment, quoted the President's statement that "the national defense program which he (the President) has set forth, will not substantially lessen the plight of those who are eligible for WPA."

11,000,000 JOBLESS

Senator Murray further pointed out that "today there are more than 11,000,000 unemployed in the country and under existing conditions this unemployment will likely increase. Of these unemployed, about 1,900,000 are now enroled on WPA. At least 1,100,000 more have been certified as in need of work on WPA. The sum which I propose would therefore just meet this urgent need of the country."

There will be other amendments introduced which will remove the most objectionable features of the present WPA bill, and CIO groups should urge their Senators to support such measures.

Ask Probe Of Relief

Washington, May 25.—Promises of an investigation of the WPA situation in Toledo, Ohio, were given to CIO officials from that city today by Howard Hunter, assistant to WPA Administrator Harrington.

Representing the Toledo Industrial Union Council, Pres. Louis Didisse and Treas. Jack Thompson said that 5,347 persons who are certified for WPA in the Ohio city have been kept on the waiting list for months.

They pointed out, also, that though some 5,000 families are receiving local relief, an equal number in just as great need are receiving no financial assistance from the city.

Lewis On Labor Unity, War Problems

Labor Unity—The AFL Doesn't Want It

The CIO NEWS herewith prints an abridged text of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' speech to the Silver Jubilee Convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in New York City on May 17.

The delegate who comes to this great convention today possesses a rare honor indeed. He, at a time like this, comes when the union is garnering its harvest of influence and greatness and labor. This is not the seed time but the cultivation period. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers now is no longer a feeble, struggling organization, existing merely by the sweat and day by day sacrifice of its officers and men. It is an organization that has established its numbers, has established itself financially, economically, contractually and politically.

If labor was able to function with its natural strength, without a divided house, unquestionably labor could make a daily contribution toward the solution of these problems in the country. Its voice would be stronger, and some politicians might listen with a great degree of attention to the policies enunciated by labor.

AFL TO BLAME

Be that as it may, however, the CIO is not responsible for the division in the house of labor in America. I ask you not to forget that the CIO was formed in 1935 to effectuate, if possible, the industrial form of organization in the unorganized mass production industries of America. It was formed to establish organization in those industries and bring those workers into the American Federation of Labor.

We wanted to increase the membership of the AFL by bringing in millions of new members, in the only type of organization that could possibly exist or deal upon equal terms with the great prominent anti-union corporations in America's modern industries.

For that desire and for that offense, I ask you to remember that we were proscribed by the Executive Council of the AFL, meeting in Florida in January of 1936. Later, the CIO offered the AFL $500,000 in cash to be paid forthwith if the AFL would immediately launch an organizing drive in the steel industry. That offer was declined.

In July of 1936, all other means then failing, the CIO started the organizational drive in steel. Despite the fanfare of the opposition press, despite the obstacles placed in the way by the great non-union corporations, despite every difficulty, including the opposition of the AFL, including their constant, day by day prophecies that we would fail, we established collective bargaining in the steel industry on a wide scale in February of 1937.

OFFENSE OF ORGANIZING

For the offense of organizing the steel industry, the CIO and the organizations affiliated with it in part were first suspended, and second, expelled from the AFL. The penalty was applied for the crime, if crime it be, of bringing organization, collective bargaining, political freedom, social security, to millions of men and women in America's industrial centers who, prior to that time, had never enjoyed it, and for that crime these organizations were first suspended and then expelled from the AFL by the same crowd that controls it now.

The suspension, which was an extra-legal action not contemplated in the constitution, took place abut 60 days prior to the convening of the convention. The act of suspension, which was equivalent to expulsion, denied representation in the convention. The act of suspension was carried out in order to prevent the organizations identified with the CIO from having a voice or a vote in the convention.

'WHINED AND LAMENTED'

They have whined and lamented and said that the organizations of the CIO left the AFL. They imply that they did so of their own free will.

They are wrong because we left on the toe of the jack boot of the Executive Council of the AFL, and the Executive Council of the AFL, a good many of them, recognized that when we come back they probably would not be there—won't be there long.

That is the reason they are not going to let you come back in a hurry. If they were so afraid of a million members demanding industrial organization, you may believe they are not going to be in a hurry to let four million members of the CIO back in.

The AFL harbored and protected a grafting institution called the United Garment Workers, to the exclusion of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and it was not until 1933, practically 1934, that a few of the organizations in association with your own were able to bring about a situation where they were compelled at the time, reluctantly to permit the Amalgamated to join the AFL.

So it is with the CIO. The CIO wants peace in the American labor movement. It believes that there should be one great federated organization of labor in America. It has from time to time at its meetings, conventions and board meetings, made proposals based upon this hope.

AFL LEADERS PROFIT

The CIO is not responsible for the fact that certain men on the Executive Council of the AFL prefer to keep labor divided rather than to lose the emoluments that go with their jobs on the Executive Council.

I refer, of course, in speaking like this to men like Mr. Rickert, who has some interest in an advertising outfit, and, like Matthew Woll who is an agent for an insurance company and likes the Vice-Presidency of the American Federation of Labor because it enables him to drum up insurance business.

They are not, neither of these gentlemen nor many more like them, going to easily decide that they will let the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and several million other members of the CIO come into the AFL and disturb their equanimity and whatever else they have to be disturbed about.

THE CIO'S OFFER

Recently in a public address about February 10th, I said that I proposed that on the 15th day of March, that is last March, a special convention of the AFL be assembled in Constitution Hall in Washington, D. C., one convention on each side of the aisle, and that the question to be voted on by that convention on the same day, shall be:

"Resolved, That the Congress of Industrial Organizations and all of its units and all of its membership this day become a part of the American Federation of Labor, and that charters of affiliation be granted by the American Federation of Labor to each unit of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and that

"Further, All questions of detail in the relationship of the two organizations hitherto existing shall be taken up for later consideration in such fashion as the joint convention may decide."

IN GOOD FAITH

I made it as President of the CIO. I made it in good faith. I made it to bring about peace in the labor movement. If it was accepted, it would bring about peace on the same day that the resolution was adopted.

Perhaps the fact that it would work is the reason that it has not been accepted. Because in the press, the AFL made its usual reply to it, that it was not acceptable.

What is the matter with this proposition? There is nothing the matter with it except that the other side would not take it. If they did it would bring peace. They do not want it. They will not have it. Consequently, it is no good.

Why doesn't the AFL want it? Because it will bring more than four and a quarter million new members into the AFL and they do not know how the next election will go under those circumstances.

Now, in order to aid that situation a little I have publicly stated that if amity is to be brought about I will eliminate my own personality and would not be a candidate for any office in the unified labor movements. Still, that does not seem to do any good either, because if John Lewis stepped out, they would still have Sidney Hillman to deal with.

And if Sidney Hillman steps out, they would still have Philip Murray to deal with.

And behind Philip Murray they would have plenty more.

WHAT THE AFL WANTS

So it resolves itself into the proposition that about the only way we could get peace in the AFL would be for all of the leaders of the CIO clear down the line to go off and jump into the sea somewhere and drown themselves so that the AFL would not be annoyed by them any more.

So, the question of peace in the labor movement depends upon the relative good faith of the leaders of the two great armies. We have tried to demonstrate our good faith. There is nothing more we can do, and in the absence of any concrete desire to bring about peace where confusion and strife prevail, then there is just one thing left to do, and that is for the CIO to go out and organize more new members that are in these industries.

The War—Unions Must Have A Voice

I want to speak briefly upon a great question which occupies the mind and the attention of every American, the tremendous events that are taking place in Europe and the repercussions in our own land.

Obviously, it is time for calm dispassionate thinking upon the part of every citizen, and obviously, it is time to restrain impulses and to proceed with sound judgment in the effectuation of any national policy we may adopt.

SOCIAL LEGISLATION

Such matters as, for instance, first, the social legislation now in effect—is it being protected?

I mean the Wage and Hour Act and the other legislation for which labor has fought, which the country and the Congress approved and which mean so much to such a large part of our population.

Second, will the collective bargaining rights and the wages and hours of workers, both in national defense and in other industries, be fully protected?

RIGHT TO UNIONISM

I want to decry the suggestion that will come from some quarters to the effect that for a worker in a factory producing weapons of defense to join a union is something less than patriotic, because I maintain now and I shall maintain in the future that the protection of this government must rest upon the shoulders and in the hands of freeborn American citizens enjoying their rights under the Constitution, and under the statutory enactments of Congress.

One of these rights, whether a man works in a garment factory, a coal mine, or in a plant making instruments of precision, has the right to join a union of his fellow, if he elects to do so under this flag.

VOICE IN DEFENSE?

Three, will labor be given a voice in the determination of national defense policies and in the discussion of national defenses production? If not, why not? Who is more entitled to a voice? If the country wants the cooperation of labor to do the work of preparing for war, and in the event of war, to do the necessary dying, what is wrong with a little cooperation on policies?

Even imperial England had to come to it, and surely democratic America can give labor adequate representation.

I am perfectly aware that great interests in this country will be opposed to it, great banking, financial, industrial, business interests, as well as social and political interests, but I care nothing for their opposition.

If the country and government want cooperation from labor in protecting the flag and the country and its institutions, let that medium of cooperation be extended to labor so that labor may have a voice in determining conditions of protection.

CIVIL RIGHTS

Four, will the civil liberties of American citizens be fully protected?

Well, we have a Department of Justice that conceivably could set up a civil liberties division, headed by some great lawyer who believes fundamentally and in fact in the protection of civil liberties and in whom the people have confidence.

The Ku Klux Klan is marching in the South. President Rieve of the United Textile Workers could tell you that. They are taking men from their homes at night and carrying them away and maltreating them, contrary to the civil rights of those people and in a manner that in no fashion can be considered American.

In various areas and sections throughout the land there is a deprivation of civil liberties, both with respect to the workers in industry and with respect to other groups of Americans. What about it? Are we going to protect those civil liberties or are we going to forget about civil liberties in the fanfare and furore, the noise and fury of beating ploughshares into swords?

LABOR MUST BE ALERT

Labor must be on the alert with respect to these matters. Labor must unceasingly make its demands for a protection of its rights. There are many things to do here in America in addition to watching affairs in Europe. There are 7,000,000 Americans in eight Southern States who are deprived of their political liberty of the right to vote because they have no money to pay for the vote.

There are world problems and there are specifically American problems, some of which have been neglected too long. Many of them will continue to be neglected unless the articulate voice of labor, as represented by organizations of the type of your own, insistently, in season and out of season, calls the attention of the American people and of American statesmen to these questions.

You and the other organizations associated with you, their millions and millions of members have forged a great instrumentality in the CIO.

The reason that our country is as stable as it is today is because in the depression of 1937 and 1938, labor in the mass production industries for the first time in American history was sufficiently well organized to prevent the deflation of the wage structure.

CIO'S GAINS

As a result, the national income of the American people for the years 1937, 1938, 1939, and 1940, such as it is, will be millions and millions of dollars more than it would have been had it not been for the sustaining voice and powerful influence of the millions of members of the CIO in industry after industry.

If this country is to endure as a democracy, if in the years to come our form of government is to be unimpaired, if our free institutions are to be maintained, then they can only be maintained without strife within, with the cooperation and with the help and the assistance of the men and women of America who earn their bread with the sweat of their brows and express themselves in an orderly way through the instrumentality of their organizations of labor.

Law Nips Chiseler Bata

Washington, May 25.—The law—after many delays and much prodding by the CIO—has caught up with the Bata Shoe Co. in nearby Belcamp, Maryland, to the extent of an $18,085 fine and back pay order on five counts of violation of the Wage and Hour Act.

The Czech firm, whose owner, Jan Bata, was allowed to take capital out of Czecho-Slovakia after the Nazi occupation in order to set up a plant here, was found by the court to have consistently violated the wage hour law in regard to overtime, minimum pay rates, falsification and failure to keep records as required, and in shipping "hot" goods in interstate commerce.

Workers were forced to sign cards concealing the fact that they had 10 hours a day seven days a week, the record showed, while receiving below standard wages. The firm was represented by Robt. Archer, partner of the tory Senator Tydings of Maryland.

CIO Endorses Jobless Fund For Seamen

Washington, May 25.—Proposed legislation to establish a jobless insurance system for seamen was termed a "step in the right direction" toward remedying defects in the Social Security Act by CIO maritime spokesmen this week. The bill is before the House merchant marine committee.

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, and William L. Standard, NMU counsel, told the committee that the CIO endorsed the proposed bill which would provide benefits ranging from $1.25 to $3 a day up to a limit of 80 days in any one year, the fund to be financed by a 3 per cent tax on ship operators.

10,000 Claims Filed Against Republic Steel

Washington, May 25.—Close to 10,000 workers have filed claims for reinstatement and back pay in the Republic Steel Corporation case, the National Labor Relations Board announced this week. The estimate was made by the NLRB's Division of Economic Research.

During the first 12 days more than 3,300 workers filed sworn affidavits at the sub-regional offices opened for that purpose in four Ohio cities. The number of claims are expected to reach a peak by July 1, 1940, the final filing date.

Denial by the U. S. Supreme Court on April 8 of a writ of certiorari to Republic Steel, made the decree of the Third Circuit Court enforcing the Board's decision a final order and placed the responsibility of checking the workers' claims for back pay and reinstatement upon the Board.

The Labor Reader:

As Steel Goes . . .

By C. W. FOWLER

Steel is America's prime basic industry, basic not only in the economic setup but in industrial relations as well, shaping the labor policy of scores of mass production industries throughout the nation. For many years steel's open shop policy dominated American industry, kept industrial workers unorganized, threatened the gains made by the few unions that had won a position in mass production.

Steel mills were notorious for oppressive and brutal working conditions, low wages, backbreaking hours. Steel towns were "little Siberias" where men could not hold up their heads as citizens. "All the workers were afraid of their bosses and they seemed to me to cringe every time a boss came near. Every mill had more police than a penitentiary, was the way a steel worker described it.

That was steel before the CIO came in with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in 1936. How the CIO and the SWOC changed "little Siberias" to American towns where workers could walk around in freedom and where wages and job conditions were made human is told in "As Steel Goes . . ." by Robert R. R. Brooks, author of two previous books on CIO and recent labor history, "When Labor Organizes," and "Unions of Their Own Choosing."

As Brooks says, it is the story of "one of the most elaborate, comprehensive, and successful organizing campaigns in the history of unionism." All through it runs one main theme—the fact that steel could only be organized by industrial unions, taking in all workers, speaking and bargaining for all in one powerful, united union that could face the organized steel corporations and win concessions never dreamed of before.

60 YEARS OF CRAFT WEAKNESS

All attempts to organize steel before the SWOC and the CIO failed, the unions foundering in craft weakness almost as fast as they were established. They began in 1858, with the Sons of Vulcan, confined to the skilled iron puddlers. In 1876 the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers represented a first attempt at united action, but here again the effort broke down in a morass of crafts. In 1892, in 1901, in 1910, and finally in 1919, the steel workers saw their unions broken by the corporations—as Brooks says:

"Nothing short of the united power of the American labor movement could have rescued them then. But the leaders of the Federation (AFL) were unwilling in 1901 and unable in 1910 to command the forces that might have saved their brothers and eventually, themselves . . . The separate unions which constituted the Federation and the conflicting crafts that composed the Amalgamated could not see beyond the narrow confines of their own skills. Capital organized with giant strides. Workers followed far in the rear . . . Industrial relations became industrial absolutism set off by periodic revolt."

After the 1919 strike, sabotaged by AFL craftism, the workers in steel did not rouse again until the '30's, when the wave of organizing that came with the great depression caught them up. Here again the AFL craft leaders failed—but the CIO, set up in 1935, came in with organizers, money, energy, and above all, the industrial union plan. From 1936 on, the history of the CIO and the SWOC in steel is known. A great union was built, a union that has won contracts covering more than 600,000 workers, raised wages, cut hours, reversed the history of exploitation and oppression that was steel.

A TRIBUTE TO LEADERSHIP

Brooks pays tribute to Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC from its beginning, as the man responsible for one of the greatest feats in the history of labor organization, and to his aides and fellow workers. These men, as Brooks says, substituted "a democratic for a feudal relationship between the worker and the foreman." They put democracy into an industry that was ruled for generations by the word of the boss and the fear of the blacklist, the policeman's club, and starvation.

Plenty of problems remain in steel, as Brooks points out. Labor relations don't change overnight, with the signing of a contract. Technological unemployment, which killed 88,000 jobs in two years, haunts the workers and their union. Sharp fluctuations in production make for insecurity, uncertain annual earnings.

But the SWOC has made a union in steel that cannot be destoyed as the craft fragments of earlier years were destroyed. Brooks writes: "If it can be done in steel, why not elsewhere? It might lead in the end to the actual use and enjoyment of the goods and leisure which modern technology has made possible." The answer to the author's question is in the whole picture of the CIO—where it has been done, "elsewhere."

Office Workers to Meet At End of Summer

NEW YORK, May 25.—An official call to the third national convention of the United Office & Professional Workers was issued this week by President Lewis Merrill and Secretary-Treasurer Leo Allen. Chicago, the nation's second largest "white collar" center, has been chosen as the site of the convention, which will be held at the Morrison Hotel from Aug. 31 to Sept. 6.

The call outlined the growth of the union since it was founded in Philadelphia, May 31, 1937, by 23 local unions, most of them formerly affiliated with the AFL.

Kennedy Asks House Take Fast Action On Mine Safety Bill

WASHINGTON, May 25.—While the Neeley federal mine inspection remains bottled in the House of Representatives, the number of coal mine accidents continues to surge forward, Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers told a House committee today.

Appearing before a sub-committee of the House Committee on Mines and Mining, Kennedy demanded an end to stalling and quick passage of the bill.

POSES QUESTION

"This is a question of life or death," the UMW leader grimly warned the Congressmen; "a question of health or occupational diseases; of accidents or fewer accidents; of more or less human suffering.

"Shall we join in the great movement to make mining safer in this country, or shall we stand idly by and permit this slaughtering to continue without at least doing what we can to minimize or prevent it?

"The answer lies with this committee and with the House of Representatives."

The Neely bill was passed in the Senate early in the session at the insistence of UMW Pres. John L. Lewis, who pointed to the fact that the absence of federal inspection of mine safety conditions was leading to one disaster after another. The bill has been lying in the House mining committee ever since.

HIGH ACCIDENT RATE

In the 16-year period since 1923, the number of coal mine accident fatalities has reached the staggering total of 24,493.

Between 1930 and 1935, 438,-038 non-fatal accidents were reported, Kennedy told the committee.

During the course of his testimony, the mine union official offered vigorous opposition to an operators' proposal that federal inspection be permitted only in cases where five or more miners had been killed.

OPPOSES LOOPHOLE

Pointing out that this would eliminate coverage of 95 per cent of the fatal accidents, Kennedy charged that "we would be completely ignoring the causes that bring about the greatest number of fatalities in the mining industry.

In offering support for provisions of the Neely bill which would effect investigation of occupational diseases in the mines, Kennedy asserted that about 20 per cent of the anthracite miners are afflicted with silicosis.

He pointed out that the bill would offer coal miners the same degree of federal protection as is commonplace in education, railroads, housing, agriculture and a number of other fields. In none of these cases, he added, has the issue of invasion of states' rights been raised.

"Why, suddenly," he concluded, "any person can object to an extension of this federal co-operation to prevent accidents and save lives in the mining industry, is beyond comprehension. Surely, the prevention of accidents and the saving of lives should be of paramount importance."

League Backs Bill To Aid Home Owners

Washington, May 25.—E. L. Oliver, Executive Vice-President of Labor's Non-Partisan League, filed a brief today with the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency in support of a bill (S. 3447) introduced by Sen. Mead of New York to liberalize the lending terms of the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Pointing out that up to the end of June, 1939, "almost one-third of all HOLC mortgagors either lost their homes or had a very difficult time in keeping them," Oliver said that unless the agency's terms were made less stringent it will serve no useful purpose to large sections of home owners turning to the HOLC for relief.

SUPPORTS OWNERS

Labor's Non-Partisan League, Oliver told the committee, supports the distressed home owners in seeking relief by reducing the rate of interest of loans made by the Home Owners Loan Corporation; by extending the period of amortization of such loans; by liberalizing other policies of HOLC in dealing with home owners; by providing for a moratorium on foreclosures; and by the abolition of certain deficiency judgments.

Mr. Oliver said that up to the middle of 1939, 27,809 defaulted loans were in various stages of foreclosure and 204,298 mortgagors were in various degrees of default out of a total original borrowers in active status of 798,385.

Jersey CIO Denies Labor Shortage

Newark, N. J., May 25.—Newspaper accounts of a shortage of labor were refuted today by William Carney, head of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council.

In a wire to Pres. Roosevelt, Carney declared:

"Newspaper stories state you and Wage-Hour Administrator Fleming contemplate relaxation of wage-hour standards due to shortage of labor.

"The New Jersey Industrial Union Council has a partial list of over 30,000 unemployed in New Jersey. Would appreciate your letting me know when and where they can report to work."

Open Ball Season

Cleveland, May 25—The CIO Industrial "A" Softball League opened its season here May 20 with a gala show at the Equestrium.

Flag raising ceremonies, the UAW White Motor Band and a doubleheader program got the season off to a flying start.

Secretary Walter Seidl said the league has spent months preparing for a successful league season, and several thousand fans are expected to watch their favorites during the summer.

Attempt Blitzkrieg On Workers

Firm Uses Espionage Act As Front for Anti-Unionism

CLEVELAND, O., May 25.—The Aluminum Workers of America this week sought a showdown with government officials in a case, important to workers in all mass industries supplying either the Army or Navy, in which distribution of the Espionage Act was made a vehicle of anti-union propaganda and coercion.

The aluminum union moved on two fronts to seek an end to what might well become a widespread practice in the mass industries if it were allowed to go unchallenged.

It is seeking redress both from the Navy Department and the National Labor Relations Board.

The case with the NLRB was filed last month after Louis Petrigni, international representative here for the AWA, found that copies of the Espionage Act distributed to workers at the U. S. Aluminum Co., subsidiary of the Aluminum Co. of America, bore this unsigned added notation:

"In addition to the above provisions of the Espionage Act, you are also cautioned that any improper discussion of your work or matters connected with it either inside or outside the plant may be considered by the government as a violation of this Law."

ASK INTERPRETATION

As Petrigni wrote Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison:

"Distribution of such a notice obviously is anti-union in intent and effect. Many workers at the plant here assumed at once that discussion of wages and working conditions with union organizers or at union meetings was covered under 'any improper discussion of your work or matters connected with it,' which, they were told, the government might consider a violation of the Espionage Act."

The objection, Petrigni explained to both the NLRB and the Navy Department, was to the added and "explanatory" paragraph, not to the Act itself.

CHANGED ATTITUDE

The company at first appeared willing to change the leaflets by eliminating the offending paragraph. Their view apparently was shared by certain lower officials of the Navy Department.

Then, word came from the office of the Inspector of Navy Material and the company stiffened its stand, refusing to keep an appointment arranged by the NLRB regional office. Once informed of the Navy stand, the NLRB office asked Petrigni to withdraw the charge.

Consulting with officials of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council and with General CIO Counsel Lee Pressman, the AWA refused to withdraw the charge and, when Regional Director Oscar Smith refused to issue a complaint, carried an appeal to the board in Washington.

Push Drive, File Case Against Campbell Soup

CAMDEN, N. J., May 25.—Workers at the Campbell Soup Company plant here, largest cannery in the United States, angered at the ever-increasing speed-up system and anxious to get higher wages, are responding in large numbers to the CIO organizing drive now in progress at the plant, the United Cannery, Agricultural Packing & Allied Workers of America announced this week.

"Under-cover and often openly brutal methods of discrimination and coercion are used by the company to intimidate the workes from joining the union," a statement issued by UCAPAWA Local 80 declared.

"Campbell Soup is noted for its bitter anti-labor policy. The Dorrance family, one of the 200 blue-blood families of the United States, which owns Campbell's, has flatly refused to deal with the CIO, insisting on recognizing only the yellow-dog company union.

NLRB CHARGES

"Local 80 has filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board against Campbell's for refusal to bargain and for fostering a company union. While these charges are being prepared for a hearing, Campbell's is taking advantage of the delay by using stoolpigeons to try to discredit the CIO."

Refusal of the management to bargain with a bona fide union is creating a tense situation, the Local statement warned, that may lead to a clash. It accuses the company of playing up to the public by donating $350,000 to the Cooper Hospital for a new wing, while speeding up the machines and cutting wage rates to pay for it.

Textile Union Cracks Down on Racketeering

NEW YORK, May 25.—"Determined to permit no racketeering within the Textile Workers Union of America," Pres. Emil Rieve announced today the removal of a local president from office and his expulsion from the union by the national executive board.

Action was taken against Burton Hyman, for about a year president of the local, which represents some 700 silk throwsters in Brooklyn. An administrator has been appointed to handle the affairs of the local until such time as a reorganization, with new officers, takes place.

The TWU legal department has submitted evidence alleging misuse of funds in the local to the office of the District Attorney. Hyman, invited to defend himself before the TWU executive body, failed to put in an appearance.

Picket Penn Station

Indiana CIO Urge U. S. Avoid War

Indianapolis, Ind., May 25—Opposition to American participation in the European war, and to attacks on labor under the cloak of "protecting the country" were voiced in strongly-worded resolutions passed by the executive board of the Indiana Industrial Union Council here.

Popular Exhibit

CONSTANT CROWDS surrounded the CIO exhibit at the Negro 75 Years of Progress Exposition in Detroit. The CIO stressed lack of discrimination in CIO unions, called for workers, regardless of their color or race, to stand together.

Rhode Island CIO Hails Progress

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 25.—Adjournment of the Rhode Island legislature found the CIO sitting pretty in regard to labor legislation, Joseph Mayo, state director for the CIO, declared today.

A State Labor Relations Commission bill, drawn up by the industrial manager of the American Screw Co., was defeated after CIO organizations and the membership of the AFL rallied against it. President Adelard Gingras of the state CIO council resigned from a position on a state commission which had studied state labor law needs in order to emphasize his opposition to the proposed measure and to rally the fight against it.

Favorable amendments to the Unemployment Compensation Act were passed through CIO legislative efforts, while last-minute quiet attempts to railroad crippling amendments through the legislature were defeated after the CIO smashed the scheme.

Quarry Union Wins Poll In Hawaii

Barre, Vt., May 25.—The winning of an election in Honolulu, Hawaii, was announced here this week at headquarters of the CIO Quarry Workers' International Union. Employes of the Ready-Mix Concrete Co., Ltd., voted 131 to 18 for Branch 280 of the QWIU at a Labor Board election held in Honolulu early this month.

Louis E. Welch, Quarry Workers' representative on the islands, reported to the union's office here that there is an increased enthusiasm for unionism among other quarry groups, and that a contract with the company is expected soon, granting substantial gains.

W. VIRGINIA PACTS

Renewal of contracts with three quarry companies in Brady, West Virginia, was also announced by John C. Lawson, international secretary-treasurer of the quarry union. After a seven-day strike, Lawson reported, the firms reconsidered their decision not to deal with QWIU Branch 253 and signed renewal of the existing contracts.

Wages range from 55c an hour for common laborers to $1.12½ for skilled workmen, according to International Representative J. B. Foreman who handled the negotiations.

Get Contracts

Wheeling, W. Va., May 25—CIO Local Industrial Union 80, Hand Stogie Makers & Strippers, has signed a number of contracts with local firms. Largest of the group is A. Pollack, Inc.

Pay Boosts Won for Crews Of 23 Vessels by Union

NEW YORK, May 25.—Pay increases covering more than 1,000 men on 23 vessels have been negotiated with five steamship companies, the National Maritime Union announced today. The raises ranging from $10 to $2.50 monthly go into effect as soon as the ships reach port.

The CIO maritime union recently obtained $10 increases on the major passenger and freight lines belonging to the American Merchant Marine Institute, and previously negotiated $5 raises with the tanker companies. The wage boost won this week brings pay on the vessels of the five companies which are not members of the AMMI into line with rates paid by the Institute and the tanker concerns.

The companies affected by the new agreements are: The Black Diamond; Swort Steamship Co.; Sound Transport; American Sugar Transit Co., and American Steamship Co.
